NORTH PLAINFIELD CITIZENS LAUNCH INDEPENDENT PARTY

In Response to a Call, Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitionists Gather in Large Numbers and Name Candidates on a Non-Partisan Basis.

VOTERS AGAINST ALLEGED ONE-MAN GOVERNMENT IN BOROUGH.

ASSEMBLYMAN SWACKHAMER AND A. V. D. HONEYMAN MAKE ADDRESSES—CHARLES PLACE, THE CHAIRMAN.

For members Borough Council—Frank Krewson, D; John H. VanWinkle, Jr., D; Joseph P., Humble R; the last named for the unexpired term of Robert Clark, Jr. For Assessor—Justus H. Cooley, R. For Collector—C. Frank French, D. For Freeholder—John Emmons, D. For Justices of the Peace—Sylvester Scribner, Prohibitionist; B. S. Braider, R. For Commissioner of Appeal—W. C. Smith, R. Appropriation for Board of Health—$550.

This was the ticket nominated last Friday at a meeting of voters, irrespective of party, held in the Somerset street school building to be voted for at the coming election. It was a citizens' meeting and by a vote of the two hundred citizens present this committee of five Republicans and five Democrats was appointed by the chairman, Former Mayor Charles Place, to name a ticket to be presented before the meeting: Republicans—T. S. Armstrong, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, L. E. Barkalew, A. J. Leader and A. V. D. Honeyman. Democrats—John H. VanWinkle, Sr., Den. Gavin, Lorenzo Townley, David J. Carney and Michael Kobler.

The enthusiastic meeting was called to order by W. W. Howland and after he announced the purpose of the call, that to transact business solely in the interest of the borough, Mr. Place was unanimously selected as chairman. He extended his thanks for the honor conferred, stating that it was the first time that he had ever attended a citizens' meeting in North Plainfield and declared that the meeting was held purely for the best interests of the borough and its taxpayers.

After the selection of David Bodine as secretary, the call for the meeting was read, the objects of which have already been stated. A. V. D. Honeyman offered a motion calling for the appointment of the nominating committee to consist of five Republicans and five Democrats, whose duty it would be to draft a platform and select an executive committee to serve for one year or until such time as successors should be elected.

Mr. Honeyman stated that he took it for granted that nearly everyone present favored the proposed movement. He disliked taking any prominent part in the proceedings, citing the fact that a year ago he figured in another matter when he secured more prominence than he desired. As for the annexation matter he declared that the law had been repealed and if it were not for the newspapers it would not now demand any attention worth speaking of. The law is inoperative by an act of the Legislature. He further stated that he does not want the enmity of any one in the borough and he refused to be classed as an anti-annexationist. If an annexationist be placed on the citizens' ticket he said he would vote for him, provided he is against despotism. He believed that the questions of a park, sewers and schools should be decided in a right manner. Regarding the defeat of the school proposition recently, Mr. Honeyman said that he had been informed that had the question been divided into two resolutions instead of one, there is no question but what it would have been adopted. As for himself he had asked no one to vote either one way or the other. He declared that all the talk about this matter seemed to be in the newspapers Mr. Honeyman implied that the Board of Education must select another site for a school building.

Mr. Honeyman said he would like to see a fair division of the offices of the borough which is now controlled entirely by Republicans. This present condition he regretted for he believed that there should be a minority in the governing body and that the time had arrived for cleaning house. Once more referring to the newspapers he said: "What you read in the newspapers is one thing and facts are another." He referred to the feeling always evidenced in the selection of a freeholder and in selecting a nominee for the ticket he said that those present would not have to abide by the selection of the committee of ten. His inference was, however, that this committee would make up the balance of the ticket. When the report was presented, the freeholder nomination was left vacant and later made by a vote of the people present. In conclusion Mr. Honeyman said that he did not know how long this movement would last, but as for himself he intended to stay in it until victory is won. "There would be no need of attending the Republican caucus tonight for the ticket is all cut and dried," concluded the speaker.

As the committee of ten retired to make a ticket, Assemblyman Swackhamer, who occupied a seat on the platform, was introduced and for nearly an hour he addressed his audience in a most earnest and impressive manner. He thanked all for the honor of calling on him, complimenting the audience by saying that it was composed of clear-headed, candid citizens, and immediately entered into discussion of the accredents of the home. He had no unkind word for any member of the borough government, in fact he considered every one a personal friend. He said that it is not his principle to detract or abuse those who differ from him, but there are occasions when things are not right and it is time to renovate.

He considered it dangerous when any public official acts without fear of rebuke, and in such a time patience ceases to be a virtue. It is then that the sovereign people seize the guilty party and by the ballot corrects the evils. The speaker referred to the history of the two leading parties showing how each one had been rebuked for wrong-doing. Mr. Swackhamer devoted considerable time to a defense of the borough schools and fire department and resented the action of the Council in establishing a paid fire department. He said that the best service could only come from a volunteer department, composed of persons who have the interest of the home at heart. His motto he said is: "Help everybody and hurt nobody." Mr. Swackhamer contended that the best interests of the manner demands a change and he characterized the motives of the Democrats and Republicans as being the highest. He declared his belief to be that the movement is right and will prevail. In conclusion he said that the people would insist on ample school accommodations and when they have found what they want they will vote in the affirmative.

The committee of ten returned and presented the ticket as already given. In the selection of a freeholder there were those nominators made at the meeting: Levi C. Kline, John Kitchen, L. E. Barkalew, John Emmons and John Cass. It required two ballots to make a selection and John Emmons, of Somerset street, was chosen, he having received 130 of the 194 votes cast. The nomination was then made unanimous. In addition this executive committee was chosen: Dr. Justus H. Cooley, Lorenzo Townley, Walter Limbergh, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, David J. Carney and A. V. D. Honeyman. The ticket was presented by Thomas S. Armstrong and A. J. Leader presented the platform, which was adopted. It will be found in another column.

There was a little commotion at this period, when Charles H. Lyman wanted to know if he would be permitted to make a nomination. The question was ignored by the chairman and Mr. Honeyman moved that the ticket and platform be adopted, which was done. Finally, Mr. Honeyman asked the question as to whether Mr. Lyman intends to support the platform. There was no response. Mr. Armstrong then said that although such action as Mr. Lyman desired would be irregular he favored giving him a chance. To this Mr. Lyman took exception by saying that with him it was a question of preference and that it was the first time he was denied the right to make a nomination in a primary. He had always voted the Democratic ticket and saw no reason why he should be refused the privilege.

Mr. Armstrong said that the idea of those in charge of the meeting was not to have any star chamber proceedings, nothing that would cause any suspicion. Mr. Lyman replied that he would not take any undue advantage and declined to make a nomination or state whether he would support the platform or not.

Harry Stafford raised the point as to whether those selected for the ticket would accept, and was informed that all but one had signified their intention of accepting. When he asked who the one exception was the information was not given. It was afterward learned to be C. Frank French, who is in Florida at present.

Those chosen to act as tellers when the votes were taken were John S. Johnston and Den. Gavin.

FIREMEN VS. MAYOR SMALLEY

NEWARK EVENING NEWS DWELLS EDITORIALLY ON POSITION OF ANTIS.

The borough of North Plainfield has had another fight along the lines of annexation and anti-annexation, and this time the public school system of the place has suffered severely. There have not been enough school accommodations in the borough for two years, and during that time the question was whether to bond the borough and build a new eight-room schoolhouse, or send the High School children across the brook to the Plainfield High School. It so happened that a quarrel between the borough Mayor and the fire department intensified the already bitter antagonisms of the town, and whatever the chief executive favored the firemen opposed, irrespective of the public welfare. The Mayor favored a new school, the firemen opposed it, and at the referendum the ballots stood 315 against to 187 for; whereupon the firemen indulged in a grand jubilation. Just to show how far this political warfare is carried, and with what inconsistency, it may be remarked that an independent school is unquestionably an anti-annexation affair, but the anti-annexation party voted solidly against it, with the firemen, simply because Mayor Smalley wanted it. He is in favor of annexation to Plainfield, but waived his opinion in favor of the school, only to have the project beaten by its own friends. If this isn't carrying local factional fights to absurd lengths, what is? But it must be remembered that North Plainfield is in Somerset County and next to Union County.—Newark Evening News.

OUT OF POLITICS.

Freeholder Lutkins and Assessor French to Retire From Office.

Elston M. French, the present assessor for North Plainfield, announces that he is not a candidate for re-election. He says that he has the interests of the borough sufficiently at heart to retire now and give some one else an opportunity to hold this office. Freeholder Andrew M. Lutkins also announces that he is not a candidate for freeholder. He says he will not accept a nomination for this or any other office in the borough. Both of these officials have performed their duties faithfully and well and now say they are willing to retire. The John Emmons named by the Citizens' party is not John P. Emmons, the real estate man.

It does not appeal to mere idle curiosity and never to an instinct for the sensational, but strives to afford a richer enjoyment and to satisfy a deeper and more lasting interest. McClure's is meant for people who are living and working in the present; it tries to make current events and movements more intelligible to its readers.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. TEAM BADLY BEATEN

Brooklyn Central Association's Aggregation Easily Vanquished Local Team.

PLAINFIELD NOT IN IT

THE SCORE WAS THIRTY-SEVEN TO TWENTY.

Crack Team of Metropolitan District Played Well—Home Five Needed Practice—The Detailed Score.

Decisive defeat was the portion of the local Y. M. C. A. basket ball five in its game Monday with Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., one of the crack teams of the Metropolitan district. Plainfield never had a show to win. She was up against a stronger team and, to add to the painfulness of the situation, was suffering from a woeful lack of practice. The Brooklyn men were the better shots and their team work was far superior. They eluded Plainfield's attempts at guarding with ease and never tried for a basket unless they had dodged their opponents for a clear field. The score was 37 to 20, 18 to 11 at the end of the first half. The summary:

Brooklyn Central—A. Behrens and Boggs, forwards; B. Behrens, centre; Bogie and Salmas, guards. Plainfield—Denton and Hand, forwards; Cahoone, centre; Scull and Neal, guards. Goals from the floor—A. Behrens, 3; Boggs, 4; B. Behrens, 2; Bogie, 4; Salmon, 5; Denton, 2; Hand, 3; Cahoone, 2; Scull. Goals from fouls—B. Behrens, Denton, 3; Hand, 3; Cahoone, 2. Referee—C. B. Morse. Umpire—S. K. Saunders, physical director of Brooklyn. Timers—W. Doane and Dr. W. Kempton Browning. Scorer—John Doane. Time—20-min. periods.

HAND'S MATRIMONIAL AGENCY

Justice Hezekiah Hand's recent matrimonial offer has brought to light a rather pathetic story of a Brooklyn man who has been deserted by his wife and wants a divorce and a chance to make a Jersey girl the partner of his future joys and sorrows. It is the old story of a broken home, the love of the wife wandering to the supposed true friend of the family, deception followed by desertion and the struggle for the possession of the child. And to deepen the gloom of the narrative, there is sickness and the troubles of the husband to support the aged father and mother.

A. B. Ayers, who is employed at 833 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, is the man thus buffeted by unkind fortune. His story is best told in the words of his appeal to Judge Hand, and, though his sentences may be somewhat rambling and not remarkable for rhetorical display, they are at any rate written in deadly earnest. And if the story as he tells it has its aspect to make the unskillful laugh, it has also its serious side to make the judicious grieve.

"I have lost everything and want my home and comfort as I have to work for it. In 1895, my wife left me, taking the boy with her, making me think she was going to visit her father. I found out afterward by her cousin that she was in love with an old friend of mine as I supposed he was but learned different. She came to Newark and he met her. One week later I followed after her to induce her to return home. Before going she asked me to put the goods in storage till she returned, but when I came after her she wrote me a letter, saying she would not live with me in a thousand years. It is now nearly nine years of desertion and am I not free to marry and can you make me so?

"I used to live in Newark nearly three years and have made my home in Jersey a part of the time. And I want to make a Jersey girl my partner for life if you can help me. I might say that she, Georgie Ayers, tried to get a divorce against me but had to let it drop for some cause. I have been taking care of my father and mother with my sister's help. I have been hard sick but I am better now and trying to work. Would say in 1896 my wife took the goods out of the storehouse with the aid of her friend and took them to Philadelphia with no insurance on them and they burned unbeknown to me until a friend told me."

COMPANY K'S FAIR COMES TO A CLOSE

Successful Bazaar Conducted by Local Soldier Boys Will Net About $550.

LAST NIGHT'S EVENTS

NEW YORK MAN WON THE HANDSOME SEWING MACHINE.

A Record Breaking Attendance—Walter Ellis Won the $5 Gold Piece—Dancing a Feature—A Meeting Thursday.

The fair of Company K, Second Regiment, came to a close Monday, after a most successful run of a week. Each night the attendance was larger than the previous one and last night was a record-breaker for attendance, there being at least one thousand people present. There were 460 tickets sold at the door, exclusive of the season tickets used. Of course, dancing was the feature of the evening, a large number taking advantage of this form of amusement.

Considerable interest was manifested in the drawing of the ticket for the sewing machine. No. 305 was the lucky number. It was learned that Percy Clark, of Co. K, bought this ticket and sold it to a man in New York. His name will be announced tomorrow. Walter Ellis won the $5 gold piece, and J. Bailey won the dollar for making the highest possible score on the parlor bowling alley. His score was 150. Several other articles were disposed of and before the fair closed a successful auction was held. Everything was then disposed of at good prices.

The dancing was continued until 2 o'clock, when to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne" the happy, but weary dancers reluctantly departed for their homes. In all respects the fair was considered a model one, the management being successful in carrying out the details of the plans. The chairmen of the sub-committees will meet at the armory on Thursday night to settle accounts. It is believed that at least $550 was realized as net profit.

MISSING CANNON.

"Little Giant," Used to Celebrate Democratic Victories Here, is Missing.

A question that is seriously agitating the minds of local Democracy just now is the whereabouts of the famous cannon that has been used for so many years in political campaigns. The "little giant," as the cannon was familiarly known, has not in recent years been overworked.

It happened that the cannon was wanted during the McClellan-Low campaign in New York. Frank Vosseller, formerly of this city, who is now a resident of one of the wards in New York, used his influence to secure a loan of the piece and after much persuasion succeeded in getting it. The cannon was forgotten until a few days ago. James E. Martine raised the question as to its whereabouts. No one could give the desired information and it has been suggested that a committee from the Democratic Club be appointed to visit New York and make a search for the missing property.

DRESSMAKERS' CONVENTION.

The preparations for the exhibition of French gowns, which is to be the opening feature of the Dressmakers' Convention in the Masonic Temple, Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, New York, today were in full swing. Of pale blue embroidered batiste, one of the striking gowns of the collection is a garden party model. The skirt is in graduated shirrings to the waist, the lowest shirring falling out into a graceful puff just above the finishing flounce. The dainty blouse is covered by a Zouave jacket of pale blue embroidered with insertions of white valenciennes lace, which also falls in a cascade down the front of the bodice. The sash of silk shaded from white to deep blue is caught in sunflower knots.

Another charming frock for the coming summer is in pink batiste. Tucks of varied depths form the skirt, which is overlaid by panels of English eyelet embroidery in the same color, with a point of white lace at the edge. The same effect is repeated in the round bodice, the embroidery rising to the high stock. The crush girdle is of pink shaded silk.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt C. Johnson, of Jones avenue, Jersey City, have returned from a visit in this city.

It was originally intended to give the Shakespearean play in the new hall of the Park Club but the demands of the comedy made it necessary to utilize the larger stage at the Casino where the performance will now be given. The date has not yet been selected but it will be late in the month of April.

In addition to the cast already given, there will be twelve couples of "lords and ladies" in the wedding dance and in a minute at the end of the last act. The dancing will be in charge of Lewis G. Timpson. The affair will be given for a charitable object.

Alfred Young, a well-known dramatic expert and Shakespearean scholar, of New York, will coach the members of the cast.

Letter-carrier Charles Stephens has recovered from injuries sustained recently by a fall on the ice and is again attending to his duties.

COMMON COUNCIL DELIVERS BLOW TO LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Carrying Out the Wishes of the People the City Fathers Not Only Refuse to Increase the Liquor Places, But Even Take Away One License.

VOTED TO A MAN AGAINST JOHN GOFF'S PETITION.

COUNCILMEN MURPHY AND GARRIQUES OPPOSED ALL APPLICATIONS.

Thursday the Common Council stamped its disapproval upon any proposed scheme to change its custom as regards the regulation of the liquor traffic by denying all new applications for licenses and reducing the original number of licensed places from fourteen to thirteen. The action of the Common Council was received with general satisfaction, although there were spirited incidents to mark the meeting as one of the most exciting of any in recent years. Every member of the body was present and the evening was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the liquor question. There were a large number of petitions received from persons protesting against the granting of liquor licenses, especially the new applications made by John J. Goff for his hotel on West Front street. Adolph Wolgang for a wholesale place on Park avenue and William J. Dwyer for a retail place on West Third street. In several instances several old applicants had narrow escapes in securing licenses, the vote being six to five in their favor. That the people in general were deeply interested in the subject of licenses was shown by the presence of nearly two hundred citizens in the lobby and the sentiment was divided for and against. There was a committee from the Monroe Avenue church, headed by the pastor, Rev. John McMurray, while Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, representing Trinity Reformed church, was there. Of course, the friends of the saloons and hotels were present to watch the proceedings. They had nothing to say, however.

Patrolman Overbaugh was at the door and several times he had occasion to refuse admission to interested persons, the lobby being too crowded to admit any more. The crowd was orderly, except when the cause of temperance triumphed. Then there was an outburst of applause which President Tolles had no desire to quiet.

Probably, the most sensational feature of the meeting was the decided stand taken by Councilman Clarence L. Murphy, who announced his intention of voting against all applications for liquor licenses, as well as for the privilege of keeping an inn and tavern. His action had much to do with the result of the license question, as did also the action of Councilman Wilson, who cast his vote in several instances against applications. It was the inability of the pro-license members of the Common Council to secure the necessary six votes in some instances that changed the result and all the members wisely voted together in the particular applications which have caused a storm of protest from certain quarters.

These applications were granted:

Jacob Bitzer, Somerset street; Henry Hasrand, East Front street; A. B. Roell, Park avenue; J. A. Staats, Hotel Kenstington; Henry F. Windham, Waldorf Hotel; A. D. Findlay, East Second street; John Rafferty, Park avenue; Christopher Glocker, Front and Somerset streets; Charles Schantz, Park avenue; Eastern Bottling Company, wholesale, West Second street; Frank Linke, wholesale, West Front street; Michael Watson, Grant avenue; Bernard Clark, Liberty and West Third streets.

As stated Mr. Murphy voted against all applications, while Mr. Garriques voted against all applications to sell liquor in any establishment. He voted for the application to keep an inn and tavern. The other members voted for all applications, except in the application of A. B. Roell. The negative votes in this case were Messrs. Bullock, Gloak,, Murphy, Randolph and Garriques. On the application of Frank Linke for a wholesale license, Messrs. Garriques, Lee, Tyler and Murphy voted in the negative and in the cases of Bernard Clark and Michael Watson Messrs. Murphy, Daniel, Garriques, Tyler and Wilson cast their votes against the applications. On the application of Adolph Wolgang for a wholesale license, Messrs. Bullock, Daniel, Garriques, Gloak, Higham, Murphy, Tyler, Wilson and Tolles voted no, while Messrs. Lee and Randolph were the only two who voted in the affirmative. As for the much-discussed John J. Goff application all the members voted in the negative for an inn and tavern license as well as for the privilege to sell liquor. The same vote was recorded in the case of the application of William J. Dwyer for a saloon license on West Third street and in the case of the application of E. P. Turner for a renewal of his license for a saloon on the same street.

There were numerous petitions protesting against the granting of license applications and in nearly every in*stance the applications of John J.* Goff and Adolph Wolgang were made the object of special mention as to be undesirable. Petitions were received from the First Baptist church, Congregational church, Religious Society of Friends, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, R. O. Cumback, superintendent of the Frederick & Ayer Works, and other officials as well as a majority of the residents in the Fourth ward who would be particularly affected by the granting of a license to Mr. Goff; James Craig, John A Goodwin and others and one from nearly all the merchants in the business section protesting against the granting of the application for a wholesale license on Park avenue.

After the presentation of the petitions and before the liquor license applications were offered for action, Councilman Murphy made a few remarks in explanation of his change of views and his intention to vote against the applications. He said that when the ordinance raising the license fee to $1,000 was originally introduced he had the idea that the change was made solely for revenue. He had learned to regard the saloon as a necessary evil and that it was better to have it properly governed and under police protection. He afterward doubted the wisdom of the city receiving so large a sum from such a source and if it was wrong to ask a thousand dollars as a license fee it was wrong to demand any sum. Accordingly he announced that he would vote against all applications for licenses. He stated further that the loss to the city in case all licenses were refused would amount to $9,600 This would mean an increase of about ten or eleven points in the tax rate. He added that he owns three houses and a vacant lot and he would cheerfully pay the increase if necessary to make up the deficiency. He has honestly come to the conclusion that all saloons should be abolished and as for the application of John J. Goff he asked all members of the Council to vote in the negative with him.

*Mr. Tyler then stated that the li*cense committee in response to a request had received and considered much information on the question of the various applications for license and he asked the president to limit all speakers on the subject to five minutes. This President Tolles announced he would do.

Rev. John McMurray was the first speaker, but he said that he would rather give those in favor of the granting of licenses an opportunity to speak first. He gave way to Alexander Millar, of Madison avenue, who entered the first protest against the liquor applications. He announced that he was present to show which side he was on. He declared that the city stands high and there appeared to be no reason for an increase of licensed places. "Those who have wine cellars know nothing of the suffering caused the poorer class by the license system," continued Mr. Millar. "I would like to know a good argument *in favor of granting Mr. Goff a li*cense. These roadhouses are a disgrace and marks the beginning of the downfall of many young women."

Rev. Mr. McMurray stated that he was present to represent the Monroe Avenue church. He voiced the sentiments of Mr. Murphy, adding that they were those of the best element. He said that the granting of a license to Mr. Goff could do no possible good, except to the Rising Sun Brewery Company, where it would have a place to sell its product.

"I mean to fight against rum till my dying day," declared Mr. McMurray. *"There is no reason for additional li*censes. A conservative estimate shows that there are five hundred people in the city who visit saloons and thirteen saloons are enough."

At this point Mr. McMurray repeated Mr. Murphy's statement that he understood the revenue from the liquor business in the city was $9,600 and he asked Mr. Randolph, chairman of the police committee, the annual expense of his department. Mr. Randolph replied that last year it was $1,800.

"Then," continued Mr. McMurray, "the most that the police have to do is to look after drunks. Judge Runyon would have little to do if it were not for these cases of drunkenness. If a license is granted to Mr. Goff it will cost the city $1,800 a year to police that section of the town and the revenue from the licensed place would only be $700. As I understand it a policeman in the West End nowadays is good for sore eyes. I find that twelve persons have signed for Mr. Goff's license. Nine of them live a considerable distance from the place, while only one signer lives in Elizabeth."

Former City Judge William R. Coddington, of the law firm of Coddington & Swackhamer, was the next *speaker. He directed his remarks di*rectly toward the application of Adolph Wolgang for a wholesale place in Park avenue. He said he was not present to dictate to the Council, but he simply represented the business interests and he desired to protest against the granting of an application to Mr. Wolgang. He said that while the Council cannot control the number of applicants or say who they *shall be it can decide who shall re*ceive licenses, if any are granted. He asked the Council to consider the necessity for a wholesale place in Park avenue, the location and the qualifications of the applicant. He stated further that within two hundred yards of the place asking for a license there are eight saloons. He cited that the place in mid-way between the railroad station and the postoffice, in a shopping district where wives and daughters are called frequently. If the place was licensed it would mean that these women would go elsewhere to shop. In conclusion Mr. Coddington said that he knew of no one outside of the signers to the application who wanted the license granted.

At this point the applications for liquor licenses, as well as for licenses to keep inns and taverns were taken up with the result as already told. No comments were made concerning the applications until the one presented by Mr. Goff was reached. Mr. Tyler, as chairman of the license committee, reported that the committee had considered this application and in its opinion there was found to be no need for licensing this place. He therefore moved that the application be denied. A unanimous vote against the application for an inn and tavern was cast, but in the excitement the members forgot to deny the request to sell liquor, and after a recess Mr. Tyler referred to this omission, brought to his attention by Mr. Wean, acting clerk, and a unanimous negative vote was cast against the second section of the application. A similar report was presented on the new ap*plication of William J. Dwyer and all* the members voted against licensing the place.

When the application of E. P. Turner was presented, Mr. Tyler spoke at some length concerning it, after Mr. Lee stated that two in mid-way of the license committee favored the application and one was against it. Mr. Tyler reviewed the history of this application of a year ago, when the character of the applicant was considered. He said that originally John L. Shea applied for a license, and that just before the night when action was taken on licenses, the name of the applicant was changed to E. P. Turner. There was a question as to the signature on the application and there appeared reason to believe that forgery had been committed, it being a question as to whether the applicant changed the names. Mr. Tyler stated that he understood that Mr. Turner did not run the place last year, but that John L. Shea was in command. He even stated that Mr. Shea's name and not that of Mr. Turner was displayed in front of the saloon. He spoke strongly against this disregard of the law and the city ordinance and further stated that Mr. Shea's name did not even appear on the sign as manager.

Mr. Murphy added a few words at this time, stating that he believed that the Council had been tricked. While Mr. Tyler's objections appeared to be along the lines of technicalities, he believed that the fact that Mr. Turner was not running the saloon himself formed a fair better reason for refusing his application for a renewal.

Mr. Lee withdrew his motion that the license be granted and moved that the application be denied. All members voted against the application.

Bernard Clark's application was the next taken up and here Mr. Tyler raised an objection. He said that the people who live in the vicinity of Mr. Clark's place have just as much right to protest against a licensed drinking place, as those who live in the more aristocratic parts of the town. He entered a strong plea against licensing this place. While the rich could move, the poor are obliged to stay where they are and put up with these evils. Mr. Garrigues endorsed Mr. Tyler's remarks. In response to a question by President Tolles, Mr. Tyler replied that no complaints had been received from Mr. Clark's place.

*The presentation of Michael Wat*son's application was the occasion of considerable comment and protest in which Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, Mr. Tyler, Mr. Garrigues, Mr. McMurray, Mansfield Smith, E. C. Martin took a part. Mr. Schenck said that he had seen so much evil as a result of this licensed saloon that he thought the application should be refused if for no other reason than that it stands near the doors of one of the largest works in the city, a place where the toilers as well as their families are made to suffer by reason of its existence.

When Mr. McMurray arose to speak on this application, Mr. Lee moved that the regular order of business be proceeded with, adding that he was tired of so much talk. The reverend gentleman took occasion to say that as a citizen he had a right to speak and the privilege was granted him by vote of the Council.

The last application, that of Adolph Wolgang for a wholesale place in Park avenue, also occasioned much unfavorable comment on the part of Mr. Tyler in which he intimated that members of the Council have friends and that they are often under obligations to return a favor, even to the voting for a liquor license. He felt sure that no promises had been made by Councilmen, but when he intimated that he was afraid that one application which had been denied, was not a permanent refusal for the year, Mr. Lee quickly objected, stating that it was a reflection of every member of the Council. Mr. Tyler said that no reflection was intended.

Mr. Garrigues said he could see no reason for increase in the number of wholesale places and being elated over the excellent results of the evening, remarked "Let the good work go on." This remark called forth hearty applause, concluding with a recess on the part of the Council. This application was the last one to be considered. The lobby was soon cleared and the members of the Council took a brief rest.

After the recess a question was raised as to whether an inn and tavern license carried with it the privilege to sell any kind of liquor. Mr. Murphy said that he was under the impression that it did, but Mr. Randolph secured a copy of the ordinance, read the section on the subject and proved that he did not give the right.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

Little by little has the modern public library come to be regarded not only as a distributer of books, but as a bureau of information. This distinct need has been met by the progressive public library as it has realized the educational possibilities involved. The latest and best books of reference are placed in a room removed from the confusion incident upon the circulation of books, in charge of a competent assistant whose whole duty it is to assist inquirers. All matter which has possibilities of usefulness, bibliographies, newspaper clippings, pictures, etc., are so arranged as to disclose the elusive bit of information with the least expenditure of time. This systematization, allied with co-operation with other libraries has brought this work in large public libraries to a high degree of efficiency, so that in addition to the general reference room, special reference rooms are set aside for patents, art, for class rooms, for school reference work and even individual rooms are provided in which a student engaged in serious research may work alone. While these developments obviously are possible only for the city library, even the small town library should have one light room with adequate book and seating capacity. Without this the limit of a library's usefulness in this direction is soon reached.

In our own public library, which probably does more reference work than any in the State, excepting only Newark and Jersey City, the work is greatly impeded by most hampering conditions. Space limitation prevent the shelving of but a small fraction of the library's reference books where they will be accessible. There can be no provision for quiet, as there is but one large room, which is common to the varied and conflicting uses of students, borrowers, magazine and newspaper readers and children. That nevertheless, this department has come to be widely known and used, not only by our own residents, but by those of neighboring towns to a very considerable extent is an indication of its possibilities of usefulness under the more favorable conditions enjoyed by other libraries. It is consulted by authors, designers, inventors, clubwomen, debaters, mechanics, the architect, the clergyman, the teacher, the housewife and always the school children. One may be called from furnishing material on an academic question like the "Influence of the Norman conquest upon the English language" to answering the more individual and pressing question of "How to take care of a teething baby."

As an illustration of the wide range of this work a few of the questions recently answered are given: "On what day of the week did March 5, 1870 fall?" "What is the Hague conference, and what has it accomplished?" *"Something on the water*ways of Russia," "What are the coal centers of Europe?" "A recent account of the Trans-Siberian railway," "Maps which will show the route of the early discoverers of this country," "All you have on the literature of Holland," "Something about Parsifal," "Christmas customs in Germany," "How to grow violets," "Account of the old English game of quarterstaff," "Reproductions of all the famous pictures of Joan of Arc," "Child labor in New Jersey," "Should colleges accept ill-gotten gifts?" "What employers are doing for their employes," "History of the Plainfield Quaker meeting house."

These are but a few of the many questions that are being constantly brought to the Public Library for solution.

WM. M'D. CORIELL'S FUNERAL

MEMBERS OF CRESCENT AVENUE SESSION ACT AS PALLBEARERS.

The funeral services of William McDowell Coriell were held Saturday p. m. from the late home in Clinton avenue, at 2:30. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, conducted the services.

During the services, Miss Etta Rayhert sang, one of the selections being "Nearer, My God to Thee." The honorary pall bearers were the members of the Session of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church: Dr. E. W. Hodges, Stephen Cahoone, H. C. Squires, John Leal, A. J. Gavett, A. W. Duxbury, W. D. Murray and L. N. Lovell. The interment took place in the North Plainfield cemetery.

MOY WANTS WILL WITHDRAWN

TESTIMENT OF WM. BIRD FILED IN MIDDLESEX TO BE GOTTEN OFF RECORD.

George V. W. Moy, of this city, has *made application before Judge Wood*bridge Strong, of Middlesex County, to have the will of William Bird, whose death occurred in Dunellen some time ago, returned to him claiming that a mutually agreeable will had been filed in New York. Judge Strong in refusing to grant the application said that the will was part of the court records and could not be taken away without proper application and proof.

Mr. Moy said that one of the articles of the stipulation of the agreements between the contesting parties is that the will on file here be turned over to the son, Harrison Kerr Bird, who is the military secretary to Governor Odell, of New York State. Mr. Moy said that the people he represents will not get any of the money until this will is taken from file here. The other will will not be probated until this one is delivered.

Mr. Moy said that he is unable to say where the man's home is, as he had drawn up two wills for him in which he said that Dunellen was his home, and that there had been four or five other wills in which he declared that New York was his home.

Judge Strong told the lawyer to prepare a petition and an order and that he would then consider the matter.

WON HIS WAY UP.

Timekeeper Herbert B. Wykoff at Jersey City—Prominent in Fraternal Circles.

Herbert B. Wyckoff, the subject of this sketch, is a son of Mayor Wyckoff, of Dunellen, N. J., and was born November 13, 1879, at Whitehouse, Hunterdon County, N. J. He moved to Dunellen, N. J., with his parents, in 1890, and entered the service of the New Jersey Central as a messenger in the spring of 1895, and was soon thereafter promoted to a clerkship in General Superintendent Olhausen's office, where he remained several months, when he was again promoted to an important position in the time-keep*ing department.*

A few months since he was advanced to his present position of timekeeper, a position in which he commands the respect and confidence of his superiors and associates.

Mr. Wyckoff has just been elected chief ranger in Dunellen Court No. 1138, I. O. Red Men, being the youngest member that has ever been chosen to rule that court and hold this re*sponsible office. He is also a member* of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., in which order he is an active and enthusiastic worker.

Mr. Wyckoff is one of the most popular young men in the employ of the New Jersey Central, which fact is largely due to the uniform courtesy which he extends to every one.—Railroad Employe.

LIQUOR LICENSE FEE MAY YET BE RAISED

Councilman Garriques Attempts to Have Vote on Fee of $1,000 Reconsidered.

TYLER SUPPORTS HIM

CORPORATION COUNSEL MARSH TO GIVE OPINION ON LEGALITY OF MOVE.

The Boards of Street Commissioner Gavett and Constable Manley Approved — Licenses Granted Hackmen and Others.

After the members of the Common Council returned to the regular order of business, Thursday, followed the consideration of the liquor license application, Mr. Garrigues raised the question as to the vote on the ordinance which provided for the raising of the license fee to $1,000. He contended that the ordinance could again be called up and another vote taken, inasmuch as the last vote stood five to five. His contention being that that vote neither defeated or passed the ordinance. For the purpose of having the action properly recorded in the minute books, Mr. Tyler moved to correct the minutes accordingly. As to the right to recall the ordinance and take another vote, the members believed it was a question for Corporation Counsel Marsh to decide. Most of them thought it would be necessary to *re-advertise the ordinance. The ques*tion raised no end of discussion in which there were many complications. Aside from correcting the minutes nothing else was done. The legal phase of the question will be decided by Mr. Marsh.

Charlotte J. Herlick petitioned the Council to remit her tax assessed in error and the matter was referred to the proper committee. The bond of Street Commissioner Gavett approved by the Corporation Counsel was received and on motion of Mr. Daniel was filed. Mr. Daniel also reported on the bond of Constable Manley, and moved it be filed.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution authorizing the committee of streets to advertise for bids for crushed stone, culverts and crosswalks. This was adopted.

On a motion offered by Mr. Tyer, chairman of the license committee, the various applications for hack, peddlers and garbage collectors, truckmen and the lunch-wagon were granted after the usual fee is paid. After Mr. Lee announced that the fire committee had purchased 2,000 feet of hose which would be delivered soon, the Council adjourned at 11:30 o'clock and there was a universal sigh of relief.

AS TO LAW STUDENTS RIGHTS

RULING CONCERNING THOSE WHO DO NOT PASS BOTH EXAMINATIONS.

A decision of the Supreme Court this week respecting the rights of a class of law students who successfully passed their law examinations last year, but were not admitted to practice because they failed to take the academic examinations prescribed by the Supreme Court, relieves the students, but denies their legal rights to the court's recommendation to the Governor for an attorney's license.

The students took their bar exami*nations as provided for by an 'act of* the Legislature. The Supreme Court made a rule requiring that in addition to requirements set out in the legislative act, the student must, before presenting himself for the law examinations, present a certificate showing that he had had the proper academic education.

The court holds that as a legal right the students are not entitled to the court recommendation to an attorney's license, but it also holds that the students had a right to rely upon the legislative act and adds that if the successful students will present to the court, before the February term of 1905, a certificate showing that they have duly taken an academic course as prescribed by the court rules, they will be admitted to practise law without again being required to take the law examinations.

Mrs. Pickett Buried.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Emma Pickett were held Friday afternoon from her Grove street residence at 2 o'clock. There was a large number of people present at the services, which were conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Interment was in Hillside cemetedy.

George Whitely, of Essex street, an employe of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Company, has left for Boston where he will visit his relatives for a few days.

PLATFORM ADOPTED BY CITIZENS' PARTY

The Present Administration in North Plainfield Was Roundly Denounced.

SEVERE ON SMALLEY

CONDEMNS DISBANDMENT OF VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Opposes Alleged Arrests Without Warrant at Behest of the Mayor —Advocates Representation of Minority Party in Council.

This platform was adopted by the new Citizens' party of North Plainfield at the primary Friday:

We, citizens of the Borough of North Plainfield, in primary assembled, declare the following declaration of principles and purposes:

Officeholders should act for the whole people, and not for a few, nor for personal and selfish ends. When our Mayor or Council in practical effect say, "We are the Borough," instead of "We are the servants of the Borough," a change is in order, and if a Citizens' ticket is necessary to bring about a permanent change, it deserves the support of right-thinking people.

The subject of "Annexation" or "Anti-Annexation" is not up for discussion, that having been settled at the polls and the law being repealed. As a Citizens' party we do not care how men voted two years ago upon the law which has since been repealed; we hope for the harmonious concentration of the efforts of our best citizens to overthrow a local despotism which is distasteful, as we believe, to a large majority of our voters and taxpayers at both political parties.

Our chief desire is to foster the best things we possess in this borough and to make North Plainfield a prosperous and enviable place of residence. We covet the rewards that follow a clean and upright municipal government. What a man's politics or religion may be is his own business; whether he be a good citizen or not is everybody's business.

A subject like that of purchasing and maintaining a public park in a small borough should only be entertained and promoted after a public meeting and full discussion evinces the fact that it is wanted by a majority of the taxpayers. If there be doubt, a vote of the people on the subject should be asked.

The same with the question of a paid fire department. It should only be adopted by a public endorsement at the polls; a public vote on the subject. We condemn the action of Council as uncalled for, hasty and a wrong to the volunteer department and to our borough to change an efficient and satisfactory department, costing only from one thousand to twelve hundred dollars per annum, to a paid department to cost four or five thousand dollars per annum, without public discussion and vote, for it is, as we believe, contrary to the views of nineteenths of our taxpayers.

Half of the amount necessary to maintain annually a paid fire department would increase the efficiency of the police force, now utterly inadequate. We point to the meagre outlays by Council to support the police as economy in the wrong place, and declare that in our judgment the force should be increased.

We are opposed to the arrest and imprisonment of any citizen who is not a criminal, without warrant, simply at the behest of a bystander, even though bystander happens to be the Mayor. With such methods in vogue, no man is safe from arbitrary imprisonment.

Whatever will build up our borough so as to attract strangers of the right sort, we welcome. First-class schools, a strong police and good fire protection everybody desires. Arbitrary arrests, the passage of unpopular ordinances, and the schemes for constantly increasing taxation which emanate from sources that do not have at heart solely the interests of all, will not make for progress, but will eventually drive away capital and citizens.

We favor a new school building with adequate accommodations if placed on a proper site.

In the Borough Council there should always be minority representation. To have a Council wholly composed of one party is bad in policy and unjust to that large body of voters who are equally interested with the majority in local legislation.

We ask our voters to reinstate the policy of a government of the people, for the people and by the people as against that of one man, of whose domination we are becoming heartily weary.

Miss Dottie Smalley, who has been visiting in this city during the past two weeks, will return to Stamford, Conn., this week.

A.O.U.W. SESSION AT TRENTON

GRAND LODGE TO MEET ON THURSDAY, MARCH 10.

The Grand Lodge meeting of the A. O. U. W. will be held at Trenton beginning Thursday, March 10. The debate on the adoption of the new plans of assessment voted by the Supreme Lodge will begin the following day and is expected to be of the red hot variety. The acceptance or rejection of the assessment plans will be the most important step taken by the Grand Lodge probably in its history, the practical meaning of their rejection being separation from the Supreme Lodge. The advocates and opponents of the plans will marshal their full strength for the final battle which will end a campaign of months, the leader of the faction opposing adoption being Vincent W. Nash, of this city.

A discussion of the plans will be held by Central Lodge, No. 42, tomorrow night. All Workmen of the vicinity have been invited to attend and special invitations have been extended to the members of Columbia Lodge. Among those who will be present to speak will be Grand Master Tomlinson, of Elizabeth; Grand Guide Fowle, of Irvington; Chairman Roake, of Bayonne, of the finance committee; Chairman Wolff, of Newark, of the law department, and probably Deputy Pastorus, of Elizabeth. Supreme Representative Nash will attend and may possibly participate in the debate, though not scheduled for a set speech.

COLORED INDUSTRIAL WORK

REV. E. E. JACKSON HEAD OF MOVEMENT TO HELP COLORED CITIZENS.

The Industrial Association for colored people, which caused much discussion in this city among the residents of Northwood when it became known that a site was being sought in that vicinity on which to locate a home, is already doing work for the colored people. The association is the outcome of an industrial movement among the members of the Mount Olive Baptist church, of which Rev. E. E. Jackson is pastor.

A meeting has been held recently and a large number of the members of the church listened to reports of progress being made and to discuss methods of increasing the usefulness of the association. Those who are interested in the plan are the Sunday-school teachers and the superintendent, N. G. Pollard.

The pastor made an interesting address in which he said that it is the duty of the colored people of this as well as every other city to educate their own children. While all will not be professional men and women much good is bound to be derived from a system of education in the various trades. He said the colored people should not sit and wait for the white race to do all the educating. The colored people should help themselves. For forty years the white people have done everything they could to uplift their colored brethern and now it is time for the colored people to step out and do something for themselves.

Mr. Jackson intends to continue the work already begun in the instruction of the colored children of his church along some branch of trade. As the work grows other branches will be taken up. Beginning with the first of the month the shoe manufacturing and repairing industry will be taken up. Gifts of old shoes and clothing for the tailoring department are asked for.

This work is being done at present in the chapel of the church on Thursday afternoons. The pastor has been assured of assistance from several wealthy white friends who have promised to provide a more suitable place where the work may be carried on more advantageously.

Commissioners of Deeds.

At a recent meeting of the Legislature the following were elected commissioners of deeds for North Plainfield: North Plainfield Township—Richard G. Moldenke, Albert Brokaw; North Plainfield Borough—Bertha C. Needham, George F. Brown, George Ball, Henry Woodland.

Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Liquid Cream Balm is becoming quite as popular in many localities as Ely's Cream Balm solid. It is prepared for use in atomizers, and is highly prized by those who have been accustomed to call upon physicians for such a treatment Many physicians are using and prescribing it. All the medicinal properties of the celebrat d Cream Balm are contained in the Liquid form, which is 75 cts. including a spraying tube. All druggists, or by mail. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 6.

Topic.—How Christ stills the storms of life.—Ps. cvii, 23-31.

Life has often been likened to a sea, and in this portion of the One Hundred and Seventh Psalm God's providence to those upon the sea in the midst of a storm is described, and it may speak to us of God's power in Christ to still the storms of our lives. God's chosen people were not especially a seafaring people. For the most part they dreaded the sea, and yet they had an important seaport at Joppa, and some of them engaged in maritime pursuits. They went down to the sea (Mediterranean) and did business in great waters—great in contrast with the inland seas of Palestine. "These saw the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep." They saw sudden and great storms, common on the Mediterranean as on the sea of Galilee, and God's deliverance of His people even as Christ stilled the waves of the Galilee by saying, "Peace, be still."

The storms of the mighty deep are symbolical of the storms on the sea of life. The wind is contrary, the waves mount up to heaven, our souls melt away in trouble, we reel to and fro and are at our wit's end. Human ingenuity seems to be at an end, and we indeed know not what to do. Nor are these exceptional cases. Every life has its storms as well as its calms, its sorrows as well as its joys, its afflictions as well as its satisfactions. "Into every life some rain must fall and some days be dark and dreary." And yet we need never despair. Our "extremity becomes God's opportunity." We can call upon the Lord in our trouble, and He will bring us out of our distresses. He "maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still," and we can be glad because they are quiet and be brought by Him to our desired haven, and the goodness of God thus manifested toward us should lead us to praise Him.

God stills the storms of human life by His Son Jesus Christ. Christ spoke to the waves of the sea, and they were stilled, and so He can speak peace to the human heart and cause it to be still. To us, as to the disciples of old, He says, "Let not your heart be troubled." "I will not leave you comfortless," "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you," and if we will trust Him we will have peace of mind and stillness of soul instead of mental restlessness and spiritual disquiet.

Christ is also our guide, our pilot over the sea of life. He not only stills the storm, but "He bringeth us unto our desired haven." Some of us may think that we can guide our own lives, but we are much mistaken. We need Him every hour of life, and He never fails. By His holy spirit, by His word, which is "a lamp to our feet," by His providence and by His church and its sacraments and other means of grace He brings us at last to heaven, our desired haven. Let us therefore accept Him as our pilot and ever pray:

Jesus, Saviour, pilot me
Over life's tempestuous sea.

BIBLE READINGS.

A Midocean Request.

On his journey to Australia, in the interest of Christian Endeavor, Dr. Clark sent this mid-Pacific request:

"Will you not (as many as are like minded) join with me for the next three months, or whenever you begin your Quiet Hour, in this form of united prayer?

"Our Father in heaven, bless us who unite in this prayer to Thee and our Christian Endeavor brothers and sisters in every land.

"Enlarge our fellowship; increase our faithfulness; make us more useful in Thy church. Move our hearts not only to pray, but to give as Thou hast prospered us, for this and every good cause. Bless young people who know Thee not to Thyself. Bless, we pray Thee, the nations that the boys and girls may be Thine.

"For the Christian Endeavor brotherhood in all its divisions and in all the world we thank Thee. Make us worthy of large blessings and able to receive them, for the sake of our Jesus Christ, our only Lord and Saviour. Amen.

"Perhaps you will cut this out or copy it; it is not long. There is a fellowship in words even, and the fact that we are using the same petitions, framed in the same words, at the same time, will make us realize our kinship.

"Aside from this, in our Quiet Hour we shall have time for many and varied petitions, for this will hardly occupy sixty minutes, but it will be a golden chain to bind to the throne of God the hearts of all who use it."

Never Uncertain.

I thank God that Christian Endeavor has never been uncertain as to the inspiration, the infallibility, the inerrancy of the word of God.—Rev. Dr. John F. Carson.

Do the Hard Thing.

Do anything—anything that God gives you to do. Occupy the hard places if those are the ones he calls you to fill.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Five Anonymous Nuggets.

Remember, Junior workers, it is awfully important to catch the young men when they are boys.

When a society ceases to be active it's dead, and when it's dead it's no good.

We may pray for a hundred and a thousand, but they must be saved one by one. Keep this in mind, Endeavorers who labor as soul winners.

There is no substitute for the personal work in the church or in the Christian Endeavor society.

Some think that in the pledge we aim too high for them. Don't drop the standard to meet such. Bring them up to the standard.

MAGNO WAS SURPRISED.

Courted Neapolitan Girl by Proxy and Now Is Shocked at Brilliancy of Her Caldera.

When he went to the Dominion line dock, at Boston, to claim the maiden who had come out from sunny Italy on the Cambronne to be his bride, the other day, Magno Cascruci had never seen her, nor had the girl ever set eyes on the man she expected to love, honor and obey. When they met the man experienced a shock from which it took him some minutes to recover. The girl was red-headed. It was not a dark, unobtrusive kind of red, which might be charitably styled auburn, but a bright fire color, which took the man's breath away as he looked at her, and made him repent for a moment his rashness in letting anybody else select a wife for him. In southern Italy a red-headed girl is as scarce as a negro in Siberia, and is looked on with little more favor. However, the prospective husband rallied nobly and decided to take her. He departed in search of a marriage license, and the girl waited patiently in the detention room the reappearance of the bridegroom.

Vittoria Lostracco resided in a little village in a southern province in Italy and had attained the age of 24 without passing under the yoke of matrimony, an age which in Italy is dangerously near that of an old maid.

In this country Magno Castrucci had labored for 11 years, alone and friendless, and at last felt the need of a companion to share his joys and sorrows. He looked around him, but the Italian girls of his acquaintance were all provided with husbands or lovers, or were unwilling to mate with him. In this country there are not near enough Italian maidens to go around, and a girl can afford to be fastidious.

He wrote his troubles home to his parents in the old country, and they at once thought of Vittoria. They sang the praises of their son to her, and of the girl to the son, and in a short time the matter was arranged. Details were, of course, meager. None of the parties concerned went to the trouble to write a letter, and it never occurred to them to exchange photographs. But as they both declare themselves satisfied with their bargain the story may be said to have a happy ending.

CONQUERED BY WASPS.

Mud-Daubers Force a Confirmed Old Bachelor to Seek Safety in Matrimony.

A curious tale is told of a young man from Grant's Pass, Ore., who was cured of the bachelor habit by "mud-dauber" wasps. The hero tells the story on himself of how he was working in a mine near his native town, and at the end of a hard day's work always tumbled into his bunk in an old cabin without taking the trouble to arrange his blankets. The cabin was infested with "mud-daubers," and one day several of these located themselves in the miner's bed. The young man retired without ceremony that evening, but he arose again very rapidly. According to his own statement, which may, perhaps, best be taken with a grain of caution, he flew clear to the roof and knocked off half a dozen or more shakes, came down, kicked over the table, and otherwise gave evidence of a worried man for several minutes. The wasps ended his bachelor career, for the miner went next day to Grant's Pass and secured a housekeeper in the person of a pretty bride.

Beauty Beats Intellect.

A club of young lady students in the Chicago university recently engaged in a very interesting debate. They decided, by a large majority, that beauty is better for a woman than intellect. This means that her proper sphere is the home.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 6: "Christ Stilling the Storms of Life."—Ps. cvii, 23-31.

"They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters —these see the works of Jehovah and His wonders in the deep."

There is unceasing fascination in the ocean from whatever point of view it may be seen. Whoever has stood on the bluff at Highland light, near the end of Cape Cod, and looked on the beach far below, with the long ocean swell breaking gently upon the sands in pleasant weather, and has listened to the lightkeepers as they have told of the great storms, when the surges beat at the base of the cliffs with shock which shakes the massive lighthouse till the lights in the lantern tremble and the spray dashes far over the top—whoever has seen the steamers and white winged ships leaving port this day and they come and go from all parts of the world does not feel the sublimity of this passage from this wondrous song of adoration. How impressively the littleness of man and the majesty of God come to one as he gazes afar over the waste of waters! How felicitously his sentiment is expressed by the psalmist in this selection!

It is God who commandeth and raiseth the stormy winds, and they fulfill His word. Whatever our science may teach us as to laws and modes of nature, our religion goes beyond all this, and deeper than all philosophy also, and teaches us of the cause and also inspires the spirit of adoration and trust. This is more than the emotion of awe at the sight of immensity and boundless power or any natural phenomenon. It is the worshipful reverence of a devout soul trusting the Fatherly protection of Him who holds all powers of natural and spirit worlds in His grasp and uses them to accomplish His own desired purposes.

"They cry unto Jehovah in their trouble!" Many never would think of Him if they did not get into trouble from which they find no one else able to deliver. Their cry to Jehovah is the outcome of desperation and despair. Though they have neglected Him and refused obedience and only seek Him in distress, He does not refuse their prayer. "He bringeth them out of their distresses" and "bringeth them to their desired haven." He makes the storm a calm, and the waves are still, and they are glad because of the quietness.

How true all this is of experiences in every department of life! Not only on the coast and great lakes and mighty rivers can this psalm be read as an expression of experience, but whoever knows heart trouble and anxiety, whoever becomes conscious of the powerlessness of his own weakness beating against him with almost resistless force, knows the deep relief of the calm which follows the true appeal to Christ. That night on Galilee when he spoke peace to the waters and saved the frightened fishermen is the prose comment of the New Testament on this poetical burst of praise from the Old Covenant.

We need to look into our own lives and recognize how often the Lord has delivered us from the peril of great waters. Let us still praise Him not only for deliverance and calm, but also for the tempest if the stormy wind has aroused us from our forgetfulness to a recognition of our dependence on God.

"Oh, that men would praise Jehovah for his loving kindness!"

If on a quiet sea
Toward heaven we calmly sail,
With grateful hearts, O God, to Thee,
We'll own the favoring gale.

But should the surges rise
And rest delay to come,
Blest be the tempest, blest the storm,
Which drives us nearer home.

Soon shall our doubts and fears
All yield to Thy control;
Thy tender mercies shall illume
The midnight of the soul.

Teach us, in every state,
To make Thy will our own,
And when the joys of sense depart
To live by faith alone.

—A. M. Topladv.

The Sunshine of Praise.

If you see anything that is worthy of praise, speak of it. Even if you cannot do a worthy deed yourself, commend one who does. Praise is a power for good; both God and man prize it. No prayer is complete without praise. The best writer and ablest speaker who fails to give praise fails of doing as well as he can. Mrs. Stowe states the truth effectively when she says: "Praise is sunshine. It warms, it inspires, it promotes growth. Blame and rebuke are rain and hail. They beat down and bedraggle even though they may at times be necessary." Do we do our part in giving praise?—Sunday School Times.

Gems of Thought.

A woman without religion, a flower without perfume.—German.

There is many a golden ladder resting upon the weary pillow of pain where attendant angels make sorrow's midnight beautiful.

Instead of a gem, or even a flower, cast the gift of a living thought into the heart of a friend.—George Macdonald.

Nature has given us two ears, two eyes and but one tongue, to the end that we should hear and see more than we speak.—Socrates.

Our Food From God.

Behind the snowy loaf is the mill wheel; behind the mill is the wheat field; on the wheat field rests the sur light; above the sun is God.—Lowell.

Faith in Man.

Look full into thy spirit's self,
The world of mystery scan!
What if the way to faith in God
Should lie through faith in man!

PARK BOWLERS LOSE TO WESTFIELD TEAM

Leaders in The Daily Press Bowling Tournament Win Another Series.

NO HIGH SCORES MADE

MATCH TOOK PLACE ON ALLEYS AT WESTFIELD.

Home Team Won First Game by Score of 806 to 712 and Last Game by Score of 848 to 646—Park Club Won Second Game.

The Park Club bowling team journeyed to Westfield Friday and succeeded in winning one of the series of three games with the Westfield Club in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament. With a few exceptions the Parks were considerably off their game and they made a poor showing. For instance William McCutchen rolled a score of 194 in the second game and a score of 89 in the last one. F. O. Ball had high score for the Parks in the second game, rolling 198. The other scores were much lower. Dr. Thiers especially had hard luck. He had six splits in the first game and more than his share in the other two.

As for the Westfield team the members did but little better individually. Condit with a score of 190 was high man for the team. The first game they took by a score of 806 to 712, the second game they lost by a score of 708 to 804 and the last game they took by a score of 848 to 646.

This is the detailed score:

DALY'S GOODS TO BE SOLD

VICE CHRNCELLOR REFUSES TO ALLOW A RECEIVERSHIP.

The second hearing on the application of W. R. Codington, Esq., of Codington & Swackhamer, for the appointment of a receiver for the grocery store of James Daly, on East Front street, was held before Vice Chancellor Emery, at Newark, Friday.

It will be remembered that Daly made a general assignment on Feb. 8 to J. Fred MacDonald, and that subsequently, Mr. Codington, on behalf of Mary E. Goggin, who claimed to hold two chattel mortgages on the goods, filed a bill in Chancery to foreclose these mortgages and for the appointment of a receiver. Vice Chancellor Stevens, on the filing of the bill, granted a rule to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed, and in the meantime restrained the assignee from selling any of the goods.

On the return of the rule to show cause on Feb. 16, Vice Chancellor Emery made an order allowing the assignee to sell at retail, and continued the further hearing until yesterday.

The assignee made his report yesterday, and recommended an immediate public sale of the goods. After hearing arguments by W. R. Codington, Esq., in favor of the appointment of a receiver, and W. S. Angleman, Esq., who appeared for the assignee, against such appointment, the Vice Chancellor refused to appoint a receiver, and directed the assignee to sell the goods at public auction as he recommended in his report. In the meantime the litigation over the amount actually due on the mortgages will continue.

SWACKHAMER SPOKE WISELY ON MONEY

Said Greed for Gain Without Regard to Right or Wrong Works Moral Disaster.

AT TRINITY REFORMED

MEN'S ASSOCIATION HELD ITS FIRST ENTERTAINMENT.

Excellent Programme Successfully Presented—Music by Quartette—Committees Appointed by President Marshall.

The Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church held its first regular meeting since its organization Thursday, with much success attending the efforts of C. E. Ball, who arranged the programme. As an indication of the value of the plan for meetings combining entertainment and instruction, the opening of the association's work was propitious.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer was the speaker of the evening. His subject was "Greed for Personal Gain," and the burden of his thought was that men should not allow themselves in their thirst for gain to overstep the line of demarcation between right and wrong. He described the ills that accumulation of wealth often brings and characterized the present age as one of materialism. He said that money should not be man's central or chief idea in life. He related incidents graphically descriptive of the miser's misery. Quoting Walpole's statement that every man has his price, Mr. Swackhamer said that he was glad to be able to mention numerous exceptions in American life.

The man worthy of respect in political life, said the speaker, is the man who does not desert his constituents for price. He illustrated the power of money for good or evil, and showed that crime is often the inevitable result of a greed for gold. Referring to the social influence of money, "the doors of respectability," he quoted, "swing upon silver hinges." He concluded by impressing the fact that the individual or nation with none but material aims has no guarantee of permanency.

A vote of thanks was extended Mr. Swackhamer. It was announced that the subject of the next meeting, March 31, would be Insurance and that the speaker would be Mr. Davidson, of the Prudential Insurance Company.

Last night's meeting was presided over by President H. W. Marshall. Music was provided by a quartette consisting of F. S. Cutter, W. B. Gilbert, Elmer E. Runyon and William Jeffery, accompanied on the piano by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan. Appointments of entertainment and advisory committees by the president were confirmed: Advisory committee, Robert Clark, Jr., E. R. VanZandt and F. E. Smith; entertainment committee to serve three months, E. F. Sheppard, chairman, H. E. Bohan, G. M. Hoagland, H. J. Martin and O. W. Dunham.

POSED AS LIVING PICTURES

TABLEAUX BY WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

A series of living pictures with the general subject, "An Artist's Dream," entertained a large number of members of the Woman's Association of the Congregational church Friday. There were twenty-five tableaux, including such varied subjects as the "Gibson Girl," posed by Miss Mary Wadsworth; the "Minute Man," by Mr. Rice; "John Alden," Phillip Suffern; "Priscilla," Miss Barlow; the "Gilbert Girl," Miss McIntosh; Hattie Miss Moffett, "Kathaleen Phillips; the "Heavenly Twins" and "Choir Boys" and others of like nature. The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Miss Addie Parker Jackson, Mrs. D. Foster Updike.

"Plainfield" to be Launched.

The Jersey Central Railroad Company ferry boat "Plainfield" which has been in the course of erection at the Crescent shipyards in Elizabethport, for some time, during which it has figured in much litigation, is nearing completion and it is said, will be launched in about ten days. This boat is the handsomest and largest of the Jersey Central fleet and, in fact, like the city for which it is to be officially named, it is to be the Queen of the fleet, as Plainfield is the Queen city of the line.

A RUSSIAN DISASTER FOR HER OWN GOOD

Rev. Charles E. Herring Declare That Her Defeat in War Would Be Beneficial.

WRONG IDEALS NOW

RUSSIA DEPENDS ON BRUTE FORCE NOT BRAINS.

Quotes W. T. Stead During Course of Sermon on "The Americanization of the World"—Dwells on Missionary Work.

"One of the best things that could happen to Russia would be for her to be disastrously defeated in her war with Japan. I hope that she will be defeated so long as her ideal is one of antagonism to liberty which she regards as license. I hope the educational ideal will win.

"The future of any country depends upon brain not brawn. In Japan, schools are being rapidly built everywhere and there are not enough yet for the numbers of people who wish to attend. Ninety-six per cent. of Russian peasants cannot read or write. Russia's great need is education for the common people. She needs an ideal of brains instead of one of brute force that sends men to Siberia without trial. And yet this is the nation that hopes to Russianize the world or more immediately Persia, the Palestine, India and China in Asia."

This thought that a thorough beating would teach Russia that she like Japan must depend for strength upon Christian education was expressed Sunday by Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, in a sermon on "The Americanization of the World'.

Mr. Herring described the close relations that have bound Japan and the United States since 1853, when Commodore Perry opened the doors of Japan to the commerce of the world. One unique incident he mentioned was the voluntary sending back of what the United States regarded as an excess in an indemnity paid by Japan. Japan has been grateful and has made a quick response to American missionary efforts and American educational methods. Japan's progress in education and in the arts of war and peace has been wonderful.

Mr. Herring took his general theme from the book, the "Americanizing of the World," by William T. Stead, editor of the (London) Review of Reviews. He quoted Mr. Stead's admission, "America is fashioning the world from its own image," explaining that Englishmen have a full appreciation of the influence America has attained in their own as well as other lands. This they are pleased to regard as the effect of their own ethical ideas Americanized.

One-third of the world is under the domination of English-speaking people, said the speaker. "What a tremendous influence if America and England would combine for mission work."

Comparing education in the United States and England, Mr. Herring said that "one-thirty-sixth of the public land in this country is set apart for educational purposes. Only during the last thirty years has England believed in compulsory education which has been the rule here since colonial times. When Frederick Harrison came here from England in 1900, he noticed that the educational equipment in this country was ten times greater and more efficient than that of his own land."

"England,' said Mr. Herring, comparing the productive powers of the two countries, "builds a machine to last. America builds one to wear out, and to discard for another from an improved model, thus keeping step with the times."

The speaker referred to the openness with which the American missionary is everywhere received while the Englishman is frequently regarded by the people with whom he is laboring as having an ulterior motive. In return for our mission work, he said, China and Japan will bring out a new phase and a better conception of Christianity as we give the Gospel to them. He spoke of the great opportunities for the beneficient extension of American influence through its mission work in foreign fields. For the benefit of those who decry foreign mission work with the doctrine "charity begins at home," Mr. Herring said that home mission work is only a part of the body of Christianity and that to take away foreign work would be to take away an arm or other essential of the body.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Affair.

Fifteen members of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. orchestra will go to Ridgewood Monday, March 14, to give a concert with the Ridgewood Y. M. C. A. orchestra. There will be thirty-five pieces in the combined orchestra which will be conducted by Martin A. Korff, leader of the orchestras of both associations.

P. H. S. DEFEATS HASBROUCK

LOCAL TEAM WINS BASKET BALL GAME WITH PERFECT EASE.

Plainfield High School turned the tables on Hasbrouck Institute of Jersey City in basket ball Friday afternoon avenging a 25-15 defeat of February 5 in Jersey City, by winning on the Y. M. C. A. floor by a score of 30 to 7. Plainfield played clean, open basket ball, excelling in team work as well as individual play, though Hasbrouck did some good passing at times. Collier's accurate shooting for baskets was what played the greatest havoc with the visitors. He scored ten clean goals, many of them difficult shots, and in defensive work, his opponent never had a chance to get by him. His reappearance on the team has added much to Plainfield's strength. Guinn and Gavett also did good work on the offense and Thompson's play was excellent. The summary:

Plainfield High — Thompson and Collier, forwards; Guinn, centre; Gavett and Fenn, guards. Hasbrouck —Tompkins and Stork, forwards; Appleton, centre; Platt and Hunt, guards. Goals from the floor, Collier 10, Guinn 2, Gavett 3, Hunt 2, Tompkins. Goal from foul, Platt. Referee, Robbie. Umpires, Marclay and Weintraub. Scorer, Flanders. Time, 20-min. halves.

Fuel Saving Device.

Fred Wilcox, of Dunellen, has patented a combination device for a kitchen range whereby the whole house can be heated by it the same as from a furnace in the cellar. He claims that the arrangements will save fully one-half of a year's supply of fuel, the one stove being able to do the work of a furnace or several stoves.

The last dance of the Criterion Club, of this city, will be held on Thursday night, March 24. It is planned to hold the affair at the Casino.

BASKET BALL AT Y. M. C. A.

REGULAR TEAM WINS IN CONTEST WITH BUSINESS MEN'S AGGREGATION.

The first basket ball five of the Y. M. C. A. defeated a scrub team from the business men's class Friday by a score of 26 to 18. The first team excelled in passing, but their victory was by no means overwhelming. The business men, captained by Dr. Browning, fought hard from the start and several times in both halves had their opponents on the anxious seat before they could clinch their victory. Cahoone did great offensive work for the first team, making a total of nine goals. The score at the end of the first half was tied 12 to 12, Cahoone's clever work in throwing seven goals in the latter period landing the victory. The score:

First Team—Hand and Hallock, forwards; Cahoone, centre; Neal and Scull, guards. Business Men—Heicker and Blake, forwards; Ostinger, centre; Browning and Letson, guards. Goals from the floor, Hand 3, Hallock, Cahoone 9, Scull, Heicker, Blake 6, Ostinger 2 Referee, Heinecke. Umpires, Doane and Sebring. Scorer, Hoagland. Timer, C. Ostinger. Time, 20-min. periods.

A. E. Neal's New Position.

Allen E. Beals, who has been a member of the reportorial staff of The Daily Press for some time, has resigned to accept a similar position on The Elizabeth Times and will assume his duties on the latter paper on March 7. Mr. Beals is a hustler and has been faithful in the discharge of his duties while connected with this paper.

Miss Borsum Engaged.

Mrs. Charles Emmons, of the borough, has been removed to the hospital for treatment.

TO RAISE PRESIDENT'S PAY.

Bill Introduced to Increase Official Salaries.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Senator Gallinger has introduced a bill increasing the salaries of the executive officers of the government and also of senators and members of the house of representatives. The bill fixes the following scale:

President, $75,000.
Vice president, $15,000.
Speaker of the house of representatives, $12,000.
Members of the cabinet, $15,000 each.
Senators and members of the house, $8,000 each.
The bill provides that the new salaries shall take effect March 4, 1905.

Champion Woman Swimmer Dead.

NEW YORK, March 2.—After an illness of three weeks Ethel Golding, the champion woman swimmer, is dead at the home of her parents in Bath Beach. She had always had perfect health until she was stricken with acute Bright's disease, and then blood poisoning set in. She would have been twenty-three years old on Friday. Miss Ethel had never been defeated in the water, and all her brothers and sisters are well known throughout the country as expert swimmers. Her sister Hialne, who is much younger, is considered the champion swimmer of her age in the United States. At Bath Beach last summer Miss Golding won the title of champion. She won her first medal, of which she had many, in the series of ocean races off Coney Island when a mere girl.

Situation in Santo Domingo.

SANTO DOMINGO, March 2.—United States Minister Powell has been informed that the insurgents at San Pedro de Macoris have seized the tugboat Burro, belonging to the Clyde line of New York, and armed her. The Clyde line steamer Cherokee has gone to Azua de Compostela conveyed by the United States training ship Hartford. Many arrests have been made here, and several politicians were sent out of the country on board the steamer Julia of the Cuba line. Edward C. Reed, United States consular agent at San Pedro de Macoris, is said to be in danger. Minister Powell has taken steps to secure the protection of all interests.

The Cowboys' Trial.

NORTON, Kan., March 2.—William McBride, one of the three defendants in the trial for the murder of Burchard Berry, took the stand in his own defense and told of the fight at the Berry ranch. He corroborated previous testimony to the effect that the Berry boys had opened fire and said: "Burch Berry fired directly at me twice. I put a cartridge in my gun and fired at him, and he fell. I fired at him because he fired at me and to protect my life." McBride denied that he had ever said that if Dewey could not buy out the settlers in the vicinity of his ranch he would drive them out or "kill them out."

Alaska to Have Delegate.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—A favorable report was made from the senate committee on territories on Senator Nelson's bill giving Alaska a delegate in congress. The bill was reported in order to get it on the calendar before Thursday, which is Alaska day in the senate. Three important measures for Alaska are pending in the senate—the bill for the construction of a wagon road, maintenance of schools and care of the insane, the bill relating to municipal corporations and the bill amending the mining laws.

JAP ADVANCE READY

Army Landed In Korea Will Move Toward Manchuria.

RUSSIAN ARMY BARS THE WAY

Armies Must Come Together Soon, Mikado's Troops Occupy Ichiyang and Fortify It—Noncombatants Leave Port Arthur.

LONDON, March 2.—According to a report received here all the Japanese troops necessary for the forward movement have been landed in Korea, and it is expected the general advance toward Manchuria will begin at once.

It is believed that a land battle in Korea must occur within a very short time. The Japanese, according to a late report, have occupied Ichioyang, near Pingyang, and are now fortifying it. It was announced that a considerable body of Russian troops were already in the neighborhood of Ichiyang and that a detachment of mounted cavalry was expected there.

Twenty-five hundred Russian troops are reported to have reached the Yalu, and two regiments of mounted infantry, with artillery, hold the mountain passes some thirty-five miles south of Wiju.

A Chefu dispatch says that the Japanese have renewed the attack on Port Arthur. The fleet kept beyond the range of all but the most powerful land batteries.

The engagement lasted one hour, the Japanese retiring. Their loss is unknown. The Russian cruiser Askold had one gun dismounted and two men injured.

A low water the Russians discovered a Japanese torpedo boat destroyer which had been sunk on the shore of the outer harbor. They also found five unexploded torpedoes.

A Port Arthur report says the military authorities are causing to be removed from all strategic points the women and children and all aged and infirm men, so that the necessity of protecting them will not be added to the other duties of the troops and in order that all supplies may be available for the use of the actual combatants.

The Russian torpedo boat which sought refuge in Pigeon bay was subjected to a terrific fire from the Japanese cruisers. One shot pierced her hull. The boat was beached, the leak was stopped, she was refloated at high water and returned to Port Arthur.

Advices from Vladivostok say that Gen. Chichoff regards any threatening the district of Ninguta. Their leader, Yavanten, proclaims himself invulnerable to bullets.

Advices received by mail from Irkutsk, Siberia, say that local arms and ammunition have been called to service in the army are continuing to pay the married men full wages and the unmarried men half pay.

A report from Vladivostok says that the warships in the harbor are the Rossia, Gromobol and Rurik and the transport Moskova. The port is frozen hard, and the ice breaker is scarcely able to clear the channel.

Two Japanese attempted to blow up the Vladivostok dock, but did not succeed. They escaped.

A Japanese barber at Vladivostok deeming himself insulted by a Russian officer shot him dead and then dramatically announced that he was a captain in the Japanese general staff and was not used to taking insults.

Vice Admiral Bezobrazoff has left here for Cronstadt to take command of the second division of the Baltic fleet. Admiral Bezobrazoff is greatly beloved by the sailors, many of whom gathered at the railroad station to bid him farewell.

A Tokyo dispatch says that general elections were held in Japan and were without disturbance of any kind.

An imperial rescript convening the diet in special session at Tokyo on March 18 will be issued today. This session will last for ten days, and the most important bill to be presented is one which increases the land tax by 1½ per cent. This increase will result in doubling the income from this source.

Direct telegraphic advices received here from Port Arthur make no mention of the bombardment of that place reported yesterday.

Advices from St. Petersburg say that General Kuropatkin has returned to St. Petersburg from his home, where he went to take leave of his family. His departure for the front remains fixed for March 11.

Vice Admiral Makaroff is expected to reach Port Arthur March 11.

A Shanghai report says that 4,000 additional Chinese soldiers have been posted in northern China and that the Chinese government has recently placed large orders for guns and ammunition.

Advices from Seoul report that 1,400 Russians are at Chongfu, 500 at Kusong and 50 at Anju. These forces probably are only feelers sent out to locate the position of the Japanese.

All the Americans formerly at Sunchun, with the exception of one family, have arrived at Pingyang.

The emperor of Korea has dissolved the organization of the Peddlers' guild, which has been a disturbing factor in the situation.

It is reported from Tokyo that the general staff and a regiment of the guards have left Japan for a port on the west coast of Korea, probably Chemulpo.

Korea's Hope the United States.

PARIS, March 2.—A consideration of the attitude of the European powers shows that Korea has little to hope for from them. Great Britain being expected to agree to greater Japanese control over the Hermit Kingdom, while France and Germany would not oppose Russia

CAPTAIN SMITH WON'T RUN

DECLINES NOMINATIONS TENDERED BY OPPOSING PARTIES IN THE BOROUGH.

Captain William O. Smith, who has received the nomination on both the Republican and Independent tickets in the borough for Commissioner of Appeal, said this morning that under no circumstances would he consent to run on either ticket. Some of his friends are urging him to allow his name to appear on the Republican ticket while others want him to run in the Independent list.

In giving his reasons for not serving on the Republican ticket he said he does not think the introduction of a paid fire department in the borough fair to the taxpayers. He said that he is not altogether satisfied with the present administration and believed that a better police service was more to be desired than a fire department which would add at least $1,500 a year to taxes. He said he has voted the Republican ticket all his life and believed that a poor Republican was better than a good Democrat but his action at this time was based on a desire to be free to vote according to his opinions.

ENJOYABLE PARK CLUB DANCE

MEMBERSHIP OF ORGANIZATION NOW NUMBERS NEARLY TWO HUNDRED.

Saturday night the members of the Park Club had one of their regular Saturday night dances, over one hundred being present. The club has had these dances every other Saturday throughout the winter and will continue them up to the first of May. The membership of the club has very nearly reached its limit of 200, between sixty and seventy having joined during the last four months; over fifty of the new members are residents of Plainfield so that the membership of the club is now very evenly divided between the city and the borough.

NEW GAS TANK.

Big Reservoir Being Erected by P. S. C. at Its East Fourth Street Plant.

After a long delay caused by the difficulty in securing structural iron and steel from the western foundries, the work on the new gas tank for Washington and Fourth streets is being pushed forward to rapid completion. An extra force of iron workers has been put on and the superstructure is being rushed forward as rapidly as possible.

Last fall the foundation and lower base of the immense gas reservoir was completed but on account of slow shipments the work was stopped. It is expected that the work will be completed by the end of spring.

The local representatives of the Public Service Corporation declare that as soon as the new tank has been put in service the quality of the gas will be much improved as it will relieve much of the pressure now being carried by the smaller and older tank in order to supply the city.

HOCKEY WINNERS.

Plainfield High School Team Closes a Successful Season.

The Plainfield High School hockey team has closed a successful season with a record of four games won and two tied out of six played. A game scheduled for last Friday with Cranford was cancelled because of the poor condition of the ice. The team consisted of these players: Bock, goal; Tweedy, point; Briggs, cover point; Craig, W. MRS. VAIL DEAD.

Widow of Wallace Vail Follows Her Husband to the Grave.

Mrs. Hulda M. Vail, widow of Wallace Vail, former postmaster of this city, died Sunday at her home, 1214 Dunellen avenue, following a few days' illness with pneumonia. Mr. Vail died recently. Mrs. Vail was born in Massachusetts and had lived in this city forty years. During her husband's term as postmaster she was the acting postmistress, taking charge of the office when Mr. Vail was away engaged in other business. The funeral services were held from the late home Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and interment was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

The report that Robert Trewin, the Somerset street barber, has become blind through an affection of the eyes, is denied by Mrs. Trewin. She said her husband merely has an attack of rheumatism in the left optic and is gradually improving.

JOSEPH O. OSGOOD ON BRIDGE BUILDING

Chief Engineer of Jersey Central Railroad Makes An Address Before a Men's Club.

IN GRACE M. E. CHURCH

SKETCHES THE HISTORY OF THE SUBJECT TO A LARGE AUDIENCE.

Particular Reference Made to the New "Lift" Constructed Over Newark Bay — Refreshments Served at the Conclusion.

Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, made an address at the meeting of the Men's Assembly of Grace M. E. church Friday. There was a large attendance in spite of the fact that there was a citizens meeting in the borough.

Mr. Osgood's topic was the "Evolution of Bridges." He referring especially to the new drop-bridge which was placed in position a few weeks ago by the Central Railroad Company over Newark Bay. Mr. Osgood is an interesting talker and that he is thoroughly conversant with his subject is shown by the lucid manner in which each detail of the great structure over the channel of the bay was described.

He told in an interesting way the story of bridges from the time when monkeys strung themselves in human ladders, so to speak, across streams, referring incidently of the rough bridges, made by savages, of falled trees and branches, and the bridges of mediaeval times up to the suspension bridges which connect great cities and the cantilever bridge which is the connecting link between the great arteries of freight traffic between the east and west. The various kinds of bridges were described and the workings of the modern draw bridge explained. He dwelt at length upon the use and practical utility of such a bridge as the "lift" recently constructed over the Newark Bay.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of his talk and a social time was enjoyed. A cornet solo was rendered by Whitney France, accompanied by W. A. Conger.

PASTOR'S TALK ON WISDOM

REV. A. E. FINN CONDEMNS ALLEGED UTTERANCE OF ANDREW CARNEGIE.

How the wisdom of Christ differs from the wisdom of a millionaire was discussed Sunday by Rev. A. E. Finn, in his sermon at the Park Avenue Baptist church. His text is found in the passage of Scripture which says, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added to you." The wisdom of the millionaire was taken from a remark said to have been made by Andrew Carnegie: "Seek ye a competence and after you have secured the competence do all the good you can." Before opening his sermon, Mr. Finn stated that he was sorry that such a statement should have been made by such a great and generous man as Mr. Carnegie.

Mr. Finn declared that he believed the remark made by the steel magnate was open to possible contingencies. "If a man devoted the best part of his life to securing the competence," said he, "what would he left for good work would be small. While a man was engaged in gaining wealth, many opportunities for doing good would be lost and the man striving towards this end would enter Eternity with a damaged soul." Comparing this with the wisdom of Jesus Christ, the pastor pointed out the difference between the worldly and the spiritual advice. Christ said, "Seek ye the Kingdom of God and ye shall know righteousness." The Kingdom of God is much more to be desired than a competence because with the Kingdom on one's side good deeds can be done without the competence.

Swackhamer's Bill.

Bill No. 364, in the House of Assembly, has been introduced by Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Somerset county. It provides for an appeal from a recorder's court in boroughs. It has been referred to the committee on boroughs and borough commissions. This bill is the outcome of the trouble between John Goodwin and the Mayor and Common Council of North Plainfield.

For Rural Delivery.

Persons living in the vicinity of Watchung, Warrenville and Martinsville are now interesting themselves in securing a Rural Free Delivery. Former Assemblyman Cooper is taking the lead in the matter of securing signers for the improvement in the delivery of mail and there seems to be no doubt but what the postal authorities will eventually grant the request.

Dr. D. C. Adams, of Grove street, is detained at home by illness.

CITIZENS' PARTY VICTORIOUS IN HARD FOUGHT BATTLE!

Coalition of Democrats and Dissatisfied Republicans Rout the Administration's Candidates, George F. Brown, for Collector, Alone Escaping Defeat.

BOROUGH WITNESSES A MOST BITTER FIGHT.

MAYOR SMALLEY ADMITTED REPUBLICAN TICKET'S DEFEAT SOON AFTER POLLS CLOSED—THE DETAILED RESULT OF THE CONTEST—FACTORS THAT BROUGHT ABOUT SUCCESS TO THE ENEMIES OF THE DOMINANT PARTY.

From the hottest election in the history of the borough the Citizens' ticket has emerged victorious.

With the exception of John H. Whitenack, the nominee for collector, all the anti-administration candidates were elected by good-sized majorities. George F. Brown, the Republican collector nominee, had a narrow escape.

For council, Frank C. Krewson defeated Nelson A. Miller by 105; J. H. VanWinkle won by 97 over A. M. Stine, and J. P. Humble defeated Charles L. Nichols by 82.

Collector Brown won his re-election by the narrow margin of 37 votes.

Dr. Cooley won the assessorship from John P. Emmons by 68 majority.

Lewis A. Hummer defeated A. S. King for justice of the peace, by 79 majority, and Sylvester Scribner captured the same office from G. M. Hoagland by 70.

For freeholder, John Emmons defeated B. S. Braider by 93 majority.

John T. Case won the fight for commissioner of appeal by 65 votes over William C. Smith.

The Republicans carried the First district very narrowly, and the Citizens' made a clean sweep of the Second. Brown ran far ahead of his ticket in both districts. He had 51 majority in the First, while his nearest running mate there had only 15. In the Second, Whitenack only beat him by 24. Krewson also ran slightly ahead of his ticket.

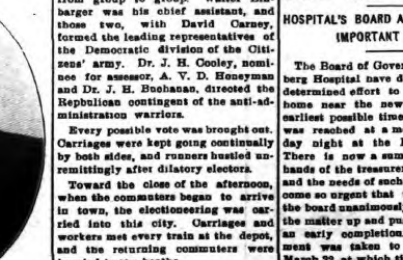
Majorities in the two districts for the principal nominees were as follows: Council, Second district—Krewson, 109; VanWinkle, 103; Humble, 97; First district—Miller, 4; Stine, 6; Nichols, 15. Collector, First district—Brown 51; Second district—Whitenack, 24. Assessor, Second district—Cooley 84; First district—Emmons 21. Freeholder, Second district—Emmons, 152; First district, Braider 9.

Out of a registration of about 1,400 a total of 1,112 votes was cast, a higher precentage than that of a presidential year. 525 votes were cast in the First district and 587 in the Second.

There was a lot of scratching. Party lines were lost sight of almost entirely in the general balloting, and the electors voted more as pro-administration and anti administration than under any other classification. [illegible]

The defeat of the Republican ticket was made apparent a few minutes after the polls closed, when the voting machine in the First district gave up its returns. This district was the hope of the administration party, and when the result was announced they lost heart. Normally, it is Republican by about 150, and the leaders expected it to turn out at least 100 majority. When the slim majorities became known Mayor Smalley and the other chieftains on his side gave up hope.

Assemblyman Swackhammer.



David J. Carney.

Even Collector Brown, in the face of his big lead, conceded his defeat. A short time after, before the count in the Second had fairly started, the Mayor and his aides went home. The Mayor's illness, aggravated by his labors at the polls, made it imperative for him to leave, or he would probably have stayed to see the count out.

As the vote in the Second went on, making the victory of the Citizens' more and more certain, Republicans became fewer and fewer on the scene, and there was a comparatively small number about to rejoice over the salvation of Collector Brown when his close victory was made known.

The victors were in full possession of the business part of Somerset street, and they celebrated in approved style. The firemen let themselves loose, and with Chief Stahl and other prominent Warren Engine Company members in the lead, paraded about the borough behind the drum corps, carrying lighted brooms and red fire. They serenaded at the house of Samuel Townsend, John Valiant and Councilman Lee. Mayor Smalley had asked them to be quiet about his residence on account of a sick daughter, and in consideration of this request the rejoicing firemen marched by his home silently, and held their shouts and music for two blocks beyond. Warren Company will celebrate the Citizens' victory with a banquet on Monday night.

There never was an election in the borough so bitterly contested. Workers for both parties hustled at fever heat from the minute the polls opened until the last of the votes had been cast.

Usually the flow of ballots fluctuates through the day, but yesterday they came in with a steadiness that reflected the unusual energy of the workers. By noontime more than half the vote had been cast.

Everywhere about the two polling places, crossing and recrossing the street from district to district, Mayor Smalley kept the Republican forces moving. He was sick enough to be under the doctor's care, but, muffled closely in a long overcoat, he worked with the indomitable energy characteristic of him in all his political battles. His presence was felt at every stage of the battle, and there is no doubt that his absence, which was feared by his followers when the news of his illness came out yesterday, would have had a decidedly adverse effect on the Republican vote.

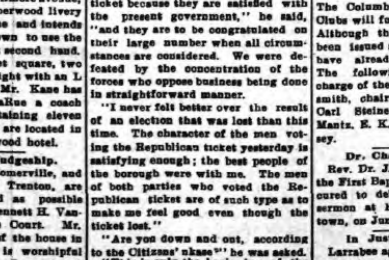
The regular Republican headquarters in the store at Somerset and Race streets was practically deserted all day. The leaders gathered for conferences and list-checking in Collector Brown's office a few doors below. From there Councilman Nichols and VanArsdale, and Messrs. John Valiant and Samuel Townsend, B. A. Hegeman and lesser lights of the borough went out at intervals to circulate among the electors in support of the energetic chief.

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer was the active head of the Citizens' forces. He spent the day between the two polling places, shaking hands and unloading a brand new batch of stories from group to group. Walter Linbarger was his chief assistant, and those two, with David Carney, formed the leading representatives of the Democratic division of the Citizens' army. Dr. J. H. Cooley, nominee for assessor, A. V. D. Honeyman and Dr. J. H. Buchanan, directed the Republican contingent of the anti-administration warriors.

Every possible vote was brought out. Carriages were kept going continually by both sides, and runners hustled unremittingly after dilatory electors.

Toward the close of the afternoon, when the commuters began to arrive in town, the electioneering was carried into this city. Carriages and workers met every train at the depot, and the returning commuters were hurried to the booths.

There was absolutely no disorder during the balloting. No arrests of any character were made, and not a scrap was reported anywhere. Only one little incident approaching excitement occurred. Early in the forenoon John Valiant stopped Assemblyman



Ex-Senator Reed.

Swackhamer near the polling place in the Second district and repeated his charge of inconsistency in his attitude toward Mayor Smalley, made in his letter to The Daily Press Monday. Mr. Swackhamer acknowledged that he had a high feeling of friendliness toward Mayor Smalley personally at

DAUGHTER SUES HER FATHER FOR SERVICES

Miss Galbraith Claims $3,000 for Nursing Her Mother and Paying Burial Expenses.

DEFENDANT IS IN JAIL

JOHN GALBRAITH, SR., OWNS PROPERTY IN THIS CITY.

Woman Cared for Her Mother During Latter's Last Illness—Affidavit of Merits Filed—A Novel Case.

Trouble between father and daughter is responsible for a suit in the Supreme Court in which Miss Mary Galbraith, of West Fourth street, claims $3,000 as due her for services in nursing her mother and paying her burial and medical expenses. John Galbraith, Sr., the plaintiff's father, against whom the suit is brought, is at present serving a fifty days' sentence in the Union County jail for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was arrested in a disreputable house on Madison avenue recently raided by the police. He owns two houses on West Fourth street, and it is alleged that his daughter is looking for a share in the estate.

The action is based on an alleged claim for services in nursing the defendant's wife from June, 1901, to her death in April, 1903, a total of ninety-three weeks. Galbraith alleges that no agreement was entered into by himself and daughter, and that the daughter was giving her services as a matter of duty and affection. He says that Miss Galbraith is thirty-five years old and has been supported at the home of her parents during her entire life.

In regard to payment of the bills of the undertaker and physician, Galbraith says that he wanted a particular doctor and a particular undertaker and that his daughter wanted and succeeded in getting another in each case. He also claimed that he never received a bill from either.

Affidavit of merits was filed yesterday for the defendant by his counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr. The plaintiff is represented by William Newcorn, Esq. The case will probably be brought to trial in May at the next term of court.

NURSES' HOME DECIDED UPON

HOSPITAL'S BOARD AGREED UPON AN IMPORTANT STEP.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital have decided to make a determined effort to erect a nurses' home near the new hospital at the earliest possible time. This decision was reached at a meeting held Monday night at the Public Library. There is now a sum of money in the hands of the treasurer for this purpose and the needs of such a home have become so urgent that the members of the board unanimously decided to take the matter up and push it forward to an early completion. An adjournment was taken to Tuesday night, March 22, at which time definite steps will be taken and plans formed to carry the project through.

The report from the hospital showed that the month of February was one of the busiest in the history of the institution. There were a total number of sixty-four cases treated, including thirty-four in the dispensary. There were forty-three patients admitted to the hospital, of which number twenty-six were discharged cured, two discharged improved, three discharged not improved and four died. There are now thirty-five patients at the hospital, the largest in its history.

Mr. Kane's Purchase.

Alexander Kane, of Filmore avenue, has purchased the Netherwood livery stables of Irs L. LaRue and intends to tear the building down to use the materials for selling at second hand. The building is 175 feet square, two and a half stories in height with an L extension of 120 feet. Mr. Kane has also bought of Mr. LaRue a coach house, 25x43 feet, containing eleven rooms. Both buildings are located in the rear of the Netherwood hotel.

Candidates for Judgeship.

James J. Bergen, of Somerville, and W. Hoyt Apgar, of Trenton, are prominently mentioned as possible successors to Justice Bennett H. VanSyckel of the Supreme Court. Mr. Bergen was speaker of the house in 1893 and Mr. Apgar is worshipful grand master of the New Jersey grand lodge, F. and A. M.

CHIEFTAINS TELL OF THE ENCOUNTER

Conspicious Leaders of the Borough's Political Contest Express Their Views.

HONEYMAN'S TART TALK

MAYOR NEWTON B. SMALLEY ACCEPTS VERDICT, BUT WILL FIGHT ON.

Assemblyman Swackhamer and Walter Linbarger, Heads of the Democratic Host, Express Opinions—Many Views.

The Citizens' leaders made no effort to conceal their delight over the result. They all saw a rebuke to the administration in the vote, and regarded it as a sign of Mayor Smalley's political death.

"The people wanted a change," said Walter Linbarger, in commenting on the outcome. "I am very much gratified."

"Everything is highly satisfactory," said Mr. Swackhamer. "The result shows a general dissatisfaction with the present administration. I regard the outcome as sign of Democratic victory here in the presidential campaign next year." Mr. Swackhamer said he did not regard the election in the light of a vindication of himself.

"The outcome was brought about by dissatisfaction with the administration," said Dr. Cooley. "It is very satisfactory."

Mr. Honeyman, leader of the Citizens' party, said: "Naturally I am delighted at the result, but there is no reason to extend to me any credit for yesterday's victory. While in a humble way I had something to do with marshalling Citizens and Democrats into one solid party of opposition to the Smalley administration, there were dozens of men who were more potential in securing the real results. The attacks made on the Citizens' party that they were opposed to a new schoolhouse, which had not a scintilla of basis, only nerved them to new energy. We do want a new schoolhouse, and shall vote for it when given an opportunity. It was not a difficult task to unite all whom we expected to unite in opposition to 'one-man power,' because the principles of opposition were in the air. People desired to be free, and they understood that their only guarantee of freedom was in the right exercise of the ballot yesterday.

"The fight against Mayor Smalley began at the time of the annexation movement and has been gathering force ever since, for the reason that after that defeat the Mayor did not learn from that experience, but kept right on in ignoring these results. Only two months after that election, while a member of the County Republican Committee, he secured the election of a Democratic candidate as Assemblyman out of mere spite. One year later he undertook to reverse that position because Assemblyman Swackhamer had not obeyed his commands. But this time he got left pretty badly. Not content with this second defeat, he originated the paid fire department scheme, out of what Josh Billings used to describe as 'pure cussedness.' Then came along the high-handed outrage upon John Goodwin, who was protecting church property from trespassers, and whom he ordered locked up without a warrant. All these things together made the settling time hasten along, and yesterday was the day when the balances were made up and the public verdict of 'Found wanting' was rendered. I am glad to have walked along in the procession as a plain soldier, and shall keep right along in that path, as I am not any aspirant for office.

Mayor Smalley was asked how he felt over the result this morning.

"Between 500 and 600 men voted the ticket because they are satisfied with the present government," he said, "and they are to be congratulated on their large number when all circumstances are considered. We were defeated by the concentration of the forces who oppose business being done in straightforward manner.

"I never felt better over the result of an election that was lost than this time. The character of the men voting the Republican ticket yesterday is satisfying enough; the best people of the borough were with me. The men of both parties who voted the Republican ticket are of such type as to make me feel good even though the ticket lost."

"Are you down and out, according to the Citizens' n'kase?" he was asked.

"This is only the beginning of the SOCIETY WOMEN BOWL ON THE CLUB ALLEYS

Contest a Feature of Reception Given Women of the Town and Country Club.

ELIZABETHIANS WON

MISS VALIANT MADE HIGH SCORE IN FINAL GAME.

Visitors Won Two Out of Three Games—Social Time Followed Contest—Refreshments Served During the Evening.

The women members of the Park Club entertained their sister members of the Town and Country Club, of Elizabeth, Tuesday, a series of bowling games being the chief attraction. This is the first series of the kind among the fair sex and it was so thoroughly enjoyed that no doubt other games will be arranged. The Park Club team of five lost two of the three games, winning the last one by a score of 578 to 508. The first game the Elizabethians won by a score of 532 to 515 and the second one by a score of 549 to 534.

The individual scores of both teams were good, being the equal of some of the work of the men. Miss Valiant held high score for the Parks, 153 in the third game, while Miss Townsend's score of 139 could not be surpassed by the other visitors.

During the games the friends of the women bowlers cheered them heartily and at times the enthusiasm was great. At the conclusion of the bowling there was a social time and refreshments were served.

This is the detailed score:

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ELECTS

WOMAN'S ORGANIZATION OF CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH HOLDS MEETING.

Encouraging reports of the past year's work and the election of officers occupied the attention of the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, at the annual meeting held in the chapel of the church yesterday afternoon. Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. Samuel Milliken.

The report of Miss Emily B. Tracy, treasurer, showed that from all sources the sum of $1,363.26 was received for foreign missions. This is an increase over the amount received a year ago and is very encouraging to the members.

These officers were chosen for the coming year:- President, Mrs. Samuel Milliken; vice presidents, Mrs. Lawrence Myers, Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie, Mrs. Noble C. King; secretary, Miss Julia S. Scribner; treasurer, Miss Emily B. Tracy; secretary for literature, Mrs. Isaac Field; Young People's secretary, Mrs. F. B. Clark; superintendent of collections, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke.

Following the business session the members listened to an able address by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the church, who spoke in a general way on the subject of foreign missions. After the address there was a social tea. Mrs. F. A. Clark and Mrs. Daniel T. Ginna presided at the table and they were assisted by a number of young women.

Concert for Athletes.

For the benefit of the athletic fund, the N. P. H. S. A. A. will hold a concert at the Casino on March 24. The Columbia Glee and Mandolin Clubs will furnish the entertainment. Although the tickets have not yet been issued a large number of seats have already been subscribed for. The following committee is in charge of the affair: William Messersmith, chairman; Leslie H. Backer, Carl Steiner, W. Nischwitz, L. Mantz, E. K. Powlison, Grover Kipsey.

Dr. Chambliss to Speak.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblins, pastor of the First Baptist church, has been secured to deliver the commencement sermon at Peddie Institute, Hightstown, on June 12.

In Justice Nash's Court.

17TH CENTURY DRAMA SUBJECT OF LECTURE

Prof. A. H. Smyth Talks Interestingly of Garrick and the Theatre of His Time.

MANAGER AND ACTOR

ADDRESS BEFORE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB AT THE CASINO.

Christopher Marlowe Set Example for Type of Play Produced by William Shakespeare—Garrick a Friend of Great Men of the Time.

An admirable lecture on David Garrick, the actor, was given at the Casino Monday afternoon by Dr. Alfred H. Smyth, dean of the department of English literature in the Central High School, of Philadelphia. The lecture was before the Monday Afternoon Club, in connection with the year's study of the eminent men of the eighteenth century.

Dr. Smyth prefaced his remarks on Garrick by reference to early opinions on the rank of acting among the arts and the efforts made by some writers to put all the arts on a common basis. He said Christopher Marlowe set the type for the drama that Shakespeare brought to perfection in the days when the theatres were simply octagonal or round buildings without any roofs or scarcely any seats. They followed the earlier performances in barns and court yards of inns. The admission of a penny received in a box has given the name to the office that is called today the box office. The crudeness of the stage fittings was dwelt upon by Dr. Smyth, there being no scenery and no historical costumes. No women appeared upon the stage until the seventeenth century and it was in this century, he said, Barton Booth, an ancestor of the famous tragedian, Edwin Booth, was the first to invent scenery.

According to Dr. Smyth, the artificiality of the stage in England, the verse making, the sing-song tone adopted or chant used were all revolutionized by Garrick, the prince of actors, who was the first to speak, read and act in a natural manner. Born at Hereford in 1717 he showed his bent in the direction of the stage, when ten years old he managed an amateur performance with a recruiting officer for the subject of the play. Being placed in care of Dr. Samuel Johnson in 1736, at Lichfield, the two men soon went to London in search of the fame that came to them both.

The lecturer's account of Garrick's failure as a wine merchant and his phenomenal success when October 19, 1741, he made his appearance in the character of Richard III at Goodman Fields, was extremely interesting. He said his success was uncontested, instantaneous and epoch-making. Dr. Smyth told further of his success as manager of a theatre when he purchased Drury Lane and surrounded himself with the best actors of the day and instituted order, decency, correctness and beauty. Pope said of him: "This young man has never had his equal on the stage, and never will."

In the speaker's opinion, the naturalness of Garrick's acting was his great charm, and he had also great versatility in depicting a variety of passions with rapid change. His width of range in thought and feeling was said to be unparalleled.

Dr. Smyth dwelt at some length on Garrick's intimacy with the great men of his time, Samuel Johnson, Emmund Burke, Oliver Goldsmith, Joshua Reynolds and other members of the club that met at the Lurk's Head in Girard street and that still in 1904 is the foremost club of London.

In telling of Garrick's death in 1779, Dr. Smyth quoted Dr. Johnson's declaration that it "eclipsed the gaiety of nations and impoverished the stock of harmless pleasure." The funeral corrage was two miles in length. His widow, he said lived until 1822, being ninety-nine years of age. She gave to Kean, the actor, the shoe-buckles Garrick had worn, and the following couplet was made on the occurrence. "Thy buckles, Oh Davy, another shall wear

But no other man shall stand in thy shoes."

Claims She Was Slandered.

Summons has been issued in the case of Salvador Paretta and Madeline Paretta against Dominico Revere. Suit for $5,000 in tort is instituted against the defendant the plaintiffs charging injuries to Mrs. Paretta's reputation. William Newcorn, Esq., represents the plaintiffs.

FEEDING THE BIRDS

RESULTS OF THE EFFORTS TO SAVE THE SONGSTERS.

They Were More Successful Than Was Generally Expected—Many People Have Become Interested in the Movement.

When, a short time ago, the work of saving the starving birds was begun by distributing food in the gardens, fields and woods, many people were very skeptical as to results. I heard honest doubts expressed concerning the probability of the wild birds approaching very close to food which lay in the fields, on the bare spaces cleared with the snow shovels. It was suggested that these spaces would look so unnatural that most birds would be suspicious and would keep away on general principles. The results have shown that in future no one need allow such doubts to deter them from handling a snow shovel in this good cause; whatever suspicions the birds may have had, they evidently laid them aside very promptly, and took care that whatever other evils might befall, death by starvation should be avoided.

In my own town, Stoneham, Mass., 40 men and boys, mostly students of the high school, in one morning established about 50 feeding stations for the birds over an area of about ten square miles, and in many cases there were immediate results. The leader of one squad reported that at one point, even as the grain was being scattered on the uncovered ground, a flock of 20 quail approached within six feet of the relief party, and moved away only because a newspaper representative who was present tried to get too close a snapshot of them. This flock of quail returned to the spot the next day, and with them two ruffled grouse, and as they were unmolested, it is not to be doubted that they will visit this feeding station as often as they find themselves in need of food.

Personally, I was present at the establishment of eight feeding stations, and when I inspected these the next day I found that every one of them had been visited by birds. Judging by the foot prints in and about the cleared spaces, two had been patronized by crows only, but small birds were feeding or had been feeding at all the others. At one place two blue jays were enjoying themselves, hopping about and filling their throats and bills with cracked corn, afterwards flying off with their cargoes. At another point I saw a mixed flock of 20 juncos and tree sparrows; at another a flock of ten tree sparrows with a house sparrow among them, and at still another there was a flock of 30 snow buntings. At one place where suet had been tied to the branches and trunk of a tree, there was a flock of eight chickadees, all busy eating or carrying away little lumps to store in the bark of other trees, and not far off, on the side of a road, a red-breasted nuthatch was hammering vigorously at a piece of frozen fat which he had discovered nailed to a branch. Reports from other members of the relief party showed that at 25 feeding stations inspected within 48 hours after their establishment, there were only two which did not show signs of having been visited by birds. One of the two cannot properly be counted, as it consisted of a quantity of suet which, to all appearances, had been carried off by a red squirrel. Many birds were seen in the act of feeding, tree sparrows, juncos, chickadees, house sparrows and snow buntings having been observed in the greatest numbers.

That this movement has been spreading from the start, and that it is still spreading rapidly, is due very largely to the efforts of the press. Editors all over the country, realizing that an effort to save the wild birds was of national importance, have given, and are still giving, to the subject an amount of space out of all proportion to its actual news value. Marked copies of papers are coming in from everywhere showing that not only have articles and editorials been written concerning the best way to relieve the birds, but that these articles and editorials have been copied and recopied by the papers which were unable to get the facts at first hand, so that this good work of the press is bearing the fruit it deserves, is evidenced by the numbers of letters which reach us here from people who have read of the work done in other places, and who are now doing all they can in their own part of the country. And their efforts are, in many cases, being directly rewarded, by a closer friendship with the birds themselves. One lady writes that "her" chickadees have become so tame that they alight upon her hand to be fed, and a man reports that a flock of snow buntings which feed on hay-seed scattered for them on the lawn, actually fly toward him when they see him coming.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

SAVED BY A PARROT.

Polly Gave Alarm When Would-Be Suicide Fell Heavily to Employers' Parlor Floor.

The girl had steadily refused to say she took the caustic with suicidal intent, though she admits having bought it at a near-by drug store shortly before. The Llewellyn family had retired when the girl returned from a visit to some friends. So far as can be learned she went directly to her room and there took the poison from her dresser. Then, fully dressed, she went to the front parlor downstairs and there swallowed the acid. Semi-conscious and suffering terribly, she fell to the floor. The sound of the fall, it appears, did not arouse the Llewellyns, and there is little doubt the girl would have died had not a large Mexican parrot in an adjoining room given the alarm.

The bird apparently surmised something had gone wrong, for it set up such a screeching as to awaken Mr. Llewellyn, whose room is on the second floor.

Mr. Llewellyn hurried to the ground floor to investigate. He found the girl in the parlor gasping for breath. The emergency ambulance was called, and after a hard fight the surgeons said the girl was out of danger.

Once before, when the Llewellyn house was afire, the bird saved the lives of the occupants by making a noise.

WIFE HOLDS UP HUBBY.

Comic Results of a Saturday Shave Afford Amusement to the People of Marion, Ind.

A correspondent, writing from Marion, Ind., to the Indianapolis Sentinel, says that George Sullivan, a merchant, who has been wearing a full beard for a long time, had it shaved off one Saturday night before going home.

When he entered the house his wife thought he was a burglar, seized a revolver and commanded him to hold up his hands. Sullivan declared he was not a burglar, but the head of the house. Mrs. Sullivan was excited and determined.

Sullivan, fearing he would be shot, extended his hands. His wife commanded him to stand in that position and not to move or she would shoot. Mrs. Sullivan told her daughter to telephone to police headquarters, which she did. The husband attempted to reason with his wife, but she warned him that she would shoot if he spoke another word or moved. The police station is ten squares from the Sullivan home, and the unfortunate man was compelled to stand with his hands extended above his head for nearly a half hour before the police arrived.

"HOLD UP YOUR HANDS!"

Sullivan told the police who he was, but they refused to believe him until she discovered he wore a necktie which she had given him.

Dr. William Foster, of the department of chemistry at Princeton university, has discovered a new acid, hereafter to be labeled with the interesting name trisulphoxyarsenic acid.

WAS VERY PATHETIC

Lady Visitor Shed the Most Charming Tears Ever Known.

Saw the Room Where She Had Spent Many Happy Days and Also Saw Other Things, Which She Took Along.

Tears in Mrs. Cutler's eyes were such an unusual sight that the whole family were concerned. Reasons for that manifestation of grief were solicitously demanded, and are given thus by the New York Times:

"It is the thought of that poor young lady that makes me cry," said Mrs. Cutler. "She was such a very sad young lady. She could hardly speak for crying. She came in about two o'clock. She hadn't really called to see me. She wanted to see a Mrs. McClellan, but when she found there was no Mrs. McClellan here she said I would do.

"'I am awfully sorry to disturb you,' she said. 'I thought Mrs. McClellan was still here. She lived here five years ago. I lived with her. I had the second story back room. What a sweet room that was! I loved it dearly. I called to-day to see it. I don't want to live in it again—I couldn't afford to live in such a nice place now, and, anyway, I see that you do not keep boarders—but I am very fond of the room, and I should like to see it. I am going to leave New York for a while, and I should like to bid the place good-by. Possibly you cannot understand my feeling in the matter. The place is endeared to me by many associations. Love came to me in that room, and joy and death. It may be that I am absurdly sentimental, but I am very blue to-day, and somehow I have an idea that I should feel better if I could sit down in there for a few minutes and think and plan.'

"At that," said Mrs. Cutler, choking back her own sobs, "the pretty young thing began to cry, and I cried with her. I never felt so sorry for anybody in my life. I told her that of course she could see the room, and sit in it till dinner time if she felt so disposed. Then I took her upstairs. The minute she stepped inside that room the poor young thing was so overcome with emotion that she sat down on the edge of the bed and cried as if her heart would break. I knew she would not like to be watched, so I stepped out and left her alone with her sorrow for a few minutes. When she joined me in the hall she had stopped crying and appeared more resigned.

"'Thank you, Mrs. Cutler,' she said. 'My little visit has done me a world of good. I can go away now in a much happier frame of mind.'

"'Humph!' grunted Cutler, Jr., as he made a bee-line for the stairway.

"'Did the woman have a valise?' he asked.

"'Yes,yes,' stammered Mrs. Cutler. "She said she was going to leave the city. I presume she just stopped in here on her way to the ferry.

"'Quite likely,' cried Cutler, Jr., as he bounded up the stairs.

A hurried examination showed him what things were missing.

"My silver combs and brushes," he said, "two suits of clothes, a pair of shoes, and the onyx clock. Her depredations were probably limited by the size of the valise, but even so she made a pretty good haul. If she works on the sympathies of other women as she did on yours she will be ready to start up a fully stocked department store of her own by the first of January."

Mrs. Cutler listened dully. Even when they learned later that the woman with the broken heart had worked upon other sympathetic souls prith equal profit, she could not understand the situation.

"I don't care," she said, in reply to Cutler, Jr.'s, veiled reproaches and outspoken advice, "she was a lovely young lady, and she certainly did know how to cry if ever anybody did."

Cyanide Slay Harmless Man.

A band of cowardly cowboys, in a Montana district, who no doubt imagine themselves brave fellows, captured an unfortunate shepherd and beat him with whips until he was dead. His only offense was that, having been warned to keep himself and his sheep away from that part of the state, he had refused to go.

Funerals Cheap in Mexico.

Funerals are not costly in Mexico. When a poor person dies the corpse is tightly wrapped in matting and placed in a coffin hired for about 52 cents. A couple of natives place the coffin on their heads and go at a trot to the grave, where the body is interred, and the coffin is then returned.

VISIT TO LOURDES

Annual Pilgrimage to This Little Village in Southern France.

Holy Spring Which Religious Fervor Credits with Many Miraculous Cures—Devout Invalids Flock Thither.

In this twentieth century we are apt to smile at the superstitutions which religious fervor may produce and foster. It seems almost incredible that there are thousands and thousands of poor invalids who believe that the water from a certain holy spring will cure them of their complaints. There is something poetic and mediaeval about such unquestioning faith. The annual pilgrimage to Lourdes is a case in point. Lourdes, in the Hautes Pyrenees, in the south of France, which was once a little unknown village, has now a european reputation, having gained it solely through the numbers of pilgrims who visit the place annually. This town, which is beautifully situated in a valley opening towards snow-clad mountains, 12 miles southwest of Tarbes, dates its prosperity from the year 1858. In that year a young peasant girl, named Bernadette Soubirons, related that the Virgin had appeared to her. The apparition was repeated several times, and at last a wonderful spring issued from a corner of the grotto where it had been seen. It was soon proclaimed that the spring possessed miraculous qualities, and it says much for the power of the Roman Catholic religion, that on the faith of Bernadette's story hundreds of thousands of persons have visited the cave annually; and 5 hospital and convents, hotels and houses, have been built to meet the wants of the pilgrims. The girl's vision was declared to be authentic by the Bishop of Tarbes, and the place attracted such a multitude of pilgrims that a railway was built to bring them to the town.

In 1876 35 archbishops and bishops, presided over by the Archbishop of Paris and the Apostolic Nuncio, gave their seal to the story of Bernadette by assisting at the dedication of a handsome basilica, built in the thirteenth century style, which was erected over the cave. This was only a short time before Bernadette, who had become a nun, died in a convent. The many chapels and corridors below the church are lined with votive offerings. Generals leave their orders and brides their veils. The walls of the upper church are also entirely covered with similar offerings. The first chapel on the left records the 18 appearances of the Virgin and the singular words which Bernadette described her to have spoken: "Go to the fountain, eat of the grass beside it, pray for mankind, tell the priests to build me a chapel; I am the Immaculate Conception." From the upper church paths lead through shrubberies to the grotto beneath, facing the river. Here the rock is covered with the crutches of cured cripples. On the one side is the famous fountain, on the other a pulpit from which a priest directs the devotions of the pilgrims. Special trains bring countless invalids to Lourdes, and the sight of so much human suffering gathered in one spot is deeply pathetic. There are numerous bands of volunteers at the town who skilfully undertake the organization of the throngs of pilgrims, most of whom are of the poorer class, and who have spent what is to them a large sum on the journey. The majority of the invalids, unfortunately, return as they came, but their faith is unshaken; they have not had sufficient faith they say.

Apart from the religious excitement which has made Lourdes one of the most prosperous towns in the south of France, it is a picturesque and beautiful place, with its old church and modernized

MIGHT CHECK CRIME.

Sale of Firearms to Be Controlled by National Government.

Postmaster Coyne, of Chicago, Advances an Argument Which Certainly Is Worthy of Serious and Immediate Consideration.

It used to be said that crime was at its minimum during prosperous times, but the records of the two years just passed has upset this time-honored theory. In all parts of the country, but more especially in Chicago and other large cities, murders and highway robberies, in which the use of firearms has played a conspicuous part, have multiplied almost beyond belief. Students of the problem ascribe the increase in lawlessness to the pernicious influence of slum life, but as many of the more youthful criminals come from the so-called "lower middle class," this theory cannot be accepted without reserve.

Police authorities believe that the purchase and carrying of weapons by boys and young men and the reading of sensational newspapers lie at the bottom of the evil, and the concurrence in these views has led Mr. Frederick E. Coyne, postmaster at Chicago, to recommend the control of the manufacture and sale of deadly weapons by the national government.

"Much space," writes Mr. Coyne, "has been given in the columns of the papers to the reckless disregard for human lives as the result of the promiscuous sale and use of firearms, particularly, the magazine revolver.

"The thought has occurred to me that there ought to be federal supervision over the manufacture, importation and sale of firearms of every kind and description. The federal government, through its internal revenue laws, has supervision over the manufacture and sale of whisky, beer and cigars and all manufactured tobaccos; it imposes a tax on all wholesale and retail dealers of spirituous and malt liquors; and also has stringent laws against the importation of opium.

"Without desiring to open discussion as to the propriety or justice of the laws referred to, I simply want to call attention to the results and to show that the laws of the federal government are more respected and better enforced than those of the city, county or state, and particularly those of large municipalities.

"What I advocate is this: that the manufacture, importation and sale of all firearms be placed under government supervision, and that a suitable tax be levied on same, sufficient, at least, to cover the cost of such supervision. It seems to me that a government which can enforce a law against a citizen having in his possession a copper still or worm, with which it is possible to distil spirits, ought to pass and enforce a law that will prohibit a 14-year-old boy from purchasing a magazine revolver, with which he can depopulate a town if given half a chance. There should be a law requiring the impression of a government seal on each and every firearm manufactured, and no one should be permitted to have in his or her possession a firearm of any sort without having it registered at the office of the internal revenue collector of the district in which he resides. I do not believe that such a law would entirely check the reign of lawlessness which seems to prevail all over our country, but I do believe that more boys go wrong and step from idleness to crime through the ownership of a revolver than from any other cause. There are laws now in different states throughout the union requiring what is equal to a license on shotguns and rifles, but those laws are for the protection of game. It would seem to me that it is time for the government to pass a law regulating the manufacture and ownership of firearms for the protection of human lives."

Horse Is Cured by Music.

Fire Island, a very valuable English race horse, has just given a most remarkable proof of the healing powers of music. He lost his appetite and refused to train, a condition of affairs that drove his trainer and jockeys to distraction. All manner of remedies were resorted to without avail till the happy idea occurred to them to place a music box in his stall. Twice a day a string of dances and "God Save the King" regaled the equine ears. The effect was marvelous. The horse regained his spirits, and the trainer and jockey had no further trouble. Whether the horse had any previous circus affiliations to determine his musical taste is not stated.

Professors Are Poorly Paid.

College professors will never become rich because of their generous salaries. This is particularly the case with those in Germany. In that country 191 of them get $250 a year or less; 87 less than $400; 74 get $1,000 a year. Only four get as much as $5,000 a year.

CHANGED INTO MUTTON.

Strange Adventures of a Man Who Starts Out to Lose the Body of Cat He Had Killed.

Sneaking by the friends he met in the streets, with a guilty feeling that they might guess the package he carried contained a dead tomcat, a certain East Orange (N. J.) man was amazed when he reached his home to find that the cat wasn't a cat at all, but a fine leg of mutton. This man had heard about cat being served under other names in 35-cent table d'hote restaurants in New York city, but the reversal of that dinner custom puzzled him for a time.

He is in business in New York and is a pigeon fancier. Recently various cats have been killing his pigeons, so he lay in ambush with a gun and shot one of the four-footed bird fanciers. He started to bury the dead cat in his back yard; then thought prying neighbors might think he was hiding a murder.

"I know what I'll do. I'll wrap the corpse in paper and throw it off the ferry boat when I cross in the morning," said he. The neat bundle was in his hand when he boarded the train in the morning. But on the boat he was surrounded by friends, and he reflected he might have to make an embarrassing explanation if he threw the bundle overboard. "An ash barrel in New York will do," he thought. But, on reaching Manhattan, he found it hard to carry out his plan.

"I'll throw it overboard on the way home," said he. But on that trip he met more acquaintances, and as a result the cat still was with him when he boarded the train. He laid the package down beside him and tried to become absorbed in his paper, but the cat haunted him. When he reached his station he picked up the package and went home.

"Here," said he to the cook, "bury this in the back yard." She went out, but came back in a few minutes, looking surprised. "Why d'ye want to bury that, sir?" she asked, and she held out just as nice a leg of mutton as ever graced a table. He stared; then guessed the truth.

"I hope the other fellow who took that cat home doesn't learn who I am," said he, and he told the cook they'd have mutton for dinner. But what the other family ate is a painful question.

STOLE TO BURY BABY.

"I Can't Lock Him Up," Said the Police Captain After Hearing the Prisoner's Story.

It is reported from Kansas City that Charles Gartman was arrested in the act of robbing a public telephone box of $8.

"What are you crying about, you big baby?" asked a policeman, when he saw tears in the eyes of the prisoner as he was being searched at the Central station.

"There is a dead baby out at my house," the man answered, in a voice broken by sobs, "and my wife is sick. I didn't have a cent to bury the child."

There was a hush, and then Policeman McGinnis was sent to Gartman's home to investigate. The man had told the truth. The wife was very ill and the dead child lay on the bed by her side. When the policeman reported the captain ordered Gartman released.

"WHAT ARE YOU CRYING FOR?"

"I simply couldn't hold that man," said the captain. "It would be too heartless. It's our duty to lock him up, I know, but I can't do it. If the telephone company wants to prosecute him they will have to swear out a warrant."

THE COTTON WEEVIL

PLAYS HAVOC WITH CROP ON PLANTATIONS OF TEXAS.

No Method Yet Discovered of Exterminating the Little Pest—Has Cost Planters of Texas $18,000,000.

When cotton goes a soaring and one looks around for the cause he generally discovers that the price has a very close connection with the production. Cotton is high, and we find this condition of the market a reflection of last year's production. It is not probable that there will ever be a more generally unfavorable year for cotton culture in the United States than that of 1903. Toward the close of the preceding year (1902) the bureau of statistics of the United States department of agriculture reported a condition of the cotton crop, resulting from insect ravages and unfavorable climatic conditions in Texas, little short of disastrous. But the season of 1903 has had as many unfavorable features, and in addition the drawback that planting was unavoidably uniformly thrown from four to six weeks late. This was especially unfortunate, as early planting is the most important step in avoiding damage by the weevil. Many planters were unable to put in one-half of their normal cotton acreage. The late planting season was followed by very irregular rains. As a rule, severe droughts alternated with heavy rains. The result would have been to cause a small crop regardless of damage by the boll weevil, and this was especially noticeable in central Texas. Accurate figures are not obtainable, but statistics drawn from acreage and production indicate that the boll weevil causes the amount of land required to produce a bale to be practically doubled, and upon this basis, it is estimated that during the past season the pest has caused the planters of Texas a loss of fully $15,000,000.

The accompanying map shows the territory at present affected by the weevil in Texas and Louisiana. On the north it has been found in the vicinity of Sherman, only a few miles south of the Red river. The nearest approach to Shreveport is in Morris county, about 50 miles away. It should be observed, however, as indicated on the map, that in the region from about the latitude of Dallas to the Red river the pest is only scatteringly present and has caused no general damage.

The heavy line indicates the limit of the region in which the weevils have multiplied to such an extent as to be found in all cotton fields, the remainder of the shaded portion indicates the region in which isolated colonies are known to exist.

The steady extension of the territory affected by the weevil from year to year, until the northern boundary is far north of the center of cotton production in the United States, has convinced all observers that it will eventually be distributed all over the cotton belt. In ten years it has gradually advanced a distance of about 500 miles, and will undoubtedly invade new territory at about the same rate. It is not at all likely that legal restrictions of any kind would prevent or materially hinder this spread. The slowness of the progress up to the present time indicates that the principal means of spreading are only natural ones, like the winds and a simple overflow from field to field, and that the artificial agencies like transportation in seed or in other commodities are comparatively unimportant; otherwise, with the extensive shipping from Texas, instead of being confined to that state as at present, the pest would now be found in many localities throughout the south.

The adult weevil averages about one-quarter of an inch in length and has a beak about one-half the length of the body. It is of grayish or reddish-brown color. The insect exists in four stages—egg, larva, pupa, and adult. All the stages except the last occur only inside the cotton square or boll. The egg is deposited by the female weevil in a cavity formed by eating into the fruit of the plant. It hatches under normal conditions, in two or three days, and the grub immediately begins to feed. In from seven to 12 days the larva or grub passes into the pupa or quiet stage, corresponding to the cocoon of the silk worm. This stage lasts from three to five days. Then the adult weevil issues, and in about seven days begins the production of another generation. Climatic conditions cause considerable variation, but on an average it requires from two to three weeks for a weevil to develop from the egg to the adult.

LET US BE HAPPY

Helen Keller's Optimism

HELEN KELLER, the blind, deaf mute scholar and philosopher, has lately written an essay on optimism, an utterance so remarkable that it ought to sting with shame those who, having full possession of all their senses and faculties, still poison the lives of themselves and those around them with a chronic evil tempered pessimism.

Helen Keller pictures herself as she is—to all human knowledge hopelessly blind and deaf for life. Then she asks us what would be the result if she should simply sit down and rave and scold her life away because she can never see or hear. This impotent raging would do no good; it would do harm. It would keep her nerves harrowed up and hysterical, ruin her health and bring her at length to insanity. Instead of doing that, this heroic soul, with nearly every avenue of communication with the outside world cut off, has become a classical scholar, a speaker on sociological topics and a writer whose every line is read with interest.

She tells us she has made up her mind to be happy in spite of everything, to learn all she can and do all the good she can. It is true Helen Keller is comfortably provided for financially by her parents, but with her intellect and determined optimism she would be the same cheerful, helpful girl if she were a pauper in a public deaf mute asylum. It does look as though this grand human soul is permitted upon the earth only to show the race how much can be achieved by a human being who can neither see nor hear. The one sense of practical use to her she has cultivated to such a degree of fineness that once she touches the hand of a human being she recognizes the person ever after.

Three-fourths of us women go at life all wrong. The things about which we fret and fume and rasp ourselves night and day are exactly the things we cannot remedy. There are wives who regard themselves as virtuous martyrs because they continue to live with drunken, worthless husbands. They scold and nag the wrongdoing man and sing at him whenever he is in their presence, but they continue to live with him, sometimes when he is hopelessly brutalized and has even treated them to a black eye or a blow. A friend asks perhaps the very natural question:

"What do you live with him for?"

Then the woman who considers herself a virtuous martyr flashes up and angrily asks in turn what the questioner knows of the feelings of a wife and mother. Then she goes on and raves and scolds and nags and whines again from morn till dewy eve. How good it would be if some one who had absolute authority could seize such a woman by the neck and say to her finally:

"Either shut up or get out!"

That's it! Shut up or get out! Two of the divine faculties of spirit that have play in this life are the reasoning power and the godlike will. Are your troubles more than you can bear? No trouble more than we can bear or get away from is ever put upon us. Sit down quietly and think how many of the matters that distress you can be remedied by yourself. Put those in a group by themselves. Then put on the other side the griefs that no effort of yours can remedy. Make sure of your two groups.

Then rise and calmly work henceforth in trust and faith to put right the wrong things in the first group. Fill your mind with this so fully and enthusiastically that the other woes—the things that you can't possibly help—will in time drop out of your mind.

Remember this always: By fretting constantly over the things we cannot help we weaken and ruin our power of dealing with the things we can help. It is no sign of womanly tenderness to fume and weep over relatives gone wrong. On the contrary, it is dead sure proof of nervous illness and weakness. Such a woman is only hysterical and scatter brained.

Let us use the godlike will that is in every one of us. Let us train ourselves day by day to be happy and cheerful in spite of the fiend himself. There are heavily laden women who are doing this all the time. All happiness is within us. If it is not there, we shall never get it from outside sources.

VIOLET CULTURE.

Properly Managed It is a Good Locality, If It is Profitable.

Violet farming! That sounds easy and inviting. Undoubtedly the right woman in the right location can take hold of it in this country and make a good living, as thousands of men and women do in France and Great Britain. Near Cork, Ireland, a refined and accomplished lady, Mrs. Egerton Coghill, conducts a violet farm that is noted throughout the kingdom. It consists of only three acres, to be sure, but three acres are quite a farm in some parts of Great Britain. Mrs. Coghill started her violet venture in 1891. She has shrewdly looked out for a market and now sends her fragrant blossoms to florists regularly. Besides this, she also supplies large private orders for dinner parties, luncheons, charity bazaars and other fashionable gatherings. Her business is wholesale.

The violet gathering season in Europe is during the autumn months, beginning late in September. The quickest pickers are boys and girls. They pass along the edges of the violet rows, reaching in and breaking off the flowers. They collect as many as fifteen or twenty in a bunch, then put them in a tin of water and pass on to pick another bunch. The picker must be careful not to wet the flowers when he puts them in water. It is believed that leaves absorb the perfume from flowers, and so the violet leaves are kept carefully away from the blossoms. When the day's picking is ended, all the bunches are placed for an hour in tepid water before being packed in the shipping boxes. These are of wood, are shallow and lined with oiled paper. One layer of blossoms is laid in each box.

Although she is a society woman, Mrs. Coghill conducts her violet farming for profit, and she gets a large profit because so many flowers can be grown upon a small space. The market is never ending, for sweet violets will always be in fashion, whatever other floral fads may prevail for a time. Mrs. Coghill's violets are planted in the open ground in long beds four feet wide, with a narrow trench between the beds for the cultivator and picker to walk in. In the gathering season these beds are a beautiful sight—long stretches of vivid purple, with flowers clustered so closely together there is scarcely room for a leaf to be seen.

There is nothing in the work of violet culture a woman cannot do after the ground is broken up and fertilized. For growing plants in the open a warm, sheltered situation is needed. A southern exposure is best for early violets. In many parts of the United States sweet violets live outdoors the year round and bloom in February. This is an industry that would specially thrive in the south in moist regions. While the violets like warmth, a drying hot sun injures them quickly and dwarfs the flowers. For this reason the sites in which the violets bloom in the late winter and early spring will be the best. A careful gardener can, however, make violets flower both in spring and autumn. February and March are good months in which to begin.

Neapolitan violets are a profitable variety for market, but they are also somewhat tender in some climates and need to be partially shaded. The variety called the Princess of Wales is one of the best to cultivate for cut flowers.

In the United States the largest profit from violet growing is realized in the northern and middle states from raising these flowers in greenhouses or even on a small scale in cold frames. The woman who wishes to begin the industry must first see how near she is to a good market. The prosperous suburb of a large city is one of the best localities. Undoubtedly many a woman living upon a farm not far from a city could become a violet culturist with success. She should begin in a humble, inexpensive manner, experimenting her way along. A good book on floriculture is necessary for the beginner, but, fortunately, these are to be had at little expense. One by an American gardener must be got, as our climate is different from that of Europe.

Plants or seeds must of course be first obtained from a dealer, but in time the violet farmer can grow all her own runners. Mrs. Coghill does this. After setting out a small number of plants or seeds this March and tending and watching them through the summer the amateur will know by next autumn something of the business she wishes to go into. Then she might have a few cold frames made for hurrying her flowers forward.

THE WORLD OF VANITY.

Trimmings Are Now Horizontal. Hood Effects Very Smart.

There seems to be a complete revolution in trimming. It is placed horizontally instead of vertically. This is especially true of the full gathered skirts, which are decorated with bands of velvet silk and lace in some instances four or five inches wide. Kilt-ed skirts are similarly decorated with these bands, usually three or five in number.

Tiny velvet balls are among the latest dress trimmings, and these are outlined on both sides of a straight lace band.

The hood effect, drooping off the shoulders, has come to be considered more smart than the bertha. It is faced with lace or velvet.

Little stoles of ermine and lace will be worn far into the spring with street costumes and gowns.

Veiling will continue to be one of the favorite spring materials, particularly in gray and black.

Separate white skirts of novelty veiling are very smart to wear with lace waists of the same color.

The number of blouses that are requisite to complete the wardrobe of the fashionable woman makes a very serious hole in her dress allowance. At the best of times there is very little wear in mousseline de soie or chiffon, and when it means, in addition, the constant drawing off and on of a fur coat or mantle the problem becomes quite a grave and important one. It is good hearing that some of the newest shantungs, both natural and dyed, are being fashioned in a chiffon weight, which offers a way out of the difficulty for reasons of economy as well as expediency. There is a certain suggestion of plainness about a shantung, but it can be trimmed and decorated to the pink of modistic perfection. It is a point in its favor, too, that the natural silks of this description have the added advantage of being none the worse for immersion in the washtub, which saves those alarming cleaner's bills which represent the heavy toll levied on extravagance.

The picture shows a white muil gown made over turquoise blue silk. It is trimmed with turquoise blue and white bowknots.

DRESS NOVELTIES.

Some New Dress Skirts—Black and White Effects.

Much black and white are seen in the new spring millinery, and this was exemplified in a three cornered hat seen recently. It was of fine straw in a dead white shade, the upturned brim being of beavier black satin straw. The sole trimming was on the left side—two tips, one black, the other white, passed through a small Louis XV. wreath of tiny white roses and held down by a knot of gold galloon.

The triple skirt is one of the novelties in fashion. It is eased in slightly at the waist, so that it falls in graceful fullness.

Another tip to date skirt is gathered at the waist and trimmed with five wide folds to simulate tucks.

A skirt not quite so new, but popular, is made with two clusters of bias folds high in the back and coming down into a point in the front. The lowest of these clusters heads a gathered flounce which is similarly graduated. The back is finished with a double box plait.

The cut shows a hat of black tulle having a band of black velvet and a steel buckle. It is trimmed on each side with a black ostrich tip.

THE STAGE FOR WOMEN

It Involves Hard Work and Sacrifices

"STAGE struck, eh?" The veteran actress looked ruefully at the blushing aspirant, then, after a pause, she added, "Can you do anything else?"

The girl shook her head. "I haven't tried," she said.

"Then allow me to suggest that you do," answered the actress. As she noticed the look of astonishment on her listener's face she went on: "I think I can tell you exactly why you are going on the stage. You are young, you are full of life, you are pretty, you think you wouldn't have much of a chance in private life—you might marry well and yet again you mightn't. Have you good health?"

"Fairly good," the aspirant ventured to state timidly. "Of course I couldn't be a typewriter or anything shut in like that, but"—

"Oh, my dear child,"—the actress put up her hand to hide a smile—"you must excuse me, really you must, but I wonder have you really any definite idea of the hard life you are going in for, the unceasing hard work, the disappointments, the associations, the"—

"But you took it for your life work; you still persist in it!" the girl interrupted in injured tones.

"Yes, and do you know why? Because it was the thing at my door, the thing which it was the easiest for me to do. I hadn't any other talents—few actresses have—and I was born of theatrical people, so that I had a fair chance from the first. I wonder if you realize what that means. What do you suppose they are going to do with you, untrained as you are? You will be lucky if you get a walk on by haunting theatrical managers offices. You will rehearse that walk on for three weary weeks, and then you will walk on seven times a week in exactly the same way and at exactly the same time for the number of weeks the play runs, until it seems as if you would go mad with the monotony of it. Then by the next season, if you have shown a particular and original way of walking on, and if it hasn't been knocked out of you by the never ending repetition, you will perhaps get a line such as "Here they come!" or "Here is the morning mail, madam," or "Penelope, the queen!" This again for another season if you are not in a failure which bursts and lands you somewhere in the country a hundred miles from nowhere. At that rate, by the time you have spent seven or eight years on the stage you will be acting real parts."

"But I thought the hours were not so long. I thought"—

"My dear child, the hours are not regular—that is the trouble. Rehearsals are called at half an hour's notice, Sunday being a favorite time. If you happen to be rehearsing at mealtime, goodby to your meal. If night overtakes you still rehearsing, fifteen minutes for a bite and then rehearse till morning. You have to be at the theater every evening at 7:30, which never gives you time to finish your dinner decently and, it goes without saying, never gives you time to dine with your friends when you are in the same town with them. I say same town with them because, as the seasons are running at present, four weeks is about your limit in any one town. One week is a long time in the smaller towns, only I do not choose to consider one night stands at all. You live in an atmosphere of packing and unpacking, with your things perpetually rumpled. Saturday night after the evening performance you proceed in a melancholy procession to the depot, where you wait, a silent, dejected group, for your train. Your Sundays you spend in being jolted over the rails, your Sundays and all your days you are thrown in the society of the same dreary—oftener than not vulgar, oftener than not totally uneducated—people who can talk only the gossip point gossip of the theater. And this for months. Meantime your youth and your freshness and your ideals are slipping away from you, and each day your chances of success are growing less unless you have the wonderful stroke of luck which makes one woman in a thousand a star. You want to think very carefully, my dear, of what you are giving up and the chances you are taking. Is it worth while? If you feel convinced it is, why, grit your teeth and go ahead; that is all."

MAUD ROBINSON.

MILLINERY MODES.

The Outlook For Spring Fashions In Women's Hats.

For one thing we can be really and truly thankful, and that is that the big and untidy pompadour is doomed beyond the power of resurrection, though it may die hard. In its place we have a composite arrangement which may take different minor shapes adjusted to each person's peculiar style. In a swell establishment I was informed that many faces will be framed becomingly with the very old fashioned "topknot," while others will wear plain, though slightly waved, bandeaux with a twist at the nape of the neck. Some may look better with the twist higher up on the back of the head. A few will still wear rats of horsehair to set the hair out on the sides of the face, while others will depend entirely upon their own hair, slightly puffed so that it will form a resting place for fancy combs for day wear and for dainty wreaths for evening. In the majority of the new styles of hairdressing the principal point seems to be to have a distinct knob, either directly on top of the head or low down in the back, according to which style proves most becoming.

Fancy combs are almost fine enough to be classed among the jewels. Some of them are fairly studded with imitation diamonds, pearls and other precious stones, set in real or imitation tortoise shell. The most refined taste, however, would tell a woman that these are better suited for evening wear than for the street.

For the decoration of the hair for evening there are some of the daintiest and most poetical little wreaths of tiny blossoms. They are mostly what used to be called multiflora roses, though some call them picayune roses. These are now made in all colors, from pale yellow to dark red with white a very the shades of pink and hello thrown in. These infinitesimal roses are made into wreaths, large or small, as one likes best, and are twined in with small green leaves, though not all rose leaves. Still that does not matter since they form the necessary relief for the blossoms. These are tied with baby ribbons.

For the corsages of the gowns, when these dainty wreaths are in use, there are many arrangements of flowers. They are twined around the neck, festooned along the shoulders, and in fact made into such a list of fancies that it would not be possible to speak of all. Some have tiny bunches of blossoms tied with many strands of ribbon festooned across the bust at the shoulders, at the waist and sometimes down the skirt. Violets, forgetmenots and several other very small blossoms are made into this sort of trimming. Hats have the entire brim covered with them, and the crowns are made entirely of overlapped leaves.

A few advance Easter hats are to be seen, but they are not very remarkable. Yet the straws are handsome when well made. I saw one of rough smoked straw with a brim about three inches wide turned up sharply all around. It had tan velvet milliner's folded ribbon run in so as to bring it up in a fluted shape, which also made it a high turban. The whole crown was covered with tiny button roses in shaded tan to brown. Here and there a small green leaf brightened it up a little. In the back was a cascade of the tiny roses hung on baby ribbon to match the shades in the hat.

Another very pretty straw had a flat tish brim, rounded up very slightly at the outer edge, along which were small tan and brown grapes. These grapes were in bunches, with a few leaves shaded in russet colors, with velvety overbloom. The grapes were apparently laid along the brim as if to see how they would look before sewing them on. *There is very much of this pretty com*bination of shading in the light drabs, biscuits and browns. In spite of the use of any kind of color of blossom, though green, pink and violet are, I think, the most artistic.

There are many wire frames and straw braids of which to make hats, and many ladies really love to dabble in such work. There are also chiffon hats sewed with as many folds as one wishes. These are untrimmed; so, with a bunch or a wreath of the pretty blossoms, one can have hats galore at reasonable cost.

THE BATHROOM.

How It May Be Made Artistic as Well as Practical.

The bathroom is seldom treated of in books of interior decoration, and as a result it is often the most ugly as well as the most insanitary spot in the house.

In the first place, let me urge that the bathroom be built as large as possible and with an outside window. I know there are cities where the building laws require this, but it is not always observed, and often, too, the bathroom opens upon a tiny air shaft or has a northern exposure where there is no sun. Place the towel rack directly in the sunlight, where your sponges, etc., can absorb the beneficent rays. Have your bathtub plain, but of porcelain, never of tin or enameled tin. Have (and this is most important of all) every bit of the plumbing open, so that no dust, dirt or microbes can accumulate.

I suppose it is useless even to speak of such a foolish thing as carpeting the bathroom floor, and yet I have actually seen it done.

If you cannot have a concrete floor, polish the wooden floor and have for sole covering a serviceable bath mat.

A medicine closet, with a mirror and a chair, is most convenient, and in many bathrooms in the newer houses a full length mirror is placed in the bathroom door.

The picture shows the pretty green and white bathroom of a house in England. The tiling is green, and the medicine closet has a design burned into its door and enriched with touches of green paint in different shadings.

MAKING SELF PROGRESS.

The Two Ways of Urging a Child to Improve.

There are two ways of making people do things—one by compulsion and the other by persuasion.

The trouble is that the "must" way seems to be the most popular. Parents do not like to give reasons to their children. They argue that they know what is best and that is sufficient—the children should be satisfied with the fruit of their experience.

As parents we try to improve our children. We want them to progress. But how do we do this? Half the time by forbidding them certain things which we believe will impede that progress, so that the child, if he has any spirit, comes to regard parental discipline—in spite of what his parents tell him—as one list of forbidden things and restrictions. What is the result? As soon as he is old enough he breaks through all of them and runs amuck for two or three years until by actual and bitter experience he comes back to the point from which he originally started and makes for himself a mental list of undesirable things which really comes very close to that made by his parents long before.

Did you ever have a person take a painful splinter out of your finger, and notice how much less it hurt when you took that splinter out yourself?

That is the way with self improvement. If parents would only have common sense talks with their children, talks which would show them the desirability of certain things and the undesirability of certain others, with examples of cause and effect tried on themselves and a general talk on the pleasure and the profit of self improvement so that the child would feel interested in it from his own personal point of view, how much more would be gained!

BEATRICE MILLER.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Works and Thinks

I LATELY saw a picture with a curious story attached to it. It was a photograph in the office of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt representing a piece of sculpture made by a young lady in Holland. It showed a stalwart Dutch woman wheeling a barrow of bricks. The story of the picture is this: A number of years ago the Holland government thought it would enact legislation for the protection of women working in factories. The law decreed that no woman should do factory work at night under severe penalty. The factory women had been accustomed to work overtime and get extra pay. The law therefore cut off a part of their income. At the same time there was no law against men working overtime in a factory. Neither did the law forbid men laborers toiling overtime in the brickmaking and certain other trades. The Dutchwomen saw themselves deprived of a considerable part of their earnings. They went to the men laborers and proposed an exchange of evening tasks. They said, for instance, to the brickmakers: "You go into the factories and work during evening hours. We, on our part, will come into the brickyards and perform your part of the evening and night labor." The exchange was actually made. The broad, strongly built Holland women were quite equal to molding and carrying bricks during two or three hours of the evening or even all night when necessary. The men, on their part, were quite willing to swap the hard labor of the day for a lighter task in the evening. So everybody was satisfied. The evening money was still earned, and at the same time nobody violated the law forbidding the night work of women in factories.

During the past year the national grange and national unions of miners, typesetters and general labor have passed resolutions or inserted in the platforms of principles planks indorsing woman suffrage. Thus woman is finding her best friends among the men who work.

Anybody can be in the fashion, but it takes a strong mind to be out of it.

A little while before her death Rosa Bonheur declared she had ahead of her pictures enough to keep her painting for two or three lifetimes. Lately Tolstoi, the great Russian, said, "I have material enough for 300 years of continued literary work." This is what it means to have mental resources and spiritual inspiration within oneself. One who has this is never lonely, never tempted, but always cheerful and glad, always planning and achieving happy work. It is only shallow empty minded people who do not know what to do with themselves.

Note the reason given by the father of Jeffries, the prize fighter, why his son always wins: "There are men as scientific as Jim, but they lose their tempers, and then they're off. Jim has learned that a man must never get mad if he wants to win a fight." Just so!

One thing is dead certain—Providence won't help us unless we hustle for ourselves.

Whatever worthy thing you desire hustle for it persistently and with determination and you will get it. Don't think of the time it takes at all, but just go on.

You suffer and have poor health. You wish to be well? Set before yourself calmly and with determination the ideal of perfect health and work up to it. Whatever comes, though you break down a thousand times, hold always in your mind that ideal of perfect health. The eternally recuperative power of the life principle within you is infinite. Many a time has a chronic ailment at last been worn out by help of the constantly held thought of health.

Susan B. Anthony, eighty-four years old Feb. 15, hopes to go on and work, incessantly active for her sex, so long as she lives, without any breakdown or illness till her time to go comes. Then she wants just to drop out, suddenly and with no fuss. Who would not like to do the same? Let us all hope Miss Anthony will obtain her wish. Meantime, the coming summer, she expects to go to Europe to attend the meeting of the women's international council at Berlin.

In a small Pennsylvania town no man would accept the office of tax collector because it did not pay. People would not pay their taxes. Thereupon the court appointed a woman, Mrs. Mary A. Conway, tax collector, without her solicitation. She accepted the appointment and announced at once that she meant to collect those taxes and get her own commission out of them, thus securing her office so that it would pay. Mrs. Conway, who is a teacher, said: "No delinquent shall escape. If necessary I shall invoke the law to accomplish my object." Takes a woman to do things.

Thursday, March 10, 1904.

Creditable reports lead to the belief that the bill which has been framed for the purpose of making it unlawful to kill or maim pigeons for mere sport's sake will died in committee unless the public demand that the Legislature take prompt action on the measure. The lobby, which held its important session at the Hotel Walton in Philadelphia, last year, was successful in preventing a similar measure from becoming a law, and it is supposed that the same gang is still active. This indefensible sport is resorted to in New Jersey, principally by residents of Pennsylvania and New York and they have used every means to kill the bill. The Audubon Society of New Jersey is interested in the passage of the present measure, but it has not accomplished much up to the present time. There is no excuse for the State allowing the brutal practice to continue. The man who finds enjoyment in such sport as killing pigeons is of a low order to say the least. As United States Senator George F. Hoar remarks: "If there be any practical confirmation of the theory that we are descended from orang-outangs or baboons or, at any rate, from the savage and barbarous ancestors in whom the mere animal preponderate, it is the continuance of the practice of shooting birds for pleasure, one of the worst forms of which is the shooting of live pigeons at the traps." Wipe out this blot on the name of New Jersey!

After stating that "we hear that there weren't any newspaper men at Noah Raby's funeral;" the New Brunswick Home News says, "The reporters in Plainfield are not often caught napping, but they were certainly dozing on Tuesday when they let their newspapers go to press without anything about the death of Noah Raby." The Piscataway poor farm where Raby lived is in the territory supposed to be covered by the New Brunswick papers and is far out of the way for Plainfield reporters, who nevertheless have gotten many a rich beat there during the old man's life time. The fact is that the Plainfield papers did not hear of old Raby's death in time for Tuesday's edition but they had men on the spot to "cover" the funeral, whereas the New Brunswick Home News did not, which accounts, no doubt for its not hearing that any representatives of the Plainfield papers were there. The Home News is right when it says that Plainfield reporters are not often caught napping. There is not a single reporter in this city, we believe, who does not grind out more good, legitimate local news in a day than is contained in any single issue of the New Brunswick Home News. If the patrons of a Plainfield newspaper were supplied with such a sheet as is issued in New Brunswick, its telephone would be kept busy by persons cancelling their subscriptions.

The full-page newspaper advertisement is not so modern as is generally thought, for the Rhode Island Advertiser traces it back nearly a century and a half in the old files of Providence newspapers. The Providence Gazette, a daily established in 1760, carried full-page advertisements in 1765, the first appearing on November 23, that year, advertising the firm of Joseph & William Russell, dealers in dry goods, house furnishings, hardware, wines and liquors. A long list of these articles gave it a semblance to the bargain ads of today, but no prices were printed. Two rival firms had full pages on January 10 and 17, 1767.—Printers' Ink.

JOE BARRY DEAD.

Well-Known Baseball Player a Victim of Pneumonia.

Joseph Barry, one of the most popular baseball players in the city, died this morning at his home 329 South Second street, after a brief sickness from pneumonia. He was catcher on the St. Mary's nine from its organization, playing last season in the outfield. He was about twenty-one years old and was employed by the Crescent Embossing Company. He is survived by his mother, two sisters and two brothers. He was prominently identified with Washington Council, Knights of Columbus, and with the St. Mary's T. A. B. Society.

Mr. Frederick's Condition.

Wilson S. Fredrick, of Dunellen, continues to improve and it is believed that he will eventually recover his full health and strength. The physician in charge has pronounced the skin-grafting a success and he believes that in a month's time he will be able to sit up a portion of the day and is able to move his legs without much difficulty.

AMUSEMENTS.

Richard Mansfield at the New Amsterdam Theatre is presenting for the first time in English a five act tragedy by Count Alexis Tolstoi, translated from the Russian by Mme. S. R. de Meismer. The drama draws a powerful picture of the Tzar who in the sixteenth century ruled Russia with an iron hand after putting down the enemies who had plotted against him. After terrorizing his court and killing his eldest son in a furious passion the ruler became prematurely old. The play opens soon after this episode in the life of Ivan. Mr. Mansfield has before now given admirable portrayals of the strange and terrible in senile decay. Here he shows a dominating mind and will re-asserting themselves and the superstition of those early times. In the scene where Ivan recognizes the avenging hand of God in the disasters that afflict him and endeavors to prove outwardly humble and repentant while inwardly he was in rage and agony there was a grewsomeness that appealed equally to the sense of terror and humor. The death scene was quiet and realistic, appropriately ending a performance of great strength. There is no end of applause for Mr. Mansfield's every scene.

William Norris, the star, and Mabel Barrison, one of the principals in "Babes in Toyland," now in its twenty-first week, at the Majestic Theatre, took part Tuesday in the Actor's Fund Benefit performance given in New York and Miss Barrison's singing of the "Put Down Sis and Carry Two," song was a distinct hit. For the Benefit performance Frank Hayes wrote several verses which Miss Barrison sung with great effect. One follows:

If Goodwin took a Hacket, Boy,
And rPooter, Pastor, Seaman,
And Mitchell, Hamlin, Hammerstein,
And Frohman, Hyde & Behman
Should take a Walk
With Leslies as a Pascoe
How many Zazu's would it take
To write a new Belasco?

Chorus.

Borrow six and blow in two
On Broadway it is a case of do
You can buy and buy and buy
'Til your pocket's sore
You'll always find someone around
Who thinks you should buy more.

Of all the season's offerings at the various metropolitan play-houses, none has scored so instantaneously and emphatically as Walter Hale's comic opera "The Yankee Consul" with Raymond Hitchcock in the star role, which is filling the big Broadway Theatre, New York, to its capacity at every performance. It came to Broadway out of the West, saw and conquered Manhattan, horse, foot and dragoons, and is the talk of the town. Its producer, Henry W. Savage, has gauged the public taste accurately in the present instance, just as he did when he produced "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Man of Mole," "King Dodo," and "The County Chairman." In Raymond Hitchcock, Mr. Savage has found a comedian, whose droll and quiet humor affords positive relief to the theatre-goer, weary with the efforts of the average machine-made comedian of latter-day musical productions. The book by Henry M Blossom, Jr., is bright and amusing and the music by Alfred G. Robyn is tuneful and sprightly. The dramatic critics of the New York press without a dissenting vote pronounced "The Yankee Consul" an unqualified success, and their judgment has been endorsed by the crowds that have witnessed every performance given at the Broadway. The piece will enter upon its fourth week on Monday evening, March 14, and will unquestionably draw immense audiences for many weeks to come. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday during the present engagement. Local play-goers visiting the metropolis will make no mistake in seeing "The Yankee Consul" at the Broadway Theatre—it is a sure cure for the blues.

The seventy-fifth performance of "The Virginian" at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, on Monday, March 7, suggests the great success of this drama from Owen Wister's popular novel. The Manhattan is crowded at every performance, and there is every indication that the conventional "end of the season" in New York will find this play still at the height of prosperity, with a lively possibility that it will run into hot weather. There have been no very fine rival successes in New York theatres this season that the run of "The Virginian" is all the more noticeable. To any one who visits the Manhattan, however, there is no mystery whatever as to the vogue of this romantic play, which presents the essence of the book in a captivating way. Those who have read Mr. Wister's novel are sure to take delight in the stage version of it, for the most vital and dramatic parts of the story have been put on the stage with rare skill in the assembling and with unusual judgment in the selection of actors for the various characters. Particularly happy was the selection of Dustin Farnum to play the part of the Virginian. Women take a special delight in the Wednesday matinees at the Manhattan, as souvenir pictures of Mr. Farnum as the Virginian are given on that day.

HORSE SHOW HERE SOME TIME IN JUNE

Feasibility of Scheme to Inaugurate Annual Affair Discussed at the Meeting.

MR. BLITZ AS DIRECTOR

PROMINENT CITIZENS WHO ARE INTERESTED IN THE IDEA.

Gathering at George P. Mellick's Home at Which Matter Was Discussed—Plan is to Have Several Classes of Exhibitors.

Plainfield is to have a horse-show this year, probably on Saturday, June 4, or at some other early date in June. This is under the condition that sufficient interest is shown in the project to satisfy those who will have the affair in charge of its probable success. A meeting was held Friday evening at the home of George P. Mellick to discuss the feasibility of the scheme, and decision to put the matter through, if conditions seemed to justify, was taken informally.

The prime mover in the plan is Mr. Blitz, of New York, who has been secretary of many successful horse-shows throughout the country. Mr. Blitz will direct the arrangements for the Plainfield show when it is definitely decided to hold it.

There will probably be several classes of exhibitors, including many from out of town, more especially from Morristown, which has had several horse-shows of its own. Those who attended the meeting Friday and who are prominently connected with the movement were J. W. Johnson, W. J. Battfield, R. A. Fairbairn, Daniel F. Ginna, George P. Mellick, Dr. M. O'M Knott, E. H. Ladd, Jr., Lewis E. Waring.

BEWARE OF THIS INDIVIDUAL

MAN TELLS A FALSE, BUT PLAUSIBLE STORY TO GET MONEY.

Persons in this city who have susceptible dispositions are warned against the operations of a man well known about town who seems to be born to $5 to bury his eight-year-old boy who has just died." The fellow tells a most pathetic story, working upon his victim's feelings by pleading poverty and lack of work and weeping copiously. He was successful in obtaining $5 from a woman who ascertained later that he was "faking." The fellow has been employed by several bakers and grocers in this city, spending the proceeds of whatever he earns in saloons instead of supporting his wife and children.

GUN CLUB TO OWN RANGE

INDEPENDENTS PROPOSE TO PURCHASE THE MAPLE AVE. GROUNDS.

Plans have been made by the Independent Gun Club for an improved club house and range. At the last meeting of the club it was voted to vest a committee with power to purchase the grounds on Maple avenue on which the range is situated, and the committee has acted favorably on the project. A forfeit has been posted with the owner, and at the meeting to be held by the club tomorrow night final action is authorization of the purchase is expected to be taken.

There is a house on the grounds that the organization has been using, but it is the intention of the club to remodel the structure and make it much more appropriate to the character of its new owners, and add to its features as a comfortable headquarters for gunning enthusiasts.

It is probable that changes will also be made to the ranges and traps. They are in good shape and highly satisfactory, but the members aim at putting the club in the very first rank of its kind hereabouts in equipment.

TRAMP KILLED.

Body of Unknown Man Found Along Central's Tracks Near Dunellen.

The body of an unknown man, thought from his dress to be a tramp, was found early Sunday morning on the tracks near the Greenbrook water tanks, West Dunellen. Patrick Costello, a track walker, made the discovery. The body was cold when found and had been struck by a train probably early Saturday night. It was bruised about the head and both leg were broken. The man was of slight stature and wore a light moustache. No indication of his identity was obtained. The body was taken to Runyon's morgue at Dunellen.

Birthday Surprise.

Orrie P. Baker was surprised by a party of twenty last night at his home on Watchung avenue on the occasion of his twenty-first birthday.

STATIONARY ENGINEERS EFFECT ORGANIZATION

Temporary Officers Elected by Safety Branch, No. 12, at Meeting Held Saturday.

A. L. CASE CHAIRMAN

OBJECTS OF THE ASSOCIATION WHICH HAS A MEMBERSHIP OF TWELVE.

National Association of Stationary Engineers Supervises Organization of Local Branch—Regular Election to be Held March 26.

On organization of stationary engineers was effected in this city on Saturday night in the Exempt Firemen's Association rooms. A delegation from the National Association of Stationary Engineers, including Organizer John Callahan, of Jersey City, attended the meeting and assisted in getting the local branch started. The new organization will be known as Safety No. 12. Twelve members compose the charter list.

Temporary officers, including Arthur L. Case, chairman, and Alonso Brokaw, secretary, were chosen to serve until March 26, when there will be a regular election and installation of officers. All engineers in this city and vicinity have been invited to join the association.

The objects of the association are for the better education of its members in the art of steam engineering, to protect the interests of competent engineers in their vocation, to enroll all competent engineers, to impart beneficial information, to assist members out of employment and to procure by legal enactment greater safety in the operation of steam plants.

The State association now has a bill in the State Legislature providing for the licensing of every stationary engineer.

VALUABLE MAPS FOR STATE

DUPLICATES OF RARE OLD RECORDS SECURED BY CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

The libraries of the State may soon add to their reference room copies of two or three hundred ancient maps of New Jersey and other eastern States.

At a recent meeting of the public library commission a committee was named to wait upon Governor Murphy and try and interest him, in behalf of the State, in the acquisition of them and the Governor was enthusiastic over the matter.

Some time ago the congressional library at Washington, D. C., secured from various sources in this country and in England all the authentic maps to be had of the various sections of the country as it was known to the early geographers and then made a complete set of them. In this collection there are between two and three hundred pertaining to New Jersey, some of which were traced by officers of the Revolutionary Army and some by the English officers, and it is these copies the commission thought would be a valuable addition to the public libraries of the State.

Sues for $40,000.

Suit against three railroads has been brought by Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city, for Nathanael Koerber, who was injured by a train at Goodman's crossing on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, near Fanwood, about a year ago. Koerber lives near the crossing, was seriously hurt, his arm being broken in four or five places and the bones failing to knit. Mr. Marsh has brought suit for $40,000 against the Lehigh Valley Railroad, the Lehigh Valley terminal and the Easton and Amboy Railroad.

Fire in Scotch Plains.

While playing in the kitchen late Saturday afternoon, the children of Jesse Ryno, of Park avenue, set fire to a couch. The firemen arrived just in time to prevent a serious blaze. Mrs. Ryno was ill in bed at the time, and neighbors carried her to safety The loss was not heavy, and is covered by insurance.

Frazee Won Prize.

The prize of $5 in gold to the man who sold the most admission tickets to the Company K fair was won by Private Frazee who sold 170. A meeting of the fair committee was held last night and another one will follow next week for the settling of business connected with the fair.

GOOD BILL PROMISED BY HOPE'S MINSTRELS

Performance This Year Will Sparkle With Abundance of Wit and Cleverness.

BRAND NEW SKETCHES

"IF I ONLY HAD A PULL," AN ORIGINAL TOPICAL SONG.

Costumed Sextette to Render "Essence of Oie Virginie—The Oleo Sure to Make a Hit—Those Taking Prominent Parts.

Anybody who has a prejudice against laughing is warned not to attend the Hope chapel minstrel show which will be the big event of next week. Anyone who has an rooted dislike for enjoyment himself is requested to absent himself on the nights of Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, March 15, 16 and 18, when the Hope boys will put on the boards the biggest laughing show they have ever produced. The songs are all new, and brighter and more tuneful than ever. The acts are original and the actors elaborately costumed. The jokes are all fresh and guaranteed to make even a North Plainfield politician forget his troubles.

The show is divided into three parts. In the first, one of the features, the only one repeated from last year, will be the singing by a sextette costumed as scarecrows of "Essence of Oie Virginie." The topical song, "If I Only Had a Pull," words and music by William N. Runyon, will be sung by George B. Cose and is sure to make the hit of the night. William Jeffery will sing a solo. Firstbrook and Sweeney will "show you the way to go home babe," and M. D. Sweeney will give his unequalled "feather dance" and sing the celebrated coon song, "Let Me In, Dinah All." There will be twenty acts in this part of the show, with forty "artists" in the chorus.

The oleo, the second part of the performance, will include illustrated songs by Elmer D. Cutting, musical stubts by A. E. Willard and songs by the Tallamy brothers. There will be acts in this part of the programme never produced on any other stage.

The "after-piece" which concludes the fun-making will be a farce comedy, "The Coming Man," in which the principal parts will be taken by John H. Cose, George Cose, M. D. Sweeney, William S. Holbert and John Galvin.

W. N. Runyon is engineering the production. His chief accomplices are the end men, B. C. Firstbrook, George B. Cose and Leonce Texier, bamboo, and M. D. Sweeney, John H. Cose and W. S. Holbert, bones.

UNION CO.'S SUNDAY-SCHOOL

SOME STATISTICS COMPILED BY THE LOCAL ASSOCIATION.

There were 4,169 officers, teachers and members of Sunday-schools in this city last year according to the twenty-third annual report of the Union County Sunday-school Association just issued. The report divides Plainfield Sunday-schools into two districts.

The first district, of which Charles M. Dolliver is secretary, includes the Sunday-schools of Trinity Reformed church, Grace P. E., St. Stephens, Seventh-Day Baptist, All Souls' Unitarian, Crescent Avenue, Monroe Avenue M. E., Bethel chapel, Mt. Olive and Calvary Baptist. In this district, with no report received from the Crescent Avenue school, there were 162 officers and teachers, 1,080 pupils, and a total of 1,242. The average attendance for the district was 953. Twenty-three dollars was contributed for county, State and international Sunday-school work.

In the second district are included the schools of the First M. E., First Presbyterian, First Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, East Third Street chapel, Congregational, Hope chapel and Heavenly Rest. There were 234 officers and teachers in this district, 2,093 pupils and a total of 2,327. There was an average of 1,287 pupils in attendance every Sunday. The county, State and international work received $33 from the district. A. V. Searing, Jr., was secretary.

In the entire county there was a membership list of 32,510, of whom 17,318 were pupils. The average attendance in the county was 11,280.

Officers and members of committees of the county association include Miss Edith Cairns, primary and junior superintendent, of this city; G. E. Hall, of Netherwood, member of the State executive committee; Rev. G. M. Shott, of Scotch Plains, and Miss Florence M. Hawkins, of this city, members of the executive committee.

COMMON COUNCIL'S IMPORTANT SESSION

Report of Myrtle Avenue Extension Commission Approved Last Night.

THE CAB DRIVERS' PLEA

CITY FATHERS UNABLE TO MAKE DONATION TO MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Necessary Action Taken on Proposition to Erect High School—Garbage Disposal Committee's Report Delayed.

Before the regular order of business at the March meeting of the Common Council, last Monday, was considered, Mr. Gloak presented the report of J. Wesley Johnson, George Griffen and David Smalley, commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages and inquire into the matter of opening up and laying out Myrtle avenue from the centre of Compton avenue to Green brook. The commissioners presented a lengthy report in which it was shown that they had completed their labors. They found the benefits greater than the damages and in a majority of cases the adjustment was a "stand off." A map accompanied the report and later in the evening Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, that as the cost of opening and laying out Myrtle avenue will cost $808.60 and that a just and equitable settlement has been effected with the property-owners, and no person appearing to oppose the improvement, the action of the commissioners be ratified and confirmed. This resolution was adopted.

In the regular order of business a communication was received from local cab drivers in which they asked the Council to amend the ordinance regulating their business, in that they will be permitted to stand at the curb at the North Avenue Station and solicit passengers; that that part of the ordinance compelling them to wear badges on their coats be repealed; that they be allowed to place the card-rate of fares underneath the seat in the cab instead of hanging it up and that a flat rate of 25 cents be fixed for each passenger, instead of fifteen cents for additional ones after the first passenger. The instances cited, it is claimed by the cab drivers, have a tendency to injure their business. The communication was referred to the proper committee.

Considerable time was taken up in the presentation of the necessary papers relative to the proposed High School building. Mr. Daniel introduced the matter, which has been made necessary by reason of the fact that a recent school law was declared to be unconstitutional. This necessitated that the Council adopt a new ordinance, readvertise for bonds and practically start anew in the whole matter. The ordinance was introduced and adopted, ordered advertised and that part relative to the issuance of bonds was properly attended to. It will be remembered that the sum decided upon for the purchase of land and the erection of the new school is $125,000 to be raised through the issuance of bonds, they to mature at different periods for a series of years.

In connection with the petition of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital asking the Council to appropriate $1,500 annually to that institution, Mr. Daniel presented an opinion from the city to do this. However, he believed that should the Board of Governors enter into a contract with the city to care for the indigent poor at the hospital, it would be proper to appropriate a sum of money for this purpose, thus escaping the provision of the law which prohibits donations. In view of this Mr. Daniel made a motion that the City Clerk communicate this opinion and the circumstances to the Board of Governors informing them that if such a contract can be made the Council might see its way clear to vote $1,000 to the hospital.

Mr. Tyler wanted to make the sum $1,500 and amended Mr. Daniel's motion. The amendment was lost.

Mr. Daniel said it would be necessary for the Council to retrench. Council did not desire to increase the tax rate, nor exceed appropriations, and must be exercised.

Mr. Daniel also presented an adverse opinion from the corporation counsel on the petitions from the Firemen's Relief Association and the American Sabbath Tract Society, asking for exemption. Inasmuch as the two organizations were refused exemption by the commissioners of appeal, the Council cannot grant the request.

The following changes in the city park commission were announced by President Tolles: Mr. Tolles takes the place of J. F. Hickok; W. A. Garrigues succeeds Jas. vanDerweeden, the latter takes the place of George P. Mellick, Daniel F. Ginna takes the place of S. A. Ginna, while D. S. MacLaren succeeds E. T. Barrows.

A. L. Otterson and other residents in the vicinity of Evergreen and Hillside avenues, asked the Council to extend the hack and cab ordinance to that territory. The matter was referred. James W. DeGraff's petition to have Randolph road macadamized was also referred.

A petition presented by Elston M. French to the State Board of Taxation was referred. Mr. French claims that an excessive value has been placed on some lots of his. The bond of Constable Gjettleesen was presented and referred to the finance committee.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution ordering the purchase of two additional sprinkling carts, at a cost of $325 each. This will give the city eight carts in all, a sufficient number for the work. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Gloak introduced an ordinance relative to the removal of snow, ice and weeds from sidewalks, ordering the removal of ice and snow within twelve hours after daylight and weeds and other obstructions after three days' notice. The ordinance was adopted on its usual readings and ordered advertised with minor amendments.

Mr. Tyler asked for an extension of time on the garbage commission report and Friday, March 18, was set for its presentation.

Mr. Lee stated that 2,000 feet of new hose for the fire department had arrived. Mr. Randolph reported that sanitary traps have been placed in the cells at police headquarters.

RESERVE MILITIA FOR STATE

ALL ABLE-BODIED RESIDENTS BETWEEN 18 AND 45 SUBJECT TO DRAFT.

The bill before the Legislature calling for a reorganization of the National Guard and providing for a "reserve militia" has aroused considerable interest in every section of the State. Opponents of the bill say that it is to provide for a "standing army" of all citizens for which there is no need. Those in favor of the measure say it is simply a plan for keeping in touch with the available military force of the State.

The bill flatly provides in its first section: The militia shall consist of every able bodied male citizen of this State and every able bodied male of foreign birth, who has declared his intention to become a citizen, who is not less than 18 and more than 45 years of age, and who are residents of this State and shall be divided into two classes, the organized militia to be known as the National Guard and the remainder to be known as the "reserve militia," subject to the usual legal exemptions of the State and United States.

When the Governor deems it necessary he may organize a board to make an enrollment of all persons "liable to service in the militia." Each person enrolled shall be notified. The list shall be filed with the county clerk. All records are to be open to the enrollingboard and all persons under penalty must give information concerning names of persons in hotels, boarding houses and residences.

The bill continues:

"Whenever it shall be necessary to call out any portion of the reserved militia for active duty the Governor shall direct his order to the chief of enrollment and drafting, who upon receipt of the same, shall proceed to draft by lot as many of the reserve militia, or accept as many volunteers as are required by the Governor," and shall forward a list of such names to the Adjutant General.

Every member of the militia ordered out who does not appear at the place and time designated within twenty-four hours, and who is not exempt, "shall be taken as a deserter" and shall be subject to trial and punishment by a court-martial.

When the reserve are ordered out they "shall immediately be mustered into the service of the State for one years," or such less period as the Governor may direct. A section follows for the regular organization of the reserve in companies "or assigned to organizations of the National Guard already existing."

The men in the "National Guard" are to be enlisted for a "term of not less than five years," and shall make oath of allegiance "to the State and the United States."

As the National Guard men swear allegiance to the United States, and as the "reserves" are easily made a part of the "National Guard," it is claimed in some quarters that the effect of the bill will be to compel the "reserves" to act under the orders of the President of the United States."

The bill accepts the Dick law, which allows the President to call out the National Guard for three months' service.

BAKERS HESITATE TO INCREASE PRICES

Wheat Market Quotations in Flour Show Uncertainty That May Lead to Decline.

DISCUSSED BY BOSSES

IDEA TO CHANGE SIZE OF LOAF MEETS WITH OPPOSITION.

Association Adopts Set of By-Laws —All the Trade in the Movement—Another Meeting to be Held Tomorrow Night.

No action regarding the threatened rise in the price of bread was taken by the bakers at their meeting last night. The subject was again discussed from different standpoints, but it was felt that the state of the wheat market was too uncertain to warrant a decision as to an advance in price as yet.

There was a slight drop in wheat quotations yesterday, and the bakers were not sure that the price of flour would go to, or stay at, a point making a rise in the cost of bread necessary. The bakers are not desirous of putting up the price, and will hold off from that step just as long as they possibly can.

There has been some suggestion out side the bakers' ranks that the size of the loaf be reduced instead of a rise in price. This was adversely at the meeting last night. The bread makers are averse to reducing the size of the loaf. If any measure of self-protection is made necessary, they will put the price up.

Further steps in the permanent organization of the bakers were taken at the meeting. It was decided that the combination be known as the Boss Bakers' Association, and a set of bylaws were put together and adopted.

Five of the largest bakers in the city were at the meeting. The rest of the trade in the city are with them, and will join the association, bringing the membership up to about eleven.

JERSEY'S COW POPULATION

STATISTICS CONCERNING STATE COMPILED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

According to a report just issued by the Federal Government bureau of animal industry, there are 154,407 dairy cows in the State of New Jersey. In land area New Jersey ranks forty-fifth among the States and territories; in population sixteenth, in cow population thirteenth, milk producing twenty-eighth, butter producing thirty-sixth, cheese producing thirty-first; in cows per square mile eighth, in butter produced per square mile sixteenth, and in cheese produced per square mile twenty-second.

In the number of inhabitants per square mile New Jersey ranks third among the States, only Rhode Island and Massachusetts outranking it. New Jersey has a density in population of 250.32 per square mile; the cow population of the State is 22.30 per square mile. This means that there is about one cow for each eleven inhabitants in the State. In the number of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits New Jersey ranks twelfth. New York State is first in population, the number of cows, amount of milk produced, amount of cheese, cows per square mile and cheese per square mile. This makes New York the banner dairy producing State. New Jersey has eighty-nine cows for each 1,000 inhabitants, while New York has 212 for each 1,000 persons.

New Jersey produced last year 77,714,055 gallons of milk; 5,994,363 pounds of butter on farms, and 1,395,519 pounds are made at creameries, 24,327 pounds of cheese made on farms and 100,000 pounds of cheese made at factories.

United States ranks second in the countries of the world in the number of milch cows, having 18,112,707 head, and 69,438,738 cattle of all kinds.

Sick Teachers.

Three of the borough High School teachers are detained from their classes by illness: Miss Ruth Hill, Miss Laura Sydenham and Miss Grace Anderson. Miss Hill was taken ill with grip at her home in Cortlandt, N. Y., where she was called by the serious sickness of a member of her family. Miss Susie Glass and Miss Emma Dorr returned to their duties at the school yesterday after several days' illness with grip.

Lecture on Garrick.

A lecture on David Garrick was delivered by Dr. Albert H. Smyth, dean of the department of English literature in the Central High School of Philadelphia, before the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon. Lack of space prevents a more extended account which will be published tomorrow.

James Brennan, of Arlington avenue, is critically ill.

PLAINFIELD WORKMEN TO FIGHT THE PLAN

Delegation of Local A.O.U.W. to Attend the Grand Lodge Session on Thursday.

ASSESSMENT SCHEME

COLUMBIA AND CENTRAL LODGES AGAINST PROPOSED CHANGE.

Majority of Organizations Throughout the State Are Opposed to Supreme Lodge's Plan—A Hot Fight Is Expected.

Members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen are speculating as to the outcome of the meeting of the grand lodge, which will convene in Trenton Thursday morning.

Prominent Workmen from both local lodges will attend the Grand Lodge to register vigorous protest against the new scheme. Those who have definitely decided to go include Past Grand Master Workman V. W. Nash, who has become the recognized leader of the anti forces throughout the State; J. W. A. Bauersachs, William Newcorn, C. T. Rogers and Past Master Workman Wilson, of Central Lodge. Several others besides these will probably accompany them.

Both Columbia and Central Lodges are unreservedly committed against the proposed change and it is expected that their representatives will vote in accordance with these sentiments.

A prominent local Workman said yesterday that the great majority of the lodges throughout the State are opposed to the rate. The representatives, however, have been moulded under the influence of the Grand Master Workman, who is hotly in favor of the change.

While routine business and the work of electing officers will consume much of the time of the session, the most important item of business to be considered and decided will be the report of a special committee appointed to consider the plans adopted by the Supreme Lodge and recommended to the grand lodges throughout the country as the correct financial basis upon which to run the entire order. This special committee has signed a report which declares in favor of the new plans, and its recommendation is that the grand lodge discard its present system and take up that outlined by the Supreme Lodge. This report will bring the question squarely before the representatives who assemble in Trenton and their votes will decide, for the time being, at least, whether the grand lodge of this jurisdiction will continue under the old plan, or try the new one.

The history of the controversy extends over a period of more than six months, during which time the subject has been debated in nearly every lodge in this State. When the Supreme Lodge adjourned word was flashed throughout the country that the rates had been raised, and without waiting to understand the full text of the new law, many members began to condemn it without those supreme representatives who voted for the new plans.

Louis Mattox Buried.

Louis A. Mattox, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Mattox, of Spruce street, was buried this morning at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Father Egan, in celebrating requiem mass, praised highly the boy's noble qualities. The boys' temperance cadets, of which the little fellow was president, attended the services in a body. There were many floral tributes.

Hose Carriage to Stay.

Besides transacting routine business last night, the members of the Exempt Firemen's Association voted unanimously to approve the report of the Board of Trustees declining to allow the Amity Hose silver carriage to be sent to St. Louis.

Miss Moy, of Central avenue, has about recovered from a recent illness.

Harvey G. Westrick, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, has been spending several days in town.

THE CITIZENS' PARTY WINS

the time he left the Council, and declared that he still adhered to the conviction that the chief executive had treated him with kindness and courtesy while in office. His present attitude of opposition, he said, has been the result of the administration's policy, and not because of personal feeling toward the Mayor. Mr. Swackhamer did not look happy during the inquisition. The Republicans enjoyed the memory of the incident all day.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed, who helped Mayor Smalley to carry the Republican campaign through, was too ill with grip to take any part in the electioneering. He left his sick bed to vote, and returned immediately to the house. A. I. Smalley, who has been ill a week, did the same thing for his brother's ticket, and John Goodwin, one of the Mayor's bitterest opponents, braved just as serious an illness and left the house for the first time in weeks to cast his ballot for the Citizens.

The Citizens' victory wiped out a normal Republican majority of 250. A prominent Citizens' leader alleged last night that Brown had been saved at the last minute by trading. He declared that the Republican leaders saw their ticket was doomed in the afternoon, and concentrated everything on the collector, swapping votes for Krewson in exchange for Brown ballots.

Yesterday's election divides the borough Council evenly between the administration and anti-administration parties. Mayor Smalley having the deciding vote, the control of the body still rests with the regular Republicans. Of the new councilmen, J. P. Humble, is Republican and the other two are Democrats. The new Council will be composed as follows:

M. C. VanArsdale, R; Charles A. Lee, R; James K. Arnold, R; F. C. Krewson, Cit; John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Cit; Joseph P. Humble, Cit.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

Republicans Win Everything, But Town Committeeman, Bruchmann Being Re-Elected.

The entire Republican ticket, with the exception of township committeeman, was carried at the Fanwood township election yesterday by an overwhelming majority. The result being a surprise to the leaders of both parties. Out of a registry list of 550, 223 votes were cast. This is considered a light vote but it gave the Republican ticket a majority of sixty, and came near defeating Theodore Bruchmann, the Democratic nominee for Township Committee, who has held the office for several terms. Charles Ball, his opponent, making a good run and only lost by a majority of nine votes. Outside of this office and the appropriation but little cutting was done by either party.

The votes for the several officers were as follows: Freeholder—John Robison, R, 162; Charles Haberly, D, 56; township committee—Charles Ball, R, 108, Theodore Bruchmann, D, 117; constable—Robert Walpole, R, 144. (no opposition); overseer of the poor—August Klemser, R, 146, (no opposition); commissioner of appeals—William H. Johnston, R, 140; Charles Eller, D, 86; surveyor of highways—Andrew Schaffer, R, 145; Louis B. Coddington, R, 142; George Scudder, D, 83; Samuel Lee, D, 85; poundkeeper—Henry S. Littell, John Edwards, Nicholas Delivers, all Republicans. Appropriations—Roads, $2,000; sidewalks, $250; poor, $400; police, $100; fire, $900; no town building.

FANWOOD BOROUGH.

The borough election at Fanwood proved to be one of the quietest elections for local offices held in years. Only one ticket was in the field, the voters being given a chance to distinguish their choice for freeholder, by voting either the Citizens Democratic or the Citizens Republican ballot. Very little scratching was indulged in, all candidates and appropriations running pretty well up with the ticket. The result was as follows: Freeholder — John Robison, R, 62; Charles Haberly, D, 17; giving a majority of 45. The vote on the local ticket was: Councilmen—Stevens, 76; Babcock, 76; Justice of the peace—Charles Sheelen, 78; commissioner of appeal—Harry Robinson, 50. Appropriations—Light, $1,000; streets, $800; sprinkling streets, $175; water, $300; police, $600; expenses, $200.

DUNELLEN.

Borough Carried by Republicans, Election Being Without Exciting Features.

The Republicans carried Dunellen as usual, putting through their entire ticket. For councilman, Wilson Frederick, a victim of the Westfield wreck, was successful with 33 majority, capturing 138 votes against J. Alfred Wilson, D., the largest number cast for any individual candidate. Fowler Vall, his running mate for Council, won by 39, over John F. G. Kinney, D., the vote being 136-97. There was no excitement at the polls. No issues had been drawn during the campaign and the results were conceded from the start. The administration of the past year has been satisfactory, particularly in a financial way there being a balance in the treasury for the first time in years.

The fight for commissioners of appeal was somewhat closer than for councilmen. George Huff, R., was chosen for three years, receiving 127 votes against 116 for Theodore Apgar. George F. Giles, R., for commissioner for one year captured 125 votes to 112 for his opponent, Winfield R. Hetfield, D. Charles W. Blaine was named for constable on both tickets, his total vote being 240.

The appropriations voted were $3,000 for borough purposes, and $100 for the support of the poor.

NEW MARKET.

The Republicans elected the entire ticket in Piscataway township yesterday with the exception of freeholder, Alexander Manning being chosen to a fourth term. Nelson M. Giles was elected township committeeman by 150 majority. Silas Dewey Drake was chosen justice of the peace. There was no other candidate for the office. Albert L. Bolce and Richard Dalafield were elected surveyors of highways. All the appropriations were carried.

NEW PROVIDENCE.

New Providence township elections were hotly contested, 93 votes being polled out of a registration of 111, the results being divided between the Republican or township ticket and the citizens. John F. Wahl, Republican candidate for freeholder, was reelected, receiving in the township a majority of 17, while in the borough of New Providence, his opponent, Bradford Jones, received a majority of only 10, leaving Wahl seven to spare on a vote of 54 to 47.

WARREN.

In a hot fight in Warren township, the Democrats were barely victorous, running in Henry P. Williams for township committeeman for three years by 17 voting a township normally Democratic by 75. Williams beat Reuben Coddington 121 votes to 110.

UNION FREEHOLDERS.

There is a gain of one in the Republican majority in the Board of Freeholders. It stands 12 to 8.

Clark township elected Benjamin King, R., Springfield returned Peter Meisel, R; Union township went for Noah Woodruff, D; Fanwood reelected John Robison, R; New Providence, John Wahl; Roselle, Henry Krouse, R; Cranford, E. K. Adams, R.; Mountainside, Elston Darby, R.

CHIEFTAINS TELL OF THE ENCOUNTER

fight, and we will win eventually," was the prompt reply."

"Fight on what?"

"Matters in general," said the Mayor with a smile.

"What is the new Council to do?"

"The policy of the administration will be unchanged. I am expecting great things from the new members of the Council."

Former Senator Reed said:

"Barnum, the great showman, once said that the American people love to be fooled and that he was undoubtedly right to a great extent has been many times proven. Mr Honeyman is an artist in this line and when it comes to stating half truths and appealing to the ignorance and prejudices of the community his abilities entitle him to even more success that he has achieved. That the 600 votes which his ticket polled probably represent less than twenty per cent. of the taxes paid in the borough should be sufficient to explain the man and the movement to all intelligent people."

PERIL AT FIRE, BUT LITTLE DAMAGE DONE

Upsetting of a Lamp at Mr. Cruikshank's Residence Caused Much Excitement.

DARING OF CALL MAN

MRS. CRUIKSHANK FAINTED WHEN FLAMES WERE FINALLY SUBDUED.

Narrow Escape for Daughter—The Prompt Action of the Fire Department Averted a Big Loss.

A fire that caused much excitement and little damage burned Thursday in the chimney of the house of Simon A. Cruikshank, a New York broker, who lives at 531 Belvidere avenue. Mr. Cruikshank's daughter, Miss Leila Cruikshank, caught her dress on a stand in the reception room on the third floor and upset the stand and the lamp on it. Hasty action of Mr. Cruikshank, who threw the lamp into the fire place, prevented the igniting of his daughter's dress and saved her from serious burns.

The flames from the lamp quickly spread to the soot with which the chimney was filled, the draught fanning the flames and sending the soot in live sparks as big as baseballs to the roof. All that saved the roof from igniting in a score of places was the fact that it was still thoroughly wet from the rains and fog.

A telephone alarm was sent to Assistant Chief Jennings at fire headquarters at 9:30 o'clock and the chemical was sent out. When Chief Doane arrived on the scene the roof appeared to be all ablaze and the Chief ordered the ringing in of an alarm from box 29. A line of hose was taken to the roof through the sensational efforts of Cailman Frank McCabe, who made a climb from the attic window to the roof that would have daunted a circus performer. McCabe had to push himself between the chimney and a projecting corner window and draw himself up to the edge of the roof at the same time, by main strength of hands and arms. With the slippery condition of the building, his success in reaching the roof was remarkable. Two tanks of the chemical were pumped down the chimney and conquered the flames. There was no damage except to the chimney itself.

After the fire was completely out, Mrs. Cruikshank added a final touch to the excitement by collapsing, the services of Dr. Endicott being necessary to revive her.

MR. M'MURRAY'S SUCCESSOR

NEW PASTOR AT MONROE AVENUE M.E. CHURCH TO BE REV. GEO. MOONEY.

Rev. George Mooney, now pastor of the M. E. church at Mendham, Morris county, is talked of as the possible successor to Rev. John McMurray, at the Monroe Avenue church. Mr. Mooney is a graduate of the Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown; Wesleyan University and the Northwestern University. After preaching in the Nebraska Conference he concluded his studies at Drew Seminary. He then was sent to Caldwell, Essex county and then to Mendham. It is also reported that Mr. McMurray is to receive an appointment to one of the large churches in Newark.

BRUNSON KNOWS HIS FATE.

President of First National Bank Told of His Misfortune.

The fact that he will never be able to see again is known to Augustus J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank. On Tuesday, Dr. Kipp, the eye specialist, of Newark, who has visited Mr. Brunson several times, and who has assisted Dr. G. W. Endicott in the treatment of the man, made another examination of the eyes and found that the sight was entirely gone and that hope of restoring it was useless.

The fact was disclosed to Mr. Brunson, upon his request, by Dr. Endicott. The injuries to his face have healed and fortunately there will be no scars. It is expected that Mr. and Mrs. Brunson will soon return to the homestead property on Greenbrook, there to make their home permanently. It is Mr. Brunson's suggestion for he knows the farm so well that he would need practically no assistance in getting about.

There is every reason to believe that Mr. Brunson will continue as president of the First National Bank. The duties of the position can be performed by him with the aid of a private secretary, although the loss of his sight will always be a great handicap.

John Rafferty and Thomas Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, are confined to their beds by illness.

ANNUAL REPORT OF A. O. U. W.

V. W. NASH, SR., MAKES MINORITY PLEA ON NEW ASSESSMENT PLAN.

The annual report of Grand Master Workman Tomlinson and the Grand Lodge officers of the A. O. U. W. has just been issued. The medical examiner, Dr. Elmer Darwis, of Trenton, reports eighty-three deaths for 1903, the same number as in 1902. There was one Plainfield death from Central Lodge. The death rate was very slightly increased and the average age at death was slightly lower than in 1902. The reports of the representatives to the Supreme Lodge are included in the report, Representatives Barrows, of Mt. Holly, and Colyer, of Newark, making the majority report in favor of the new assessment plane and V. W. Nash, Jr., of this city, making the minority and opposing report. The majority report emphasizes the fact that under the present step-rate plan of assessments, all members of the order past fifty-seven years of age have failed to pay the cost of their protection and have become a constantly increasing burden. There were 90,000 members of the order January 1, and, it is argued, even if these men should pay the level rate of $4.20 for each $1,000 of protection they would fall far short of paying their cost, and leave a burden of $30,000,000 to be borne within the next twenty-five or thirty years.

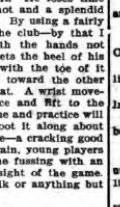
SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Ice hockey has been followed closely during the present winter. In discussing the game recently, a veteran player had the following to say: "I've noticed a lot of young fellows playing hockey, and their faults are glaring in many cases, naturally. In the first place, there is a tendency to do what the Canadians call 'hogging the puck.' That is, one player, playing a strictly individual game, takes the puck all to himself and works it up the sideboards and up the ice all himself. I've noticed that the crack Canadian team forwards rarely try to pass an opposing forward by running over him; that is, unless they have a clear field. They take no chances, but whip it over with a quick, accurate pass to a partner and the opposing forwards rarely know where the puck is going, so well is this style worked up. Again, after the forwards have lost one puck, they often seem to take this for a resting period and watch the single opponent to see what he does with it. The result is that the opposing forces have the whole field on the poor coverpoint and he is discredited for not breaking up the combination and is naturally overwhelmed with the point and goal man. The forwards ought to keep digging all the time, whether they have the puck or not. That is what they are there for. Another fault is that the wings will not keep their position. If there is nothing doing on their side they get restless and cross over and mingle in the fun. That is ruinous. Then, again, when a wing is threatened, he shoots the puck with the greatest amount of speed on a hit-and-miss journey clear across the ice to the other side board and it hits this and bounds back, perhaps into an opponent's stick. A boy should learn to shoot the puck without getting braced for it. He loses time getting set for a shot and a splendid chance is often lost. By using a fairly loose foothold on the club—by that I mean not stiff—with the hands not very far apart he gets the best of his stick on the puck with the toe of it pointing ahead and toward the other goal he is shooting at. A wrist movement gives the force and fit to the puck at the same time and practice will enable a boy to shoot it along about two feet from the ice—a cracking good shot for a goal. Again, young players waste too much time fussing with an opponent and lose sight of the game. It is too fast for talk or anything but good hard work."

A Hockey Player.

The national bowling tournament at Cleveland has been held and a new set of champions have succeeded those who won the honors at Indianapolis last year. The Ansons of Chicago, captained by the vetgran ball player, have succeeded the O'Learys, also of Chicago, as the five-man team champions, putting up 2,737 for the three games. Kraus and Spies, of Washington, captured the sports event, with 1,184; while Martin, of St. Louis, has been returned as the individual champion, with the score of 647. Kern's victory pleases those who have been pulling for a man with national reputation to ascend the throne which Brill, Strong and Jones have already occupied. That Kern is such a man there is no denying, for he has always been one of the first sought when an all-star team has been formed. He is more than 50 *years old and a top*notcher. His victory not only gave him the individual championship, but the Timm trophy, which he had won once before. The trophy was originally put up by Dr. Timm for delegates to roll for. The first time, at Chicago, Gus Burkhardt captured it; but at Buffalo it was Martin Kern who landed it. As the trophy contest was not popular with the delegates to the congress the committee that ever decided that it should become the permanent property of the new champion, whoever he might be. It turned out to be Kern. Kern's average of 115 2-3 is the lowest that has won the trophy final, but is only one pin less than Strong won with at Buffalo.



Martin Kern.

Considerable interest was taken in the general averages for the nine games, a cup having been hung up for the best average. Kern put it up for general average of 199 2-9. Brill landed this honor, too, the year before he took the individual, but at Buffalo J. Koster headed Strong for the nine games, while last year Strong bobbed up with better than 200 for the three games.

Newberry, of Detroit, finished second to Kern, with 198 2-9; while Kiehl of Cleveland, was third, with 195 2-9. Meyer, of Chicago, was fourth.

Arthur Duffy, champion sprinter of the world, has established another world's record. Tim Ford, of Georgetown indoor meet the other night. He was placed two feet behind the scratch in his heat and breasted the tape in a dead heat in 0:06 2-5, caught by four watches. The record time, 0:06¾, has stood since 1891.

Vinco, owned by John J. Cunningham, of Sandy Hill, trotted a mile on the ice at Lake George in 2:14¾ in a special race with Wyreka This equals the world's record on ice

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and lists for clubs. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

STATE'S SMALLEST RAILROAD

IT IS IN UNION COUNTY AND CONSISTS OF ENGINE AND THREE CARS.

New Jersey has one of the smallest steam railroads in the country, and considering its length, it is one of the busiest.

The little road is called the New Orange and Four Junction Railroad. It is but two and a half miles long, running from Roselle and Aldene on the Central Railroad of New Jersey to New Orange. All the line, which is a single track affair, is in Union county, and those who work on it declare the name is as long as the road itself. When it was first built the name was New York and New Orange Railroad.

The equipment owned by the road, which by the way, is not a "Trunk Line," although in Trunk Line territory, consists of one engine, one 3, the first two having become defunct; two combined cars, one now out of use, and one box car, without a number. It is customary for railroads to engage in an interchange of freight rolling stock, but this lone box car never goes off the line, because it is not equipped with air brakes, or the kind of couplers that are standard and prescribed by the Master Car Builders' Association. Whenever the engine breaks down one is hired from either the Lehigh Valley or Central Railroad of New Jersey.

The road is built in the shape of a "Y," Roselle and Aldene being each at the ends of the fork and New Orange at the end of the stem. There are five stations, Roselle, Aldene, Michigan Avenue, New Orange Central Station and Twentieth Street.

The contingent in the train service consists of Conductor Bill Harding, Engineer Mike Trioli, who used to clean fires for the Central at Roselle, and Fireman Jack Shellcross. The superintendent of this little road is H. F. Dankle, whose office is at New Orange.

There is quite an interesting history connected with it. Baron Hirsch, who sought to better the condition of the Hebrews, established the town of New Orange, and after laying it out on scientific principles, built the railroad and erected about one hundred houses. For a time things looked bright and the houses were occupied. Then the occupants, who had a tender spot in their hearts for the crowded East Side of New York, became tired of the quietude of the country, and fled back to the city. Just now there are about 500 persons in New Orange, and the place supports two factories that give employment to them. There has been talk for several years of extending the railroad to Millburn, Summit and Morristown, and the talk is still going on. The Lackawanna will see to it that no opposition is allowed, and should the line become a reality the big road will swallow it.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has been keeping the rails of the New Orange road warm for the past two years with a working train, of which Sam La Bar is conductor and Dick Blake engineer, with engine No. 1,562. This train, in connection with a steam dirt shovel, is engaged in the big task of removing a mountain of sand and gravel from New Orange, all of which is carried to Greenville and used to fill in the enclosure where the new freight yard is to be established. The working train which leaves the New Orange Railroad, connects with the Lehigh Valley and comes to Greenville over the long Newark Bay trestle. On account of the recent cold weather, the mountain of sand at New Orange is frozen up, and the steam scoop and Sam La Bar's train are out of business temporarily.

Another boom is promised the railroad if a scheme fostered by a syndicate of wealthy New Yorkers goes through. At New Orange there is a low piece of land that is well watered with springs. The New York syndicate has secured control of it, and by way of experiment has built one or two small dams to establish an artificial lake. Later other dams are to be built and a lake ten feet deep made. The scheme is said to be a private fishing preserve, but it is being kept very quiet.—Jersey City Journal.

REFORM CLUB'S IMPROVEMENTS.

Billiard and Pool Tables Have Been Installed.

Tables for billiards, pool and shuffle board have been placed in the basement of Reform Hall and a punching bag and other games and gymnastic equipment make the hall attractive. COMING OF SPRING

Nature Begins Early to Prepare for Her Awakening.

While To: Snow Is on the Ground Birds Are Busy Seed-Sowing—The Hybernating Animals — Mr. Crooker's Spring Song.

It seems early for out of door gardening, but nature is forever preparing for the season to come. No human gardener perhaps would be found sowing his seed when the thermometer stood at 15 below zero, and when the snow lay three feet deep upon the ground, yet under these conditions nature is sowing myriads of seeds of the berry-bearing shrubs and creepers. She employs, as her sowers, the grouse, the pine grosbeaks, the redpolls and many other birds, which at this season live chiefly on the pulp of the berries, and afterwards distribute the undigested seeds through the forest, thus securing a perpetuation of the shrubs whose berries they eat, and providing winter food for future generations of grouse and pine grosbeaks and redpolls.

If you walk across the swamps at this season, and look down where the ice is thin and clear, you will not see a lifeless brown mass of decaying vegetation, but a living army of plants looking upward hopefully at the light above them and waiting perhaps impatiently, for a "Forward! March!" from nature, that they may advance upon wavering winter.

Nor is it necessary to visit the swamps to be aware of the preparations for spring. Look at the treetops and note that swelling buds give the branches a rosy hue; notice that the willows are turning a golden yellow, and that many of the shrubs are taking on a purple tinge. In fact, amongst all the plants of forest, field and swamp, there is a whisper, not too loud, but quite audible, that the spring is on the way.

Many of the animals, too, are aware of the approach of winters end, and they show it. The skunk, who, some six weeks ago, retired to his burrow well lined with fat, and who has snoozed through the time of bitter weather and deep snow, now comes out every night, and we may find his footprints after every light snowfall. The woodchucks will soon be turning over in their sleep, and after we have had a warm day or two, we may get a glimpse of a hoary head poked inquiringly from the mouth of some sheltered burrow. But the old fellow will surely go back and take another nap, for the foraging will not be quite to his liking until March at least. The chipmunks will be getting active, too, for they never sleep so sound as the woodchucks do, and it will not be long before we hear the startled "chip" from some venturesome little hackbee, darting back to his burrow as we pass by through the woods. And the big black bear, lean and hungry, will be leaving her den before long, to seek food for herself and her cubs, and woe to the lesser creature which crosses her path, for she is not a vegetarian at this season.

The gray squirrels, which have been seen only off and on during the harder part of the winter, will soon be busy every day, raking up the leaves for nuts hidden long ago, or nibbling the tender buds of the trees. And before the cold weather has really gone, they will be caring for their little families in brown leafy nests in the tops of the taller trees.

As yet we have had no sign from that vigorous little herald of spring, the peeping frog, but we know, as we look down through the thin ice at the water plants, that he is down there with them, and that even before them he will come to the surface and tune his shrill bagpipe. How few there are in the country people, seem to know this tiny frog or, after having seen him, will believe that it is he who makes the loud piping they hear in the swamps. To be sure, on this point, all one has to do, is to go down to the swamps when the frogs are peeping and after wading into the water perfectly still. If the piping ceases, stand until it begin again, and then advance as before. At last you will see, upon some reed or close to the surface of the water, what looks like a tangle of dead grass, a small object which pulsates more or less regular intervals. At each pulsation you will hear a shrill "peep," and you will know that you have found what you sought. Slowly and carefully put your hand, and with a last sudden movement put it over the little peeper. You will see that your captive is about an inch long, with a yellowish brown back, on which you may trace a cross of a darker shade. If you take him home and place him in a glass vessel, with a little water for him to stand in, you may at dusk see his white throat swell out into a glistening round bubble as he tupes his pipe and sends forth his shrill "peep, peep, peep," which means as plainly as anything does, "Spring, spring, spring."

WANT GOVERNMENT TO BUILD POSTOFFICE

Need for Such a Building One of the Subjects Discussed by the Board of Trade.

DEMAND FOR THEATRE

CHAIRMAN OF PAVEMENT COMMITTEE MAKES A REPORT OF INVESTIGATION.

And the Trolleys Came in for a Share of the Time at the Hour of Trade's Session—Lace Company Desires to Locate Here.

To advocate the building of a government postoffice in this city, the Board of Trade adopted a motion on March 8 calling a special meeting to be held soon. The matter was brought up by Harry C. Runyon, who said that the returns from the Plainfield postoffice were large enough and the station of sufficient importance to warrant the erection of a government building. He thought that if the de*mand for it was strong enough and in*fluence brought to bear in the right places there could be little doubt of the government's acquiescence.

The motion for a special meeting was made by E. O. Dosh with the idea of discussing the subject with a full attendance including the postmaster and city officials. Unani*mous approval of the project* was expressed by the members present, who dilated upon the general benefits it would bring the city.

The need of a good theatre in Plainfield was discussed, opinion being unanimous that it would be a largely patronized institution. President Woolston expressed the view that Music Hall's failure was due to the fact that the people turned their attention to clubs having facilities for giving private theatricals. In this Chief Doane took issue with Mr. Woolston, saying that poor management was the cause of the shutting down of Music Hall. In the first place, the Chief said, the hall was a fire trap to such an obvious extent that men were unwilling to bring their families into it. It was also, in the Chief's estimation, furnished with no proper apparatus for heating, and on many occasions when entertainments were on was not heated at all. A further cause for complaint was alleged dirt in the theatre that made evening dress impossible.

Though the members of the Board thought that a theatre would be a paying investment as well as a general benefit for the city, and that it would draw patronage from surrounding towns from Bound Brook and Roselle, nevertheless they were no hopeful of its becoming an immediate possibility and took no action in regard to the matter.

Harry C. Runyon, for the permanent pavement committee, reported that data was being obtained from several cities, especially Jersey City, which has experimented with granite block, asphalt and macadam pavement, and Trenton, which has brick pavements, Chief Doane said, were responsible for much noise, and Buffalo, generally reputed to be one of the best paved cities in the country. Mr. Runyon has not yet received a answer to several communications he has sent to Buffalo on the subject.

Mr. Runyon announced that a communication had been received from Boese, Peppard & Company, manufacturers of Swiss embroideries and laces, asking information in regard to a site for a factory or an available factory building. The company employ about 100 people and if they could secure a suitable building would agree to take a long term lease.

The desirability of insisting upon he use of a new patent fender on trolley cars was discussed, the subject being introdnced by Mr. Runyon. The tendency of the fenders now used, it was shown, was to throw a victim down and under a car, whereas the new one, a steel net, would pick a man up automatically and carry him. The new one would cost little more than the old. It was stated by Mr. Runyon that the P. S. C. had refused to allow a demonstration of the invention, though admitting that it was an improvement over the one now employed. Their excuse was that they had put all the money into fenders that they could afford. The existence of a city ordinance requiring the trolley company to use the safest fender obtainable was pointed out, and action was taken recommending the street committee of the Common Council to investigate.

The likelihood of obtaining better gas was considered at some length, the present poor conditions being ascribed in part to the necessity for repairs at the gas plant and the fact of the large increase in the numbers of people using gas. F. A. Pope expressed the belief that better gas would be forthcoming within a month.

It was reported that there was a good chance that the P. S. C. would establish a street railway line to Manchen this spring with a branch line to South Plainfield. The wisdom of providing a good city park was also indicated.

LIEUT. L. H. RAND BECOMES A BENEDICT

Former Plainfielder Marries Miss Myra Lewis Buchner, An Illinois Girl.

QUIET HOME WEDDING

GROOM A LIEUTENANT IN THE U. S. ENGINERING CORPS.

Marrage Ceremony at Home of the Bride's Grandmother—Couple to Reside at Detroit—Groom a Son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rand.

Lewis H. Rand, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rand, formerly of this city, but now a lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., now stationed at Detroit, Mich., was quietly married on Monday, February 15, to Miss Myra Lewis Buchner, of River Forest, Ill.

The wedding, which was a quiet affair, being attended by twenty guests, was celebrated at the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Hagans. Lieut. Rand was attired in his military uniform. For the present the couple will reside at Detroit, where the groom is temperarily stationed.

Later Lieut. Rand expects to take a full course of instruction in the Boston School of Technology. He is also expecting a promotion to a junior captaincy, a bill for that purpose having been introdused in Congress. The promotion was expected about March 1.

Lieut. Rand was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in the Class of '99. He afterward served four years in the Philippines with the Corps of Engineers. Soon after his graduation he went to Montgomery, Ala., and it was there that he met his bride.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL FLOURISHING

GEORGE H. BATCHELOR RE-ELECTED SUPERINTENDENT AT FIRST BAPTIST.

The annual meeting of the First Baptist church Sunday-school was held Thursday in the lecture room of the church and owing to the very stormy weather there was a small attendance, just a quorum being present. Superintendent George H. Batchelor presided. Various reports were received, showing the school to be in excellent condition spiritually and financially. The treasurer reported a balance of $125 and the Sunday-school is now self-supporting.

The reports from the finance and missionary committees were encouraging. Miss Laura J. Runyon, superintendent of the Home Department, reported a membership of 138 and she indicated an increase in the contributions and interest in this department of the Sunday-school.

It was reported that Thursday, July 7, was the date selected for the annual excursion to Asbury Park, and the officers and committees will meet Sunday afternoon to confirm the date.

The officers were elected: Superintendent, George H. Batchelor; secretary, C. B. Rittenhouse; treasurer, Samuel P. Case; librarian, B. J. Shreve.

Y. M. C. A. ELECTS OFFICERS

STEPHEN CAHOONE AGAIN CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF ORGANIZATION.

Election of officers was the principal business before the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday. Stephen Cahoone was re-elected president; Edwin L. Bonny, vice president; Albert B. Beers, recording secretary, and Curtis M. Thorpe treasurer. Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, were chosen to honorary membership of the association.

The thanks of the Board were extended to the members of the women's auxiliary for the installation of a telephone in the association building. Kenneth Bobbie, boys' secretary, illustrated the work in his department *with the aid of a chart. These mem*bers of the Board were present: A. B. Beers, C. M. Thorpe, H. M. Maxson, W. D. Murray, H. O. Newmaso, G. M. Rittenhouse, O. S. Rogers, Nelson Runyon, W. S. Tyler.

Athletic Meet Report.

Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the physical department of the Y. M. C. A., has sent in his report of the recent inter-association athletic meet in the local gymnasium. He announces that a balance has been turned over to the secretary-treasurer of the Y. M. C. A. Athletic League of North America, section of Northern New Jersey, after all the expenses of the meet had been defrayed. Plainfield takes just satisfaction in the meet which was a pioneer movement in the interests of clean sport in Jersey.

WOMEN'S CHURCH SOCIETY CELEBRATES

Ladies' Aid Society of Warren Chapel Observed Its Tenth Anniversary.

ENJOYED PROGRAMME

MRS. A. V. D. HONEYMAN RECEIVES TOKEN OF ESTEEM.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey Makes An Address—Room Neatly Decorated—Reports Deferred Until Annual Meeting—Committee in Charge.

The tenth anniversary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of Warren chapel, was observed March 2, a special programme having been prepared by the entertainment committee. The Sunday-school room, where the meeting was held, was decorated prettily with bunting and Japanese parasols hanging from the chandeliers while about the sides of the room were distributed a large number of small oriental flags and lanterns.

There was a large number of people present. The programme as rendered follows: Mandolin solo, Irving S. Cooley, accompanied by Mrs. J. O. McKelvey; vocal solo, Miss Catherine Mitchell; recitation, Miss Marie Neuman; vocal solo, E. Maxwell Honeyman. An address was made by Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman, who has been president of the society for seven years. She reviewed the work and gave an interesting talk on the purposes of the organization.

The pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, gave a talk on the valuable work done by the society during its ten years of existence. He spoke in a congratulatory vein of the assistance rendered the church by the society and outlined the organization's work. A feature of the evening was the presentation by the pastor of a handsome cut glass jar containing a bunch of fine large roses. In presenting the gift on behalf of the appreciative members of the church to Mrs. Honeyman, the president of the society, Mr. McKelvey paid a high tribute to the work done by Mrs. Honeyman.

*No reports were read as the exer*cises last night, it being planned to present these at the annual meeting which is to be held on Friday night, March 18.

The decoration committee consisted of Samuel Taynor, chairman; William Demarest, Theodore Martin, Theodore Mason, J. W. Gavett and others. In charge of the general arrangements were Mrs. George Demarest and Mrs. H. W. Rankin.

ANOTHER SCHOOL MEETING

BOROUGH BOARD OF EDUCATION ASKS THAT $17,810 BE APPROPRIATED.

The North Plainfield Board of Education has called a regular school meeting for Tuesday night, March 15 at 8 o'clock. The principal object of holding the session is to vote on the annual appropriations for teachers' salaries.

The Board asks that the amount to be used for teachers' salaries this year be $15,840. This is an increase over the appropriation of last year caused by the necessity of employing more teachers to meet the large enrollment of children and the necessity of introducing the half time and ungraded classes. With a vote for $1,970 which is asked for manual training purposes, the total appropriation which will be brought up for the discussion of the voters of the borough, will be $17,810.

A large representation of citizens is expected to be present at this meeting which falls on election night. The polls will remain open one hour.

Improvements at Inn.

S. T. Williams, of this city, has secured the plumbing contract for the remodeling of the Mountain Park Inn. About $4,000 will be expended on the building in improvements and the contract secured by Mr. Williams included the heating apparatus.

Married Ten Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Raymond, of West Front street, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding at their home on Thursday night. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond received a number of appropriate gifts.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 12.

Topic—Appetites that unmake men.—Dan. v, 1-4, 25-28.

It has been calculated that over 90 per cent of men who start out in a business career in life fail in it some time and that the vast majority of men who live to be prosperous years and ten are at that age dependent upon some one else. This is a sad record. Failure in business, failure in self support, are not pleasant experiences, and yet there are failures that are even worse than these. Many men who do not fail in business are nevertheless unmade men, and, taken together with all others who are unmade morally and spiritually, they compose a great host of men. And what is sadder in life than an unmade man, the failure of one who possessed talent and opportunity and yet by yielding to some base appetite unmakes himself—a Brutus, unmade by inordinate ambition; a Mark Antony, unmade by sensuality; a Belshazzar, unmade by an inordinate desire for show and vainglory; a Napoleon, unmade by gluttony?

The appetites that unmake men are not a few. They are intemperance, lust, gluttony, ambition, the greed for gold and many others. Nor is it the appetite itself that is at fault, but the immoderate and immoderate development and exercise of it. Every appetite of life has its legitimate place and purpose, but if it be abused in many cases it leads to ruin and destruction. When God looked upon the world which He had made He rendered upon it two and made His verdict upon it was that it was very good, and the world is still good today if we use it properly. It is not the use of the world that unmakes men, but the abuse of it. It is one of the sad facts of life that that which is good may be abused and become an evil. Proper ambition is most worthy, and without it success in life is highly improbable. But the pathway of life is strewn with the wrecked lives of an inordinate ambition. The desire for wealth is not of itself a fault, but when greed becomes a god the better self of the man is soon unmade. The physical appetites play an important part in our lives when properly controlled, but when they are abused, when they are allowed into gluttony, intemperance and lust, how soon they unmake the man.

When it comes to the appetites, therefore, the problem to solve is how to use them and not abuse them, how to control them instead of having them control us, how to have their influence in making us what we should be rather than in unmaking us, and this is no light problem. To solve it successfully we need the wisdom and grace of God that He so freely promises of our best judgment and power of will. Constant carefulness should be our attitude. Some things, such as intemperance, should be guarded against altogether. Total abstinence is the only safeguard against strong drink. In other cases, where proper indulgence of the appetite is necessary, we must by divine and personal power keep ourselves masters of the situation. Every appetite must be held firmly in hand. Therefore let us "watch and pray that we enter not into temptation."

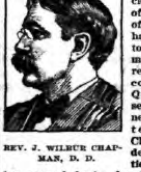
A Well Known Endeavorer.

Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, D. D., is one of the most widely known evangelistic preachers of the day. He is an enthusiastic Christian Endeavorer and has had flourishing societies in each of the churches of which he has been pastor. He has made a large reputation as a conductor of Quiet Hour services in connection with international Christian Endeavor conventions, has written several books for Christian Endeavorers and was counted one of the best presidents the New York city union has had. He also served one term as vice president of the New York state union.



REV. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, D. D.

Evangelistic Study Classes.

I wish there might be in every society an evangelistic study class where we should meet and prayerfully study the work in preparation for personal effort. I am convinced that we have not given this line the consideration which it deserves. Shall it not be the motto of every society this year, "Something definite for souls?" If this is to be realized, we shall need, first, a new grip on God. Whatever we do must be done under the guidance of His spirit and with a simple dependence upon Him. Then a new grip on ourselves. Let us gather up our gift and grace which He has intrusted to us. Then a new grip on our work, that all we are and all we have may be invested, as He intends it shall be, for His glory and the salvation of the lost.—New York State President Hallenbeck.

For All.

Never think that a Christian Endeavor society is a coterie of young people of like ages who come into a meeting for a good time once a week. It ought to be for every young person within reach.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Y. P. S. C. E.—Your Privilege Spread ing Christianity Everywhere.

BURGLAR IN PETTICOATS.

One of the Best Domestic Servants in France Proves to Be a Man Disguised as a Woman.

It is not easy, even in France, to find good help. The best help is discovered through personal inquiries; the "employment offices" (bureaux de placement) recommend too frequently undesirable persons. Last year all the papers reported a strange occurrence, which frightened many Parisian women. A physician and his wife had secured a housemaid about 23 years old, who came with the best certificates. She was devoted, attentive, laborious, capable, always smiling—in short, an ideal girl. After a fortnight, when the physician's wife was visiting her friends, she excited their jealousy by her reports of such a wonderful "bonne," for that question is the most frequent topic of women's conversation in France.

One morning a grave gentleman called on the physician. "Have you here," he said, "a housemaid named Mary?"

"GOOD-MORNING, MARY."

"Yes, sir."

"Are you pleased with her?"

"Perfectly, sir."

"Could I see her?"

"But——"

"Do not be alarmed, I will cause you no trouble; there is my card." It read: "M. Hamard, chef de lau surete" (chief of detective service).

Mary, modestly blushing, entered the drawing room. "Good morning, Mary," said Mr. Hamard, as he pulled off the girl's wig; "I arrest you, at last."

"She" was a man, a member of a band of burglars, and had been in the habit of giving them keys and information about houses which could be easily plundered in the absence of the owners.

THIS BEAR OBSERVES.

Attacked Mail Carrier Who Wore Coat Made of Brain's Departed Relative.

Dr. Harry M. Ulsh, a civil war veteran, who is driver of rural route No. 3 from Lewistown, Pa., was held up the other morning near Strode's Mills by a black bear.

Ulsh, who wears a large coat made of the fur of the bear family, was driving leisurely along, when a black bear crossed the trail ahead and stopped by the roadside to take a good look at the doctor and his coat, as if he recognized in it a long-lost brother.

But the physician, not desiring any closer acquaintance with his bearship, put the whip to his horse, and, deviating somewhat from his usual route, he made a record run to the next farm house, where he asked for help.

BRUIN TOOK A GOOD LOOK.

The farmers took their shotgun and started to hunt for bruin, but as yet they have not reported his capture.

Ulsh declares he will never wear that coat along the mountains again until that particular bear has been slaughtered, as bruin acted just as though he had identified the skin as that of a departed relative.

Hides Coins in Her Shoes.

The many counterfeit ten franc pieces lately circulated have been traced to a Marseilles coiner, who, with seven others, was arrested. The coiners made a huge profit for several months, the principal being a woman, who concealed the coins in her high heel. Louis Quinze shoes. She lived with a young prodigal son of a Lyons merchant with an income of only $200, and wished to increase it by her partnership with the Marseilles coiner.

Wheelbarrows in Brazil.

A cargo of Connecticut wheelbarrows was shipped to Brazil, and some natives filled them full of stone and materials and carried them on their heads. They declared wheelbarrows were ingenious mechanical devices, and wondered how the Brazilians had managed to get along so many years without them.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 12: "Appetites That Unmake Men."—Dan. v, 1-5; 25-28.

The physical appetites are among our most precious possessions. Hunger and thirst have more to do with keeping us in health than is usually realized. But for the constant guard they keep it would be next to an impossibility to regulate the supply of nutriment needed to maintain the body in strength and to know the proper times when it should be furnished. No amount of reasoning ever greatly improves on the native regulative instinct which acts independently of the rational powers.

Our great danger lies in another direction. The satisfaction of these cravings is always pleasing. When in eating we not only satisfy hunger, but also find some foods particularly good to the taste, there will come an impulse to eat such things simply because they taste good regardless of the fact that we are not hungry for food or that such things are the best for the particular time be the best food for giving the needed strength. Such eating is not good. It is for gratification of taste and not to satisfy hunger. It will result in derangement of digestion and induce disease if persisted in. It also has a moral effect in weakening the will power and putting the control of life under the power of physical cravings instead of under direction of highest reason. It may grow into vice which will wreck all in time and leave soul and body ruined forever.

The same holds true of thirst and every other appetite of the body.

So of every craving of mind. All are to have their proper place and scope, but none are to usurp control and be allowed gratification simply for the sake of the agreeable sensation. The test of their right is not the good feeling produced. That is only incidental.

Belshazzar was not in fault because he drank and ate, nor because he made a banquet feast to his lords. Such things have their time and purpose. But when a hostile army is at the gates of the capital it is no time for feasting. His place was with his soldiers, and his duty was the defense of his people.

Not all this story lies on the surface. The king not merely banquets at an inopportune time, debauching himself and all the leaders on whom the safety of his empire depended, but his revelry is in honor of the gods of gold, silver, brass, iron, wood and stone. They put dependence on the strength of their walls and the material resources of their stronghold. This is the meaning of their praise of gross, material things. But even this is not enough. He seeks still further his contempt for the spiritual powers worshiped by his besiegers by desecrating the dedicated vessels of Jehovah, who is, above all others, the God who is to be worshiped as Spirit. It is a mad, wild act; a drunken, licentious, impious defiance of the God who rules the spirits of men. It was the dethronement of reason and the installation of brute lust and insane passion. It proclaimed the disregard of all rights in men and duties. The king no longer leader in government and worship, but despicable prey of vilest passions. His appetites have unmanned him. He has overthrown the kingdom from within, and nothing can prevent the enemy from without entering and ruling. Gods of gold and silver cannot stand against men who worship the God of spirit.

This is a picture to be hung on the world's walls of memory. "Numbered, numbered, weighed, divided." No people or who serves the gods of gold and silver can read the inscription. To all Daniels it is clear as one's native speech.

Who serves his appetite shall lose his kingdom. Who serves his appetite serve him and his God shall take the kingdom and find himself a man—a king.

Endless Blessedness.

God's promises are ever on the ascending scale. One leads up to another fuller and more blessed than itself. In Mesopotamia God said, "I will show thee the land;" at Bethel, "This is the land;" in Canaan, "I will give thee all the land and children innumerable as the grains of sand." It is thus that God allures us to saintliness. Not giving us anything till we have dared to act, that He may test us. Not giving us everything first, that He may not overwhelm us, and always keeping in hand an infinite reserve of blessing. Oh, the unexplored remainders of God! Who ever saw His last star?—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

"The Boys."

"God bless the boys!" our hearts repeat
Through all the hours of day;
They're with us at the home fireside,
Out as we kneel to pray.

"God bless the boys!" whose better thoughts
Have ripened into gold,
Whose gentle words and deeds have sought,
With focus toward the fold.

"God bless the boys!" with sunny days
And loves to sweeten life,
And purity and peace and grace
To shield them from all strife.

"God bless the boys!" who lead the van
Of temperance and right;
Make each a brave, true hearted man,
With lance and honor bright.

"God bless the boys!" The hour may come
When each alone must stand
And battle with the demon, rum,
As knights fought hand to hand.

"God bless the boys!" and help them still
To tread a free land's sod,
As soldiers, with steel-like will,
Marched in the "truce of God."

"God bless the boys!" and as they fall,
Each with his armor bright,
Thicken and tell the world, "They all Fell battling for the right."

"God bless the boys!" and when no more
The notes of war they hear
May Christ's "Well done," at heaven's door,
Welcome each victor there.

MISS ELIZABETH VALIANT WEDS BALTIMORE MAN

Daughter of John Valiant the Bride at Nuptial Ceremony in First M. E. Church.

A RECEPTION FOLLOWS

THE BRIDE'S SISTER AS HER MAID-OF-HONOR.

Groom a Business Man in Monumental City—Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass Officiates at Wedding —Bride Receives Many Gifts.

Miss Elizabeth Gordon Valiant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, and Charles Francis Corning, of Baltimore, Md., were married at 6:30 p. m. Mch. 2 in the First M. E. church. Rev. Dr. William C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church, officiated. The reception which followed the ceremony was a distinct social event, as which many prominent people in this city as well as from Baltimore and New York were present. After a short wedding tour through the South, Mr. and Mrs. Corning will reside in Baltimore where the groom is a member of the wholesale twine and paper company of Hubbs & Corning, one of the concerns burned out in the recent conflagaration.

The bride entered the church leaning upon the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. Preceding her were the ushers, followed by the maid of honor and the bridesmaids. Miss Jessie Utter played the Mendelssohn wedding march as a processional and the wedding march from Lohrengrin as a recessional.

Miss Mary E. Valiant, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the four bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Corning, of Baltimore, a sister of the groom; Miss Isabelle Milne and Miss Elsie Brokaw, of North Plainfield, and Miss Nellie Valiant, a cousin of the bride, of Churchill, Md. The best man was John W. Corning, of Boston, a twin brother of the groom. Parker Dix, Joseph D. Chesney and A. J. Corning, Jr., of Baltimore; E. Parmley, of Philadelphia and John Valiant, Jr., brother of the bride, and George Baldwin were the ushers.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white embroidered chiffon over white liberty satin trimmed with duchess point lace. She wore a tulle veil. The only piece of jewelry worn by the bride was a diamond horseshoe of touch mine, which was the gift of the groom. She carried a magnificent bouquet of lilies-of-the valley tied with white ribbons.

Miss Mary Valiant's gown was of plain white chiffon trimmed with California roses. She carried a large bouquet of sweet peas. The bridesmaids were gowned in white liberty silk trimmed with white Venician point lace with green pan-velvet girdles. Each bridesmaid carried a bouquet of Easter lilies tied with a shower of narrow white ribbons.

After the ceremony the bridal party and invited guests were driven to the home of the bride's parents on Myrtle avenue in the borough where a reception lasting from 7 until 11 o'clock was held. The guests were received by the bride and her mother beneath an arch formed as a bay window made of flowers. Mrs. Valiant wore a lavender pan crepe de chine gown trimmed with rare lace to match.

There were about two hundred people present at the reception, representing some of the most prominent families in this city, Boston, New York and Baltimore. A wedding supper was served during the evening. In the dining room the decorations were of yellow and white while the decorations in the parlor where the guests were received were of white and green. American beauty roses, carnations, Easter lillies and other flowers set off to advantage by large quantities of Southern smilax, predominated. The church decorations were especially attractive. The entire organ front and pulpit platform was one great bank of rare flowers; smilax and other greens setting off the color effect delicately. Suhr's orchestra provided the music.

The groom presented his best man and ushers with very handsome stick pins and the bride gave her maid of honor and bridesmaids pretty rose gold brooches.

Owing to the serious illness of the groom's father, Mr. Corning were unable to be present at the wedding. His father is A. J. Corning, Sr., a prominent citizen and retired merchant of Baltimore. The bride's father is a New York broker and is a member of the Produce Exchange. He was a member of the North Plainfield Council and later a member of the Borough Board of Education.

Among the members of the two families present from out of town were Mrs. Joseph W. Valiant and the Misses Valiant, Miss Louise McNeil, Mrs. A. J. Corning, Jr., Mrs. Sarah J. Valiant, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Valiant and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hubbs, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Faber, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. West and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Bodman, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. William Kemp, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmly, of Philadelphia.

TENNIS ASSOCIATION HAS BEEN ORGANIZED

Hillside Tennis and Golf Club One of the Seven Members of the New League.

THE OFFICERS SELECTED

T. M. DAY, JR., OF THIS CITY, A MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Will Join the National Association—Competitions Have Been Arranged—A Tournament to Take Place in September.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is a member of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association which has just been organized. Bergen Point Tennis Club, Elizabeth Town and Country Club, Jersey City Golf Club, Ilderan Outing Club, of Rahway; Roselle Casino and the Westfield Club are the other organizations in the association. These officers have been chosen from the clubs represented: President, Gardiner H. Miller; secretary and treasurer, Sydney L. Smith; executive committee, Thomas M. Day, Jr., of this city; Miles S. Charlock, F. E. Ferris, I. O. Bunn and E. C. Moody.

Th Park Club, of North Plainfield, and the Land and Water Club, of Sewaren, have received invitations to join the association and it is believed that they will accept. That there is to be a revival of interest this season in tennis is an assured fact and the new association gives promise of being a successful one. Application for membership in the United States National Lawn Tennis Association will be made at once and a request for a date for an open tournament under the direction of the National organization.

A championship tournament will be held on the courts of the Elizabeth Club commencing September 1. In addition to this there will be tournaments open to members of the clubs in the new association. There will also be competition at men's singles and doubles, mixed doubles and women's singles.

M'ALL AUXILIARY PROSPERS

ENCOURAGING REPORTS READ AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL BRANCH.

The election of officers and the presentation of gratifying reports were the principal features of the annual meeting of the Plainfield Auxiliary of the McAll Mission held Thursday at the Public Library. According to the custom, the evangelist and his wife who are in charge of the two mission halls being supported by Limoges, France, by the Plainfield Auxiliary, regularly write of the work being done there, but for some reason a letter did not arrive in time to be read at yesterday's session. A friend of the organization did communicate, however, reporting that the work is progressing favorably. This fact was also shown in the report of the secretary of literature, who stated that the subscriptions for the American McAll Record have doubled during the last year.

There are now 200 subscribers in the local auxiliary toward maintaining the two mission halls. The evangelist's wife as a Bible reader and is a valuable assistant to her husband. Monsieur and Madame deBt. Vidal are in charge of the halls, which are being supported by the local auxiliary.

During the past year $979.49 was raised in the Plainfield branch toward carrying on this work and the members are much encouraged. Duringg be coming year even a larger amount is expected from the members and friends of the auxiliary.

After the presentation of reports these officers were elected:

President, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead; vice president, Mrs. Lawrence Myers; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster; secretary, Mrs. A. V. Heely. These representatives from the churches were also chosen: Grace church, Mrs. F. O. Herring; Trinity Reformed church, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck; First Presbyterian church, Mrs. Petrie; Congregational church, Mrs. William R. Wadsworth; Seventh-Day Baptist church, Mrs. J. N. VanDickle.

Successful Church Affair.

The turkey supper given at the home of Eugene VanCourt, Oak Tree, Thursday, for the benefit of Marcomier chapel, was a success, despite the bad weather conditions. Fifty suppers were served and everyone was generously served. About a dozen people from this city attended. The superintendent and teachers of the Sunday-school had general charge of the supper.

Rev. T. E. Davis, of West Fifth street, and his party of tourists, have returned from a trip to Florida.

ROUTINE BUSINESS AT BOROUGH COUNCIL

Five Members of North Plainfield Volunteer Fire Department Granted Exemptions.

MR. NORTHROP PRESIDES

MEMBERS EULOGIZE ROBERT CLARK, WHO RESIGNATION WAS ACCEPTED.

Claim Amounting to $2,200 Were Ordered Paid—Street Expenditures During Month $58,20—Mayor Smalley Absent.

There was just a quorum present at the meeting of the North Plainfield Common Council meeting Friday and but little business was transacted. It was the last meeting of the Council for three of the members on their present terms, and Councilman Northrop, who occupied the chair of the Mayor in the latter's absence, delivered a valedictory paying a tribute to the Mayor and Council, commending their action especially as to changing the volunteer fire department to that of a paid one.

Charles Keller, Herman Hansen, William G. Pasch, Peter Stramm and August Feiring, all firemen who have served their requisite seven years in the department, were granted exemption on motion of Councilman Arnold. Claims amounting to about $2,300 were ordered paid. A bill presented by Assessor Elston M. French for $150, was ordered paid when properly sworn to. Mr. Arnold reported expenditures on the streets of $58.20 for clearing away snow and dirt.

The resignation of Councilman Robert H. Clark, Jr., which has laid upon the table several weeks, was reluctantly accepted. President Northrop, in listening to the motion, said that during his three years' term in office his association with the resigning member was most pleasant and was convinced that Mr. Clark was not only a kindly man but had the best interests of the borough at heart. He said he knew that a great deal of pressure had been brought to bear to try to induce Mr. Clark to remain in the Council. Mr. Arnold also paid a tribute to Mr. Clark by saying he knew him to be a conscientious man and was sorry to be compelled to accept his resignation.

Just before the meeting closed Mr. Northrop took the floor and said that during the last three years it has been a pleasure for him to meet with the Council in North Plainfield. He said his experiences have been varied and while he has not always agreed on the different questions which have come up he has nevertheless taken pleasure in participating in the debates. He did not believe in the annexation proposition and in voting against it he did so from an honest conviction.

"The borough," said he, "has good cause to congratulate itself upon what has happened to the fire department and it will always redound to to its credit and benefit on account of lower insurance rates which will follow the installation of a paid department. We have a city of our own; good schools and good streets and in fact a town to be proud of. I hope the work begun during the last six years will continue for the next sixty years. Regarding the park question, before we can appropriate one single cent for this purpose we must lay the matter before the people the same as was done in the new fire house proposition and the new school building. It is impressed on all, I think, that the expenditures of great sums of money must be voted upon by the people."

CAN NOT OUST SHATTLE

PLAINFIELDER STILL ENTITLED TO MEMBERSHIP IN COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Andrew J. Nolan, J. V. F. Dilts and Frank J. Shattle represented this city last night at the regular meeting of the Union County Democratic Committee at Elizabeth. The question of F. J. Shattle's resignation as a city committeeman debarring him from being a member of the county committee was taken up and a lively discussion followed. The County Committee decided that as Mr. Shattle had not resigned from that body he was still entitled to membership.

The County Committee plans to organize clubs in every city, town and township in the county. Nelson E. Barton, editor of the Elizabeth Evening Times, the official Democratic organ of Union County, was present and addressed the meeting. He was given a cordial reception.

The resignation of Ira Hulbert, of the Fourth ward, this city, was received by the County Committee. The cause of the resignation is ascribed to poor health. It was reluctantly received.

Mrs. Clarence Murphy, of West Front street, is ill.

RABY ESCAPED MUSEUM MAN

SCHEME TO PLACE OLD MAN ON EXHIBITION FRUSTRATED BY MR. HUMMER.

Noah Raby escaped the museum man, and was one of the remarkable specimens of human nature who did so. This was not because he did not have a chance. Two years ago word of Noah's great age reached Maine and a man from Portland went to see him. Making himself known to Charles Hand, of this city, he asked the latter to drive him over to Stelton to see Noah. Overseer of the Poor Hummer received the Portland man courteously, but would listen to no proposition about taking the old man to exhibit. So Noah was able to live his life quietly at the Middlesex County poor farm.

MRS. HURLBURT BURIED.

Rev. Dr. Earp Officiated at Services Held in Her Late Home on Lincoln Place.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Joseph R. Hurlburt, who died suddenly early last week, were held Thursday afternoon from her late residence on Lincoln place. Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. church, officiated. The floral tributes were particularly handsome. Some of these were sent by Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, Miss Wood, C. Hummer, L. A. Hummer and by employes of The Daily Press, where the dead woman's husband is employed. Relatives were present from Elizabeth, Middlesex and Hunterdon Counties. An expected and loving letter from her dear daughter Florence, in Dakota, came just after she passed away. The interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

AFFAIR IN VINCENT CHAPEL

YOUNG LADIES' MISSIONARY CIRCLE OF FIRST M. E. GIVE ENTERTAINMENT.

An entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music, and recitations, followed by a social was enjoyed in Vincent chapel, Thursday, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Missionary Circle, of the First M. E. church. This organization, a new one, recently formed under the direction of Miss Helen Whitney and Miss Lillian Snodgrass, is composed of a large number of the younger women of the church.

The chapel was attractively decorated with palms and flowers and there was a number of people present to enjoy the programme which consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, Mrs. Thomas McDonald, Miss Martin, Miss Helen Whitney; piano solos by Miss Frances Rittenhouse, Miss Emmons, Miss Margaret Robley and Miss Helen George; violin solos by Miss Helen Shupp; recitations by Miss Helen Whitney and piano duetts by Miss Muriel Collins and Miss Florence Dickerson.

After the programme, which was well received, there was a social time and refreshments were served.

CITY AND BOROUGH SCHOOL RECIPROCITY

Plainfield Board of Education Agrees to Plan Suggested by North Plainfield Board.

MR. MAXSON'S REPORTS

REV. R. S. M'ARTHUR ANNOUNCED AS COMMENCEMENT DAY SPEAKER.

State Authorities Pleased With Plainfield's Exhibit for St. Louis —Reports of Medical Examiners Were Made.

"Whereas, it occasionally happens that a pupil who is attending one of the city schools becomes a non-resident through removing to North Plainfield after the school year has begun, thereby suffering some loss through the enforced change in his school under the present rules of the Board, therefore

"Resolved, that in case such change of resident occurs after the first of October in any year, the superintendent of schools may permit such uppils to finish the school year in the city schools without charge for tuition,

"Provided, that the Board of Education of North Plainfield shall agree to reciprocate by giving similar permission to pupils in their schools who move to Plainfield."

The foregoing resolutions were presented to the City Board of Education at its March meeting last night by L. N. Lovell and adopted. Mr. Lovell had conferred on the matter with Samuel Townsend of the Borough Board and ascertained the practicability of the plan.

Supreintendent H. M. Maxson made his report at his recent trip to Atlanta, where he attended the convention of the National School Superintendents Association. The results of the discussion of the convention particularly mentioned were the importance of paying good salaries to teachers and limiting their classes to twenty-five pupils, and the necessity for teaching thoroughly the main point in a course of study, treating the minor points briefly. The report is given in full in another column.

Mr. Maxson announced that the speaker for the High School commencement exercises would be Dr. R. S. McArthur, of Calvary church, New York city. He also reported that the school exhibits for the St. Louis exposition had been sent to Trenton and that the State committee had expressed high approval of their general excellence. The best work of the pupils in each grade, Mr. Maxson explained, was exhibited on wings of a cabinet. There was sent also an exhibit by classes including papers prepared by each pupil, the whole bound at the expense of the State in thirty volumes of 150 pages each. Photographs of the classes at work completed the collection.

The matter of changing the time for receiving and advertising proposals to furnish fuel and school supplies was broached by Mr. Lovell and laid over until the next meeting. Owing to the severity of the winter, the supply of coal for heating the schools has run short, more coal being necessary this year than for many years past. The purchase of at least twenty more tons will be required.

It was announced that $3,233.60 had been received from the tax collector. The regular school moneys to pay for the disbursements of the month as $6,637.45 and the balance on hand as $88,350.65. The sum of $536.50 was received for tuition. The Board has improved over its last year's record of expenditures by $7,000. The medical examiners announced that they had examined ten pupils.

MR. COOK BURIED.

Funeral Services Held Over Remains of Faithful Employe of The Daily Press.

Charles Sylvester Cook, a faithful employe of A. L. Force, owner and editor of The Daily Press, was laid at rest in Hillside cemetery Saturday. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, in the lecture room of the church, and were attended in a body by the employes of The Daily Press. The lecture room was filled with "Cookey's" friends. Dr. Schenck spoke feelingly of the dead man's character, his fidelity to duty, his trustworthiness and earnestness in trying to do right, and his faithfulness to Christianity. The pall bearers were selected from among Cook's fellow employes at The Daily Press, Corra Ryno, E. C. Searing, W. C. Dobbins and Thomas Lynch.

PASTOR DISCUSSES PROBLEM OF ASIA

Rev. Charles E. Herring Expresses His Admiration for the Japanese Race.

CHRISTIANITY IN ORIENT

TYPE OF RELIGION IN RUSSIA NOT THE RIGHT SORT.

To Preserve Its Integrity China Must Embrace the Christian Faith Declares the Minister— Cause of Japan's Progress.

Sympathy for Japan in her struggle against Russia was expressed again last night by Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, in a sermon on "The Problem of Asia."

Recapitulating his remarks of last week, Mr. Herring illustrated the truth that until all the nations of the world adopt the Christian faith, we shall not understand what Christianity means. Like Phillips Brooks, he would have the East "formulate Christianity according to its own genius," giving in return for its teachings a new aspect to Christianity. He illustrated the rightness of the fact that Japan after being Europeanized still remained Japanese.

We want Japan and China to be themselves, said Mr. Herring, but to keep abreast of the times, taking the truth and bringing out new phases of the truth. Christianity is needed to make China progress and to preserve its integrity.

The hatred of the Chinese for Christianity was explained in the fact of their veneration for their ancestors and their reliance upon Confucius' chart framed for antique conditions. Their faith opposes them inevitably to the progressiveness of Christianity, the adoption of which they think would make them like the hated foreigners.

"With all due respect for the good feeling existing between the United States and Russia," said Mr. Herring, "I would not like to see Russia impose her ideas of Christianity upon China and Japan." Referring to Russia's harshness to those outside of her own church he asked: "Is that the sort of Christianity that we want in Asia?"

Although appreciating fully Russia's friendliness to our own country, nevertheless, continued Mr. Herring, when it comes to a great moral issue, we cannot sympathize with her against a nation fighting for her life and liberty. Think of Japan in her war against China, winning territory of which she was diplomatically robbed by France, Germany and Russia to "preserve the integrity of China." Each European nation is trying to grab a portion of Asia. Japan is absolutely right and deserves our sympathy.

The speaker concluded with illustrations of the importance of Christianity as a factor in Japan. It has brought into the language such words as "God" in its Christian sense, "eternal glory" and "praise," and has shown the Japanese the importance of monogamy. Though polygamy was once generally practised in Japan, yet when an attempt was made to introduce Mormonism and its custom of plural marriages, it was utterly without success, a striking instance of the effect of Christianity. Many of the Japanese government officials high in power, including a member of the imperial cabinet, are Christians; two of their largest battleships are captained by Christians; and there are three Japanese daily papers which are Christian.

FUNERAL OF OLD NOAH RABY

SERVICES HELD OVER REMAINS OF MAN WHO DIED IN HIS 132D YEAR.

The funeral of Noah Raby, who was said to be the eldest man in America, took place March 2, services being held at the Piscataway township poor farm. Rev. J. A. Cubberley, pastor of the Baptist church at South Plainfield, officiated. The remains were taken to New Brunswick by Miss Emily Denman and were removed this afternoon to the burial ground in Springfield. The old man was employed at one time by Miss Denman's father.

Rev. Mr. Cubberley applied the meaning of the last verse of the ninety-first Psalm to the departed aged man, "who for many years has put his trust in God, and has been sheltered 'in the secret place of the Most High.'" The comfortable home which by public charity had for a number of years been afforded this man, was under an evident manifestation of the loving kindness of God to him.

Mrs. Lynch, of West Third street, is very ill.

CONTROL FOR COUNTY BOARDS

MOVEMENT STARTED IN UNION COUNTY HAS NOW REACHED THE ASSEMBLY.

The movement started several years ago by the members of the Union County Board of Election to have all the matters pertaining to elections placed in the hands of the County Board has culminated in the introduction of a measure by Mr. Manners, of Essex, which makes this provision.

Since the movement started the Union County men have been joined by the boards of Essex and other counties and a bill was drafted which is known as House bill No. 311, which is designated "Amendments to the general election act, revision of 1898," and contains no less than forty pages of amendments.

The bill seeks to take over the control of the ballot boxes, the stationery, naming of polling places and every detail pertaining to any and all elections.

The friends of the bill urged the advocates of the measure to wait until the bill placing county clerks on a salary basis be passed, so as to do away with that much opposition, but they were unwilling to postpone it and now it is said that there would be manifold opposition to it from various sources from city clerks, all of whom get some fee for the services performed round about election time. On the other hand, the advocates of the bill claim that it will simplify the election system and not add anything to the cost of an election in the smallest borough. The bill has been referred to the committee on elections.

RED MEN HEAR REPORTS

MIANTONOMO TRIBE LISTEN TO DELEGATES TO GREAT COUNCIL.

The most largely attended and enjoyable meeting of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., in years took place Friday. Charles McKinley, representative to the Great Council of New Jersey, made an elaborate report of the proceedings of the Council for which he received a vote of thanks. The changes in the laws governing the order were explained by Past Sachem William Newcorn, particularly the changes in the age limits for admitting members from eighteen and fifty years; the prohibition of the introduction of liquors into lodge halls and the restraining of members from entering public barrooms while wearing the regalia of the order; and the increase of benefits in the aged men's fund.

A programme of violin, banjo and guitar, piano and vocal selections was rendered by David Doerler, Harry Dreier, Harvey Wentrick, A. J. Stiglitz, A. D. Pope, C. L. Holstein and Edward Carney. Brief remarks were made by Past Sachems Holstein, Doeringer, Sodden, Osmand, Weber, Sneider and Sheridan and also by three guests of the lodge, Past Sachems Firstbrook and Humphrey, of Wetumpkah Tribe, and Past Sachem Julian, of Winnebeche Tribe, No. 24, of Flemington. A highland fling was danced by Robert Siorah, accompanied on banjo and guitar by the Dreier brothers.

LITERARY.

George Kennan is now on his way to Japan. His special articles relating to the progress of the war and to the larger aspects of the Eastern question will be published exclusively in The Outlook. Mr. Kennan's reputation as a keen observer, judicial interpreter and brilliant narrator has been attested by his books on Siberia and his work as a special correspondent in Cuba and Martinique.

There are five things to remember to help rest an over-tired brain: 1. A healthy indifference to wakefulness. 2. Concentration of the mind on simple things. 3. Relaxation of the body. 4. Gentle rhythmic breathing of fresh air. 5. Regular nourishment. If we do not lose courage, but keep on steadily night after night, with a healthy persistence in remembering and practicing these five things, we shall often find that what might have been a very long period of sleeplessness may be materially shortened and that the sleep which follows the practice of the exercises is better, sounder, and more refreshing, than the sleep that came before. In many cases a long or short period of insomnia can be absolutely prevented by just these simple means. Here is perhaps the place to say that all narcotics are, in such cases, absolutely pernicious.—Leslie's Monthly for March.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY DOING MUCH GOOD

Annual Meeting of a Women's Organization of the Crescent Ave. Church.

J. W. BAER'S SPEECH

DURING YEAR OVER $1,400 HAS BEEN RAISED BY SOCIETY.

Mrs. I. C. Pierson is Chosen President—Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon—Social Features of the Session.

Encouraging reports were presented, officers elected and an able address delivered at the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, held Friday afternoon in the chapel of the church. The attendance was large and considerable interest manifested. Mrs. I. C. Pierson, president, was in charge of the meeting. After the reading of secretary's report, which showed that much had been accomplished during the year, the treasurer presented her report. This showed that between $1,400 and $1,800 had been raised during the year for home missions. The secretary for literature also had an interesting report giving the members an idea of the large amount of reading matter distributed.

Following the reports, these officers were re elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; vice presidents, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore; treasurer, Mrs. William W. Myers; secretary, Miss Mary W. Ketcham; secretary for literature, Mrs. Henry R. Halloway; Young People's secretary, Miss Blanche Randolph.

After the business session there was an address by John Willis Baer, formerly associated with the Christian Endeavor Society, but now assistant secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the Presybterian Church. Mr. Baer is an interesting speaker and he told in a graphic manner of the extent of the work being done in home missions. He referred to the promising work in Cuba, Porto Rico and among the immigrants and he also spoke impressively of the great amount of work yet to be accomplished on the home field.

At the close of Mr. Baer's address there was a social hour and tea was served. Mrs. F. H. Martin and Mrs. Jacob Vandeventer presided at the table and they were assisted by a number of young women.

KINSMAN'S TIMELY ACTION

LIABILITY OF DISASTER ON CENTRAL ROAD AVERTED BY PLAINFIELDER.

Through the presence of mind of F. E. Kinsman, of Sherman avenue, what might have been a serious accident to a train on Newark Bay bridge was averted Thursday a. m. When Mr. Kinsman boarded the express, that leaves the North avenue station for New York at 7:55, at Grant avenue, he noticed that the brake shoe of one of the wheels on a middle car had dropped off. This produced a grating sound that was perceptible all the way from Plainfield to the Newark Bay bridge and which then, probably on account of the application of the brakes, caused so much jolting of the car as to create a general alarm among the passengers. Mr. Kinsman called the attention of the brakeman to the matter, but the latter was inclined to regard the trouble as trivial. Mr. Kinsman then reached for the signal cord and by his threat to pull it, finally induced the brakeman to stop the train. An examination after the train had been halted showed that the frame work of the shoe had dropped between the wheel and the track and lifted the wheel about an inch, in such a position that the least additional accident would have been liable to derail the car.

Mrs. Swick Dead.

Mrs. Catharine S. Swick, wife of Joseph B. Swick, died Sunday afternoon at her home, 137 Berckman street, following a long illness with pulmonary trouble. She is survived by a husband and one son by a former husband. The funeral services will be held from her residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be at Bound Brook.

Poles Gathered In.

Seven unidentified Poles were captured by the borough police in a raid on a house in upper Grove street Saturday night. Some of the prisoners tried to give their names, but the officers could make nothing of them. The batch will be arraigned tonight.

Political Ethics.

Assemblyman Swackhamer made a speech on political ethics at a Democratic rally and banquet in Garwood Saturday night.

MINSTRELS A HUGE SUCCESS

Initial Production of Hope Y. M. A.'s Third Annual Show Funnier Than Ever.

WILDLY APPLAUDED

Original Topical Song Produces Spontaneous and Deafening Outbursts of Enthusiasm—In All Parts Spectators Are Kept in Uproarious Laughter.

"If I Only Had the Proper Sort of Pull," sang George B. Cose at the Hope chapel minstrel show Tuesday, I would make Kean and Fowler eat off the same plate; make the Jersey Central trains run occasionally on time; make trouble for the boroughites who turned down a public school project to satisfy their spite; lay out a park and erect in it a statue to the man who owns the North Plainfield Review; force the P. S. C. to give a respectable trolley service; nominate "crazy" Hearst, the man "without brains," for president; and boom Swackhamer for governor introducing him at the second Lincoln all over the State from Cape May to Essex.

This was the topical song of the third annual minstrel entertainment of the Hope Young Men's Association. It was a hit, of course, and the most loudly applauded of all the numbers on the programme. The words and music were written by William N. Runyon. The air is catchy, and full of swing and vigorous movement, and the words are clever.

The show was a success from the time the entire company opened with "Susanna River" until the close of the afterpiece, a rollicking farce called "The Coming Man." In this, John Galvin burlesqued the part of Patick Hooligan, the coming man, to perfection. W. N. Runyon was J. Augustus Hawkeye, a heart broken husband, and M. D. Sweeney was his most unfortunate wife. Mr. Sweeney appeared to advantage in woman's apparel and acted the mad woman with a most alarming naturalness. As Shadow, a broken down body servant, John Cose was a whole show in himself. Two other parts, Percy, a messenger boy, and Harold, the coal heaver, were taken by B. C. Firstbrook and George B. Cose.

The first part of the programme was devoted to the songs and jokes of the minstrel troupe. The end men, William Holbert, John H. Cose and M. D. Sweney, bones, and Leonce Texier, Bertram C. Firstbrook and G. E. Cose were funny, their jokes were original and their songs well sung. This part of the programme in detail was as follows:

Sunico River, by the company; grand overture; Opening chorus, My Honey Lou, by the company: airy persiflage, Mr. Firstbrook; On the Banks of the Old Yazoo, Mr. Bertram F. Tallamy; Let Me In, That's All, Mr. Sweeney and company; Free Speech, Mr. Texier; I'm Going to Leave, Mr. Firstbrook; Remember I Love You, Mr. Muir and company; Prose and Poetry, Mr. Holbert; Take Me Back to Old Virginia, Mr. Louis V. Tallamy and company; Show Me the Way to Go Home Babe, Messrs. Sweeney and Firstbrook and company; Temporary Aberration, Mr. John H. Cose; Dean You Cry Ma Honey, Mr. Jeffery; He Was a Sailor, Mr. Texier and company; Little Foolishness, Mr. George B. Cose; Sunny Africa, Mr. John H. Cose and company; Topical Song, If I Only Had the Proper Sort of Pull, Mr. George B. Cose and company; Words, Words, Words, Mr. Sweney; Final Chorus. General Hardtack on Guard, by the company.

Judge Runyon had charge of the production, coached the performers, was musical director and presided at the piano.

In the second part of the programme, A. E. Willard entertained with his laughable "Rube" act and his inimitable musical stunts. A clog dance, "Essence of Old Virginny," was performed by William Holbert, John Cose, George Cose, Leonce Texier, B. C. Firstbrook and M. D. Sweney, and made a merry hit. Elmer D. Cutting sang a couple of illustrated songs that furnished pathos, and John and James Galvin presented one of the best features on the list, a special act of their own, which certainly was a winner. They are one of the best fun-making teams in the business.

PARENTS VIEW WORK OF BOROUGH PUPILS

Splendid Exhibition of Samples in Wood-work, Drawing and Sewing Done at School.

IN MANUAL TRAINING

STEADY STREAM OF VISITORS ALL AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

The Instructors Explain Courses in Manual Work—Some of Those Whose Achievements Are Worthy of Mention—Artistic Basketry.

Some idea of the character of the training received by the pupils of the borough schools in the annual training department was obtained by mothers and friends of the young people at an exhibition held in the main room of the Somerset street building Tuesday afternoon and evening. Complete assortments of work from the wood-work, drawing and sewing classes were shown, from 1 o'clock until 9. The exhibit was largely attended by visitors who evinced a great deal of interest in the showing.

R. H. Sander, instructor in wood-work; Miss Bessie Taylor, the sewing teacher; Miss Laura M. Suydenham, the drawing instructor; and Superintendent H. J. Wightman were in charge of the exhibit, explaining the various bits of work shown.

Most of the woodwork, which formed he center of the exhibit, was placed on a long table. Instructor Sander said that the best work of the High School pupils had been given away for Christmas gifts, but a surprising variety of elaborate woodwork designs was seen. Among the things shown was a carved chair, tables, flower stands, gloveboxes, mineral cabinets, medicine cabinets, mirror frames, picture frames, plaques, towel racks, envelope boxes, whisk broom holders, pen trays, letter boxes, comb cases, bead loom, checker board, magazine rack, book cases, picture easels and a complete magazine rack, and other interesting things.

On a separate table was shown specimens of the work of the fifth and sixth grades, original designs in thin wood, including clock shelves and paper knives. Fifty patterns were shown by the fifth grade, and 30 different patterns and exercises from the sixth grade, showing the need of accuracy in ruler and care in the use of tools. Original exercises and designs, including such things as footstools and book racks, were shown by the seventh grade.

Chief among the pieces shown in the woodwork was a carved chair of standard size, the work of William Cubberley. There are two dozen girls in the woodwork department, and some of the notable bits on exhibition was done by them. One in particular, a carved panel of striking design and execution, was shown by Ethel Quipp. Other striking bits of work in wood-carving were by Clarence Steiner, Frank Webster, William Nischwitz, George Howe, Leslie Powlison, Harold Hamilton, Arthur Dunning, Randolph Chandler, Ernest Powlison, Charles Doughty, William Burtis. All the work was surprisingly good, both as to design and execution.

Owing to the recent illness of Miss Seydenham, the drawing exhibit was not wholly complete, but some striking bits of original color work was shown, particularly a framed water color of still life by Ethel Quipp. For the most part, the drawing work was that of the first stage.

In the sewing exhibit there was an interesting display of work representing the fifth and sixth years, the best of which was a complete apron, cap and cuffs for use in cooking department.

Basketry work of the High School and grammar grades were shown, with waste baskets, fruit and flower trays, napkin rings, candy and work baskets. Artistic effects in raffia reed and splints, and Indian sewn work, attracted a lot of attention. Laurence Milne, Mary Wyckoff, Marion Overton and Mary Neal were among those whose work drew frequent admiring comment.

Beginners' and advanced students' work in mechanical drawing, which included a complete set of isometric drawings, was also shown.

Superintendent Wightman is an enthusiastic supporter of the manual training idea, and devotes a great deal of thought to the department under his charge. Its work was particularly commented on, with high favor, in the recent report of the State Board of Education.

SCOTCH PLAINS' HARMONIOUS MEETING

First Annual Session Since Township and Borough Were Merged Into One District.

BOARD'S COMPOSITION

CITIZENS WELL SATISFIED WITH CONDUCT OF THE SCHOOLS.

Appropriation for Year Fixed at $40.25—Ira Gage Chosen President and Thomas J. Nicholl District Clerk After Public Meeting.

The first annual school meeting held since the new school law has been passed, which consolidated the township and borough into one school district, was held in the assembly room of the school Tuesday. But little interest was manifested in the meeting by the taxpayers, this signifying that the voters are satisfied with the work of their Board of Education and with the high standing the school has attained.

The yearly report, read by District Clerk T. J. Nicholl, shows that the past year has been one of the best in the history of the school, both financially, in point of attendance and from the interested manifested by the pupils in their work. Much of the latter praise is due to Professor Howard D. White and his able corps of assistants. The library connected with the school is of the best and the librarian's report shows that it is well patronized by the pupils.

At the close of the reports the election of trustees and voting on the appropriation was taken up. The Board under the new law consists of nine members. The terms of all but two of these expiring (the hold-overs being T. J. Nicholl and Dr. F. W. Westcott), the seven retiring members being as follows: One year, Charles Haberle, I. H. L. Todd, S. G. Horsen; two years, T. A. Haskard; three years, J. E. Goodman, L. G. Walker, president, A. D. Beekon. All were re-elected.

The appropriation asked met with the approval of the voters, the amount being the same as last year, $4,025. Immediately at the close of the meeting the Board organized Ira Gage Walker was re-elected president and Thomas J. Nicholl district clerk.

MRS. D. J. YERKES PRESIDENT

ANNUAL MEETING OF FIRST BAPTIST WOMEN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Election of officers and interesting reports from the field occupied the attention of the members of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon, when the annual meeting was held. There was an unusually large attendance of members and friends.

An interesting letter was read from Miss McClain, a missionary among the Hopi tribe of Indians in Arizona. This tribe is known as one of the most peaceful and the missionary's description of her work among these Indians was encouraging. Mrs. D. J. Yerkes also read a letter telling of the work among the Orow tribe of Indians. This showed that much progress is being made in the cause of religion.

Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Hannah Flanders and Miss Anna Boice were appointed a committee to arrange for the anniversary meeting to be held soon. It is hoped that the committee will be able to secure Miss Melthy, of Ellis Island, to make an address at the meeting. The date will not be fixed until it is learned when Miss Melthy can be present.

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. David J. Yerkes; vice presidents, Mrs. John D. Runyon, Mrs. Frank Bigiow, Mrs. John H. French, Mrs. S. T. Wilson; secretary, Mrs. W. Kempton Browning; treasurer, Mrs. George H. Batchelor; collectors, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. John H. French, Mrs. John D. Runyon and Mrs. S. B. Joseph. The only change in the officers is that of secretary, Miss Laura J. Runyon feeling obliged to resign. Mrs. Browning was chosen in her place.

ISAAC LEDERER SELLS HIS BUSINESS

Old Established and Reliable House Disposed of by Him After Years of Activity.

LEVY BROS. PURCHASE

SKETCH OF MR. LEDERER AND THE LUCRATIVE BUSINESS CONDUCTED.

The Retiring Owner Will Travel in Europe and May Engage in Business Again—Will Continue As a Resident in Plainfield.

After a successful business career of thirty-five years in this city, Isaac Lederer, the dry goods merchant, today sold his business on West Front street, opposite Somerset, to Levy Brothers, of Freehold. The purchasers have, during the past ten years, conducted a general department store at Freehold, where they have established a successful business. The firm is associated with other stores in Red Bank and Perth Amboy and they intend to conduct the Plainfield store on the same high scale as the other ones. Possession will be taken April 1.

Mr. Lederer has been identified with the business interests of this city for thirty-five years. He started in the store on Somerset street now occupied by J. F. Humble and from there moved to the store on West Front street where John Wirth is located. For a time he was a partner with the late David Boehm and at one time he conducted a store at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, the property owned by J. A. Blats. By adhering strictly to principles of business integrity he has enjoyed a large and increasing patronage.

Mr. Lederer now intends to take a trip to Europe this summer, accompanied by his wife. Later on he may engage in the sale of imported articles. Albert Lederer, his son, who has been associated with him in business, will leave the dry goods trade and will accept an exceptional opportunity in the real estate business in Brooklyn. He will continue his residence in this city.

ANOTHER FIREMEN BILL

ASSEMBLY SWACKHAMER MAKING SECOND ATTEMPT TO BLOCK SMALLEY.

Another bill designed to upset the plans of Mayor Smalley with regard to the borough fire department was introduced in the Assembly yesterday by Assemblyman Swackhamer.

It provides that whenever a petition signed by 20 per cent. of the voters of a borough shall ask for a vote on the question, an election to decide whether the fire department system shall be changed must be ordered by the council. The bill operates whether the existing department is on a paid basis or volunteer.

Assemblyman Swackhamer said this morning that the believed the bill would pass. Members of the other party, he said, had assured him that they thought the measure a fair and a wise one.

Should the act pass, there is no doubt that the necessary petition would be presented to the North Plainfield Council without loss of time.

WARREN TOWNSHIP MEETING

FREEHOLDER CODINGTON'S TICKET ELECTED AT SCHOOL MEETING.

Freeholder Joel Codington's ticket won out easily yesterday afternoon at the annual school meeting of Warren township, held in Fairview Hall, Mt. Bethel. There was an opposition ticket led by the former district clerk, Robert Zergiebel, but it failed to make its appearance at the meeting, and the regular ticket went through without any trouble. There was a large attendance of voters. Politically the School Board stands five Republicans and four Democrats.

Charles Bolomy and Theodore S. Quick were elected for two years and Joseph Zeglio, Wm. G. Cooper and Fred Wiegand for three years. After the election the School Board effected this organization: President, Horace Codington; vice president, W. Howard Toms; district clerk, John C. Cooper. The appropriation was fixed at $650.

POLITICS LEADS TO A BUSINESS HITCH

Mayor Smalley Tenders His Resignation as a Director of First National Bank.

CLERKS DISPLEASED HIM

HE THINKS THEY WORKED AGAINST HIM AT ELECTION.

Tells the Directors He Does Not Desire to Remain Where Harmony is Absent—The Board Urges Him To Stay.

As a result of the bitterness of the political conflict in North Plainfield Mayor Smalley has resigned from the directorate of the First National Bank.

It is said upon the best authority that the Mayor was angered by the supposed affiliation of two of the bank clerks with the Citizens' Union, and immediately after the election he determined to sever all connection with the institution. This was confirmed at the bank this morning.

Mayor Smalley attended a meeting of the directors yesterday morning to say something in connection with his resignation. He explained that he felt out of place in an institution where everyone was not in harmony with his ideas, and did not desire to remain where men who could work with him chose to do the other thing.

All the other members of the board expressed regret over the prospect of his withdrawal from the body, and he was urged to reconsider his action. The Mayor's attitude appeared to undergo a change, and the board is inclined to believe that the resignation will be withdrawn. Action upon it was deferred by the board.

CHURCH SOCIETY'S OFFICERS

YOUNG LADIES' ORGANIZATION OF FIRST BAPTIST HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

Encouraging reports and the election of officers comprised the principal business at the annual meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, held yesterday afternoon. The meeting was postponed from last week, the regular date, owing to the lack of a quorum.

Miss Florence Serrell, treasurer, gave a partially complete statement of the society's finances, explaining that there is yet some money to be collected. The present balance in the treasury is $134, a considerable increase over last year. It was announced that the net proceeds from the recent supper were $66.34. Of the sum total received during the year two-thirds is given to foreign missions and one-third to home missions.

The reports of the secretary, Miss Carro Bird, was full of interest, showing that the society has been very active during the past year and has accomplished much.

These officers were elected: President, Miss Ada Fountain first vice president, Mrs. Frank Jones; second vice president, Miss Hattie French; treasurer, Miss Florence Serrell; secretary, Miss Carro Bird; corresponding secretary, Miss Helen Robins; collector, Mrs. Robert W. Barnes.

After the election some time was spent in an informal discussion of plans for the coming year.

DUNELLEN'S SCHOOL MEETING

APPROPRIATION PASSED AND MEMBERS OF SCHOOL BOARD ELECTED.

At the annual Dunellen school meeting last night, T. J. Todd, Lawis Schneider and A. F. Todd, Jr., were chosen members of the school committee for three years and M. B. Dayton for two years. Mr. Dayton and A. F. Todd, Jr., received 66 votes T. J. Todd 65, Mr. Schneider 44, and 18 were scattering. George W. Day was nominated chairman and Theodore W. Day secretary. After some discussion as to the amount of money asked for by the Board, 58 votes were cast as follows: For current school expenses, $2,200, 53 votes; for repairs, $500, 54 votes for text books, $200, 55 votes. On motion of J. Y. Wilson, the Board was given a vote of thanks.

Dr. Cooley Takes Oath.

Dr. J. H. Cooley, the new borough assessor, took his oath of office on Monday afternoon. The oath was administered by Master-in-Chancery G. W. V. Moy.

FACTS AND FIGURES CONCERNING SCHOOLS

Interesting Items Gleaned From Report Presented by Mr. Joy at School Meeting.

WONDERFUL GROWTH

PRESENT ENROLLMENT OF PUPILS IN BOROUGH EXACTLY 1,165.

Funded Debt Now Amounts to $37,500—Last of Outstanding Bonds to be Paid in 1914—As to the Special School Tax.

There are a number of interesting facts and figures in the report presented to the borough voters Tuesday by President Joy of the School Board. It sheds a clear light on the condition of he borough schools system.

Since 1902 the enrollment has increased by 94, making the present total 1,165 pupils. There are 130 in the kindergarten, 540 in the primary department, 340 in the grammar department, and 155 in the High School. While the exact figures on this matter have not yet been compiled, it is apparent that the average attendance this year will be lower than that of last year. President Joy says the reluctance of parents to send their children to overcrowded rooms is responsible for this to a great extent. The rigorous weather of the winter is also supposed to have contributed to the falling off.

Through a combination of circumstances, chiefly the careful and constant supervision of the medical examiner, the schools have been free from epidemics all the year.

The property of the school district has remained the same as last year. Bonds to the amount of $3,500 were retired on July 1, 1903, leaving the funded debt $37,500. The last of the outstanding bonds will be paid for in 1914, leaving the Somerset street and Watchung avenue properties free and clear.

Last March the School Board succeeded in getting the special school tax in full from the borough for the first time. Until then the borough had paid over the tax as it was collected, and at the end of the year there was always part of the appropriation due. The Board convinced the Council that the law meant the body to pay the appropriation in full, whether collected by the borough or not, and the resulting settlement eased the financial condition of the Board very materially.

In the past ten years the school enrollment has increased 5 per cent., which represents 400 pupils in numbers. The appropriations asked for from the people reached high water mark two years ago, when $18,000 was asked for. Despite the steady continuance of growth, the Board has kept the appropriations within that figure. Since then the number of pupils has increased by 100. The school text book library includes 8,000 volumes.

It is estimated that the borough has accumulated enough educational machinery to last for ten years. Although the State apportionment will not be made until April, it is almost certain that the amount to be allowed the borough from that source will be $42,000. The appropriation asked for this year for current expenses is only greater by $260 than that of last year.

President Joy makes complimentary reference to the work of the ladies' auxiliary committee of the Manual Training Department. The committees' suggestions and hints have been found very valuable. The committee is composed of Mrs. C. W. McCutcheo, Mrs. J.O. McKelvey and Mrs. Samuel Townsend.

POLICE PUZZLED.

Say Evidence of Poison in Crudup Cake is Slight.

By questioning all the bakers in the city the police have discovered that the cake sent to Rev. E. J. Crudup was not bought in Plainfield. They claim that the evidences of poison in the cake were slight, though agreeing with Dr. A. W. Love that it contained a small amount of poison similar to rough-on-rats.

Concert at Casino.

The Dannreuther String Quartette, of New York, assisted by Miss Jeanne Rogers May, piano, will give a concert at the Casino on Thursday evening, March 17 at 8:15. Tickets may be obtained at Estil's stationery shop and at Randolph's and Dudley Miller's pharmacies. Admission, one dollar.

REPUBLICANS AGAIN ROUTED

Citizens' Party Wins in Contest for Members of Board at Borough School Meeting.

AN EXCITING SCENE

Mayor Smalley's Speech Cut Short by the Loud Jeers of His Political Enemies — His Charges Against Dr. Cooley Caused the Disturbance.

Relentlessly following the advantages gained last Tuesday, the Citizens' Union delivered another blow to the administration at the borough school election Tuesday. The regular Republicans met their opponents manely in battle, but Mayor Smalley's forces were routed, horse, foot and dragoons.

The two tickets in the field were made up as follows: Citizens' Union, James R., Joy, Dr. J. H. Cooley, Former Mayor H. E. Needham; Republicans, James R. Joy, H. R. Munger, Ernest A. Lowe. Mr. Joy appeared on both tickets, because the Citizens recognized his ability and valuable services, and desired to pay tribute to them.

Of the 445 votes cast Dr. Cooley received 263, and Mr. Needham 250. Mr. Joy received 436 votes. Mr. Munger received 197 votes, and 189 were cast for Mr. Lowe.

It was a highly exciting affair all the way through, and at one time it threatened to become tempestuous. All the leaders on both sides were present to marshal their forces, the opposing ranks being led by Mayor Smalley and Ex-Mayor W. D. Honeyman. Both sides had some difficulty in getting out all the voters they desired, but the vote cast was the largest ever polled at a North Plainfield school election.

When the meeting opened at 8 o'clock, the big room of the Somerset Street schoolhouse, where the vote was taken, was jammed to the limit of its capacity. Practicaly every one of the ex-Volunteer department was there, talking and working against the Mayor at every opportunity. And pretty nearly the whole crowd stayed throughout the evening until the count was completed.

The meeting organized with the election of George Rogers as chairman. Herbert Case was made secretary and T. S. Armstrong, John Steiner, S. B. Joseph and William Rowley tellers. After President Joy had read his annual report on the condition of the schools, the meeting was thrown open to the voers.

From somewhere in the crowd Recorder Dond fired a question at the board that started a fierce little tempest. Reviving the charge made during the recent campaign, the Recorder asked if Dr. Cooley had not offered a lot belonging to him for a school site to the board. In an instant the air was filled with cat-calls, hoots and jeers from the antis. President Joy's reply, to the effect that no lot known to be the property of Dr. Cooley had been offered the board, was hardly audible above the hubbub.

When the noise had died down somewhat Mayor Smalley arose to speak and called the howls out again in redoubled volume.

In opening he Mayor made a somewhat significant statement. "It is time to close the division between the people of the borough," he said, "and I, for one, am ready to join in getting together, and have been."

From there he branched to a reiteration of the charge against Dr. Cooley. "If Dr. Cooley denies it," he said, "I am able to prove it."

At that point the anti host let itself loose in a chorus of howls and jeers that prevented a continuance of the Mayor's speech. E. A. Overton sprang to his feet to deny the charge against Dr. Cooley, but he could not be heard above the noise. It was several minutes before the crowd was quieted, but there was no more excitement of that nature. None of the leaders made any effort to speak, and the balance of the meeting passed off peacefully. The antis held themselves until the result of the vote was announced, when they jarred the building with a burst of cheering.

The appropriations—$158.40 for current expenses, $1,970 for manual training—were carried by what was practically a unanimous vote. About 190 voters forgot to ballot on the appro-

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

How the Metropolis Has Taken to Various Antiquities.

THREE WASHINGTON RELICS

The Jamel Mansion to Be Preserved —Auction Sales of Art Treasures and the People Who Buy Them.

New York.—To the country at large George Francis Train was almost a forgotten name. Yet the old philosopher of the Mills hotel had been in his day philanthropist, merchant prince, promoter, ship owner, real estate capitalist. He had introduced tram cars into England. In France he had faced and cowed the communists.

Train and the Children.

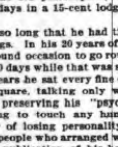
Train was eccentric and grew more so as his years advanced. Yet Dr. Spitzka, who examined his brain after death, says that it was not only of unusual size, but that its head not shrunken at all, indicating that its owner had retained his mental power unimpaired. The size of Train's brain was twenty-sixth in a list of men of unsual mental power. Tourgenieff was first on that list, Ben Butler Sixth, Daniel Webster, with his Imperial presence and his apparently great dome of thought, Webster, whom Sydney Smith named "a steam engine in breeches," had fewer ounces of brain matter than the old philosopher, who lived out his days in a 15-cent lodging hotel.

Train lived so long that he had time for many things. In his 20 years of retirement he found occasion to go round the world in 80 days while that was still a feat. For years he sat every fine day in Madison square, talking only with children, thus preserving his "psychic force," refusing to touch any human being for fear of losing personality.

I know the people who arranged with Train for the publication of his book. Sitting in his little cell-like room at the Mills hotel, he dictated the entire volume in a few sessions to a perspiring stenographer. Never did he pause for a name, a date. At the close of a week Train was fresh, the stenographer in a collapse, the book on paper in pothooks. Nothing more was needed.

The Jumel Mansion.

Whether the Colonial Dames or the Daughters of the Revolution win in their fight for its possession, the Jumel house is to be a permanent exhibit. With the old Frances tavern, in whose long, low dining-room Washington bade farewell to his officers of the revolution, and which is now to be put in its ancient form as shown in contemporary engravings, the Jumel house will be one of our three principal Washington relics of colonial architecture. Hamilton Grange, whence Alexander Hamilton went forth to cross the Hudson to Weehawken, there to lose his life to Burr in a duel, is no longer recognizable. Up to a few years ago the 13 trees Hamilton set out for the 13 states, according to the legend, were still standing within an iron fence. They were all living. Two or three were big and flourishing. One, Little Rhody, perhaps, had never grown much. The third and perhaps the finest reminder of old days is the Phillipse mansion, where Washington vainly courted Mary Phillipse. This is now the Yonkers City hall, beautifully preserved; it is proposed to make it a state charge to preserve it.



Disturbing the Ghosts.

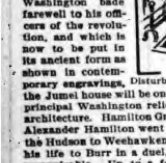
The Jumel house will be one of our three principal Washington relics of colonial architecture. Hamilton Grange, whence Alexander Hamilton went forth to cross the Hudson to Weehawken, there to lose his life to Burr in a duel, is no longer recognizable. Up to a few years ago the 13 trees Hamilton set out for the 13 states, according to the legend, were still standing within an iron fence. They were all living. Two or three were big and flourishing. One, Little Rhody, perhaps, had never grown much. The third and perhaps the finest reminder of old days is the Phillipse mansion, where Washington vainly courted Mary Phillipse. This is now the Yonkers City hall, beautifully preserved; it is proposed to make it a state charge to preserve it.

The Jumel house was before the revolution that of Col. Roger Morris, Washington's successful rival for Mary Phillipse's favor. To this mansion he intended to bring the lady, but when the war broke out Morris sided with the tories, and took his bride to England. In the house he left Washington made his "headquarters" until driven from the city by the British.

The Tory Morris' property was confiscated by the nation. The British government compensated Morris in part, and the "original" John Jacob Astor bought up the claims of the Morris heirs. He sold the house and home acres to Jumel, a Frenchman, whose widow long survived him. In her name it is still owned Aaron Burr. So that with this old house on the heights are associated the names of many men and women prominent in American history.

The Picture Auctions.

About this time the old New Yorker, according to his almanac of experience, looks out for picture auctions. The attributions of galleries, the sales of the effects of artists who have died or been unfortunate are usually reserved for mid-winter and early spring. Death more than misfortune favors high prices. The remaining pictures of the late J. Wells Champney were recently sold in this manner, bringing prices considerably above what they would have commanded under other circumstances. Prices given in the exhibition catalogues are considerably higher than the market price as fixed by the auction sales. It is assumed that anyone who buys a picture in an artist's studio or at an exhibition is in his modest way a patron of the arts, and that he can afford to pay for art's support. Hence an artist will avoid the "studio sale" as long as he can, or at best will intrust to the block no more examples of his work than are absolutely necessary to buy bread and butter, for fear of depressing his prices.



The Auctioneer.

The dispersal of galleries is a different matter. It is instructive to see how quickly the fashions in pictures change. Enter an auction room where are displayed the "art treasures" of a man who has outlived his greatest collecting activities, and a glance along the walls will reveal the smudgy look of the pictures that were fashionable 25 years ago. Modern impressionism has changed the very atmosphere of the picture galleries. Light has followed darkness.

Paintings—"straight oil" work—are little sought except in the case of acknowledged masters. About the most popular little exhibition I have seen this winter was of a small group of Whistler etchings. The death of the artist has furnished the needed note. The supply was now definitely limited. It is curious to see how this limitation affects prices. In his later years Whistler adopted a policy of printing a small number of etchings from each plate and destroying it. The merest bits treated in this manner are now priced at $300 and $400 because of each perhaps only 20 or 35 copies were made. The artist's earlier work, printed in larger editions and far more interesting to artists as illustrating the earlier steps of a great master of design and stroke can in a few cases be had under $100.

Auction Room Flotsam.

The auction season sees every year ten times as much value in miscellaneous articles as in pictures disposed of. Rugs, antique furniture, Chinese and Japanese ceramics, embroideries and the like interest an amazing number of people. I have seen stern old Gen. Sickles stumping along on what Getting Left Behind, taking the keenest interest in a Sheraton cabinet. Charles A. Dana, who was as big in physique as in mind, was an enthusiast. He owned a "peachblow vase" no less perfect and valuable than the famous one that at the Morgan sale brought $10,000—something like $2,000 for each inch of its height. R. W. DeForest, the retiring tenement house commissioner, is a collector of Japanese bronzes.

The Furniture Sale.

With women there has been a great increase of recent interest in colonial furniture, bedspreads, "samplers" and other homely antiquities. It is a taste nurtured by the many books which deal with colonial life and domestic ways. The old towns of Connecticut, New Jersey and Long Island are a storehouse of such treasures. In few places in the world has time stood still without as it has done in some of the quiet homesteads upon the eastern end of Long Island. The Admiral Nicol Ludlow estate near Oakdale, which was recently sold after being 200 years in one family, was an instance. When William K. Vanderbilt with ruthless hand tore down a dozen fine old farm houses to make way for his suburban estate the auctions of old furniture which resulted were a remarkable revelation of unsuspected riches.

A Game Club in the Suburbs.

This passion for great landed estates near the city, where they must inevitably interfere with its growth, is having another unfortunate illustration in the formation of Mr. Rockefeller's Tarrytown Gun club. Headed by the two Rockefellers, a number of the very wealthy men of Tarrytown have joined to purchase rifles and hire keepers who will make it hot for poachers and trespassers. The region to be thus protected lies 30 miles as the crow flies from the Battery and only 12 miles from the city line. It overlooks the thriving village of Tarrytown. Its forests are so completely hemmed in by big estates which cut off improvements, defy trolley cars and monopolize water courses that a committee of his fellow townsmen petitioned Mr. Rockefeller very meekly a few months ago to let the village have water, the first necessity of life, after air, from his land. The outcome of that petition is yet uncertain.

The American Gamekeeper.

William Rockefeller has had some experience with game keepers and poachers in the Adirondacks, where at the time of the Dexter murder he was threatened by wandering fishermen, and where when the forest fires were devastating his land he could hire no one of the neighbors to fight them. It remains to be seen how the experiment of hiring men to guard suburban lands from simple trespass will work.

OWEN LANGDON.

No Doubt About It.

"Uncle," said the high school young man, "is 'politics' singular or plural?"

"Bonny," was the reply, "in de path of de country whah I come f'um dey's sing'lar, mighty sing'lar."—Washington Star.

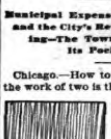
FINANCIAL TROUBLES

Chicago Has an Abundance of Them to Deal With.

SERIOUS CONDITIONS FOR 1904

Municipal Expenses Are Increasing and the City's Revenue Is Decreasing—The Town Too Big for Its Pocketbook.

Chicago.—How to make one dollar do the work of two is the problem that confronts the officials of Chicago this year. The various departments have asked for appropriations totaling $18,000,000. The revenue of the city for the year will amount to but a little more than $9,000,000.



Mayor Carter H. Harrison.

For years the city has scrimped and saved in a vain effort to make both ends meet. The charter of the city does not permit more than a very limited indebtedness. There is no way of bonding the city so that future generations will have to pay for present needs, though it is proposed to present to the voters of the state at the next election for members of the state legislature a new charter for the city which will permit a municipal indebtedness not to exceed five per cent. of the full value of all the property within the city limits. Without some such relief the city is on the high road to the bow-wows.

Dirty streets, inadequate fire and police protection, a complicated and expensive form of government is some of the ills from which the city is suffering, and for which there appears to be no immediate remedy. All of these things existed last year when the city had $11,500,000 for corporate purposes, and ended the year about $1,000,000 in debt besides—a debt of unpaid bills.

The difference between last year and this is just about 20 per cent. But that 20 per cent. must be saved principally by a reduction in the number of employes in such departments as the police, the fire, the street cleaning, etc., rather than in the reduction of official salaries, which are fixed by law. The $105,000 paid the aldermen as salaries, the $10,000 paid the mayor, and all the other official salaries will be paid as usual.

Too Much Territory.

Chicago's greatest difficulty is its size. The town is too large in area for the value of its assessable property. The city limits embrace 240 square acres, or 191 square miles of territory. On the property within this area the equalized valuation is $411,424,280. The valuation on half that territory in New York city proper is double that amount, and the rate of taxes is considerably higher.

Walking a Rural Police Beat.

Chicago's 122,240 square acres would make a good sized Texas ranch, and within it may be found a number of fair sized Illinois farms.

Western avenue is the longest street in the city. It extends for 22 miles north and south within the corporate limits, and both ends of it are but a country road running through productive corn fields and extensive garden patches. Yet these farms and gardens are a part of Chicago and entitled to police protection.

Just what proportion of the $2,863,000 expended by the police department last year was devoted to the giving of police protection to these farms is hard to say, but it was no inconsiderable amount. Of the 2,863 policemen in the city a goodly number are engaged in walking beats in the rural districts. A standing punishment for slovenliness on the part of the patrolman is assignment to one of these rural beats where he will find but little company other than the farm animals or the dairy maids. The crossing policeman of the business district who fails to keep his trousers pressed and his shoes polished suffers banishment for a time to the farming districts, where he must wade through the mud of unpaved streets and break paths through the snow drifts of winter.

Paved and Unpaved Streets.

That portion of Chicago that is as densely populated as large cities are generally supposed to be is fairly well cared for in the way of paved streets and alleys. It is the abutting property owners who must pay the bills for these improvements, and so the work progresses as the population grows.

Going to a Farmhouse Fire.

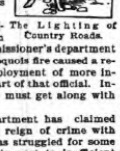
Some idea of what the farm section of Chicago amounts to may thus be had from the statement that of the 4,172 miles of streets and alleys in the city, only 1,373 are paved, the remaining 2,800 being dirt roads, not even up to the general country standard. On the south, especially, these dirt roads wind through native forests that have as yet hardly resounded with the ring of the woodman's ax, save where the early homesteader made his clearing. In these forests the enterprising subdivider has platted town lots and erected wooden dwellings for sale or rent. A scattering population lives in these, and like the farmers of the city, are entitled to the luxuries of city government.

Fire protection is one the things these scattering settlements and the farmers are supposed to have, and they get as good as the city can give. A proportionate number of the 1,200 fire alarm boxes of the city are scattered through these districts, and there is scarcely a day passes but one or more of the 125 fire engines are sent plowing through the mud or snow to reach an isolated farmhouse fire.

The city employes in its fire department 1,175 men, at a cost of $1,699,000 annually. The underwriters of the city complain bitterly of a lack of fire protection, and to give adequate protection Chief Musham asks for $500,000 more than he now has to spend. Instead of this increase, however, he must manage to get along with more than $300,000 less, and if he is to accomplish this it may be expected that more farm houses will burn in 1904 than were destroyed by fire in 1903, and the citizens will have the farms to shift for themselves and revert to the bucket brigades of the olden days.

A City of Hustlers.

But, though hampered by inefficient laws, a charter that is more applicable to a village than to a city of 2,000,000 people, and burdened with a vast, and partly sparsely populated territory, Chicago is making the most of every advantage, laughs at its hardships, does the best that it can under adverse circumstances and hustles to better them.



The Lighting of Country Roads.

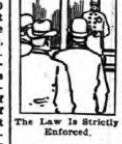
The severe criticism upon the building commissioner's department because of the Iroquois fire caused a request for the employment of more inspectors on the part of that official. Instead of more he must get along with less.

The police department has claimed that much of the reign of crime with which the city has struggled for some months was due in part to inefficient lighting, and that dependence of the city upon lamps and lanterns was a long line of lights shedding their rays on a farm yard, a wheat or corn field, or a garden patch. The gasoline lamps are strung along country roads over which the night traveler is an exception rather than the rule, but the roads are outside the corporate limits. It is an evidence that the city is growing in territory faster than she is growing in assessable wealth.

That the dirty streets will have to be born with is evidenced from the fact that the $1,282,000 which failed to keep them clean last year has this year dwindled to about an even $1,000,000.

Enforcing the Law.

The agitation for a strict enforcement of law which followed the Iroquois fire is bearing results. One law which it seemed impossible to enforce was the midnight closing of the saloons of the city. For a time it looked very much as though the saloon element was predominant, and the lawmakers opposed to their doors being open all night helpless, but they close now sharply at the stroke of 12.



The Law Is Strictly Enforced.

The city has more than 7,000 saloons, and it is safe to say that of this number there is less than one dozen that can be found open after the stroke of 12. Whether this is but one of the city's periodical virtuous spells, or whether it will last is yet to be seen. Efforts have been made to accomplish the same results before, but there has always been determined violators who seemed to have sufficient pull to keep the law in force with the police authorities, and permit them to run as they pleased.

The present crusade has driven from the city a number of the noted saloon characters of the levee districts. "Mushmouth" Johnson, a colored tough, is typical of these. After a fight extending over several months his license was revoked and he was forced out of business and out of the city. Another persistent violator was a saloon and restaurant located near Thirty-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue on the South side. It not only kept its doors open all night, but it was filled with private drinking rooms for months after they had been placed under the ban. An influential police officer was interested in the place, and it was in his own district, but after it had been the scene of several stirring scandals its "pull" failed to work, and its license was revoked. It is now open again, but minus the private rooms, and its doors close at midnight.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Timely and Interesting Gossip from the National Capitol.

INTEREST IN EASTERN WAR

The Hero of Chemulpo Is a Graduate of Annapolis—The Tantalus Club to Be Perpetuated — Japan Copies American Policy.

Washington.—Admiral Uriu, whose splendid victory at Chemulpo has given him a place with Dewey and Sampson among the great naval commanders of this generation, is not unknown in Washington. Like Dewey and Sampson he is a graduate of the United States naval academy at Annapolis, where he completed his course in 1881. He served there for four years and then went to the British military school at Greenwich, so that his great achievement may properly be attributed in some degree, at any rate, to his Anglo-Saxon training. His wife, who is a Japanese, is a Vassar graduate.

Admiral Uriu.

There are several naval officers in Washington who have been through the academy and who have run up against him on occasions since that time. A classmate of his was Joseph H. Leonard, naval constructor in the United States navy. He says that three Japanese boys entered the academy in 1877 and were graduated in 1881. They were Tasuka Serata, Sotokichi Uriu and Yenosi Inouye. All of them have made fine records in the Japanese navy, Serata died an admiral just a year ago. Both he and Uriu distinguished themselves in the war between Japan and China. At the academy they were very religious; both of them were members of the Young Men's Christian association.

The Japanese officers were lucky enough to receive very rapid advancement when they got home and some of them were rear admirals while their American classmates were still drudging along with the lower bars of lieutenants. This made it a little bit embarrassing for the American naval officers who met their old Japanese friends while touring on the Asiatic station, but they indulged freely in Saku and champagne called each other by their old academy nicknames and lived over the old days together. Uriu was the most dignified of the lot.

Follow America's Lead.

Secretary Moody is the happiest man in Washington just at present. He is rejoiced that the Japanese navy should have won so signal a victory at the very beginning of the war with Russia. This is not because of any especial sympathy for Japan, although feeling among all public men in Washington is exceedingly friendly to the island empire, but solely on professional grounds. Japan for the last few years has been pursuing a naval policy exactly in accordance with that which Secretary Moody has insisted should be pursued by the United States. The Japanese navy has spent money in maneuvers, has used up powder and has worked its officers to the limit of endurance. The result was shown at Chemulpo.

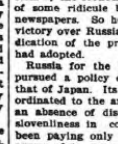
Secretary Moody.

Now that is exactly what Secretary Moody has been doing with the American navy at the risk of severe criticism by the economists in congress and of some ridicule by the opposition newspapers. So he regards Japan's victory over Russia as a complete vindication of the programme which he had adopted.

Russia for the last few years has pursued a policy directly contrary to that of Japan. Its navy has been subordinated to the army, there has been an absence of discipline and general slovenliness in control. Russia has been paying only half as much for armor plate as we have been paying and the result is shown in the celerity with which its battleships yielded to the Japanese attack. Altogether the situation is one which is especially gratifying to the men who have the destinies of our navy in their keeping.

The Tantalus Club.

The Tantalus club is to be given a new lease of life. Sam Powers, its founder and president, does not intend that the organization in which he has taken such pride shall go out of existence when he leaves congress, as he has announced in advance that he will not be a candidate for reelection and that he is going home to Boston to make money while the spirit is yet strong within him. It has been a costly luxury for Powers to be a member of the house. His professional income is three or four times as great as his salary as a member of congress, and while he has been in Washington he has spent not only his $5,000 salary, but a goodly proportion of the money he had saved while practicing law. But even though Powers abandons Washington, his memory will still linger. To have been the founder of the Tantalus club is in itself a distinction which raises Powers far above the level of the ordinary member of the house.



Congressman Powers.

At home in Boston Powers had regarded himself as something of a man. He was popular, prosperous and was supposed to have a political future. When he was lucky enough to be elected to congress, he had glowing ideas of what he would accomplish in Washington, but he had been here only a week or two before he discovered that there is nothing of less consequence in the national capitol than a new member of the house of representatives. He talked around a little among the new men and found that many of them had come to a similar conclusion. Then he had an inspiration. He organized all the new members on the republican side into a club. The idea was to have a dinner every little while at which the youngsters who were unable to get recognition at the capitol could throw themselves a little and raise themselves out of the dull level of mediocrity.

That was the origin of the Tantalus club. Powers was made president by unanimous consent, for there has never been anything like the formality of an election. It goes without saying that the dinners of the Tantalus club were a tremendous success.

Now, in order to perpetuate it, Powers has maneuvered so that all the republican members of the house new to the present congress shall be eligible to membership. They have all filed applications and there will be a dinner pretty soon at which all of them will be present and duly initiated. Thus the club will be in a position to perpetuate itself through succeeding congresses.

Question of Precedence.

The society experts who have the social doings of the white house in their charge have at last come to an understanding on the burning question of precedence. Mr. Adee, the assistant secretary of state who has devoted a long life to the study of questions of this kind, and Maj. McCawley, the social aide of the president, whose main business at present is to wrestle with the question of who shall go in first to dinner, have put their heads together and have arrived at a very gratifying conclusion.

The Diplomats Disposed Of.

It seemed a little hard that such distinguished dignitaries as the chief justice of the supreme court, the speaker of the house of representatives, the admiral of the navy and the lieutenant general of the army should be compelled by the rules of social precedence to wait in line at the white house reception until a miscellaneous collection of ambassadors and diplomats had been ushered into the presence. It is no wonder that the supreme court justices who were the first to run up against the edict of the social arbiters should feel indignant and protest. So Adee and McCawley got into conjunction and evolved a scheme by which everybody will be satisfied.

At the reception given in honor of the diplomatic corps, the diplomats will lead in. Nobody objects to that. At the other three receptions, that to the judiciary, to congress and to the army and navy, the diplomats will not be in line at all. They will form a little group by themselves in the oval or the blue room in front of the door, where the president stands and they will watch the procession go by. Thus they will be honored spectators and they will not interfere with anybody. Everybody will be satisfied and the game can go on.

Senator Kittridge.

Senator Kittridge, of South Dakota, is one of the most promising of the men who have come into congress in several years. There is no man in the senate, no matter how long he may have been in public life, who has a shrewder understanding of the ways of legislation than Kittridge, who has been up against it for only a single congress. He is always in his seat in the senate; he watches every play and knows the reason for every move. He is popular and strong and has already arrived at that enviable stage in a senator's career where he has to be consulted with regard to the adoption of any important party policy.

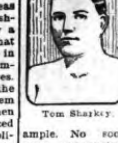
Kittridge Has to Be Consulted.

Kittridge is one of the youngsters, although he seems older than he is. He was graduated at Yale in 1882 and is only 42 years of age. He is a great friend of John Kean, who left Yale 15 years before. He is noted in the senate for his good nature, for his imperturability and an inscrutable face, which would be a money-maker at a poker table.

He has an idea that so long as South Dakota remains a republican state he can remain in congress as long as the Dakota senator and he intends to make the most of that possibility. There are too few senators nowadays who come to Washington with the idea of making this their permanent career. Kittridge is one of them. There is not one chance in a hundred that he will not win out. LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

More than one boxing contest has been won and lost by a single blow. Many a contest where defeat for one or the other seemed certain has been turned into victory by the lucky punch. Other fighters have won their battles before their opponents fairly have their hands up. Of the latter type the Sharkey-Ruhlin fight at Coney Island is an example. No sooner had the bell rung announcing the beginning of hostilities than Sharkey and Gus advanced to the center of the ring. Bang went Sharkey's left hand swing and down and out went Ruhlin before even his own seconds had realized what was up. A punch of this kind is lucky. Of course, Sharkey was given all credit for the win, but way down deep in his heart he had no more idea of knocking Ruhlin out in a single punch than he would become president of this country. He took a desperate chance, and the good thing went through, as the race-horse men say. A case similar to the Sharkey-Ruhlin fight was the time Jimmy Elliott knocked out Capt. Dalton at the old Park theater in Chicago in a similar manner. Time was called and both men advanced to the center. Elliott swung his right hand down went Dalton for a trip to dreamland, exactly seven seconds after the fight began. The above instances are chance blows of one kind; the second Myers-Gilmore battle may be added to the list. There are chance blows of a different sort. Take the Dempsey-Marine battle as an illustration. Dempsey was winning by a mile, and winning as he pleased. The odds were 100 to 1 that Dempsey would win, and the spectators were shouting to the Marine to quit, as he had no chance. Dempsey advanced toward him for the final effort, when, quick as flash, La Blanche wheeled and delivered a pivot blow on Dempsey's jaw that put him out. It was the first time the "Nonpareil" ever tasted the bitter dregs of defeat.



Tom Sharkey.

Another win of the same sort was the time when Peter Maher defeated Choynski at the Broadway club, New York, a number of years ago. Choynski had the battle well in hand, and in the sixth round hit Maher so hard it knocked him into the ropes. As the Irishman was rebounding from the ropes from the force of Choynski's punch he swung his right, catching the lone on the side of the jaw, and the battle was over, with the apparently defeated man a victor.

Josh Ward

Joshua Ward, who recently died at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, was one of five brothers who were all noted oarsmen. The five brothers were born at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, and were the sons of a fisherman. They took to the water as naturally as ducks, and were early matched against the best oarsmen of this country and Europe, winning many of them their share of the honors, both singly and together. Their four-oared crew, consisting of John, "Bill," "Hank," and "Josh," won the international sculls on Saratoga lake in September, 1873, defeating the Tyne-Wear championship crew from England, the Paris-St. John crew, and the Biglin-Coulter crew. "Josh," about the same time, held the five-mile championship over the Poughkeepsie course. They were national figures at that time, but gradually faded out of sight until there are few persons who remember them. In his later years Joshua was frequently mistaken for Joseph Jefferson, the resemblance between the oarsman and the actor being quite remarkable. Ellis Ward is still active as the coach of the University of Pennsylvania crew.

The ranks of prominent turf men have also been visited by death recently, and several notable lights have passed away. The most prominent was the veteran trainer and driver, Orrin Hickok, who will be remembered years ago as a driver of St. Julien, 2:11¼; Arab, 2:15, and Huida, 2:08. His last most notable race was the winning of the Kentucky futurity in 1897, with Thorn, 2:12½. He died at a Cleveland hospital from softening of the brain. Another death was that of the veteran Chicagoan, H. H. Yates, in his eighty-second year. He was a prominent owner back 20 years ago, and while he has not owned any fast ones of late years, was always an interested spectator at nearly of the local meets. James Golden died suddenly, not surviving an operation for appendicitis. He gave Ralph Wilkes, 2:06¾, and the pacer, Frank Bogash, 2:03¾, their best records. His stable the past season, which closed their engagements at Lexington only three weeks ago, included Rowellan, 3, 2:09¾, and Laconda, 2:05¾, pacing. Only two days afterward came the announcement of the death of George Wellman, owner of Rowellan, 2:09¾, and other fast ones. He was one of Mr. Golden's principal patrons.

Maurice Vignaux, the French expert, retained the billiard championship of the world by defeating George Sutton, 18-inch balk-line game, two shots in the American, 500 to 496 points in an hour.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

What Is Being Talked About in the Eastern Metropolis.

YOUNGSTERS WITH FORTUNES

Some of Them Must Carry Grave Responsibilities with Their Money —A Glimpse at the Newspaper Field.

New York.—By his father's death Harry Payne Whitney is added to that considerable number of young Americans who have inherited large responsibilities while yet young. Like Clarence Mackay and Alfred Vanderbilt at the time of the deaths of their respective fathers, Mr. Whitney is a thorough sportsman, Like Mr. Mackay again and unlike the younger Vanderbilt, he has already shown some aptitude for business. Two years ago his father turned over to him some of the directorial responsibilities he had exercised, just as John D. Rockefeller has more recently surrendered to his son his directorship in the steel trust.

Training a Financier.

Young Whitney will be a far richer man than his father was. New York remembers when the elder Whitney was a practicing lawyer. He first entered politics by serving a term in early life as city counsel. Wealth beyond a modest competence was not in his sight until he married Flora Payne, daughter of the Standard Oil senator of Ohio, H. B. Payne. Mr. Payne purchased for the young couple a Norman baronial mansion upon Fifth avenue, paying for it $400,000 at a great bargain. Modified within according to modern ideas it is still one of the most satisfactory houses in New York and it is the city home of Harry Payne Whitney. It stands opposite the home of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt. The marriage of young Whitney to Gertrude Vanderbilt was as natural as the espousal of two young village lovers who have lived across the street and played together in their childhood days.

The share in her father's estate of Mrs. Whitney was $10,000,000.

New York's Rich Bachelors.

Oliver Payne, a bachelor of studious tastes, occupies a fine mansion upon the avenue where he keeps bachelor's hall with the aid of a complete staff of servants. He has given generously and unobtrusively of his means to Yale university and is one of the men in New York who are less known than they deserve to be, though quite as they wish.

"Bachelor's Hall."

It is the correct thing in New York for very wealthy bachelors to dwell in mansions of their own and there entertain. Mr. James Henry Smith, the "silent man of Wall street," is soon to erect a house remarkable enough to suit a remarkable man.

Mr. Smith was almost unheard of up to the time when his bachelor uncle died in London a few years ago, leaving to the nephew an estate which paid the greatest succession tax on record in the British metropolis. Since then Mr. Smith has come rapidly forward in social circles in New York, and has had the best of chaperonage for his lavish entertainments and his new house will doubtless be the scene of highly considered "functions." Mr. Smith is one of the heaviest owners in the St. Paul and others western lines and is credited with acting in harmony with the Standard Oil party in their administration. He is anxiously, but with scant hope, eyed by New York mammas as the most desirable match in the city.

The house Mr. Smith is to build will be remarkable. In the first place a seven-story hotel was pulled down to make room for it, as a part of the extraordinary campaign which a few millionaires have undertaken to prevent trade from going up the avenue beyond the house of Miss Helen Gould. In the second place, it will be the most conspicuous example in the city of tasteful and lavish decoration; for the commission for its erection was not given to any architect, but to a firm of decorators.

The Newspaper Kaleidoscope.

That newspaper letters should so often speak of newspapers may betray bad balancing of city gossip. But then newspapers in New York are always doing things.

The report that Mr. Hearst has mortgaged his newspapers for a million dollars has gone all over the country and in that form does him an injustice. What he has done is to organize a holding company to control his newspapers. The holding company has issued a million dollars' worth of bonds, all of which Mr. Hearst retains. If later he should sell any of them that's his own affair. I presume the new company will finance the new paper which Mr. Hearst is to start in Boston, where his venture will surely have a big swing.

It is a common mistake to assume that Boston is a staid town, which insists upon things solid and dignified. It is really a frivolous place, just the town to appreciate big headlines, while the surrounding manufacturing villages are full of advanced political partisans, who are anything but conservative. Another advantage that Mr. Hearst will gain, by operating in Boston is that a new paper there will cut off 40,000 circulation which his New York Evening Journal has there now. It may seem odd to speak of cutting off circulation as an advantage, but that is precisely the case when, as with the Evening Journal, the circulation is already bigger than any local advertiser will pay corresponding rates for. Local advertisers are not much benefited by circulation in Boston. By starting a paper there Mr. Hearst can make the Boston advertisers pay for circulation there; New York men won't.

The Boston press is far inferior to that of Chicago, where Hearst"s American stirred things up so energetically; competition will do it good. It will increase the pay of Boston newspaper men, which is now low. Constant wars of competition have had that effect in New York, where the pay of competent newspaper writers is probably the highest in the world.

Waking Up New York.

Perhaps New York hasn't needed that waking up process which Boston is now to get.

When I came to the town it was afflicted most shockingly by dry-rot. Newspaper writers earned low pay. Advertising rates were high in proportion and managers never canvassed for business.

Wake Up, Knickerbocker!

First came from St. Louis Joseph Pulitzer, private soldier in the union army, lawyer, journalist, legislative reformer. The World made him wealthy in five years. He bought a site of its present building with a single check, the profits of less than a year. He erected a million-dollar building the next year, paying for it as it went up with his weekly profits taken in across the counter. Meanwhile he had overturned every precept in tradition. Managers were no longer content to sit and take what advertisements came in, but went out and hustled for them. Pictures were printed. The journalism that does things was introduced.

Some of the World people seceded to take hold of the Recorder, a forgotten paper, which in its brief day had an extraordinarily able staff. In a week the wages of capable men went up 50 per cent. and they have never lost the advantage.

The Rush to New York.

Only a few years later came from San Francisco Mr. Hearst and took the Journal. He needed men. He could get them gradually, but that wasn't his way. Instead he would hire $50-a-week men for $125 a week and give them contracts for one, two or three years as was necessary. It was expensive, but in a very short time he had a fine staff. In no other way could it have been assembled so quickly. The rank and file did not of course get such extraordinarily advances. They came floating in from other cities, some from far California. And they woke up the town again. Some of those men have found that when their contracts expired their services were less valuable. But it is not Mr. Hearst's fault that they did not save their money while they were getting it.

The March Upon the Metropolis.

St. Louis and San Francisco having aided in the education of New York, along came a man from Chattanooga, Mr. Ochs, and turned the New York Times into a one-cent paper. He also taught New York to think. New York thought it bought the experiment a failure. But Mr. Ochs, without sacrificing the quality of his paper has run it up to nearly 100,000 circulation, and now has combined the Times and Ledger of Philadelphia into a strong paper, besides building a factory home for his New York paper. So much for Chattanooga.

The latest instructor in journalism is Mr. Strauss from Des Moines, Ia. The Commercial Advertiser is the oldest paper in town. For years it was conducted by Hugh Hastings, of the famous Albany Regency. For 20 years it has lived at "this poor dying rate." Mr. Strauss has renamed it The Globe —for the characteristic reason that newsboys can yell that better—dropped the price to one cent and sells the paper for 25 cents a hundred wholesale. At that rate he loses money upon the actual cost of the white paper.

Mr. James Gordon Bennett is the only New York newspaper magnate of consequence who has not come to the city. [illegible] Hearst getting a [illegible] company to con[illegible] Journalistic [illegible] smaller towns.

COLORS AND MODES.

Wide Belts and Shirt Waist Suits Generally Revived.

There is at present a craze for wide belts, and this applies to all styles of dress, from the simple walking costume to the most elaborate evening or reception gown.

Gowns made with skirts clearing the ground all around and the waists blousing back and front over a wide knit belt are ultra smart. The waists of such gowns are usually made with a long shoulder effect and neatly stitched tucks. The skirts are very full and kilted, being merely held down as far as the knee. If the costume is of blue serge or linen a pretty idea is to have the tie and belt of scarlet. The same touch of scarlet may be repeated in the French sailor hat which goes with this.

Green is a color now being industriously "boomed" by the shops and dressmakers. It will be much seen in foulard.

Pale green cloth is being made up by smart dressmakers. It is combined with a heavy silvery white lace worked out with much embroidery.

Ruffled undersleeves are the prettiest and the newest. The foundation is of china silk or mousseline, and on this is sewed row upon row of narrow lace or chiffon ruffling edged with a tiny beading, often of a contrasting color. Thus a pair of undersleeves designed to go with a blue cloth gown were of pale blue mousseline de soie edged with tiny beading in black and white.

The picture shows a gown of putty colored chiffon. The bands of lace and fichu collar are dyed to match.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NOVEL FASHION FEATURES.

Shirrings of Every Sort the Rage. Dyed Lace Very Popular.

Shirred effects are the most prominent feature of fashion just now. A dress recently made for a bride had a wide shirring of many rows, like a collar, which came well over the shoulders. Below this the fullness spread out into a blouse, which pouched over a chiffon velvet belt both at the back and at the front. The same shirring extended well over the tops of the sleeves, which were very full and were confined at the wrist in a wide cuff of velling lined with a double frill of lace. Around the neck and falling down the front there was a stole of chiffon velvet with fringed ends. The skirt was very full, with three wide tucks for sole trimming.

Dyed lace has become so popular that it is now almost the rule instead of the exception.

The picture hat is very much out of place with the tailor made gown. With the latter should be worn one of the small trim shapes now so much the fashion.

The all black hat is coming back into style again, particularly with the gray gown, and this is a very French combination.

A cream lace hat properly made looks well on a woman of any age.

Accordion plaited costumes will be seen again both for house and street wear. Nothing can be smarter than an accordion plaited bolero and skirt of fine black cloth worn with a lacy white waist and a big white hat.

The cut shows a spring stole and muff of taffeta in plain and shirred bands.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FOR SPRING WEAR.

The Proper Cut For Smart Gowns, Sleeves and Boleros.

Skirts for spring wear grow more and more ample, and the same is to be said of the sleeves. Boleros will almost entirely replace the long coats seen so much this winter, and there is a practical reason for this as well, for, owing to their looseness and smallness, they can be worn even on very hot days.

BLACK HAT.

The smartest boleros are made with half sleeves, which open out to allow a wide puff of lace work and embroidery to be seen or else a succession of ruffles. The fussy undersleeve is indeed a feature of all gowns with any pretensions to style except walking costumes and plain dresses for morning wear.

The full skirts will be very pretty carried out in muslin, veilings, greandine or any of the thin, semitransparent materials.

The very full, ungored skirt is an extreme of fashion to be avoided by the well dressed woman. It is unsymmetrical and becoming to no one. This fullness can be modified by the use of a few gores and judiciously shaped hip yokes.

When a gown is not extensively gauged it is made in layers and bands, and this is carried out alike in skirt, bolero and sleeves.

The illustration shows a hat of black straw and chiffon. It is trimmed with two white tips under the brim.

DAINTY GOWNS.

Lavender Crepe de Chine Again Smart—Net and Chiffon Blouse.

Lavender crepe de chine gowns were ultra smart last summer, and they will be again much worn.

The dainty cravat or chic jabot of lace is indispensable with the stiff tailor made, if most women need a softening touch near the face.

For afternoon wear skirts are long and almost train as much as early in the season. The sides and fronts of the skirts in particular are made extra long, and this extra length allows even a little woman to wear the large picture hats which are so quaint and becoming.

Smart blouses are made of chiffon, accordion plaited mousseline, shot and brocaded silk peau de cygne and the supple crepe de chine and louisine. Pretty waists are made of net, much shirred and incrusted with narrow insertions and lace appliques. The lining is of soft satin or china silk.

All over lace waists are further enriched by hand embroideries.

There is no doubt about it, the new fashions are not made for short people. They abbreviate the length of the waist line, thanks to the berthas and wide belts, while the full, drooping sleeves and the gathered skirts add the finishing touches. The trimmings, too, are all horizontal instead of perpendicular, so that if the short, plump woman follows the styles closely she will look decidedly dumpy. Short people must always remember to dress in one color and to try for the long lines as much as is possible. Above all they must never wear striking trimmings, which divide them into sections, as it were.

The picture shows a lavender crepe de chine gown trimmed with bands of narrow dyed lace and a V shaped yoke. The skirt is very full.

MILLINERY MODES.

The Outlook For Spring Fashions in Women's Hats.

For one thing we can be really and truly thankful, and that is that the big and untidy pompadour is doomed beyond the power of resurrection, though it may die hard. In its place we have a composite arrangement which may take different minor shapes adjusted to each person's peculiar style. In a swell establishment I was informed that many faces will be framed becomingly with the very old fashioned "topknot," while others will wear plain, though slightly waved, bandeaux with a twist at the nape of the neck. Some may look better with the twist higher up on the back of the head. A few will still wear rats of horsehair to set the hair out on the sides of the face, while others will depend entirely upon their own hair, slightly puffed so that it will form a resting place for fancy combs for day wear and for dainty wreaths for evening. In the majority of the new styles of hairdressing the principal point seems to be to have a distinct knob, either directly on top of the head or low down in the back, according to which style proves most becoming.

Fancy combs are almost fine enough to be classed among the jewels. Some of them are fairly studded with imitation diamonds, pearls and other precious stones, set in real or imitation tortoise shell. The most refined taste, however, would tell a woman that these are better suited for evening wear than for the street.

For the decoration of the hair for evening there are some of the daintiest and most poetical little wreaths of tiny blossoms. They are mostly what used to be called multiflora roses, though some call them picayune roses. These are now made in all colors, from pale yellow to dark red with white and all the shades of pink and hello thrown in. These infinitesimal roses are made into wreaths, large or small, as one likes best, and are twined in with small green leaves, though not all rose leaves. Still that does not matter since they form the necessary relief for the blossoms. These are tied with baby ribbons.

For the corsages of the gowns, when these dainty wreaths are in use, there are many arrangements of flowers. They are twined around the neck, festooned along the shoulders, and in fact made into such a list of fancies that it would not be possible to speak of all. Some have tiny bunches of blossoms tied with many strands of ribbon festooned across the bust at the shoulders, at the waist and sometimes down the skirt. Violets, forgetmenots and several other very small blossoms are made into this sort of trimming. Hats have the entire brim covered with them, and the crowns are made entirely of overlapped leaves.

A few advance Easter hats are to be seen, but they are not very remarkable. Yet the straws are handsome when well made. I saw one of rough smoked straw with a brim about three inches wide turned up sharply all around. It had tan velvet milliner's folded ribbon run in so as to bring it up in a fluted shape, which also made it a high turban. The whole crown was covered with tiny button roses in shaded tan to brown. Here and there a small green leaf brightened it up a little. In the back was a cascade of the tiny roses hung on baby ribbon to match the shades in the hat.

Another very pretty straw had a flattish brim, rounded up very slightly at the outer edge, along which were small tan and brown grapes. These grapes were in bunches, with a few leaves shaded in russet colors, with a velvety overbloom. The grapes were apparently laid along the brim as if to see how they would look before sewing them on. There is very much of this pretty combination of shading in the light drabs, biscuits and browns. It admits of the use of any kind of color of blossom, though green, pink and violet are, I think, the most artistic.

There are many wire frames and straw braids of which to make hats, and many ladies really love to dabble in such work. There are also chiffon hats sewed with as many folds as one wishes. These are untrimmed; so, with a bunch or a wreath of the pretty blossoms, one can have hats galore at reasonable cost.

DRESSY GOWNS.

Skirts Made in Tiers Are Fashionable, but Not Becoming.

Skirts made in tiers are once more in full favor. This style, which consists in alternate bands of shirring and of some wide plain material, should be religiously avoided by the small or the heavily built woman.

Many gowns now being made abroad are of thin material, flounced to the waist line. Some of the most beautiful are scalloped and have embroidered edges. Others show flounces trimmed with handsome embroideries or lace embroidered with gold thread.

The gown all in one tone gives an effect of simplicity and elegance not otherwise to be obtained. Embroideries, shirrings and fagottings all tend to show off the best lines of the figure and enhance the richness of the material.

The silk gowns are very quaint, for they nearly all have the wide pointed Marie Antoinette bells and very full skirts.

Soft oriental satin forms one of the prettiest materials for reception gowns. It is combined with accordion plaited chiffon or very fine lace.

Concerning tailor made gowns there is much to say, and many of the newest costumes are neat in style and built for hard wear. At the same time they have just that feminine touch in their fashioning which makes them far more becoming to many women than the "mannish" models we have sometimes seen. A charming gown in currant red cloth has a long basqued coat with revers and buttons in velvet of a darker shade. The skirt has flat frills on it at intervals. Another dress is in putty colored cloth, with a chic little coat of the reefer variety, strapped and adorned with small oval gold buttons. This goes with a short, plaited walking skirt.

The picture shows an orange mousseline de soie gown banded with gold. The loose bolero is of Japanese embroidery.

SPRING MILLINERY.

It Partakes of the Useful at This Time of the Year.

Millinery at this time of the year runs to toques and small hats of every description. These are capable of standing any amount of wind, rain and dust, for they are of the tailor made order and depend for their becomingness on eccentric angles and curves.

Wings and rosettes comprise the most desirable trimming for this sort of hat and black and white the most popular combination.

In Paris they are introducing a black picture hat lined with red and trimmed with jet cabochons. This is said to be very becoming to a creamy skin and black eyes and hair.

The broad brimmed toque with the hussar decorations will soon be of the past.

Owing to the prevailing low dressing of the hair all hats and toques will cling to the head in the back, and as a result they will project far over the face in front. This is one of the most becoming millinery styles we have had for some time.

The attempt to revive bonnets has failed, and they are relegated to very old ladies.

The illustration shows a tailor made hat of black straw trimmed with black velvet and a black and white wing.

and decorations of harmonious embroideries and dyed laces seem to be taking their place.

Chiffon velvet gowns will be worn for another month and a half at least, and dresses of this beautiful material will by no means be discarded even during the summer months. It is indeed almost as light as silk.

Rough textures of light weight are favored for street wear. They are trimmed by smooth flat stripings in the way of contrast. Sometimes a narrow collar band and cuffs of vivid, contrasting velvet add a smart and becoming touch to an otherwise dull costume.

For street wear fashion dictates that the hat, the gloves and the waist must be on or of the same shade.

Wide belts are a feature of smart tailor made suits as well as gowns. They are enriched with handsome buckles and little tabs of embroidery. In fact, the belt is one of the most important parts of the costume.

All the new coats have very roomy sleeves to allow for the extra fullness in dress sleeves.

The illustration shows a hat designed to be worn with a green foulard gown. It is of tucked green chiffon trimmed with a rosette of darker green velvet and a spray of white roses.

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Up to Date Styles Worn by Up to Date People.

Pink is very fashionable just now, particularly the soft shades that come in foulards and veiling. It is combined with touches of black or deep brunse, and with it are worn pretty rose trimmed hats which fit closely to the hair.

The wide belt is the most important feature of the up to date gown.

Jet is being used more and more as a trimming. It is particularly used on dressy white gowns.

Entire toques of white tucked tulle or chiffon are trimmed with sprays of gold or silver flowers, from which springs a silver cockade.

One of the smartest hats seen recently was a French sailor hat of heavy white lace, having a wide velvet band around the brim and a cluster of white roses, with a fall of black chantilly lace as trimming.

Sleeves remain flat on the shoulders, but are rapidly becoming fuller otherwise.

The ruche still holds its own as the popular trimming.

The short blouse coats which are designed for warmer weather are very dainty. They have of course the wide, flaring cuffs filled in with ruffles of lace or embroidered frilling. Then many of them have a deep yoke effect cut into fanciful points. Elaborately stitched into this yoke is fulled the blouse portion.

The picture shows a dress of velvety goods trimmed with bands of lace and ruching. The belt is of dark velvet.

There's nothing helps a feller in politics as much as a blamed good licking.—Henry Rogers, of Warren township.

Apostle Smith may be a loyal supporter of Roosevelt's ideas, although the fact that he has forty-two children does not necessarily prove it.

Trading stamps are given with every copy of the New York American. How many would Mr. Pee Wee give for that Presidential nomination he is coveting.

Ignatz Friechmann, the man who introduced the "frankfurter roll" to Coney Island, is dead. We've had a grudge stored up against that man since we made the acquaintance of the "frankfurter"; but peace to his ashes.

Mr. Daniel's statement that the policy of the Common Council must necessarily be one of retrenchment at this time is borne out by the facts and there is no fear that the city fathers will not take every precaution to keep within the limit.

Why should a grocery man advertise spasmodically? His clerks work every day, his capital is invested every day, people buy groceries every day, and he ought to deliver every day. Why not keep his advertisement running every day?—Western Publisher.

The Providence Journal suggests Roosevelt and Taft as a presidential team. The Journal is an independent paper and this is Taffy for Teddy.

The New York millionaire who bestowed one dollar upon the individual who found $300 belonging to him will never die from enlargement of the heart.

At the meeting of the Business Man's Association of Tamaqua, Pa., it was decided in the future to buy no tickets for festivals, suppers, church entertainments, etc., and to do no advertising in programme or other advertising schemes. Newspaper advertising was heartily indorsed.—American Press.

The women attending the Smoot inquiry at Washington may think that they are doing good work in following up the anti-Mormon cause, but they must be a morbid crowd when they can sit and listen to the nasty testimony being produced. The "gentle sex" should be excluded from the investigating room.

The anti-cigarette bill has passed the House. When the measure becomes a law, it will be a misdemeanor to sell these "coffin nails" to lads under fourteen years of age. The purpose of the proposed law is a good one and should be strictly enforced. Tobacconists who earn their living by ministering the growth of immature persons are an irrepressible crowd and should be brought to justice.

If the fact that the P. S. O. ran an open trolley car on a local line the other day is to be taken as an indication of what is to come, it is already high time to register a "kick." It would seem that the corporation has enough on its shoulders already with accidents, unaccommodating time service, and cars poorly heated and lighted to account for. Open cars in March! B-r-r-r-r-r-r! Perish the thought—but let the poor abused patrons of the road live.

Numerous reports are received of cock fights taking place in outlying districts of this city and surrounding towns, but no one has as yet heard of any very strenuous efforts on the part of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals or other humane organizations to stop the cruelties. Probably each society thinks that the matter is in the jurisdiction of the other. There is perhaps evidence in cases of such violation of the law is not easily obtainable by the police. "Sportsmen" who support cock fights do not work in the open.

ATE VEAL; TAKEN SICK.

Fred Kirch Was Poisoned, He Thinks, by a Meal in a New York Restaurant.

Fred Kirch, of West Front street, who is employed at A. M. Griffen's hardware store, is recovering from a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning, which he thinks he is the result of eating roast veal in a New York restaurant. On Wednesday of last week, Mr. Kirch with two friends, visited a restaurant for dinner of which roast veal formed the principal dish.

It was not until on the train coming home that Mr. Kirch felt the effects of his meal. He was taken ill suddenly and with difficulty reached home.

AMUSEMENTS.

Harry Ellsworth, lecturer, will present at his elaborately illustrated story of "Oberammergau, its Play and its People," every Sunday night for the remainder of Lent, at the Majestic Theatre, New York city. Singularly appropriate to the season is this lecture as it is elevating and also instructive. There are two hundred and thirty superb colored views, illustrating every part of the Passion play and selection from the original music will be rendered at various intervals during the lecture. Mr. Ellsworth, who has lived for years at Oberammergau is a particularly interesting speaker. The prices are 75c., 50c., and 25c. The first lecture will be given Sunday night, March 13.

George Ade's quaint comedy, "The County Chairman," has now been running for sixteen straight weeks in New York at Wallack's Theatre, where the permanency of its stay will evidently be regulated by other matters than the measure of its popularity. "The funniest play in town" is a comment that has already been made by several of the conservative newspapers and freely accepted by the public at large. The progress of each performance is accompanied by a ripple of laughter broken in upon at frequent intervals by an outburst of uncontrollable merriment which almost shakes the building. Many New Yorkers find so much that is novel and amusing in "The County Chairman" that they go to see it over and over again—some of them indeed making regular weekly pilgrimage to Wallack's. The management has established a series of Wednesday matinees with the idea of meeting the requirements of out-of-town patrons who cannot well go to the theatres at night.

There's nothing funnier in New York than "The Girl from Kay's," at the Herald Square Theatre, which has become known as The Temple of Laughter. It has had one of the longest runs of any attraction of its kind in years and its kind is humor of a high order. Sam Bernard and Hattie Williams are among the stars, and they compose a team which is hard to beat in the race to please an exacting public. An enormous caste supports them. March 23 will mark the 150th performance. You'll crack your chapped lips and split your fat sides at the one-continued round of merriment in "The Girl from Kay's."

"He Won't be Happy 'Till he Gets it," the new song in "Babes in Toyland" has stood the test of public criticism and is now admitted to be a success. Majestic patrons, many of them have seen the Babes perform again and again, are delighted with the re-arrangement of the last act. Charles Barry's grotesque dancing the rendition of the new song causes paroxysms of laughter and the swift but rhythmic motions of the troupe of widows is the most happy and Miss Barrison's singing is perfect. Among the Babes there is much attention paid to the game of pool these days, many of them indulging daily in pool playing in an uptown private pool parlor. Miss Albertine Benson, the Moth Queen, claims that she is the champion woman pool player of the world and Miss Hilson, another expert, and Miss Benson have issued challenges to meet all comers in a pool tournament. Members of the chorus of another company, it is said, are considering taking up the challenge. Public interest is also given to Gus Fixley, many patrons upon purchasing tickets state they were anxious to see Gus Fixley, "Inspector Marcus' duke" of the cast.

"As You Like it" is being presented to crowded houses at Daly's Theatre, with Miss Edith Wynne Matthison as Rosalind and "Bon" Greet as the melancholy Jaques. Mr. Greet's play ers, who have found so much favor in "Everyman," and more recently "Twelfth Night," are not altogether strangers in "As You Like It," for they appeared in Shakespeare's comedy out of doors last May on the Columbia College grounds. "As You Like It" retains its charm, particularly in Miss Matthison's delightful interpretation of the character of Rosalind. Her reading is admirable. Others may have brought to the character a lighter touch, perhaps, but few, if any, greater personal charm and intelligence. The Jaques of Mr. Greet is too well known to call for comment at this day other than that it is again thoroughly artistic. J. Sayer Crawley is Orlando—rather a slightly built Orlando to dispose of Charles, the wrestler, but otherwise satisfying—and George Riddell as the banished Duke, William F. Owen as Adam, B. A. Field as Touchstone, St. Clair Bayfield as Corin and Miss Alys Rees as Celia are excellent.

"The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre, New York, is approaching the third month of what has every indication of being an all winter run. It has been until now the history of plays laid in rural surroundings that their popularity, no matter how great, has been of slow and gradual development. "The County Chairman," however, reversed this precedent, as it did several others. The opening audience at Wallack's was not large for a first night crowd, but everybody in the house was so delighted with the pure and wholesome sentiment in which the piece abounds, so long has the honest sentiment of its love story, that it was recommended on every hand. The very next evening the theatre was packed, and since then there has rarely been a vacant seat, even at the Wednesday matinees, when most playhouses are slackest in attendance. "The County Chairman" is unquestionably the great hit of the year in New York.

At the Princess Theatre Sydney Rosenfeld presents his stock company "The Century Players" in a revival of Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." The performance is excellent. The Beatrice of Miss Jessie Millward is the special feature of the play. This capable actress is superb in elocution and technique, charming in appearance, and in the more serious phases of the character—as when she incites Benedick to a duel to avenge the honor of her cousin Hero—was natural and effective. She possesses the vivacity, the sparkle and the spontaneity that should carry conviction in the lighter scenes. The Shakespearian comedy is preceded by an "allegory," specially prepared for the occasion, in which "Art" gasps hands first with "Tradition" and then with "Progress," promising to respect the first in so far as she is worthy of respect, but to bestow her chief allegiance on "Progress." In this allegory Miss Kahn as "Art" carries off all the honors. She speaks her lines with good elocutionary effect and with an intelligent conception of their meaning.

William H. Thompson, the star of James K. Hackett's production of "The Secret of Polichinelle" at the Garden Theatre has played many great parts with very great success but the one he is enacting at present is the greatest as well as the most successful of all he has ever played. M. Jouvenal is an old Frenchman of a type common in France but one which Americans will probably think over-drawn, but to an American business man it seems inconceivable that a man could be so simple, so easily amused and content with such humdrum surroundings. Yet the way audiences applaud nightly shows that even the commercial American can appreciate sentiment when it is cleverly portrayed. "The Secret of Polichinelle" is the season's comedy success beyond a doubt. It is the most talked of play in New York and its run at the Garden Theatre will continue until Mr. Savage, its manager deems it best. It

PASSING OF BOROUGH FIRE COMPANIES

North Plainfield Volunteer Firemen Had Long and Creditable History.

BEGINNING MADE IN 1869

STORY OF COMPANY'S APPARATUS AND ITS RELATION TO SUIT OVER TAXES.

The Department Has Several Times Given Valuable Assistance to Plainfield's Fire Fighters—Its Last Appearance at Saengerbund Fire.

In the passing of the North Plainfield volunteer firemen, the veteran firefighters on this side of the brook virtually see the last of their old system. North Plainfield's volunteers were at one time a part of the city organization, and the borough system was the direct outgrowth of the volunteer department on this side.

It was in 1869 that the actual beginning of what is now the North Plainfield department was made. At that time Gazelle Engine Company bought a steamer, and discarded its hand engine. John Case, who has since died, and several other boroughites received the idea of organizing a North Plainfield company, and, not long after, Warren Engine Company No. 2 was formed, with the old hand engine, which dated from 1853, as its apparatus. At the same time the house on Somerset street was built.

The companies on both sides of the brook were incorporated as the Fire Department of Plainfield and North Plainfield, with a joint board of fire commissioners as the direct governing body. North Plainfield was supposed to pay one-sixth of the taxes levied for the maintenance of the department. The companies covered certain fire districts, which did not include the whole of either municipality.

Outgrowing the old hand machine, the borough company, sometime about 1876, decided on the purchase of a steamer. In 1879 T. C. Doane, now chief of the city department, heard of an Amoskeag engine that the city of Hartford desired to sell, and reported the fact to Warren Engine Company. He, George and J. H. Carney were appointed a committee to inspect the machine and the trio accordingly went to Hartford. It was just what the company wanted, and the steamer was purchased and installed in place of the old Gazelle engine. This steamer, which was built for Hartford in 1862, is the one in the possession of the company today.

In 1889 the question of the Commissioners' right to levy taxes for the department was raised, and in a test case the Supreme Court decided that while the department itself was legal enough, the Board had no authority for taxation. While the matter was in the courts the city had paid all the bills, and when the decision was rendered Plainfield took over the entire department. Warren's possessions went with the rest, because the borough was in debt to the city for unpaid taxes.

The next year the borough firemen decided to form a department of their own, and after negotiations with the city North Plainfield purchased the Somerset street house, the Amoskeag engine and a hose cart, and formed its organization. Warren No. 2 was reorganized as the whole department under the name of Warren Engine Company No. 1.

H. J. Martin was the first chief of the department. He was followed by George Fairchild, David Bodine, William Debele and J. J. Stahl. The latter is the present chief, with Herman Klinsman, of the West End Hose Company, as assistant chief.

With the growth of the borough the need of another company was felt, and in 1896 the West End Hose Company was organized in the western section of the town, with headquarters on Harrison avenue. For a short time the company used Warren's old hose cart, but in the fall of 1901 it had a handsome two-horse cart built at W. J. Conroy's shop in the borough.

Charles Keller was West End's first foreman.

Its record and work has given North Plainfield's department the reputation of being one of the best of its kind in this section of the country. While the borough has been fortunate in escaping any very serious fires, the department has done valiant and effective service in the biggest blazes on this side of the brook. Warren helped the city men to subdue the Cook lumber yard fire, the fierce spread of flames in the Boice, Runyon & Co. in 1891, the Bard Cycle Co. fire in 1898 and both borough companies worked on the Babcock building in 1902. The last big fire which the borough firemen fought was that of Saengerbund Hall early this winter.

The present officers of the department are: Chief, J. J. Stahl; assistant chief, Herman Klinsman; electrician, Alonzo Brokaw; engineer, Louis Feiring.

The officers of the two companies are present are as follows: Warren Engine Company—Foreman, Lambert Bodine; first assistant foreman, Alonzo Brokaw; second assistant foreman, Frank Kesselring; secretary, David Bodine; treasurer, Jacob Higgins; financial secretary, William Debele. West End Hose Company—Foreman, George Gildes; first assistant foreman, Dennis Bagley; second assistant foreman, Frank Keller; secretary, William Demarest; treasurer, Herman Hansen; financial secretary, Augustus Feiring.

MRS. ELMIRA ROBERTS DEAD

WIFE OF DAN S. ROBERTS SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA.

Mrs. Elmira Roberts, wife of Dan S. Roberts, died Monday night at her home, 15 Prospect place, following a short illness with pneumonia. For some days past Mr. Roberts has been ill with the same disease and it was partially in the care of him that she contracted her illness. She was seventy-four years of age and she was not strong enough to baffle the disease. Mr. Roberts today is considered as being a little improved.

Mrs. Roberts was born February 4, 1830, in Jackson Township, Pa., and had been a resident of this city nearly twenty-five years. Early in life she united with a Baptist church and always retained her membership. She enjoyed the high esteem of a host of friends and was admired for her most excellent qualities as a wife and mother.

A husband, five sons and two daughters survive Mrs. Roberts. The daughters are Miss Mary A. Roberts, of this city; and Mrs. Charles A. Berr, of Scranton, Pa., and the sons are Austin K., of Brooklyn; William D., of Tobyhanna, Pa.; George B., of New York; Charles B. and Harry R., of this city.

The funeral services will be held from the house, 15 Prospect place, this morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate.

priations, 326 votes being cast for them. 38 marked their disapproval of manual training by scratching the smaller appropriation. 290 votes were cast for it.

No expression on the sentiment of the public regarding the new school's location was obtained. The board members desired to bring the matter up, but when the anti-Smalley outburst occurred they decided that the matter held too many explosive qualities to be broached. Dr. Carroll had been fully prepared to start debate on the question, but he gave up his plans as soon as the result of the Mayor's charge against Dr. Cooley occurred. He said afterwards that he feared grave disturbance of the peace would have accompanied the expected debate.

"WANT TO MAKE THIS A ONE MAN GOVERNMENT?"

Asked Mayor Smalley When Citizens' Councilmen Forced Upon Him the Deciding Vote.

LINES SHARPLY DRAWN

REPRESENTATIVES OF CITIZENS' OPPOSED ALL APPOINTMENTS.

H. B. Woolston Made Chief—George Weiss Chief Marshal of Police Department—Other Appointments by Borough Council.

Practically the entire volunteer fire department attended the borough Council meeting Monday night, and so many of their friends and other boroughites interested in the appointments to the new paid system were present that every available inch of space in the audience room was filled. So great was the crowd that officers were stationed at the door to keep others out, and a lot of disappointed voters were turned away.

All the fire department appointments are as follows:

Chief, Howard B. Woolson.

Hose Co. No 1.—Captain, Harry B. Dunham, Edward P. T. Smith; lieutenant, William T. Campbell; engineer, Frank Schuck.

Drivers and Tillermen—William T. Campbell, George Gildes, Peter Dooley.

Call Men—Charles Woolston, Walter H. Kettenring, A. Jerome Foss, John R. Lambert, Harry Zimmerman, Arthur McDonald.

Hose Co. No. 2—Captain, William Barry; lieutenant, Michael J. Kennedy.

Call Men—George Neal, Charles Messenger.

The other appointments are:

Borough clerk and auditor, Frank Rowley; corporation counsel, Charles A. Reed; recorder, Thomas Dond; borough physician, Dr. A. H. Dunbon; borough engineers, H. G. VanEmburgh, Frank J. Hubbard; overseer of the poor, Frederick Becker.

Police Department—Chief marshal, George Weiss; regular marshals, George Sherman, Joseph Flack, Lemuel Pope; special marshals, Francis M. Whitley, Richard McDonald, William Kiernan, George Gunther, Patrick Regan, Henry Meyers, Robert Herron, Frank W. Woodruff, Harry Shearer, Peter B. Matthews, Daniel C. Adam, Harry S. Potter, Peter Blaich, John Barry, William T. Campbell, George Gildes, Peter Dooley, Howard Woolston, Edward P. T. Smith, William Lindsay, Jr.

The confirmation of all the officers of the fire department, from Chief Woolston down, was voted against by the Citizens'. They advanced no argument on any vote, but registered monosyllabic negatives in every instance with clockwork regularity. With the three regular Republicans supporting the nominations, the votes in the party clashes were tied, and Mayor Smalley cast the deciding ballot against his opponents.

There was a little, and somewhat amusing, hitch in the Citizens' programme at the start of the line-up. The confirmation of Chief Woolston's appointment was moved, and Mr. VanWinkle significantly called for yeas and nays.

"Yea," said Mr. Humble, and "Yea," said Mr. Krewson, echoing the votes of the regulars.

Mr. VanWinkle looked surprised. "Do I understand that this is the appointment of the chief of the new fire department?" asked the young leader with significant emphasis.

A blank look came into the faces of his two colleagues, and Mayor Smalley, with an amused smile, told them that their votes could be changed before the announcement of the result. On the re-call of the roll Messrs. Krewson and Humble hastened to change their ballots to "nay."

On the police appointments the Citizens voted with the regulars except in the case of Recorder Dond, who is one of the Mayor's trusted lieutenants. In casting the deciding vote for the Recorder, the Mayor said: "I vote 'aye' in this case with a great deal of pleasure."

Corporation Counsel Reed and Clerk Rowley were likewise stamped with the disapproval of the opposition.

On the vote regarding the change of Council chambers to the new engine house, Mr. VanWinkle voted nay, but the other Citizens voted with the Republicans.

Mayor Smalley's "aye" in the tie votes seemed to amuse the crowd, and his deciding ballots were greeted with a lot of laughter. He saw the humor of it himself, and took a dry fling at the opposition. "What are you councilmen trying to do" he asked, "make this a one-man government?"

The salaries of the officials outside of the fire department, which are specified in the ordinance, were fixed as follows:

Clerk, $50; corporation counsel, $200; recorder, $200; borough physician, $125; overseer of the poor, $150; chief marshal, $750; regular marshals, $600. The special marshals get $3 a day, or twenty-five cents an hour.

COUNCIL MOVES FOR HIGHER LICENSE FEE

Borough Fathers Vote Unanimously for Resolution Seeking Court's Aid in Matter.

SUGGESTED A $600 FEE

PASS RESOLUTION DIRECTING CORPORATION COUNSEL TO ACT.

Mr. Reed to Ask Judge Schenck to Make the Change—Reasons for the Step Taken in North Plainfield—To Come Up at Next Term.

High license was again brought up in the borough Council Monday. A resolution favoring was passed by the old Council during its last days, but a longer and fuller resolution was introduced by Councilman Lee last evening to give the new members a chance to express their sentiments, and the sentiment of their constituents, on the matter.

The resolution was as follows: it puts all the features of the question succinctly and fully:

Whereas the license fee for the sale of liquor at retail in the city of Plainfield has for years been seven hundred dollars, while all licensed places there are required by law to close at eleven o'clock every week day night;

And whereas the licensed places in the borough of North Plainfield are permitted to retail liquor from 12 o'clock definitely, except Saturday and Sunday nights;

And whereas by reason of the early closing hour aforesaid in the city, and the close proximity of the borough and city, the borough bar rooms are, after eleven p. m., enabled to do practically the entire retail liquor business of a community of 25,000 inhabitants, and draw into the borough from the city all those who desire the accommodations of licensed bars, after the hour at which the city bars are forced to close as aforesaid;

And whereas the sole power to fix such license fees for the borough is vested in the discretion of the County Court at Somerville, and ninety-five per cent. of such fees belong to the borough, and go to reduce the expense to which its taxpayers are put for police and other cost of government made necessary, in a great measure, by this liquor traffic;

And whereas, if these places are to be licensed as all, it is not fair to the taxpayers of the borough that the license fee should be granted for a sum less than that which the keepers of similar places in the city, some of which are located within two or three hundred feet of boroughbars, are willingly paying, although restricted to shorter hours;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, that the judges of the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Somerset, be, and are hereby respectfully petitioned to take into consideration the peculiar situation of the Borough of North Plainfield in the premises, and to increase the license fee fixed by said court for this borough, so that the same shall be at least six hundred dollars per year for retail licenses.

And be it further resolved that the Corporation Counsel be, and is hereby directed to present this matter to said court at the earliest possible time.

Every vote was cast for it. There was no argument the Citizens' simply voting aye on roll call. It has been charged by the administration party that the Citizens courted and received the support of the "saloon element," and it is accepted as a fact that the regulars re-introduced the license matter to force the anti trio to put themselves on record.

But whatever the political game back of the resolution, the Citizens voted according to their convictions in the matter, and the whole Council stands unanimously back of the demand that the license be raised to $600. The passage of the resolution marks the real start of a determined attempt to bring the change about.

At the April term of court Corporation Counsel Reed will appear before the Common Pleas Court in Somerville and argue for the increase. A big delegation of boroughites, including Mayor Smalley and several of the councilmen, will be present to work in favor of the advance.

Councilman Lee said last night that he was convinced the high rate would be ordered. Mayor Smalley expressed himself sanguine of the change of fee, in talking with a reporter for The Daily Press this morning.

Post-Lenten Dances.

Plans for another country dance are being made by the I. C. T. Club. The affair will be held soon after Lent. The committee is composed of Leonce Texier, chairman; William Waters, V. W. Nash, Jr., Burlin Banks, Raymond McVoy and George Coss.

Hon. A. W. Chamblias, Mayor and a lawyer of Chattanooga, Tenn., and his brother, R. M. Chamblias, a banker of Brownsville, Tenn., are enjoying a visit with their parents, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chamblias.

CITIZENS' COUNCILMEN WERE SWORN IN VanWinkle Assumed Minority Leadership of Borough Council at Annual Session.

CORDIALLY GREETED

MAYOR EXPRESSED HOPE FOR HARMONY IN THE BOROUGH'S WELFARE.

VanWinkle Failed to Respond on Behalf of the Minority—J. K. Arnold Elected President—To Meet in New Engine House.

Primed to oppose the administration on every logical ground, and to register disapproval of everyone closely connected with the political work of Mayor Smalley, the three Citizens' Unionists elected at the spring election took their places in the borough Council at the annual meeting last Monday. Early in the meeting they made their position clear, by voting solidly against every principal appointment in connection with the new fire department, and the re-appointment of Corporation Counsel Reed, Borough Clerk Rowley and Recorder Dond. John H. VanWinkle, Jr., assumed the leadership of the minority.

Mr. VanWinkle was the first of the new members to be sworn in. All three were welcomed cordially by the Mayor and the old members. At the close of the meeting Mayor Smalley made a brief address to the anti-administration trio, in which he asked for harmony among the whole Council on matters pertaining to the welfare of the borough. "I believe it is the idea of the old members of the Council," he said, "that you should lay before them for consideration all the ideas you may have for the advancement of the general good of the borough. They will take the same course with you, and join you in carrying out good measures. I will leave such matters in your hands. We have now what has been asked for so often —a minority representation, particularly in Mr. VanWinkle and Mr. Krewson. You will be treated courteously for one year at least, and any *matters you may bring up will be con*sidered carefully and without bias."

Mr. VanWinkle, who by that time had become recognized as the Citizen leader, made no response.

Aside from the appointments to the police and fire departments and the various borough officers, and the passage of Councilman Lee's resolution regarding the increase of liquor licenses, but little business was done.

After Councilman Lee's motion that the old rules be continued, James K. Arnold was elected president, without a dissenting vote. The marshals were ordered to file the usual bonds, and the collector's bond was fixed at $13,500. The clerk's bond was fixed at $1,000.

By a vote of five to one it was decided to change the Council chamber from its present location to the sec*ond story of the new engine house as* soon as the structure is ready for occupancy. The committee on stationary and supplies was requested to install the borough furniture in the new house as soon as practicable. Councilman VanWinkle cast the opposing vote.

Oscar Moore, who was ordered to stop the erection of a frame barn on his place on Duer street, which is within the fire limits, petitioned for permission to continue the structure. The permit was granted. Henry Nischwitz was granted permission to build a frame addition to his house on Manning avenue, and E. W. Rose was granted a permit for the erection of a porch on his house at 47 Prospect place.

Two hundred dollars was voted for the rental of the borough collector's office. It was resolved to advertise for stone for work on streets and sidewalks. The resignation of Dr. Cooley as commissioner of appeal was accepted.

Mayor Smalley appointed these standing committees:

Streets and Public Health—Arnold, VanArsdale, VanWinkle.

Fire, Water and Lamps—Lee, VanArsdale, Krewson.

Marshals—VanArsdale, Lee, Humble.

Laws, Ordinances and Taxation—Humble, Arnold, Lee.

Audit and Finance—Krewson, Lee, Arnold.

Stationery and Supplies—VanWinkle, VanArsdale, Arnold.

Mrs. J. A. Powlison, of the borough, who has been quite ill for some *time past, is now able to sit up a por*tion of the time.

Mrs. E. W. Mills has been detained at her home in the Stillman building with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Thomas Coffey, of North avenue, is confined to the house by illness.

Raymond McVoy, of East Front street, has returned from a visit to friends in Elizabeth.

A BURGLAR WHO KNOWS HIS BUSINESS

Cleans Out Dining Room of $900 Worth of Valuables and People Never Heard Him.

SAML. METZER ROBBED

SEVERAL UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPTS MADE PREVIOUSLY.

Entire Haul Covered by Burglar Insurance—Silverware Valued as Wedding Gifts Taken—Burglar at Work With Family Home.

Nearly $900 worth of silverware and other valuables was taken by a burglar in a raid on the home of Samuel Metzger, of Sycamore avenue, some time between Saturday night and early Sunday morning. All the family were at home at the time, but no hint of the robber's presence was received.

Mr. and Mrs. Metzger were away from home all day Saturday, but when they returned shortly before 10 o'clock at night everything in the house was all right. Mr. Metzger is sure of this because he went over the place carefully in locking up preparatory to retiring. The family retired at 10, with all the doors and windows securely fastened.

When Mr. Metzger went downstairs into the dining room at 7 o'clock Sunday morning evidences of burglary stared him in the face all over the room. The buffet and silver chest had been completely ransacked and cleaned out, and other things of value were missing. Articles valued roughly at over eight hundred dollars had been taken.

Entrance had been gained through a window. It was evident that the thief had climbed the porch on the Linden avenue side of the house, and from there cut his way into the first floor through a pane of glass. He confined himself to that floor, and must have worked with perfect stealth, for none of the inmates of the house had heard the slightest sound all through the night.

There were no clues to the thief's identity, and Mr. Metzger has little hope of recovering his valuables. Most of the stuff taken was prized sentimentally as wedding gifts. Mr. Metzger will suffer no monetary loss, for the entire haul is covered by burglar insurance.

Mr. Fetzger has an idea that the thief is someone who has made several unsuccessful attempts before on his house. Within the past two months, he says, three attempts have been made to rob the place. The last time Mrs. Metzger saw a man's hand reaching in a room through the window. Her screams frightened him away.

Help for Muhlenberg.

FILTHY HABIT TO BE STOPPED BY LAW

North Plainfield Board of Health Passing Ordinance to Prevent Spitting on Streets.

REACHES 3RD READING

CORRESPONDENCE WITH NEW JERSEY STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Advocates of Measure Declare That Many Malignant Diseases Are Spread by the Nasty Practice—Provisions of the Ordinance.

Just as soon as the necessary advertising of the ordinance can be done, spitting on the streets, in cars and in public places in the borough will be banned by law, under penalty of fine or imprisonment for each offense. An ordinance covering the matter was passed by the North Plainfield Board of Health at its meeting last night, on first and second readings.

It is the unanimous opinion of the Board that the ordinance should be passed as quickly as possible, and enforced in every case detected. Dr. Adams, a member of the Board, in the discussion on the subject last night, declared his conviction that spittle on the sidewalks spreads malignant diseases more than any other agency. There was no question, he said, that women's trailing skirts caught up and carried many disease germs into the houses.

The question of penalty has not been decided by the Board. According to the State law, the Board can fix no lower penalty than $10 for violations of any of its ordinances. This amount the Board feels is excessive. Correspondence has been opened with the State Board, to discover if there is no way of fixing the fine at $2, which the Board regards as the proper amount for the offense. Should there be no other way, the Board will fix the penalty at $10, and exercise its power to remit part of it in each case.

Last night's meeting was the annual session, and the usual business was transacted. Andrew Love, Sr., was re-elected president, and Rev. W. E. Honeyman was named again as secretary and treasurer. Inspector Paggborn was reappointed.

According to the inspector's report, the borough buried 41 cats, 24 dogs and two horses during the year. 191 vaults and 377 cesspools were cleaned, and 60 houses were fumigated. The inspector recommended that all nuisances be cleaned away between March 10 and May 10, in order to escape the aggravating conditions of warm weather.

In the matter of contagious diseases the borough has had one of the best years on record. Only twenty-seven cases of communicable disease were reported, the majority of which were diphtheria and scarlet fever. Only two cases of typhoid fever developed. There were 138 complaints, all of which were attended to. At present there is only one case of contagious disease in the borough. Treasurer Honeyman presented a highly satisfactory report. J. O. Osgood and Dr. Adams, the auditing committee, passed on the report.

CHURCH BROTHEREOOD AFFAIR.

Young Men's Organization of Warren Chapel Hold a Reception.

In celebration of its first anniversary, the Young Men's Brotherhood, of Warren chapel, held a reception and musicale Thursday. It was well attended. An address of welcome was delivered by President C. F. Bryan, and Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, spoke to the young men of youthful ideals.

Included in the musical programme were selections by the choir, mandolin duets by Theodore Gavett and Chester Briggs; piano solos by Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, violin and piano duets by George Spier and Edward Spier; trio by Messrs. Spier and E. E. Wheeler, flute. The committee in charge was made up of C. F. Wadham, C. F. Bryan, William Walsh and Fred Winn.

BRUNSON'S MATCH MACHINE

BANK PRESIDENT WORKING ON INVENTION WHEN AFFLICTED.

It was in experimenting with a match-making machine, and not a quick-veneering process, as generally reported, that A. J. Brunson lost his sight at the secret factory on Rock avenue several weeks ago.

Over a year ago Mr. Brunson became interested in a scheme to cheapen the production of safety matches, and finally became convinced that he was on the track of a revolutionizing commercial discovery. The invention, however, was not in final shape for patenting, or else Mr. Brunson feared to make its details known through patent specifications, and he built his mysterious work-shop. There, guarded zealously from prying eyes, with a steady refusal to answer questions with regard to his work, the banker experimentated painstakingly on the invention until the unfortunate day when an exploding gasoline engine wiped the sight from his eyes.

While Mr. Brunson himself has refused to speak on the subject, it was learned from an authoritative yesterday that the banker believed himself to be in possession of a contrivance or formula that would change the matchmaking business completely. Whether or not the invention will be carried out now is not known. If the explosion has not demonstrated its impracticability in some way, Mr. Brunson, those who know him say, will probably turn the invention over to some trusted agent or friend.

CREGAR, AMBULANCE SURGEON

A SERGEANT OF COMPANY K PROMOTED BY COL. COLLINS.

Through an appointment made by Col. Collins, Dr. P. B. Cregar has been saved from the necessity of resigning from Company K.

Dr. Cregar, who held the rank of sergeant, was impelled to leave the company on account of pressure of professional business, which prevented his attendance at drills. He was averse to severing his connection with the command, however, and when Col. Collins heard of his dilemma, he solved it by appointing the physician as ambulance surgeon of the regiment, attached to Company K. This will keep the doctor in his rank of sergeant, but relieves him of the necessity of attending drills.

This appointment will make vacancies in the line of corporals and sergeants. The elections are practically assured, but the company members will not make the probable promotions public.

SKATING IN HOLLAND

That Country Is an Ideal Place for the Winter Sport.

Its System of Island Waterways Offers Great Possibilities — The Popular Styles of Skate and Picturesque Scenes.

Skating is work as well as play in Holland. The wonderful system of inland waterways make of the country an ideal place for skating, and the people utilize the opportunity thus presented not only to indulge in the sport as a matter of pleasure, but as a means of getting from place to place. On the canals along lines of peasants may be seen going to and from the villages and towns, and mixed with these sturdy folk may be seen the fashionable people of the cities out for a day's pleasure.

The fact is that Holland has become a nation of skaters. Our illustration is a typical scene on a Holland canal. Though it is not particularly usual for the women to carry burdens on the head, it is done often enough that it is not an exception. The costumes shown are typical of the north of Holland rather than the southern provinces.

It will be seen that the skates are nearly twice as long as the feet, with the fore part rising to three or four inches from the ice. Those figured belong to the kind known as Friesland, but are rather a heavy make. It is both inconvenient and unpleasant to have so much weight in the front, but the skate is better able to stand hard wear. The skates are attached by one long leather thong for each foot, the best method of crossing and tying being easy to learn, but difficult to describe in a few words. Of course, ordinary strape may be used, but they cramp the foot much more than the thong, even when this is pulled tight. The better skaters put their skates on quite loose, and in that way keep perfect circulation in the feet; but the beginner must start rather trussed up, or else he will be sure to kick his skate off in a few hundred yards.

Some idea of the stroke may be gained from the picture, but for good skating the feet should not be brought so much to the side. When this is done it is necessary to lean over on the other side to preserve the balance, and hence a curve is described towards the outside. This is the well-known Dutch roll, which is very commonly used for long distances or when one does not wish to make the strokes very frequently. The best stroke depends largely upon the exact type of skate used and the amount the blades are rocked. Ordinary Frisian skates should be quite straight for some two-thirds the length of the foot, rising about 1-32 inch in the full length. The better Frisian skates are still straighter and the Dutch more curved. With the long, very straight skates, like the best Frisian or Norwegian, the stroke should be almost exactly straight and to the front, but naturally when a skate of greater curvature is used, it is better to make a more curved path. Anyone who can use ordinary short skates at all well can very soon pick up the use of traveling skates. The writer knows many cases of moderately good ordinary skaters who, after some few hours' practice on traveling skates, have been able to make a trip of 20 miles or so with ease. Without much exertion in ordinary weather it is quite possible to travel at a pace from two to three times as fast as walking, and to keep it up for many hours. The visitor would naturally not wish to tour alone, and it is, from all points of view, very inadvisable to do so. Even with the greatest care accidents may happen, and, moreover, two or three skaters can progress together far better than alone. Either the pole mentioned above may be used, or the foremost may give one hand behind his back to the second, and so on. The pole is certainly more satisfactory, as those behind can push slightly, and so help the leader against the wind, but it requires some practice and a fairly steady stroke.

As a example of the kind of skating which may be found on the main canals is that from Leiden to Haarlem. This canal is about 20 miles long, and is rather more picturesque than many owing to the trees. It is, in fact, the nearest of all the main canals to the wooded sand-dunes. After some days' frost a refreshment shelter will be found by all villages and at many points in the country. There are many interesting comestibles to be tried at the shelters for those of an enquiring mind. The most patronized are hot milk, colored pinkish, with or without brandy, according to taste, and raisins in brandy, known as boorenjongers (young peasants), as well as eggs and biscuits.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Tuesday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these accretions of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

GROWING INSTITUTION.

Plainfield Trust Co. a Factor in the Metropolitan Banking District.

Among the financial institutions of the State the Plainfield Trust Company has taken a leading and prominent place. Almost the youngest of its class, the company is yet recognized as a strong and permanent factor in financial circles in the metropolitan district.

Its strong financial condition, and the standing it has taken, is indicated by the comparative statement for the year that has just been made public. At the close of 1903 the resources were $1,007,871.89; on March 7, 1904, they had increased to $1,091,076.80, and they are still growing. In the same period deposits increased from $806,358.34 to $982,834.11.

Plainfielders of high financial standing compose the board of directors. The body is made up as follows:

Ernest B. Ackerman, J. Herbert Case, Frederick Geller, Aug. V. Healy, Francis de L. Hyde, James W. Jackson, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Chas. W. McCutcheon, Henry A. McGee, Walter M. McGee, George P. Mellick, Isaac W. Rushmore, Samuel Townsend, Lewis E. Waring, Orville T. Waring.

SHOOT FOR NATIONAL TROPHY

ATTRACTIVE PRIZES FOR MARKSMEN OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

It will be of interest to marksmen in the National Guard of New Jersey to know the conditions under which the National trophy match will be shot this coming summer. It will be open to teams of twelve men, and there will be slow, rapid and skirmish fire. The distances will be slow fire at 200, 600, 800 and 1,000 yards; rapid fire at 300 and 500 yards; and two skirmish runs. There will be two sighting shots and ten shots for record at each range. The position will be standing at 200, and prone at the other ranges.

It will take three days to shoot the National match. On the first day the firing will be 200 and 600 yards slow fire, and 200 and 500 rapid fire. The 800 and 1,000 slow fire will be shot on the second day and the two skirmish runs on the third day. The rules governing the contest are those published in general orders No. 73, of April 27, 1903.

The first prize will be the National trophy and $500 cash; the second prize the Hilton trophy and $300 cash; the third prize the Soldier of Marathon and $200 cash; the fourth prize, $150 cash; the fifth prize $100 cash; the sixth prize $50 cash, and each member of the winning team will get a medal. The place and time for the match has not as yet been determined.

The National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice has recommended that rifle associations in the several States of the Union become affiliated with the National Rifle Association, of which General Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, is the president.

HOTEL AT WASHINGTON ROCK

NEW YORK MAN TO BUILD SUMMER RESORT ON HISTORIC SPOT.

Washington Rock is to be the site of a big summer hotel, according to reports from an authentic source.

Some years ago there was a vacation resort at the Rock, but a fire, that is remembered vividly by old residents here, destroyed it completely. It is on or near the site of the old-time hotel that the proposed resort is to be erected.

A prominent New York man is named as the backer of the new house. Plans for a striking and attractive hostelry have been made by the promoter's architect, and the work on the structure will be started very shortly.

The old hotel was one of the most successful of its kind in the State, and the new one is expected to attract just as much patronage. It is not known whether Mountain Park Inn will be re-opened next season, but even if it is the new hotel will be the most prominent one in this vicinity. Its location, and the traditions around it, constitute an advertisement that will go far to insuring a big success to the place.

SOMERSET'S BOARD.

County Freeholders Now Composed of Seven Democrats and Three Republicans.

As a result of Tuesday's election in Somerset county the standing of the board politically is now seven Democrats to three Republicans, as follows: Bedminster, David Philhower, D.; Bernards, J. A. Whitenack, D.; Branchburg, Henry W. Baird, R.; Bridgewater, William J. Logan, D.; Franklin, T. E. Gilbeau, D.; Hillborough, R. W. Hoagland, R.; Montgomery, Walter M. Vreeland, R.; North Plainfield, William M. Damler, D.; North Plainfield borough, J. Emmons, D.; Warren, Joel Coddington, D.

Increase in Publications.

The American Newspaper Annual, for 1904, published by N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, has been received by The World library. It is the most complete publication of the kind yet issue by the publishers and contains information of inestimable value to publishers and advertisers the world over, being a complete catalogue of American and Canadian newspapers, together with publications issued in the island possessions of the United States, Cuba and the West Indies. There is also a description of every city, town and hamlet in the United States and Canada, with fifty-eight colored railroad maps, and tables giving the census and the vote by States and counties at the Presidential election of 1900. The annual shows a net gain of one hundred and sixty-four newspapers and periodicals during 1903. Oklahoma has a gain of thirty-one towns and thirty-five newspapers, leading the country as to new towns, but in newspapers North Dakota leads the Territory by one. The Annual is beautifully bound and its contents are so indexed that any information sought can be found at a glance.

THE PEACOCK'S TAIL

It Is Not What Most People Suppose It to Be.

The Tail Is Confounded with the Train of the Bird—An Inexcusable Blunder on the Part of Many.

If a ballot were to be taken for the purpose of determining which was the most beautiful of the birds, the peacock would undoubtedly hold one of the highest places on the list. But this fame has brought with it a rather unenviable reputation for vanity, resting, it must be admitted, on a good foundation. Thus it is that, whether serving as the butt of the moralist, or a subject for the artist or the taxidermist, this poor bird has been made to suffer more misrepresentation than ordinarily falls to the lot of either bird or mortal. Whilst, to make matters harder, the work of these detractors not seldom appears to receive the sanction of the man of science! The misrepresentation we complain of rests on a misunderstanding. It is popularly supposed that the magnificent train of the peacock is really its tail, and on this account it is almost invariably, when represented in the familiar expanded form, placed where the tail ought to be—at the end of the body. This mistake would be pardonable if made concerning some rare bird known only from "skins;" but in view of the fact that the peacock is one of our common domesticated birds, it is altogether inexcusable. But a very little observation would show that the "tail" of this bird is a quite ordinary kind of tail; at all times concealed from view, save when the bird is moved to make that wondrous display which has been the witness against so many of their inability to interpret what they see. At this time, if the observer will but observe, he will find that the "tail" is used as a support to the train, as may be seen in our illustration.

These tail feathers have their bases covered above and below by certain long stiff feathers known as the tail coverts, and it is the coverts of the upper surface which, by their excessive development, have given rise to the train which we are now discussing. The number of feathers comprising the train, however, is far in excess of the number of the tail quills, and it would seem that their number has been increased by drawing upon the back feathers. In consequence, then, of the character of this train, it is obvious that when erected it cannot occupy the position which is assigned to it in pictures or stuffed specimens—at the end of the body, as though it corresponded to the tail of the fan-tailed pigeon. On the contrary, if we turn to the living bird we shall find that the whole of the feathers of the back are involved in the formation of this gorgeous fan. The small, highly colored metallic and sharply-defined feathers of the upper back are raised to form an oval centerpiece and backround for the head; whilst the long feathers of the tail proper rise up so as to stand almost vertically beyond the middle of the back—that is to say, so that they entirely conceal the wings when the display is viewed from the front.

The wonderful symmetry displayed in the arrangement of the "eye spots" is a point specially worthy of attention. No less remarkable is the fashion in which the bottom of the train is finished off. I will be noticed that it may be traced from the level of the breast on either side, outwards and downwards, till finally lost at the outer angle of the fan. If the shafts of the feathers of the whole train be examined, it will be found that they appear to radiate from the oval centerpiece to which we have previously drawn attention. In the stuffed bird, as in pictures, all this symmetry is conspicuous by its absence. Herein the central shield is made to lie horizontally, whilst the lower edge of the fan is made to descend from the top of the back immediately behind the displaced shield. Thus the whole of the body and wings stand out in front of the fan; whilst, as may be seen in the accompanying photographs, only the head and neck are visible from this point of view. The display, as represented by the artist and the taxidermist, is a physical impossibility.

MUSIC HALL BECOMES A STORAGE HOUSE

Theatre, Where Langtry, Mojeska and Jefferson Played, Now a Thing of the Past.

TEARING OUT INTERIOR

PLAYHOUSE NOT A PAYING VENTURE WHEN IT CLOSED ITS DOORS.

Opened Many Years Ago—Theodore Thomas and His Orchestra the First Attraction—Well Patronized in Those Days.

Stillman Music Hall as a place of amusement is now practically a thing of the past for it is doubtful indeed if the hall will ever be opened again for its original purpose. The owner, William M. Stillman, who secured the property a few days ago at a sale in the county clerk's office, Elizabeth, is making the building suitable as a storage house. Work has been started closing up the windows with bricks and the interior will be arranged to provide for the storing away of all kinds of goods. It is understood that the main floor will be placed on a level, the private boxes and seats will be removed and the space will be divided off into sections.

There is probably no institution in this city that has had a more varied career than Stillman Music Hall. It was opened years ago by local capital, under the most auspicious circumstances, by Theodore Thomas and his orchestra. Afterward such well-known people as Joseph Jefferson, Robert Mantell, Lillian Langtry, Modjeska and many other stars in the theatrical world appeared to delight large and fashionable audiences. In those days the theatre-loving people of the city did not think of going to New York for the best productions were brought here. But eventually the hall failed to pay and its management fell into other hands. Maze Edwards, now of the Casino, gave his best effort and endeavor to please the public. Finally, the only paying affairs were the annual concerts given by the Plainfield Choral Society. It has been argued that the hall was never adapted as a first-class theatre and every theatrical man who has seen the place has been convinced that many changes would have to be made to bring it up to modern requirements and make it attractive. It is also argued that so long as the people can go to New York and see the best productions at a moderate expense they will not patronize a local amusement house.

However true this may be, there was a time when the hall did pay and it is the hope of many that some day in the near future, the city will again have a suitable theatre, one that will be kept in keeping with the best that the town can afford. Such a place has a larger territory than ever to draw from and if conducted along the best lines should be a paying investment.

TALKED ON CHILD LABOR

J. S. P. STOCKS MADE ADDRESS BEFORE THE CONSUMERS' LEAGUE.

Child labor was the subject of an address by J. G. Phelps Stocks, of New York, yesterday afternoon, at a meeting in the parlors of the Congregational church in the interest of the Consumers' League of New Jersey. Mrs. Florence Kelly, secretary of the National Consumers' League, described the League's work. Miss Mary K. Whiton, of this city, is secretary of the State League.

The dwarfing effects of labor early in life were indicated by Mr. Stokes. He said that if children are to be expected to grow into good, intelligent citizenship they must have a care-free childhood. Time for play is necessary to develope them physically and mentally.

Investigations made by the League and its crusades against child labor were dealt with by Mrs. Kelly. She laid stress upon the importance of awakening the public conscience and said that if purchasers insist that their goods be made under healthful conditions, the producers will be forced to yield to their demands. Manufacturers must supply what consumers demand. Thus the responsibility for present conditions rests ultimately with the purchasing public.

Veterans' Reunion.

The members of the Second New Jersey Brigade, which was at the forefront of twenty-three battles of the Civil War, will meet at Mount Holly, Saturday, April 9, for their seventeenth annual reunion and dinner. Among the veterans belonging to the brigade are Capt. William Hand, T. O. Doane, William Payne and Isaac Randolph, of this city.

Dr. W. C. Boone, of West Seventh street, is detained at his home with a severe attack of lumbago.

UNEXPECTED INCREASE IN MUNICIPAL TAXES

Plainfield's Coffers Enriched by the Decision Holding Exemptions Unconstitutional.

BOROUGH ALSO GAINS

MEANS A MATERIAL DIFFERENCE IN THE LOCAL TAX RATE.

Total Assessed Valuation of Plainfield Over $9,000,000—Taxes in North Plainfield Amount to $66,000—Takes Effect Immediately.

There will be an appreciable difference in the tax receipts on both sides of the brook as a result of the order issued by the State Board of Assessors, officially declaring the exemption removed from the holdings of firemen and militiamen. It is extremely probable that the rates will come down.

In this city, the levy last year was $9,330,000, which represents about $370,400 in actual tax receipts. Last year the deductions resulting from the exemptions amounted to $123,250 in the assessment. Payment upon this sum on the basis of 2.53, this year's tax rate, would amount to $3,100.

Across the brook the total of taxes received figures up to $66,000. The amount that will come in if the hitherto exempt amounts are collected, figured on the current rate of 2.59, is $1,500. This figure is of peculiar importance in the borough, because the amount will go far, if not entirely, toward paying all the expenses of the paid fire department.

Collector Smith, in conversation with a reporter for The Daily Press, expressed some doubt of the collection of the increase. An attempt to pass a new law that will stand the test of constitutionality is to be made at the present session of the Legislature, he said, and appeared to think the attempt would succeed.

CITY HIGH SCHOOL A WINNER

CAPTURES BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP IN INTER-SCHOLASTIC CONTESTS.

Barely pulling through a winner in the second half of one of the hardest fought basket ball battles on record for the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, the Plainfield High School team won the championship of 1904 for Plainfield schools yesterday afternoon, downing Leal's, 9 to 8, with but a single goal from foul separating the two at the finish. Excitement was high throughout both halves, with the ball see-sawing and no apparent advantage for either team. It was even up all the time, with the supporters of both fives including a fair representation of girls yelling themselves hoarse. The High School rooters were directed by Francis Anderson and the Leal's backers by Richard Lovell.

High School drew first blood, Thompson making good for the first two points about seven minutes after play began. Leal's quickly tied the score. Abbott and Doane threw baskets for Leal's in this half, which ended in Leal's favor, 4 to 2. It was a tight race in the second period, the High School boys tiring their opponents somewhat towards the end and forcing the play all the time. Thompson landed two baskets in this period and one goal from foul which, with Guinn's goal, made seven points and the odd one necessary to win the game. Chapman, for Leal's, made one goal from the floor and one from foul and Abbott scored on a foul.

The liveliness of the game at times approached roughness. Excellent guarding rendered much of the attempts at team work ineffective for both fives. Thompson score saved of the High School's nine points and played a star game throughout. He was well supported. Leal's presented a well balanced team.

The score:

High School—Freeman and Thompson, forwards; Guinn, centre; Gavett and Fenno guards. Leal's — Doane and Chapman, forwards; Abbott, centre; Strong and Haughey, guards. Goals from the floor—Thompson, 3; Guinn, Chapman, Doane, Abbott. Goals from foule—Thompson, Chapman, Abbott. Referee—Dr. Browning. Umpire — Kenneth Robbie. Scorer—John H. Deane. Time—20 min. periods.

SOME GUBERNATORIAL BEES

SWACKHAMER'S CHANGE OF TACTICS IN LEGISLATURE AND ITS MEANING.

Gubernatorial ambitions are held to be accountable for the lack of oratory on the minority side in the Senate and House this session. In the lawmaking period of last year one Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Somerset County, facetiously termed Samuel Swingarm Swackhamer, had the majority members frightened out of countenance by the vigor of his verbal attacks and the sting of his sharp tongue. But this session the tall man from Somerset, who has adopted a long-tail coat and Websterian hair, has been dignified and has declined to use his command of anecdote to adorn his speeches or to put his antagonists on the rout.

The belief lies in the House that the Somerset man's change of front is due to the boom which he has received for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and a desire to win in his fights by the force of argument, rather than by overwhelming his opponents with ridicule. Not once since the session began has he resorted to his tactics of last year, and not even when an Essex yearling, Edward D. Duffield, ventured to tackle him with his own familiar weapons did he respond, but preserved his new dignity and let the youngster get away with the honors.

The gubernatorial bee is alleged to be putting in overtime in the little Senate chamber, also, where Senators Samuel Shannon Childs, of Somerset, and Thomas M. Ferrell, of Gloucester, are rivals in point of dignified forebearance. Senator Ferrell was the choice of one wing of the Democracy when the nomination went to James M. Seymour two years ago and the Gloucester man is credited with a superstition that the lightning which came so close to him at that time may be better aimed this fall. Mr. Childs, too, according to the tales of his friends, would not be averse to trying conclusions with former Senator Edward C. Stokes, or any other Republican for the comfortable chair now occupied by Governor Murphy.—Trenton State Gazette.

CHURCH CONCERT A TREAT

BIG AUDIENCE AT CONGREGATIONALIST'S MUSICALE WELL PLEASED.

An audience of 500 that filled the Congregational church to the last pew was delightfully entertained Thursday by a musical and readings presented by the music committee of the church. The talent was local, and the programme of wide range as to variety.

A quartette consisting of Elmer D. Cutting, first tenor; Morris C. VanArsdale, second tenor; Ralph K. Miner, first bass, and Fred S. Cutter, second bass, accompanied by C. A. Braider, rendered "Water Lillies," "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son," a selected quartette, and responded to several encores which their quality of work called forth. Mr. Cutting, accompanied by Mr. Braider, gave a selected solo which was heartily received. "Lend Me Thy Fillett Love," "Where Are You Going?" and "The Woodbird's Song" were presented by a mixed quartette consisting of Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Mrs. Ralph K. Miner, contralto; Fred B. Tallamy, tenor, and Fred S. Cutter, bass. The selections were among the finest on the programme.

A duet by Miss Cornelia Miller and Mrs. R. K. Miner, "On the Wings of Music," evoked enthusiastic applause, and a "Serenade" by Miss Miller and Mr. Tallamy was equally appreciated. Fred S. Cutter was obliged to respond to an encore by his rendering of Tosti's "The Armorer's Song" and "Beauty's Eyes." The most amusing numbers on the programme were readings by Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, "Her First Visit to the Butcher Shop" and a satire on the "Sweet Girl Graduate." These were finely rendered. The programme concluded with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by the entire audience.

The music committee which made the arrangements, consisted of Frank A. Weeks and Morris C. VanArsdale. The ushers were Charles B. Morse, Samuel H. Craig, William Morgan, Willard Wadsworth, Charles Belknap and Warren Weeeman.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 20.

Topic.—Little things that Christ makes great.—I Cor. i, 2-3.

On one occasion during the Centennial exposition of 1876 in Philadelphia suddenly the machinery of the great exhibition stopped. The wonderful Corliss engine that furnished the power for all the various departments was examined, and it was found that one of its small steel parts was disarranged, and yet it brought everything in the exposition to a complete standstill! Thus we are taught that the day of small things is not to be despised. In nature and in human history God constantly emphasizes the fact that little things can become great and are of great importance. An acorn becomes a giant oak. The constant falling water wears away the stone and makes the mighty Niagara falls. The failing of an apple led to the discovery of the law of gravitation, the spider's web across a pathway caused the suspension bridge, and the escaping steam from a boiling kettle furnished the idea of the application of steam as a power in the industrial world. What wonderful results from such feeble beginnings! Yet the little that God was in it, and God is all we can learn that God can make little things great.

The history of the Christian church proves the ability of God in Christ to make greatness from littleness. Gideon with 300 men overcame a great army of the Midianites. David with a sling and pebble conquered the Philistian giant and led to Israel's great victory over the ancient enemy. In the early history of the Christian church the same fact is richly illustrated. Not many wise in human wisdom, not many men occupying exalted positions, not many men of distinguished family history were called to establish Christ's kingdom. Instead, Christ called humble, unknown, and in some cases, and tradesmen that the world might know that Christianity was divinely and not humanly established—"that no flesh should glory in His presence."

The church and Christian people often need to recall the fact that God and Christ can make small things great. Cicero says that the Corinthians were "famous not only for their luxuriousness, but also for their wealth and philosophic culture." The Corinthians therefore needed this lesson. They may have been inclined to trust too much in the wisdom, luxury, wealth and culture of men rather than in Christ, and hence Paul tells them that these things are nothing to God and that His method is to use foolishness rather than wisdom, men of low degree rather than men of high degree, the base things, the despised things, of the world, and yet out of them to make great men and great things, because He is God. The Christian church today tends to pander to worldly wisdom, wealth and culture. The wise are honored overmuch. The rich too often lord it over the church simply because of their riches, and culture is given a higher place in the church than simple and humble piety. Individual Christians also need to be reminded of this lesson. There are many unused talents in our churches because they are not great talents, many little deeds undone because they are not great deeds, many helpful words unspoken because they cannot be eloquently spoken. Christ can make little things great—the little word, the little deed, the little talent. Therefore consecrate it to Him and let Him use it for His glory, and not only will it redound to His honor and glory, but also to your own good, for not even a cup of cold water given in His name is without its reward. Therefore despise not the day of small things, for Christ can make the little things great.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. xxvii, 9-13; Ps. xix, 14; Zech. iv, 1-14; Matt. x, 42; xii, 36; xxv, 14-30; xxvi, 6-13; Mark iv, 30-32; xii, 41-44; John vi, 1-13; Jas. iii, 1-6.

The Forward Movement.

In October and November 141 new societies were reported at Christian Endeavor headquarters. Of this number fourteen came from New York and Indiana, thirteen from Michigan, nine from Massachusetts, nine from Oregon, eight from Texas, seven from Maine and six each from Kansas, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

Endeavor In Micronesia.

Two new societies, of separate languages, are reported by Dr. C. F. Rife of Kusaie, Caroline Islands, one of forty members in the Gilbert Islands Training school at Kusaie and the other of thirty for the Kusaians. The first society in Micronesia was organized in 1895.

News Notes That Stir.

Sir Chentung Liang Cheung, the new Chinese minister to this country, has uttered words of highest praise of the Christian Endeavor society and Young Men's Christian association in that country, and particularly of the medical missionaries and hospitals.

The Christian Endeavor Endeavor union has offered to support one or two German missionaries in the Caroline islands under the care of the American board, thus filling the places of the English speaking missionaries whom the German government removed.

In nine months the Congregational society of Griggsville, Ill., has raised $50 for missions, to be divided equally between home and foreign work. It has seventeen active and three associate members, and leading this list of members who give the best in the Christian Endeavor society are the heaviest givers in another people's missionary society and give to the young church. During its life as a society it has carpeted and carved the chapel room, bought a new organ and books for it without once dropping mission work.

DREDGERS BRING UP GOLD.

Unique Industry Which Is Assuming Gigantic Proportions in Some Parts of California.

One of the strangest methods of mining in the world is being carried on in the Feather river meadows, below the city of Oroville, in Butte county, Cal. It consists in removing thousands of tons of gold-bearing mud and gravel from the bottom of Feather river, which in some places is more than 20 feet in depth.

From 15 to 20 great dredges are employed in the Oroville district, each having a capacity of from 2,000 to 3,000 cubic yards every 24 hours. Some of the great floating mines burrow down into the river bottom as far as 25 feet, 50 feet from the surface being the lowest depth at which the big shovels operate. The success of the dredgers has been phenomenal. Last year the floating mines produced about $1,600,000. This year the miners expect to double that record. The ground worked averages from 15 to 75 cents, and often more, per cubic yard, but the cost of operating the dredgers, including an allowance for wear and tear on machinery, is in many of the dredgers only four cents per cubic yard, and in none of them does it exceed 12 per cent.

HUNTING FOR GOLD.
(Dredge Used in Removing Gold-Bearing Mud and Gravel.)

It is only from 25 to 30 feet to bed rock, and this deposit is easily excavated. The dredgers at work at the present time are taking out 25,000 to 30,000 cubic yards of gravel daily.

Two classes of dredgers are used. The more popular form consists of an endless chain of buckets. These lift the gravel on an inclined plane to the head of the sluices and concentrating tables attached to the dredger. The machinery which operates the bucket belt also pumps the water used in the concentrator in separating the precious contents from the dross.

The principle in extracting the gold flakes and minute nuggets is identical with that adopted by the old placer miner in the days of '49, when he washed the gold in his cradle in some of the very localities where the dredgers are now operating.

The other type of dredger is the scoop dredger. Attempts have been made to "work" these river beds with suction dredgers, but these have not been successful, as the high specific gravity of the gold enables it to escape from the suction when the cutter breaks down the pay dirt.

ADMIRAL SOTOKICHI URIU.

Japanese Hero of Chemulpo Is a Christian and Was Educated in This Country.

Admiral Sotokichi Uriu, the hero of the battle of Chemulpo, was among the first of his nation to take advantage of the privilege of being educated at Annapolis. He was an earnest student while there, and acquired a thorough mastery of every study he took up.

Outside of his studies his chief interest lay in religious work. He is not only a Christian in theory, but he has lived his life according to his professions.

At Annapolis he was president of the Y. M. C. A., and often led and addressed meetings. Phil. McGiffin, the hero of the battle of the Yalu during the Chino-Japanese war, was one of Uriu's classmates and close friends, though the two were absolutely unlike each other and seemed to have nothing in common.

After his Annapolis course Uriu went to a technical school in England and then returned to Japan as an aid in the admiralty. He has ever since maintained a correspondence with his friends here, and has been kept closely posted on the development of naval affairs in this country.

Uriu's wife was also educated in the United States, being a graduate of Vassar.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 20: "Little Things Made Great."—I Cor. i, 25-29.

"God chose the weak things of the world that He might put to shame the things that are strong."

Paul had heard that there were cliques forming in the church at Corinth. This church was made up of most diverse elements. It was situated in a commercial metropolis and naturally attracted people from all parts of the world and of most varied occupations, traits of character and habits. Greeks in large numbers were there resident and, being so near Athens, would be influenced by the views and practices of that most cultured of Greek cities. The temples of Corinth were noted throughout the east for their wealth, luxury and licentiousness. Jews and gentiles mingled on the streets almost as promiscuously as in Rome itself, and all the social problems which could arise in such a complex condition of society seem to have come to the surface in the life of the early Christian community. Some of these appear to have been referred to the judgment of Paul, the founder of the church, for his advice. His answers are in the two letters which form the Epistles to the Corinthians in the New Testament.

The origin of the little circles or groups into which the church was fast dividing seems to have been in the different views held by the leading Christian teachers on some points of belief and practice. Some claimed to be Paulists, others Apollusites, Peterites or Christites.

Paul corrects this tendency to schism by declaring Jesus to be the only Saviour and all others are co-workers to establish His kingdom. He reveals the double tendency of human nature as displayed in Jewish and Greek mental traits of mind and shows how God has in the gospel of Jesus Christ met and answered the questions and needs of universal human nature and provided a world Redeemer; all of this in a simple manner than any one could have imagined possible and by this simplicity forever reaching all human need. The Jews and orientals in general, particularly those of Semitic race, are attracted by the wonderful in religion. Signs, prodigies and trances are valued as sure evidences of divine revelation. They looked for a Messiah who should be a world conquering hero and by miraculous powers overcome all enemies. The supernatural ever appealed to them. All nature was manifestation of Jehovah's power, but the unusual displayed it most convincingly.

The Greeks were religious in a different way. The reason was most emphasized with them. They had far less of the mystical and more of intellectual habits of mind.

Jesus performed prodigies, and yet so differently from what the Jews expected that crucifixion resulted. Then came resurrection, the most wonderful sign that all the ages have seen. But Messiah crucified was and is to the Jews a stumbling block and rock of offense.

To the Greeks this same story of "the cross" is the height of unwisdom, and its presentation is folly. So it remains to the present time to two great classes of people.

But to those who accept the Crucified One and are transformed in soul purposes and feel the impulse of new life He becomes power and wisdom of God. The truth is simplicity itself, but reveals depths of divine grace and glory beyond all imagination.

The Lord and the Word.

The very humanness of the Lord in His earthly life, the very limitations of the nature which He took from men, brought Him near in sympathy to those whom He would help. They made Him approachable, they made Him intelligible as He could not have been if He had been only the Son of God. The same is true of the written word. A word in divine language, in forms of thought foreign to men in their weak, suffering life, would not be useful. Men could not approach it. They could not understand it. They could not receive comfort and strength and healing from it. Therefore, the Lord has made His word also to be the Son of Man.—Helper.

The Safeguard Against Temptation.

The safeguard against temptation is not seclusion, but self culture. As it is not disinfectants which will most certainly secure one against infection, but a sound constitution, so it is not rules of life which will strengthen one against temptation, but a strong soul. One must build up his moral constitution by the habit of noble deeds and high thinking, by fellowship with pure women and honorable men. The chief aids in this regimen are literature and friendship.—Ian Maclaren.

It Changes Not.

Infidelity has its fashions, but its root changes not. An evil heart is at the bottom of all its manifestations. It takes on divers forms at different eras and under different circumstances, but it still shows that its vitalizing source is a permanent heart of unbelief. Nothing but grace can change the unrenewed heart and save from the varying apprehensions of divine truth.—Presbyterian.

True Sayings.

There is but one failure, and that is not to be true to the best one knows.

When thou wouldst help another, study to please not thyself in the doing, but him whom servest. So shalt thou be unselfish indeed.

The Thread of Life.

I sometimes feel the thread of life is slender,
And soon with me the labor will be wrought;
Then grows my heart to other hearts more tender,
The time is short.

ARMSTRONG MULFORD WEDS MISS THOMPSON

A Well-Known Real Estate Man Takes Miss Mabel F. Thompson as His Bride.

QUIET NUPTIAL EVENT

CEREMONY TAKES PLACE IN FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CHAPEL.

Miss Cora Young and Frank Marcley the Only Witnesses—Southern Wedding Trip—Groom a Leading Real Estate Broker.

Miss Mabel Florence Thompson, eldest daughter of Mrs. Catharine L. Thompson, of 43 Prospect place, North Plainfield, and Armstrong Mulford, of East Fifth street, were quietly married at 6:30 o'clock Thursday in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church by the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring. The only ones present to witness the ceremony were Miss Cora Young and Frank Marcley, both of this city, who attended the couple as bridesmaid and best man.

The bride was gowned in crepe de Paris, trimmed with lace and she wore a hat to match.

Soon after the ceremony the bride and groom and their attendants went to New York, from which place the couple left for the South, where they will visit Richmond, Old Point Comfort and Washington. They will be absent a week and upon their return will reside in East Fifth street.

The bride was for a long time engaged at Woodhull & Martin's store, and the groom has for years been one of the leading real estate and insurance brokers in the city.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

LUNCHEON TO REGENTS.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Among the Guests at D. A. R. Gathering.

Mrs. Cornelius Hook, president of the Old Barracks Association, gave a luncheon to the State Regents of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the Old Barracks, and among the guests was Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, regent of Continental Chapter, of this city. Souvenirs made at Willett's pottery, consisting of a tray ornamented with a blue print of the barracks, were presented by Mrs. Hook to each of the guests. An authentic signature of George Washington will soon be placed in the halls furnished by Mrs. Hook.

Mrs. Moore Buried.

Funeral services for Mrs. Henrietta A. Moore, widow of William B. Moore, were held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Moore's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Moore, 500 East Second street. Rev. Erskine M. Bodman, rector emeritus of Grace church, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson.

To Employ One Hundred Men.

The Standard Surgical Instrument Company, of Brooklyn, to which J. C. Vail has leased the factory, corner Fourth and Washington streets, employes in the neighborhood of 100 skilled workmen. The company will follow the Plainfield Tool Company which did not prove successful. The Beeton, Dickinson Company, which originally occupied the factory, left for New York because of its growth of business.

Enforcing Building Ordinance.

Forgetful of the fact that a building ordinance had been passed in the borough recently, Oscar Moore started a frame barn on his place at 62 Deer street a few days ago. The attention of the borough officials was called to the violation of the law, and Thursday J. K. Arnold ordered the work stopped. This is the first action taken under the new law. The barn had reached a partially completed stage.

REV. DR. C. C. HALL LAUDED THE JAPANESE

President of Union Theological Seminary Warmly Received at Hope Chapel.

ABOUT INDIA AND JAPAN

TOLD OF THESE TWO COUNTRIES AND THEIR INHABITANTS.

High Praise for Pluck of Flowery Kingdom's People for Resisting Russia—Stereopticon Views—Lecturer Received Applause.

High praise and sympathy for Japan in her war with Russia by Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D.D., president of Union Theological Seminary, evoked a storm of applause at Hope chapel Thursday. Dr. Hall gave an illustrated lecture on "The Work for the Kingdom in India and Japan" in the fourth of the series of mid-week Lenten meetings at the chapel. He lauded the high purpose of Japan, expressed admiration for the character of her people and her courage in resisting Russian aggression in Asia.

Dr. Hall's stereopticon views of Japan and India were well chosen as to subjects but were not more interesting than the word-paintings with which he accompanied them. The illustrations of India pictured the characteristic scenes of the natives and many of the most beautiful buildings and bits of attractive scenery. A set of three illustrations showing the process of extracting poison from a hooded cobra through the offices of a physician and snake-charmer were particularly good. The poison is injected into the blood of horses, from which it is taken again after the animals have become thoroughly inoculated, subjected to a chemical process and sent in the form of a powder all over the country to serve as an antidote to snake bites. The effects of the intense heat of the Indian sun were noted in the costumes of both natives and foreigners.

The results of Christian missions in India were revealed in pictures of those natives who have come under the influence of the missions and whose appearance of happiness and well-being contrasts strikingly with that of the victims of native castes and religions.

The Japanese pictures showed clearly the intelligence of the people, their quickness to learn, and the benefits that a progressive Christianity has brought to so many of them.

EXPLAIN LAW TO ASSESSORS

STATE BOARD MEETS UNION COUNTY ASSESSORS AT ELIZABETH.

To give the Union County Board of Assessors information on the new tax law, the State Board of Assessors met Thursday at the temporary court house in Elizabeth. There was a large gathering of the county assessors from Elizabeth, Roselle, Roselle Park, Westfield, Cranford, Rahway and this city, and nearly all had some point which they desired explained by members of the State boards, who have given the new taxation laws a thorough and comprehensive study.

William Eckerson, president of the county board, inquired whether a property bought from the trustees of the State school fund or other State institution and a mortgage given for a part of the consideration, would be exempt to the extent of the mortgage. Major Lents replied that it would not be.

A Plainfield assessor raised the question as to whether firemen and members of the National Guard are exempt to the extent of $500, as under the old law. Under the new law, however, they are not exempt, except from poll tax. Although the matter has been carried to the Court of Appeals, the assessors said that under the recent decision of the Supreme Court the law does not allow an exemption.

The attention of the county assessors was also called to the separate assessment of buildings and land. This is applicable in Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, although it has not been the practice in the last-named town. The assessors explained that in all cases where there was any conflict between a municipal charter, and the new State tax law the latter must be strictly adhered to and the charter disregarded. Uncollected taxes are governed by the new regime, except those due previous to 1903.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of East Seventh street, is detained a home by illness.

Miss Mary Duvier, of West Fifth street, has recovered from her recent illness.

John Corcoran, of Raritan, has been the guest of relatives in this city for several days.

PLANS TO PREVENT FLOODS IN EAST END

Mr. Gavett Has a Scheme to Relieve a Bad Condition Caused by Heavy Rains.

HE IS UNCOMMUNATIVE

IDEA EXPECTED TO WORK OUT ALL RIGHT IN REASONABLE TIME.

Deepening of Cedar Brook Suggested as Means of Bringing Some Relief—Matters at Their Worst in the Vicinity of Hill Street.

Plans for the relief of the lowlands in the East End from floods after rain are being made by Street Commissioner Gavett. The plan deals with the conditions that convert the streets about the water tank, in the vicinity of North avenue and Hill street, into a miniature sea whenever anything like a heavy rainfall occurs. Commissioner Gavett believes he has found the right plan, but refuses to say anything about it for publication at this time.

Topographical conditions so combine at the points mentioned that the surplus water can do nothing but flood the section badly. The chief feeder of the flood is the Pauwood cut, through which the water pours in a steady, whelming stream every time the clouds empty themselves of anything more than a summer shower.

Conditions around Richmond street are bad enough, as is generally known, but the flooding of the streets in the section further east is worse by a good deal. A good sized spring rain covers the throughfares so deeply with water that children float tubs down the center of the streets. Commissioner Gavett is authority for that statement.

Mr. Gavett said yesterday that his plan for correcting the flood conditions might work out in two years. Further than this he would say nothing.

Some slight relief of the western end of the low section might be obtained if the suggested deepening of Cedar brook is done. This work is being agitated by the city officials, who regard the problem created by the overflow of water from the brook as a serious one.

There is no doubt that if the brook were widened and deepened, it would carry off all the rain water that flows into it, and save Richmond street from floods.

Property owners about the brook have become aroused and a good deal of pressure is being put on the city officials to insure some action. It has been suggested that the deepened brook be paved at the bottom, but there are good objections to that, because the stream is largely fed by springs, which concrete paving would choke up.

CHURCH SOCIETY ELECTS

ANNUAL MEETING OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Officers were elected by the Women's Home Missionary Society, of the First Presbyterian church, at its annual session Friday. The session was well attended in spite of the inclement weather, and a good deal of interest was manifested in the proceedings.

It was a most successful year that the meeting closed. Mrs. E. M. Shotwell, the treasurer, was not present to offer her report, but it is known that the finances of the organization are in very good shape. The society has more than held its own in membership, a total of about 60 names being on the roll. One of the most successful departments has been the Sewing Circle, under the direction of Miss Kendall. Detailed reports of notable work that this department has done will be made at a meeting to be held next Thursday at the home of Mrs. W. W. Dunn.

Only one new officer was elected, Mrs. Lester Leggett, wife of the temporary pastor of Third Street chapel, to the vice presidency. All the other officers were re-elected, as follows:

President, Mrs. H. A. Pope; secretary, Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland; treasurer, Mrs. E. M. Shotwell; secretary of literature, Mrs. John Johnson; secretary of sewing department, Miss Kendall.

Old Offender Rearrested.

Fred Willabald, at one time a well-known character in this city, and who was released last Wednesday after serving a three months' sentence in the county jail on a charge of highway robbery, was arrested Saturday night on a similar charge and re-committed to jail. This time he is accused of having held up a woman at Cranford and taking $20 from her.

PRESBYTERIANS TO GATHER

MEMBERS OF HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETIES TO ASSEMBLE HERE.

There will be a large gathering of Presbyterian women in this city on Thursday, March 24. On that day the Presbyterial Society, which includes all the Women's Home Mission Societies in the Elizabeth Presbytery, will hold its annual session in the First Presbyterian church.

It is expected that every church in the Presbytery, which includes a large number of towns in this vicinity, from Pinckamin to Elizabeth, will be represented. The session will be an all-day one. The programme has not yet been arranged in full, but it will undoubtedly be of unusual interest to Presbyterian women in general. Plainfield members will take part in it.

One of the social features of the day will be a luncheon which the women of the First Presbyterian church society will tender to the visitors. Mrs. B. A. Pope is chairman of the committee in charge.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Albert Waldman, of Chatham street, to Miss Florence Boylan, of Potter's Crossing, was announced yesterday. The wedding will take place on June 26.

PHILLIP BREEN IS DEAD

FORMER RESIDENT OF PLAINFIELD DIED AT HIS HOME IN ELIZABETH.

Phillip Breen, for many years a well-known resident of this city, died at his home in Elizabeth, Friday. While in Plainfield Mr. Breen was engaged in the painting business and for several years he was chief of police here, being an efficient and able head of that department. He afterward was appointed warden of the Union county jail, which position he filled to the entire satisfaction of all. Later he was a detective for the New Jersey Central, which position he held until recently. In politics Mr. Breen was a sterling Democrat and he enjoyed the fellowship of a large circle of friends. He is survived by a widow, two daughters and one son. Mrs. Margaret McGinley, of East Third street, is a sister of Mr. Breen.

Arthur Calsen, of Orchard place, visited friends in Elizabeth Sunday.

Mrs. George P. Homan, of West Front street, is much improved from a recent attack of pneumonia.

Miss Clara Denton, of Belmar, who has been visiting in this city for some time past, has gone to New York, where she will visit relatives for a time.

EVACUATION NIGHT FOR VOLUNTEER FIREMEN

North Plainfield's Deposed Laddies Mark the Occasion in a Fitting Way.

HOLD A BIG BANQUET

SPEECHES MADE BY OFFCERS PAST AND PRESENT.

All But One Answer to Final Roll Call—Ceremonies Held in Manhattan Hotel—Men Will Compose Social Organization.

Marking the wind-up of the volunteer department, the citizen-firemen of the borough held a supper at the Manhattan Hotel at midnight last Monday. It was a funeral ceremony to a great extent, a dozen or more orations on the passing of the volunteer system being delivered.

I was at midnight that the new department formally assumed charge of the apparatus, and to make it fitting the volunteers waited until the final minute of their existence as a organization before starting the farewell affair.

An hour or more before 11 o'clock, Warren and West End carted everything belonging to the volunteers from the Somerset street house to the Heyniger building across the street, where the headquarters of the social organization, that will be formed by the two companies, is located. And at midnight everything was in readiness for formal abdication.

At five minutes to twelve both companies lined up in the meeting room of the engine house, and the final roll was read. There were two absentees in each company, men who could not possibly be present. Secretary David Bodine called the roll of Warren, and Assistant Foreman Bagley read that of the West End.

The name of George Giddes, a West End member, the only man among the city's volunteers who entered the new department, was not read in the roll. Feeling of the bitterest character was expressed against him, and abuse of the strongest kind was showered on him from every man among the other volunteers. Giddes had come to the engine house to attend the last roll of his company, but the members refused to associate with him. He was called a traitor and other things much worse, and the reviling became so warm that he was forced to take refuge in one of the stalls at the extreme rear of the stables. Even there he was not free from the anger and contempt of his ex-comrades.

Just as the clock chimed twelve, one tap was sounded on the big bell, and the volunteers marched solemnly from their headquarters in double file, Chief Stahl and Assistant Chief Klinsman in the lead, with a drum to keep the marchers in time. No demonstration was made, the men marching quietly to the hotel.

Although a number of speeches were made, the supper, spread in the long bowling alley of the hostelry, was very informal. A half dozen friends of the firemen, including two members of the city department, were present. Souvenirs in the form of round, ribbon-strung cards, with an "in memoriam" inscription, were distributed.

Dr. J. H. Buchanan, of Warren, delivered a brief address of welcome. After the supper speeches were made by Chief Stahl, Assistant Chief Klinsman, Col. Albert Perry, William N. Rangbors, George Fairchild, David Allen, William Debele, William Demarest, David Bodine, Ephriam Compton, John Sebenck, Charles Keller, Harry Coddington, Jacob Higgins, William Mills and John Shropp. All the speakers deplored the death of the old system, and recalled the glories of the volunteer organization. Bitter reference was made to the make-up of the new department, to "the one man among sixty who has gone over to the other side," and to Mayor Smalley. Chief Stahl took occasion to thank his comrades for supporting him in the fight against the administration.

Between the speeches there were songs by William Doud, Thomas M. Muir and Frank Perry.

The committee on the affair consisted of William Debele, Charles Stahl, William Doud, James Walker and Jacob Higgins, for Warren, and Herman Klinsman, Charles Keller, Peter Strum and John Bremmer, for West End.

No Verbal Rural Delivery.

According to the latest order, rural mail carriers are prohibited from carrying verbal messages on their routes. The proper method of communication is to write a letter or a postal to be delivered by the carrier. The government desires all the revenue possible from this service and expects those who are benefitted by it to pay for it.

MINERS' WAGE SCALE

Coal Workers In Nine States Vote on Reduction.

RESULT NOT YET DETERMINED.

Reports From Fifty Points Indicate That the Owners' Proposition to Decrease Pay 5 1-2 Per Cent Will Be Accepted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 16.—One hundred and ninety thousand coal miners of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, western and central Pennsylvania, Michigan, Iowa, eastern Kentucky, West Virginia and Maryland dropped their picks at noon to cast their ballots on the proposition to accept or refuse the offer of the mine owners for a two year scale at a reduction of 5½ per cent from the present scale of wages. The voting was done by ballot.

The ballots were in charge of the secretaries of the local lodges of the United Mine Workers of America, each miner being handed one favorable acceptance of the scale and another favoring its rejection. The secretaries will forward the result to the national headquarters here, and they will be counted tomorrow. The national tellers to count the votes here will be Nat Charlton of Streator, Ill.; William Fitzsimmons of Dunmore, Pa., and James Pritchard of Hemlock, O.

Reports have been received here from about fifty points. In practically all of these, including towns in Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, western Pennsylvania and Illinois, the sentiment as voted is heavily in favor of accepting the scale as offered. President Mitchell and Secretary Wilson have remained at the national headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America to receive any telegraphic returns, although they said they had arranged for none in advance. Both were confident that the miners had voted in favor of the scale.

Two to One For Acceptance.

BAY CITY, Mich., March 16.—A report that is being generally accepted here coming from a reliable source is to the effect that the vote of the miners of the Saginaw valley on the proposition submitted by the operators at the Indianapolis convention was two to one in favor of acceptance. The vote will not be given out until after it is counted at national headquarters.

Permanent Camps Chosen.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The house committee on military affairs agreed on four sites for permanent military camp grounds and authorized a favorable report on a bill for their purchase. Provision also is made for the enlargement of the Chattanooga and Oklahoma National park by the acquisition of 10,000 acres, to cost $100,000. The camp sites selected are: At Fort Sam Houston, Tex., 25,000 acres, to cost $125,000; Camp Douglas, in Juneau and Mourai counties, Wis., 20,000 acres, to cost $60,000; Conestoga valley, in Lebanon, Dauphin and Lancaster counties, Pa., 18,000 acres, to cost $900,000; the J. N. Henry ranch, San Luis Obispo county, Cal., 22,000 acres, to cost $500,000.

Pitiable Case of Two Old Sisters.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—Mary Farrell, known also as Mary Hansel, aged sixty-one years, was found dead, and her sister, Mrs. Bridget Kennedy, sixty-five years of age, was found demented in an unfurnished frame house here, the result, according to the police, of starvation. The dead woman and her sister were entirely nude when found, the demented woman having stripped the clothing from both their persons and torn it into shreds. Neighbors claim that the old couple were left in the empty house five weeks ago by a nephew and niece, for whom the police have instituted a search.

Think Marx Is Lying.

BUFFALO, March 16.—Austin Crowe, an east side saloon keeper, was shot and killed on June 28, 1902. The details of the crime are similar to those for which Marx, the Chicago car barn murderer, has been sentenced to death, the murder following a holdup. Three men giving the names of Charles Green, John Doyle, alias Fred Mercer, and John Richards were arrested for the crime, but they were acquitted. Superintendent Bull said: "I think Marx is lying. He has read about these crimes in the papers and is making up the story."

Embezzling Postmaster Arrested.

NEW YORK, March 16.—On a charge of embezzling government funds amounting to $244 August Hauser, postmaster at Hickerville, N. Y., has been arrested there and was later arraigned before United States Commissioner Morle in Brooklyn and held to await the action of the grand jury. He secured waived examination.

Northern Pacific Meeting Adjourned.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The adjourned annual meeting of the Northern Pacific railway was again adjourned until May 17, no business being transacted. The majority of Northern Pacific stock is owned by the Northern Securities company, which has been enjoined from voting this stock; hence the repeated adjournments.

Yale Student and Millionaire.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 16.—The Fifth Minnesota district Republicans have elected W. W. Heffelfinger and C. A. Smith delegates to the national convention. The former is the famous Yale football guard; the latter is a millionaire lumberman.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; northeasterly winds.

BUILDING LOT FREE TO FIRST COUPLE

Justice of the Peace Silas Dewey Drake's Offer More Tempting Than Hand's.

INDUCEMENT TO WED

LINCOLN'S MAYOR ATTEMPTING TO CORNER THE MATRIMONIAL MARKET.

First Pair That Swears "for Better or for Worse" Before Him to Receive a Handsome Present—No Conditions Attached.

"A house lot in the town of Lincoln to the first couple I marry."

That in effect is the proclamation issued by Silas Dewey Drake, "mayor" and postmaster of Lincoln and newly elected justice of the peace of Piscataway township, who desires to celebrate fittingly his entrance upon his high office.

Mr. Drake will not allow Lincoln to be outdone by any Plainfield "J. P." who may see fit to perform marriage services free of charge with special presents to the bride as extra inducements. He proclaims his supremacy as a purveyor of balm to torn hearts by offering to start a young couple on the highway of married life with a desirable building lot as a wedding gift.

The rules and regulations governing the contest for the chosen ground have not yet been announced. It is possible that the competition for the honor of being the first couple married by the justice of Lincoln may be so keen that a special footrace or walking match may become necessary as the only fair method of deciding the winner.

The vision of a half dozen aspiring couples at the starting point of a race course in rural Lincoln, with timers, stop watches in hand, at the finish ready for the momentous decision; and in the background the grave and reverend judge in the paraphernalia of his office prepared to do his worst provokes a fleeting smile.

Another blow has been struck at the institution of singleness that is called blessed. Not since the extraordinary leap year proclamation of Judge Hezekiah Hand has there been so much trepidation in the bosoms of the matrimonially inclined, and the bashful swains who have been gradually coming out of the lairs in which they have lured since the excitements of Judge Hand's leap year bombshell have again retired to Dismal swamp.

ST. MARY'S BASEBALL PLANS

STATUS OF TEAM TO DEPEND ON THAT OF OTHER LOCAL NINES.

Announcements of some definite character regarding the make-up and policy of the St. Mary's baseball team for next season are expected by the followers of the nine within a very short time. Conferences by the leading spirits of the club, and general meetings, have been held at intervals all through the fall and winter, and the group of enthusiasts back of the combination are pretty close to a decision as to what they are going to do for the combination.

When the discussions and conferences first started in October the ideas were all of a paid team on the plan of the one with which the club romped through the closing period of last season. Since then the baseball situation and outlook have changed considerably, and the club has been talking a half-and-half team and a purely amateur one.

John Owens, who piloted the team through the hair-raising finish of last season, had something to say of the prospects the other day. "We have decided on one thing," he said. "St. Mary's will have the best team around here. Whether that will be an all-paid combination, a semi-professional one, or purely amateur has not yet been fixed. It all depends on what the situation here is when things settle down."

That expresses the state of the St. Mary's baseball mind at this juncture. But there is a decided trend toward semi-professionalism, and those who are in close touch with the backers are looking for a decision to run a team like those under the Alis and Westfield colors. This idea is strengthened by the fact that Alis has committed herself to semi-professionalism, which gives St. Mary's an incentive to go back into the fast company she travelled with last season.

Negotiations of tentative character have been made with Driscoll, the first baseman who captained the team last year, and he is ready to go back with the team again. If the club decides on semi-professionalism Driscoll will be put in charge of the combination. This statement comes from the most authoritative source, and the fans can put it down as certain.

DIVORCED MONDAY AND WED WEDNESDAY

After Encountering Some Obstacles, Couple Tries a Second Matrimonial Venture.

THE SECRET LEAKS OUT

THEO. COX, OF NEW YORK, RELATIVE OF "SUNSET" COX, THE GROOM.

A Miss Norwood His Bride—Presbyterian Minister Refuses to Tie the Knot, But Groom Overcomes the Difficulty and Two Are Made One.

Divorced in the metropolis Monday, a well-known New Yorker launched himself anew on the sea of matrimony in this city two days later. He must have been determined to embark again, because he persisted in putting on the bonds of wedlock after one clergyman here had refused to perform the ceremony.

Theodore Cox is the earnest seeker after matrimony, and his bride was a Miss Norwood. On Monday Mr. Cox was divorced from his first wife, and it was not long after that he made arrangements to wed his second. A friend suggested this city as the place for the Hymeneal altar, recommending the pastor of one of the large local churches for the ceremony.

Acting on the friend's suggestion, Miss Norwood and Mr. Cox came to Plainfield on Wednesday afternoon, and proceeded directly to the house of the minister whose name had been given to them. He was preparing to unite the couple when he elicited the fact that Mr. Cox had been divorced. Then he politely but firmly told Mr. Cox that he could not perform the ceremony. Argument was useless, and the New Yorker and his intended bride were confronted with something of a dilemma.

This was finally solved by driving to the parsonage of All Souls' Unitarian church. Rev. A. C. Nickerson, the pastor, was at home, and he speedily made the determined New Yorker and Miss Norwood one. Immediately after the ceremony the couple returned to New York, where they will make their residence.

Mr. Cox is well known to a number of Plainfield residents, and has visited here several times. He was a relative of the famous S. S. (Sunset) Cox, and is prominent among the younger New York lawyers. Miss Norwood is socially prominent in the city.

When Secretary to the President Cortelyou was named for the Department of Commerce portfolio, Mr. Cox was mentioned as his successor.

A.O.U.W.'S CLOSING SESSION

GRAND LODGE NOT TO WITHDRAW FROM SUPREME LODGE.

After the defeat of the proposed assessment plans of the Supreme Lodge, A. O. U. W., in the convention of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, it was announced that there would be no separation from the Supreme Lodge. It was said that the action meant a continuance of the present assessment with the Grand Lodge paying the Supreme Lodge the additional per capita.

The largest lodge in this State is Fidelity No. 3, of Camden, with 771 members. At the close of 1903 there were seventy-five lodges in this State.

In the matter of membership the year 1903 closed with 7,240 in this jurisdiction. While the net increase is not great, the grand officers are gratified to know that a loss will not be reported. In the report on membership it was stated that No. 48, of this city, had 215 members, and No. 58, of this city, 144 members.

A movement to appoint Past Grand Master Workman T. W. Nash grand master workman would have been successful but for Mr. Nash's declination, on account of his condition of health. Had Mr. Nash consented to serve, it would have been probably the only case where a past grand master workman had been honored by reappointment as grand master.

J. W. A. Bauersachs, of this city, was reappointed to the State finance committee.

MRS. LYNCH BURIED.

Funeral Services Held Over Remains of Patrick Lynch's Wife.

A large number of relatives and friends were present Saturday at the funeral services for Mrs. Alice Lynch, wife of Patrick Lynch. The funeral took place at 8:30 o'clock from the late residence, in West Second street, and from St. Mary's R. C. church at 9 o'clock. Requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Egan. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery and the pall bearers were Michael Flynn, John Flynn, T. Mack, John Walsh, John Hickey and Francis Quass.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH ON MERGER DECISION

President of Consolidated Exchange, Discusses U. S. Supreme Court's Opinion.

NO DISTURBING RESULTS

FINANCIER DECLARES ANTI-TRUST ACTIONS WILL PROCEED SLOWLY.

Says That Politics Cannot Push Prosecution Against Mergers—Reverses in Financial Community Not Feared.

L. V. F. Randolph, of this city, president of the New York Consolidated Exchange, has subjected the judgment of the Supreme Court in the Northern Securities case, and likewise the several divergent opinions of the individual members of the court, to a more careful and far-reaching scrutiny, from a market point of view, than perhaps any other man in Wall street. He has hesitated to express an opinion of the ultimate effect of the pronouncement until after mature reflection, and this fact, added to his long experience in the management of large corporations as treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, as a director in several important concerns and as a trustee of the Tilden and other large estates, gives his ideas on the subject unusual interest. In answer to a question from a reporter for the Commercial as to the market significance of the decision in this presidential year, President Randolph said yesterday:

"It has been said that the decision opens the way to a kind of political agitation that will be peculiarly upsetting to the market, but I am convinced that such an impression is wrong. The decision cannot have the effect of making the trust question any more acutely a political issue. On the contrary, the decision of the court would seem to have robbed the Democratic party of an issue.

"It is argued that Democratic leaders will demand of the government that it bring actions against scores of other corporations which happen to have brought 1 or 2 or more railroad lines under one ownership, and against all the industrial combinations; but that is not likely, for those who are most insistent in demanding the regulation of corporations is best made slowly and that it will not do to ruthlessly tear business concerns apart. The attorney-general's statement that the government does not propose to 'run amuck,' was well phrased.

"But the important thing to bear in mind is that Justice Harlan's opinion, though delivered as the opinion of the court, does not represent the opinion of the majority of the court. Justice Brewer concurred only in the judgment of the court, not in its opinion. In his own opinion he makes it clear that he concurs in the findings only so far as they apply to the particular case in hand. For that reason this decision does not establish a precedent along the lines laid down in Justice Harlan's opinion. It is very clear that in any case in which the government's side was a little less strong than it was in this, Justice Brewer would be found voting with the four present minority members, three of whom, by the way, are Democrats.—The New York Commercial.

FIRST M. E. WOMEN MEET

ELECTION OF OFFICERS BY FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY.

On account of the inclement weather there was not a large attendance of members at the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, of the First M. E. church, held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. These are the officers chosen for the coming year:

President, Mrs. Winter; first vice president, Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass; second vice president, Mrs. E. Clark; third vice president, Mrs. D. E. Davis; recording secretary, Miss Sharp; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Sharp; treasurer, Miss Susie Jackson.

The reports of the secretary showed the society to be in an excellent condition financially and spiritually, there being an increase in membership, contributions and interest. After the business session there was an informal discussion regarding the mission work in China, in which all of those present had a part.

Miss Ethel Walsh, of Lee place, has recovered from her recent illness.

MUHLENBERG GOVERNORS TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP

The Board's Number to be Twenty-Four Instead of Nineteen as at Present.

REASONS FOR CHANGE

MOVE IS TO GET NEW BLOOD IN THE INSTITUTION'S MANAGEMENT.

Amendment to By-Laws is Passed—Reorganization of Board to be Made at Annual Meeting Which Takes Place in May.

Increase in the amount of work and detail, the result of the growth of the institution, has made it necessary for the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital to enlarge the governing body. From nineteen, the Board of Governors is to increase in membership to twenty-four.

Action on the change was taken by the Board at its meeting last night, when the amendment to the by-laws, necessary to bring about the enlargement, was passed.

Nine members will be elected for one, two and three years, and after the change has been inaugurated eight vacancies will be filled at each election annually. At the May meeting of the Board the body will be re-organized and the new members will then be chosen. The regular annual meeting will not occur until June.

"It is the desire to get new blood into the Board as much as anything else that inspired the increase of membership. The management of the new hospital, with its wider scope and improved facilities, would make the change necessary in itself, but the Governors feel that there is something more than the present status ahead of the institution. It is not believed that the hospital is to remain where it is as a medical and surgical center, and the impulse of new ideas and fresh vigor is desired to help the institution along the lines of advancement.

INTEREST IN GOODWIN CASE

BOROUGHITES AROUSED OVER THE PROCCEEDINGS INSTITUTED.

Interest in the arrest of John Goodwin and the subsequent proceedings has been revived in the borough to a surprising extent by the publication of Recorder Dond's replies to the questions submitted to him by Councellor Swackhamer in the certiorari action. Many of the North Plainfielders who oppose Mayor Smalley and particularly those who have condemned his course of procedure in this case, were discussing the Recorder's answers yesterday.

Exception is taken to his statements that the testimony did not show that the timbers or logs were on the First Church of Christ property. It is claimed that the logs were undoubtedly there, and that no denial of that can consistently be made.

Among those who expressed surprise at the tenor of the Recorder's replies was Rev. W. E. Honeyman He intimated that the Recorder's statement was not correct, and said several boroughites had discussed the matter with him.

A Daily Press reporter called Recorder Dond's attention to the talk that was going on, but he did not appear to take it seriously. "I was asked a number of questions regarding the testimony in the case," he said, "and answered them rightly in accordance with the evidence presented." This was the only comment he would make.

It is generally believed in the borough that former Senator Reed, the borough counsel, advised the Recorder as to the construction of his replies.

COST OF POWER.

Subject of Evangelist's Address at East Third Street Chapel Last Night.

A much larger congregation gathered at the special services at the Third Street chapel last evening. Mr. Leggett's address on "The Cost of Power" was interesting and forceful. Whitney Franse's cornet solo, "Will There be Any Stars in My Crown," was well rendered. The choir is greatly aided by two violins and a cornet. This evening Mr. Leggett will speak and Elmer D. Cutting will sing.

A. I. Smalley, of the borough, has recovered from his recent illness.

UNION'S REPUBLICANS READY FOR CONVENTION

Majority Party Men in the County to Select Delegates to Assemble at Trenton.

ENTITLED TO 51 VOTES

TO CHOOSE REPRESENTATIVES OF STATE AT NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Chicago the Place and June 21 the Date to Select a Presidential Candidate—Roosevelt is New Jersey's Choice.

In a short time the Republicans of Union County will be called upon to elect delegates to the State convention that in turn is to name the delegates-at-large and alternates to the Republican National Convention.

May 10 is the date, and Trenton the place of the State convention. Four delegates-at-large and four alternates are to be named. The National Convention is to meet in Chicago on June 21.

The basis of representation at the Trenton convention will be one delegate for each 300 Republican votes cast at the preceding gubernatorial election, and one delegate for each fraction thereof exceeding 100 votes. The number of delegates to which each county is entitled under the present call has been fixed. Union County has fifty-one, Somerset County has seventeen, and Middlesex County has thirty-eight.

It is understood that the delegates to the National Convention will go to Chicago as Roosevelt men. The local organization is understood to be in favor of the President's nomination, and men favorable to his cause will go to Trenton from here.

One of the city leaders said yesterday that it has not been the custom to send instructed delegates to such conventions, but there is little doubt that the men who go to Trenton from Plainfield will feel impelled to work for the election of Roosevelt men to the Chicago delegation.

Judge Runyon was asked as to the attitude of the city organization toward President Roosevelt's aspirations, but he was non-committal to a large extent. "Nothing has been said about it yet," he said, "but I suppose Roosevelt is favored."

"Are you personally in favor of Roosevelt?" he was asked.

"Yes," was the unhesitating reply. "Although I would have preferred Hanna had he lived," he added.

The call for the local convention has not been decided upon as yet.

HARVEY FISK BADLY HURT

A SON OF CHARLES J. FISK INJURED WHILE COASTING AT ANDOVER.

Harvey Fisk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, had a narrow escape from being killed while coasting at Andover, Mass., two weeks ago. He is now under treatment at Boston, and it will probably be two or three weeks before he can return home.

Young Fisk is a student at Phillips Andover Academy and two weeks ago he was coasting with a number of other students. There were sixteen students on the bob when the unfortunate trip was made, and among them was Mr. Fisk. While going down a long hill at a high rate of speed one of the runners struck a deep rut, upsetting the bob. Mr. Fisk was found beneath the sled and all the other fellows were on top. It was quickly discovered that he was seriously injured and medical aid was summoned. The young man was taken to Boston, where an examination was made and it was learned that his leg and hip were badly crushed, but fortunately no bones were broken. The muscles and tendons of the leg were severely sprained and twisted, making the young man a prisoner for the time being. C. J. Fisk, who just returned from Boston, says that his son is now improving steadily.

Unity League Meeting.

The Unity League, of All Souls' church, will hold a general reception at the church parlors this evening at 8:15. An entertainment consisting of a presentation of a magazine for April, will be followed by a chafing dish supper. All Unitarians are cordially invited to be present and to bring their friends.

DISCONTENT IN JR. O. U. A. M.

AGITATION FAVORING WITHDRAWAL FROM THE STATE COUNCIL.

A story has been in circulation about the State that several Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils intend withdrawing from the State Council and joining the National Council from which the State Council seceded. Action for this is said to be due to the fact that members of the State Council in travelling through the West find that they cannot affiliate with Councils located there and this has been a hinderance to them.

A reporter for The Daily Press in conversation with a prominent member of one of the local Councils, brought forth some facts concerning this report. It is a fact that two-thirds of the entire membership of this country is embodied in the five states that seceded—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and the District of Columbia, and the remaining one-third comprises the membership of the other States. The chief reason for secession was that the States in the West having a comparatively small number of members wanted as large a representation in the National Council as those States having many times their number. For instance in the whole State of Nebraska there are but 154 members and yet those Juniors wanted just as many representatives as New York, New Jersey or even Pennsylvania, the latter State having 170,000 members. This caused a division and the ultimate affirmation of the action by the courts.

In view of this it would be foolish for members of the New Jersey Council to withdraw, when they are now identified with more than half the entire membership. At any time the National Council will adjust the representation in an equitable manner, the seceders stand ready to return, but until it does, the Councils in the five Eastern States will maintain their present position.

AGITATING HIGH LICENSE

BOROUGH COUNSEL PREPARING FIGURES TO ASK COURT TO CHANGE FEE.

Renewal of his wholesale liquor license was granted Henry Haurand yesterday by the court at Somerville. F. J. Blatz represented Mr. Haurand in making the application.

Of the number of applications presented from various sections of Somerset County, Mr. Haurand's was the only one that went through without protest. There is a lot of opposition to the granting of wholesale license in Somerset this year, particularly around Somerville and Raritan, and many arguments were presented against the applicants from about those places yesterday.

There appears to be a general disapproval of further leniency toward the liquor traffic in the county, and the movement is watched with interest by the North Plainfield officials. They are all pledged to work for an increase of the liquor license in the borough to $600, and are anxious to bring the advance about. In the general opposition to the trade that has sprung up, which cannot but influence Judge Schenck's attitude toward the license increase, to some extent at least, the borough advocates of a higher fee see greater hope for success in their campaign.

Arrangements are being made for the appearance of a delegation before the Court next term to urge the advance for the borough, and Borough Counsel Reed is busy getting figures and arguments together to present a convincing appeal to Judge Schenck, or whoever may be on the bench. Among the general public of the municipality there is no indication of anything but approval of the proposed advance. If a tenth of the people who express an active interest in the matter attend the hearing, an impressive delegation, headed by Mayor Smalley and several Councilmen, will appear to urge the change upon the court.

CRITERION CLUB'S DANCE.

Young People Have a Pleasant Night at the Casino.

Young people from a number of other towns and cities were the guests of the Criterion Club at a delightful dance at the Casino last night. The affair was well attended, and passed off with the usual measure of success that attends Criterion functions. A Newark orchestra played.

Among the guests were residents of Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Somerville, Brooklyn, Dunellen and New York. The committee in charge consisted of Clarence Brokaw, chairman; Albert Clark and Louis Gardner.

THE HOSPITAL BOARD TAKES IMPORTANT STEPS

Governors of Muhlenberg Arrange for the Early Construction of Nurses' Home.

TO COST ABOUT $14,000

ARRANGEMENTS ARE MADE FOR THE BUILDING OF ISOLATION WARDS.

Pass Resolution of Thanks for Donations Made by Heirs of James Clark—The Location for the Nurses' Home.

Considerable business of importance occupied the attention of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at a special meeting held last night at the Public Library. The question of building a nurses' home near the new hospital came up for discussion and it was decided to go ahead at once and erect the structure. Preliminary plans, showing the two floors, were presented and adopted and the architect, Evarts Tracy, was instructed to get them in shape, and prepare specifications for the reception of bids.

It is proposed to make the building a frame one. It will be two stories high and contain eight double and thirteen single rooms, accommodating twenty-nine nurses. It is generally anticipated that the structure will cost in the neighborhood of $14,000 and the Board of Governors believe that there is now about $10,000 in sight, including the recent bequest of $5,000 from Mrs. James Clark, her sons, Frank L., and James E. Clark, who gave $15,000 for the endowment fund, with the understanding that $5,000 of it could be used towards building the nurses' home.

The location for the home was not decided upon last night. The building will be such that it can be placed anywhere on the land owned by the hospital. However, the probability is that it will be located either on Park avenue or on Randolph road, east of the hospital. It will be in every way in keeping with the hospital as to architecture and improvements.

The members also discussed the question of building the isolation wards, the erection of which has been made possible by a generous donation from Mrs. Milliken, her son in New York and Mr. and Mrs. James DeGraff, of this city. The plans for the wards were discussed and the building committee was authorized to see those who are to pay for their construction and ascertain whether they have their approval. If so the architect will also prepare the necessary specifications for the reception of bids and go ahead with the work.

A communication was received from Mrs. James Clark and her sons, Frank L., and James E. Clark, informing the Board of the donation of $15,000 to the hospital endowment fund and stating the object of the same. The communication was received and resolutions expressing the hearty thanks of the Board for the generous donation were unanimously adopted, and a copy will be sent to the family.

CO. K MEN FORM CLUB

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS ORGANIZE FOR SOCIAL PURPOSES.

For social purposes aside from those enjoyed by the command as a whole, the non-commissioned officers of Company K have organized a club. Those included in the membership are First Sergeant Peterson, Quartermaster Sergeant E. R. Pearsall, Sergeant Cregar, Sergeant A. I. Litlell, Asa Randolph, A. M. Selders, O. B. Pearson, Corporals G. H. Whitney, Nathaniel Hart, George L. Agpar, Alfred Tranchand, C. H. Bilyeu, Arthur Phillips, William Harsell, Stephen Stover.

Officers will be elected by the association at a meeting to be held next Monday night. Business meetings of regular character will be held monthly.

General social affairs, such as smokers, dances and entertainments will be held by the association at frequent intervals. A series of dances to be held at the armory has been arranged already, the first of which is to take place on April 4.

—J. M. Smalley, of Craig place, has purchased a black mare.

—The case on contract of Huff against Moffett will be heard in Justice Mosher's court Friday, March 25. The similar case of Crater et als against Howell will be heard on the same day.

BOROUGH COUPLE ELOPE ON SUNDAY

Florence Baker, of Somerset St, Secretly Weds Oscar Waldron, of Chatham St.

A BRIDE OF FIFTEEN

AFTER CEREMONY TAKES PLACE IN DUNELLEN COUPLE DISAPPEAR.

Bride's Parents Opposing the Marriage Unable to Frustrate the Plans—The Groom is Employed in New York.

Miss Florence Baker, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baker, of Somerset street, and Oscar Waldron, of Chatham street, were married Sunday night last by Rev. Samuel K. Doolittle, pastor of the M. E. church, Dunellen. The marriage took place at the home of Mr. Doolittle.

The parents of the bride were unaware of the marriage until after the ceremony had taken place and the present whereabouts of the couple is not known, as they did not return home. She was home on Sunday, attending Sunday-school in the afternoon. At night she accompanied her mother to the home of a sick woman, it having been arranged that she was to remain with the sick person that night. This she failed to do, but instead left the house and met Mr. Waldron. The couple made the trip to Dunellen, where they were wedded.

While Miss Baker's parents had knowledge of her companionship with Mr. Waldron, they did not approve of it and the marriage took place without their consent. They did all that was possible to restrain their daughter from meeting Mr. Waldron. The mother is greatly worried about her daughter and has been making every effort to ascertain where she is, but without avail. The groom is a mechanic employed in New York and both he and his bride are well-known in the borough.

TO APPOINT THE TEACHERS

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BOROUGH'S CORPS TO BE MADE MONDAY NIGHT.

Next Monday night the borough Board of Education will hold its first regular meeting of the new fiscal year. One of the features of the meeting will be the announcement of the complete list of teachers for the year. There will be several changes in the force, as a number of the instructors have signed contracts with other boards. Superintendent Wightman has their successors in view.

It is extremely probable that the question of the new school building will come up. From unofficial hints given by a prominent member of the board it is believed that another vote on the question will be ordered.

AS A THEATRE.

Music Hall in West Front Street Being Held for That Purpose by An Estate.

Stillman Music Hall, owned by an estate which is represented by William M. Stillman, Esq., will not be used as a storage place as reported recently, but the property is still in the market to be used as a theatre. The owners would like to dispose of the property, guaranteeing to give a good title and a desirable entrance to the hall. If the right party should get hold of this hall and improve the same, bringing it up to the requirements of a modern theatre, there seems to be but little doubt but that the hall would pay as an amusement place.

EXHIBITING PRINTS.

Remarkably Sharp Photographs Shown by the Camera Club.

A fine exhibition of photo prints are now being exhibited in the rooms of the Plainfield Camera Club. The exhibition was opened last night and will continue tonight and tomorrow night. The exhibition comprises about one hundred prints there being a wide variety of subjects. The detail of each print is attracting considerable attention from all lovers of photography, especially amateurs and may value hints to the latter class is offered in this exhibity.

Tonight there will be exhibited a few slides and tomorrow night a number of fine slides will be shown between the hours of 7:30 and 9 o'clock.

CITIZENSHIP'S DUTIES, SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Prof. H. A. Garfield, of Princeton University, Talks to Crescent Ave. Men's Club.

DEAD PRESIDENT'S SON

HONESTY AND EFFICIENCY REQUISITES OF GOOD GOVERNMENT.

The Public School An Effective Institution—Spasmodic Reform of No Avail—A Scholarly Address by a Learned Man.

Professor Harry A. Garfield, of Princeton University, departed from his rule to address none but Princeton audiences last night, by delivering a lecture on the obligations of American citizenship to the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue church. Mr. Garfield had a large and attentive audience and his address was excellent. He was introduced by Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

In opening his remarks, Prof. Garfield explained his departure from his custom by the fact that the request for his speech was made by his collegemate at Williams, Rev. J. S. Zelie. He then discussed the duties of citizenship in a general rather than specific way, holding that conditions so differed in different municipalities that it was unwise for a stranger to advise concerning them.

He compared the politics of today with conditions of 1787 when the constitution was drawn up. The life of that early time in United States history lacked the complexity of today. Everyone had leisure to devote to a consideration of questions of public moment.

He asked if the constitution had changed in meaning in the century that has passed and answered that the meaning is the same if you follow the spirit and not the same if you follow the letter. The constitution still stands for the fundamental truth in American political life and is the compass and chart to guide in mapping out present day politics.

What are the obligations of a citizen? asked Mr. Garfield, and how is he to meet them? He must first know conditions, then be able to think concerning the best method for solving problems that present themselves and, thirdly, must be able to act courageously. In addition he must be able to feel sympathy with elements and classes not his own. He must have an appreciation of their view-point.

Honesty and efficiency are prime requisites in the government of a republic, said Mr. Garfield, but there are degrees and different standards of efficiency. The object should be to get on a common ground in judging efficiency and, create the sympathy between classes that leads to knowledge. As an illustration of the efficacy of this idea he mentioned the experience of a municipal club of Cleveland, composed of representatives of the well-to-do and laboring classes with socialistic and labor-union elements included.

The public schools, said Prof. Garfield, should not be encroached upon by private institutions. It is better for a boy to learn his lessons in company with boys of other grades in society than his own. In this he learns sympathy.

Mr. Garfield showed the ineffectiveness of sporadic attempts to sweep a municipality clean of some particular evil. Reformers should lay a deep and broad foundation for their reforms or they are likely to produce more temporary results. This was illustrated by the experience of New York city, first with Tammany Hall and then with the Reform. Are not? Mr. Garfield asked, evolutionary methods better than revolutionary. Isn't it better to build upon conditions as they are rather than to overturn completely all existing methods?

Prof. Garfield is a pleasing speaker and has a forceful and entertaining way of making things clear. At the conclusion of his address refreshments were served. The programme was in charge of a committee consisting of Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, J. P. Murray, L. R. Hopton, D. M. VanVleit, G. M. Griffin and J. E. Kimball.

Petit Jurors.

Sheriff McMurtry has drawn the jurors for the April term of the Somerset County courts. Those from North Plainfield are Stephen Fitzgerald, Hubert P. Phillips, Albert G. Perry, Joseph Darby, Thomas Finney, Joseph A. Blatz, David Arthur, Melvin H. Cleaves, John Emmons. Warren township will be represented by Hugh H. Powelson and Charles Wick.

PONGEE FOR SUMMER.

Smart Gowns and Coats Are Made of Its Various Trimmings.

Hood effects will be seen on the smarter three-quarter length coats this spring and summer. A pongee model now in the hands of a well known New York dressmaker shows this pretty arrangement. There is a seamless yoke of heavy ecru guipure which extends well over the shoulders in a round sweep. Outlining this there is a band of ecru lace five inches wide, headed top and bottom by a piping of narrow brown ribbon and at the top, in addition, with a pinked ruching of the pongee. The sleeves and body of the coat are gathered very full into this, and the bottom of the coat is also finished off with the band of guipure the same as at the top, with the exception of the pinked ruching. Two ends of chiffon and brown velvet complete this pretty little model.

The good points of pongee are so many that the well dressed girl will not overlook them. It makes ideal shirt waist gowns trimmed with red, blue or green embroidery, as well as dressier gowns combined with heavy ecru lace. For dust coats and driving coats it is ideal.

Pongee cleans beautifully, but it should never be washed, least of all by the amateur.

Scarf effects continue to be the proper thing for evening gown sleeves. We are promised more collarless gowns this summer.

The cut shows a hat designed to go with a pongee shirt waist costume. It is of ecru straw, trimmed with rucheings of ribbon, a steel buckle and a spray of wheat. There are shaded red flowers at the back.

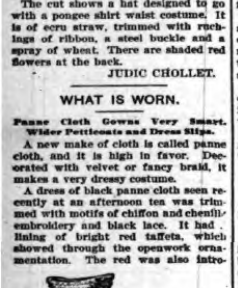
JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Panne Cloth Gowns Very Smart. Wider Petticoats and Dress Slips.

A new make of cloth is called panne cloth, and it is high in favor. Decorated with velvet or fancy braid, it makes a very dressy costume.

A dress of black panne cloth seen recently at an afternoon tea was trimmed with motifs of chiffon and chenille embroidery and black lace. It had lining of bright red taffeta, which showed through the openwork ornamentation. The red was also introduced in the undersleeves, made of tiny alternate black and red chiffon ruffles.



BLUE CLOTH GOWN.

Strings of chiffon are attached to a few of the more elaborate spring hats, but these are merely draped and not tied.

Many of the slips designed to wear with thin gowns are thrown out around the bottom by the addition of many ruffles. Petticoats show a marked tendency to become wider, but only around the foot.

Charming petticoats of mull, muslin and cambric are now being made up by family seamstresses for summer wear.

Very long shoulders are among the distinguishing features of the new gowns. The berthas, collars, etc., are placed as far out on the arm as possible, with a decided drooping effect. These berthas appear even on tailor made gowns and are composed of a smoothly fitted bias band, to which is shirred the full ruffle. The latter is often finished with three prim little tucks.

The cut shows a gown of royal blue panne cloth. It has a silk belt of a darker shade and undersleeves of yellow lace. The trimming is in the shape of bands of Persian embroidery.

NEW FASHION FEATURES.

Long Shoulders Becoming Marked. Boleros and Skirts.

Little coffee jackets of embroidery and lace are spring necessities. They are worn with pale blue or pale pink silk petticoats. Often the loose hanging jacket and the skirt match, in which case crepe de chine or soft taffeta is pretty when plentifully trimmed with lace.

Evening dresses of spotted net, flounced all over from the decolletage down, are very chic for slender figures.

The longer the shoulder the more fashionable the garment, so say the tailors, but this long shoulder must not stick out; it must follow closely the outline of the arm.

Little bolero fronts are eased in at the neck and allowed to fall in soft, graceful folds, something after the fashion of a cape. The skirts are eased in similarly at the hips, so that nothing but the wide belt follows closely the figure.

Tiny bows and rosettes of taffeta are used not only on reception and evening gowns, but even on tailor mades. They are usually placed down the front of the bolero and at the back seam of the skirt.

A smart evening gown of yellow chiffon designed for an early wedding is trimmed with shirrings run through with bronze ribbon.

The illustration shows a wedding gown of white chiffon cloth trimmed with alencon lace.

MATERIALS AND STYLES.

Hopsacking For Street Costumes. Plaid and Black Populars.

For tailor mades and practical frocks hopsacking of every description will be used even more than cloth. Some spotted and checked alpacas will be seen also, while the most popular tweeds will be of a rough and hairy description.

Taffeta is again being used as trimming on almost all the smart gowns and wraps. It is of a softer make than ever and for that reason will wear better.

Pink and black is a favorite millinery combination just now, especially in black chantilly and pink roses.

There is a great fancy this season for the cream underdress covered with black chantilly, black net or some other soft, light black fabric.

With a gray cloth skirt a gray mousseline de soie waist with a yoke worked out of lace can be worn. This is made up over a thin silk or satin slip. The very full puffs of crepe de chine sleeves are both tucked across and shirred to form additional fullness.

Spotted taffetas in black and brown are being revived and trimmed with quaint old fashioned applications of silk and chenille, but these must be very carefully managed in order not to look dowdy.

Tailor made suits of black and navy blue taffeta will be worn this summer over very full blouses of needlework and embroidery.

FOR DRESSY WEAR.

Chiffon Cloth Has Come to Stay. Black and White Effects.

The choe will soon have to give way to the little double bow which is being seen on so many waists and gowns.

In jeweled effects bluish and greenish tints are favored, and these are mounted in dull rose gold. Green in all its shades is becoming once more popular, and it is a good thing, for few other tints look as well for spring and summer wear.

Chiffon cloth has come to stay, for it is dainty as well as serviceable and can be finely tucked and shirred. Chiffon dresses are now being made of faint colorings in dull browns and moleskin tints. Shirring is the almost invariable trimming. Dyed lace forms a frequent trimming, and a bertha or cape collar of this is always handsome.

The black cloth gown made of very fine material is extremely chic, particularly when it is trimmed with openwork embroidery which allows glimpses of a bright taffeta lining to be seen, such as a deep red or green. Among the smartest novelties are Monte Carlo toques in the long pointed shape, all covered with fruit—currants, raisins, plums even—and draped with lace.

The beauty of many of the new gowns consists in their carefully shaded trimmings.

The black hat trimmed with black and white ostrich feathers is always smart, whether in summer or winter.

The illustration shows a white straw hat trimmed with a single black feather.

FRILLS AND FASHIONS.

Trimmings Are Horizontal—Smart Gowns For Evening Wear.

Nearly all the trimmings now are horizontal.

The old fashioned shawls can be turned into very pretty evening wraps, and the same is true of wedding veils, which are made up with chiffon over soft satin.

One of the prettiest evening gowns seen recently was of black spotted net over white chiffon and silk. The waist was almost covered by a deep bertha made of three narrow ruffles. The skirt had a shirred hip yoke, and from the knees down was a mass of ruffles; each ruffle was bound with a narrow black velvet ribbon. The short sleeve puffs were decorated with tiny velvet rosettes and the velvet sash had fancifully knotted ends.

Another evening dress was of heavy white lace and chiffon. The chiffon skirt, accordion plaited, had a very deep yoke, almost an overskirt, of the lace. The waist was of the full plaited chiffon with a front piece and puffs of lace. The decolletage was outlined with tiny white rosebuds.

A pale green taffeta which is being made for a smart woman has its skirt arranged in heavy plaits from the waist. Above the knees are enormous tucks headed with ruches. Around the waist is a swathed band with knotted ends and little taffeta roses. These roses also ornament the pelerine collar and are intermingled with shades of pale pink and heliotrope.

White frocks will be worn quite as much as ever this spring and summer, and they will be supplemented by the white cloth coat and the white lace hat trimmed with a feather or white roses.

The illustration shows one of these white cloth coats. It has a cape yoke coming well down over the shoulders. It is trimmed with black and white braid.

EVENING FASHIONS.

Louis XVI. Effects—Pointed Girdles and Flowered Silks.

The return of the old fashioned brocades and the tiny wreath of roses on hats point to the Pompadour influence. These small roses have been worn in the hair for some time past as well as on debutantes' ball gowns. Little straw roses have been a feature of some of the new flat hats recently imported from Paris.

There is a decided Louis XVI. appearance to many of the ball gowns made of beautifully flowered silks and brocades. The pointed corsage effect appears as well in many reception gowns showing the velvet coat effect. The vest and revers to go with this effect are handsomely embroidered and the neck is finished with an old lace jabot.

The pointed waistbands now so much in vogue are as hard to make as a bodice; they have to be so beautifully draped and fitted.

For chiffon frocks ivory gray and pale bronze are favorite colors, and a good deal of gold and silver embroidery is used.

Taffetas this spring will be softened by the addition of lace or embroidered lawns, which are in keeping with the period when taffeta was first introduced.

The picture shows an evening dress of chiffon trimmed with bands of silver embroidery and worn with a wreath of silver in the hair.

SPRING FASHIONS.

The Wide Belt—Picturesque Effects In Flowered Silks.

All shades of pink are popular for evening wear, especially Rose du Barry, an exquisite pastel shade. Taffeta frocks are being made of this shade of pink beautifully embroidered and trimmed with a Marie Antoinette fichu and pointed bodice.

The distinguishing features of the new costumes are the full skirt and the wide belts. Soft bodices are made so full that they seem to be held in place by the deep Marie Antoinette corsage. This is pretty and graceful for evening wear. With bodices of this description some kind of a draped or elbow sleeve with a wide frill is the proper thing.

Elbow sleeves are rapidly coming in again. This was always a pretty style and suitable for remilressy occasions. Some of the new dresses have sleeves simply composed of a skillfully draped puff ending in a frill of lace.

Taffeta is certainly both smart and popular just now. It is often a good plan to have silk chiffon and mull gowns made with a guimpe arrangement, which can be removed so that the gown may either be worn decollete or not, as one chooses. This has almost become a necessity for the woman with a small income now that so many dainty gowns are being worn at restaurants, just as they are at private houses, with the exception that they must be high necked.

White muslin both in plain and in fancy makes will be very much worn this summer, and so will dainty flowered effects, particularly those of the Pompadour period.

The illustration shows a flowered silk waist made with a long shouldered V shaped yoke and a wide belt of panne.

HOW TO KEEP SERVANTS.

Also, by Way of Contrast, a Few of the Simplest Ways of Losing Them.

"Did you ever hear the story of the Chinese servant who was discharged? He went away muttering vengeance. The next Chinaman who entered the kitchen came out in ten minutes, with his belongings in his hand. He gave no reason; simply said he wanted to leave, and he did leave. The next one stayed half a day. Then he, too, went. That happened twice more. Then the mistress of the house, panic stricken, begged the last cook as he was going out to tell her what was the trouble. After a good deal of urging and some coin he led her solemnly to the sink, and there scratched on the stonework were some cabalistic Chinese signs which were in the nature of a hoodoo on the character of the mistress, the house and everything. Of course she effaced the marks, and all was well."

"I wonder Mrs. Brown doesn't investigate for signs herself."

"I know one, and there isn't anything mysterious about it either. She has a dark kitchen. Now, how can you expect a girl to remain shut in there day after day without having blues? Give a servant a cheerful kitchen, with the right conveniences in the way of pots and pans, and she will be contented and do her work well. Then Mrs. Brown's servant rooms are fitted up with the broken furniture of the house. There is no bathroom for the segrants. They have to wash as best they can in a bowl. The hours are irregular, meals never on time, and the mistress of the house is always tacking on some extra work, so that the poor maid's labor is never done. There is no method, no fixed lines. One servant does the work of two and work for which she is not fitted. I am sure it is not impossible to keep a maid if you treat her justly, like a human being; if you give her some definite work to do and don't expect her to do the work of six, and if you give her decent food, a decent room and a little time to herself Above all, too, if you don't nag her."

THE PIANO.

Some Suggestions on Locating It and Taking Care of It.

In the first place, don't put it near the radiator—that is, if you don't want a cracked sounding board—and don't place it near the window during the winter for the same reason. When the maid sweeps the room be sure to have her close the piano. These little things insure a good tone. A piano should be tuned once a month.

Of course a grand piano is more decorative, and there is little or no trouble in placing it in a fairly large room, but if you choose an upright piano, with a low top instead of one of the high, Noah's ark affairs, and if you hang a tapestry back of it, you will get a very pretty effect.

The picture shows a piano which has been placed across a portion of the room. The back is draped with a tapestry hanging, against which is placed a settle. The rest of the room is in old English style. The bay windows have greenish curtains with a dull yellow figure.

WRITING AS A BUSINESS

A Few Pregnant Suggestions

"Do you know, I always thought it would be so lovely if I could write!"

"Well, what?"

"Oh—er—stories or poems or something"—

"Why don't you?"

"Oh, I don't know how to go about it."

That is the sort of conversation you hear if you are in the literary business yourself, and it probably accounts for some of the failures one sees in journalism and practical writing. I don't know why it is that women expect a royal road to success, but most of them do. They don't want to use their own thinkers, their own honest effort. They want to be boosted into a sinecure of a position right away.

READ THE MORNING PAPERS.

They don't want to puzzle out things for themselves. They want to be told the shortest and easiest cut—in other words, how to do things. If they dared, they would ask you to perform the actual work for them.

"I don't know how to go about it."

My dear girl, if you think you can write, or if you know you can write, which is better still, make out a list of suggestions and take them to the editor of your paper—suggestions that he is likely to favor according to the policy of what he prints within his sheets—or else write an article or a good story and send it to the editor of a magazine which prints that sort of thing. If it is good, he will take it.

But so many women fall in journalism and writing! Yes, and do you know why? Because they don't keep their eyes and ears open, because they don't keep up to date. You see a woman who was popular a few years ago, and you wonder why she can no longer sell her wares. It is because she still keeps on writing the same stuff that she wrote five years ago, not taking into consideration that the world changes and advances year by year. No woman who keeps up to date in her writing need be shelved, no matter how old she is. It isn't age, it is mental chenastion, which is shelved. Why do the writings of the talented Miss Smith invariably come back neatly tagged with a rejection slip? Because the talented but lazy Miss Smith doesn't take the trouble to study the policy of the magazine to which she sends her contributions. She presents an article to a magazine on how to make the home beautiful, devoted to the higher rights of woman, or a serious essay to the monthly Flip Flap, a Magazine of Wit.

Why does that energetic Miss Jones fail so flat (pardon the slang) as a newspaper woman? Because that energetic Miss Jones thinks it is a waste of time to read the morning papers. She would rather give the public something she thinks it ought to have than something in which it is for the moment interested. Read the morning papers, Miss Jones, and see what is in the public eye. It may not be the most elevating kind of stuff, but it's the stuff people want to hear about. And please remember that when you are in the newspaper business your affair is to please the people, no matter how vulgar they are, and not yourself. And don't shut yourself up, Miss White. How can you expect to have ideas? If you are a newspaper writer, you want to make all kinds of friends in every position in life. If you write character sketches and bits of human nature, you won't find your inspiration in a hall bedroom. Go out and mix with people. Accept all the invitations you can, listen to all the conversations, watch all the expressions.

Now, as to the actual writing I can give no better advice than this: Take a hatchet to your sentences. Any writer who uses long sentences is lessening her chances of success by one-half. Forget there is such a thing as a semicolon. When you feel that way use a common, ordinary period. Don't be afraid of paragraphs. They break up a page and make it look easy reading. Write to the point. You can't write too strongly. Use the shortest words you can and incidentally only one side of the paper. Last and not least, think of writing as a business on a business basis, and you will be able to make an income at it.

BOLEROS FOR SPRING.

Pretty Foreign Touches on These Always Useful Garments.

Some very enticing innovations are appearing in outdoor suits and bolero jackets. The latter are just too cute for anything, as one impulsive young girl told me. It is difficult to exactly define in what the novelty consists in these boleros, but that they do differ from any bolero we have ever seen must admit even if we cannot define the change. One thing is certain, however, and that is they all have something of a foreign military character. The way the braid is applied and the tiny buttons are placed and the peculiar ornamentation of the cuffs, shoulders and stiff collars remind one of the hussar styles, particularly when some of the braid is gone. In some cases the braid is all gold, but more often there is but one line of metal braid between two or four of ordinary black soutache. But this is quite enough, for it is so showy that the black tones it down to real elegance.

To particularize, one very stylish and handsome bolero has a high stiff military collar with only black castle braid on it, and this same braid in hercules weight goes around the neck and down the front, besides being brought up in front on each side in a turned point, with three tiny round gold buttons on the turn and three more below.

At the back the bolero comes quite to the skirt line, and there is a belt across the back of thick braid which is brought around in front and fastened so that the fastening is not seen. A line of gold lace follows the braid around the neck and also across the back and around the outer flowing sleeves and the narrow sleeves at the wrists. The bolero is made of very heavy black silk, but is lined with cherry colored satin.

In such a jacket and a hat of black and yellow straw of the most decided tricorne shape a girl is bound to look pretty. Any fine black goods would be suitable for this bolero, velvet above all.

Another of these semimilitary jackets is more elaborate, but certainly no prettier. The whole suit is made of a cloth which has a fine like Irish poplin and the good qualities of silk. The skirt of the gown has a seam down the front, cut very slightly on the bias, to set it out at the foot. Almost meeting around the skirt are two folds fastened to the skirt by a cord piping. This fold is cut in two and joined by a velvet piping, and the lower half is edged with a narrow reversed plaiting of black velvet.

There is a close vest of white satin, with narrow gold soutache loopings and gold buttons. Over this is worn the bolero, which is trimmed both on the outside and along the edges with fancy soutache mixed with fine black silk braid. Pretty designs are wrought in military style on the shoulders and on the sleeves. The deep cape on the sleeves have the effect of widening the shoulders.

The special hat to be worn with this suit is a matter of taste, but when the wearer is a young girl a tricorne, if becoming, is the best design. For a young married lady I should advise a hat of fine black straw, with three bias folds of white satin around the rim, a soft draping of black louisine around the crown and a lot of pink roses set just above the face. One little point is worthy of mention, and that is that crepe lisse ruches are worn around the neck and tied at the left side with a little bow of black velvet ribbon. Some are simply sewed in the band. These ruffs were always pretty and softening to any face. They will divide honors with the close stocks now so well beloved of woman.

Another innovation, we may call it, though things have been pointing that way for some time, is the full skirts gathered or plaited from the waist line and trimmed quite lavishly around the bottom. Three and four separate skirts are made on some of them, while others have a series of bias folds superposed one above the other. Others again have just plain flounces without any attempt at subterfuge. Some have the fullness around the hips taken in by box plaits, side plaits, short stitched plaits or plain gathers. One skirt made in this way was very pretty. The upper part was gathered at the waist and fell straight down to the foot, where there were two plaitings of inch wide velvet ribbon headed by one row each of black soutache. Indeed braids are now everywhere, and the variety is astonishing.

Deep bertha capes are sometimes completely covered with fine soutache braiding in vermicelli pattern, and few dresses are made without some effort at the shirring about the shoulder effect.

SOLDIERING IN TIBET

What the Britisher Is Called Upon to Endure There.

The Expedition to Lhasa Attended with Many Hardships, and the Endurance of Intensely Cold Weather.

The advance of the British expedition into Tibet is calling forth considerable criticism from certain quarters in England, because of the hardships through which the soldiers will be called to pass. Much of the marching will be along roads at extreme elevations, and the weather is intensely cold, the temperature being below zero most of the time. Then all the supplies and munitions, and equipments have to be transported upon the backs of yaks, the beast of burden of Tibet.

Sir Henry Cotton, who has just returned to England after 33 years' service in India, is held to denounce the sending of troops into the country of Tibet as "a monstrous thing, an outrage and a blunder." The "whole move is abominable from end to end; and more than that, it is stupid." He declares that the journey from India to Tibet is enormous and extremely difficult, and that much of the way, the packing of baggage, etc., will have to be done upon the back of the mountain sheep, the road being too difficult for the larger beast of burden, the yak.

But Lord Kitchener, and those immediately in charge of the expedition do not see any such insurmountable difficulties, and minimize the hardships through which the soldiers will be called to pass. Sir Joseph Hooker's observations, it is declared, do not warrant the drawing of any such dark picture, and the reports of the Pundits expressly state the winter is a favorable season for travel in the Gyantse district.

The British frontier camp is at Gnatong, the elevated point 12,000 feet above the level of the sea. But in spite of the elevation it is said to be a considerable town. It is necessary for the soldiers at this post to be clad with special clothing and Crimean helmets to protect the head and face from the fierce wintry blasts which sweep over this lofty spot. Blue goggles have to be worn constantly to protect from the glare of the sun. The sentries at their posts have oil stoves with which they keep some of the intense cold away and manage to perform their period of active guard duty.

Chumbi is two marches or twenty-one miles below Gnatong, on the Tibet side. It has an elevation of 9,500 feet. This place instead of Gnatong may be designated as the winter base of the British force, which has been ordered to advance across the frontiers of Tibet and which will probably start early next year. This place is said to be a delightful spot. An English writer declares that its dry climate, its bracing air, its pleasant groves and streams and frequent farms qualify it to become the Engadine of Bengal. From Chumbi, it is a two days' march to Phari, formerly the chief trading mart of southern Tibet and is still a place of 200 houses and many shops. The road up the valley is rugged and fortified by a series of walls. Beyond Phari the country is more open and the passes, though in the neighborhood of the gigantic Chumialhari are easy of passage.

In the expedition of 1888 it is said that the native troops suffered from the effects of wintering at high altitudes, bronchitis and pulmonary diseases being common, but it is probable that the Ghurkhas, or native soldiers, will bear the climate as well if not better than an English regiment. What the outcome of the controversy will be and how the troops will stand the expedition remains to be seen.

SLEEPS ON THE PORCH.

Miss Margaret Dwyer, an Albany Girl, Has No Fears Whatever of Cold Weather.

With the temperature at nearly zero, Miss Margaret Dwyer occupied her cot on the rear piazza of her home on Ten Broeck street, Albany, N. Y.

When asked the all-important question: Why? Miss Dwyer responded: "First, because I cannot sleep well indoors and can in open air. When I returned from last summer's vacation it was very warm in the city, so one night when I could not sleep at all I got up and went out on the porch, where I easily fell asleep on a couch. After that I just drifted into the habit. This has been a pretty cold winter, but I have not been at all cold in bed on the back porch, and have spent several of the coldest nights out this winter. I feel fine in the morning, and did not have a cold until my uncle interfered." At this point Miss Dwyer's uncle, John J. Jansen, explained that coming in one blizzardy night, with his clothes covered with snow, he absolutely refused to let his niece sleep in her exposed bed. A few days after that she developed a cold, and the uncle regretted his interference and believed that had he allowed Miss Dwyer to pursue her own course she would never have had her one cold.

The bed that Miss Dwyer sleeps in is an ordinary cot, with woven wire springs, situated against the partition which separates her uncle's from his neighbor's back porch. Her bedding consists of a pair of fleece-lined sheets, a rose blanket, a comfortable and a pillow. She disrobes in the house, dons a nightdress, a bath robe, a pair of knitted bootees and a hood, which, while it protects her ears, leaves her face entirely exposed. Thus attired she seeks a couch almost under the broad expanse of the heavens. Her fancies are somewhat poetic and she says it is the most sublime sensation to watch the myriads of stars overhead until sleep closes the eyes.

CAUGHT DANGEROUS PET.

Servant Lately Arrived from Old Country Thought Fierce Wild Cat Could Be Tamed.

John Stephens, a farmer who lives in the Alleghenies about five miles west of Altoona, Pa., was awakened from his slumber by several mornings ago by an unearthly squealing in the lower portion of his home. Seizing a revolver, he sprang down three steps at a time to the kitchen, where he found his new Swedish cook placidly preparing breakfast, while a mass of squirming something near the fireplace spat out a vocabulary of feline invective such as he had never heard before.

"I got you pretty puss," she said, smiling at Stephens. "I got him in the stable ven I milk. I catch him vit horsefly nettings so he can't scratch. Yes; he is von fine big cat."

The farmer looked at the struggling animal. It was a wildcat which weighed at least 75 pounds, and had claws like a small tiger. He scratched his head in perplexity. He could not cut the animal loose, and it was equally impossible to allow it to remain in the house. Suddenly a ripping was heard, and, with a wild howl, the cat began to extricate himself from the netting. The farmer dragged the girl into an adjoining room and locked the door. A minute later the animal leaped through a window to liberty.

"Hish vas you nice cat," said the maid, regretfully. "I vish him would stayed."

NEVADA HOLDS ONE RECORD.

In Its Statehood Existence of Forty Years It Has Had But Six United States Senators.

Nevada was admitted into the union as a state in 1864 and its first representatives in the United States went to Washington in that year. They were William M. Stewart and James W. Nye.

Forty years have elapsed and William M. Stewart is still the senior representative of Nevada in the senate, the position which he took in 1864. He has not held the place continuously, however.

He had as successors two mining magnates, as they were called at the period of their election, William Sharon and James G. Fair. In 1887 Senator Stewart was reelected, and he has been senior senator continuously since that time.

The post of junior senator from Nevada has had only three incumbents—Nye the first, John P. Jones the second, and Francis Newlands, the present senator, the third. His term will not expire until March, 1909.

HON. FRANCIS NEWLANDS.
(Sixth, and Youngest, United States Senator from Nevada.)

Mr. Jones, a Welshman, was senator from Nevada for 30 years, from 1872 to 1903, when Mr. Newlands succeeded him. He was not a candidate for another term, and his name was not presented in the caucus which chose Mr. Newlands.

It is an unusual thing for an American state to have so few changes of representation as Nevada. Oregon, admitted only five years before Nevada, has had 15 United States senators. California, with 54 years of statehood, has had 23.

Nebraska, admitted to the union three years later than Nevada, has had 14 United States senators, and Utah, which became a state only eight years ago, has had five.

USED TO ASIATIC WARFARE.

Gen. Linievitch, Grizzled Russian Veteran, in Charge of the Czar's Army in Siberia.

One of the most distinguished of the officers serving under Admiral Alexieff in Manchuria is Lieut. Gen. Linievitch, who is in command of the Siberian army corps. He is an expert in Asiatic warfare, having passed the greater part of his life in the Caucasus and the eastern dominions of the czar. Gen. Linievitch is now in his 66th year. He fought in 18'9 with great gallantry against the Caucasian mountaineers, and won the cross of the St. Anne order for valor in the field. During the Russo-Turkish war in 1877 he commanded the Second Caucasian rifle battalion, and again signalized himself by his daring and military skill. His services in Turkey earned him the cross of St. George, a golden sword of honor, and the rank of colonel. In 1884 Gen. Linievitch was promoted to the command of the Eighty-fourth regiment of infantry. In 1889 he took charge of the Transcaspian rifle brigade, with the rank of lieutenant general. In 1895 he was transferred to the Lesgui as commander of the local military district, and in 1900, at the time of the Boxer outbreak, he was ordered to Manchuria at the head of the Siberian army corps. He was in command of the Russian forces which operated against Pekin in that year.

Coffins to Go with Troops.

The Third regiment, United States army, now stationed at Fort Thomas, will have as part of its baggage, should it go to Panama, 25 coffins. Quartermaster Jackson made requisition on the quartermaster's department for that number of coffins just for the trip. Judging from the grewsome literature the officers and men have been reading concerning the climatic disadvantages coffins may be much in demand.

PRIMITIVE FARMING

SPAIN WOEFULLY OUT OF DATE IN AGRICULTURAL METHODS.

Labor Is Far Too Cheap in That Country to Justify the Purchase of Labor-Saving Machinery.

Spain continues to disregard her natural advantages in agriculture as well as in other directions. Agriculture is too often left to the poor to eke out a precarious existence, unsupported by those who ought to be the first to devote their capital to the improvement of the soil. Irrigation, too, is neglected, and practically the only irrigation works are those constructed by the Moors during their occupation of the country, which have brought such prosperity to the districts of Valencia and Granada.

The cost of hand labor in all parts of Spain is very cheap and does not seem to justify the farmer owning very small farms using even the modern plow. However, on some of the larger farms agriculturists not only can but do use labor-saving machinery of the most recent types.

In the northeast portion of Spain, comprising a section where the farms are all small and labor extremely cheap, the sale of labor-saving agricultural machinery would be almost impossible. Labor is so cheap that there is not much inducement to lay out money on what is looked upon as costly machinery.

The daily wage of a laborer in the fields varies from 1.50 to 5 pesetas (12 to 70 cents), according to the locality and the season of the year. The landed proprietors also take little interest in their estates, which are parcelled out and sublet to small farmers in return for payment in kind. These farmers are, as a rule, entirely dependent on the result of the crops for their livelihood and have no capital to spend on improvements. The country, too, is mountainous, and there is no wide extent of arable land.

In the province of Almeria the farms are small and the area suitable for cultivation is extremely limited. The single vega is small in acreage and can only be used for the production of garden truck. Again, a great deal of the available soil which might possibly be employed for the raising of wheat and barley is given over to grapes, and these form the great source of income to the farmers.

Most of the wheat and barely used in this province comes from the district of Granada and Jaen. Even with more attention paid to legitimate farming, modern implements would be of no use, owing to the mountainous conditions and the entire absence of any large farms. In the interior of the province the mountain sides are spotted here and there with small cultivated spots, usually barley or wheat, where it would seem as if man or beast had a hard time in working.

The land in Asturias is divided into small holdings and farmed by the owners and their families, outside help being very seldom required. In cases where help is needed laborers are hired at 1.50 to 4 pesetas (27.5 to 80 cents) per day. Modern agricultural implements are in this province coming into use, and the primitive methods which have prevailed are gradually giving way before the newer and better methods.

In 1868 a law was promulgated with a view to inducing capitalists to found agricultural colonies in different parts of the country for developing its natural resources. This law allows all implements used by these colonies in cultivating the soil, harvesting the crops, and preparing the fruit to be imported at the nominal duty of one peseta (19.3 cents) per 100 kilograme (220.4 pounds). In spite of the inducement thus offered, the scheme for establishing these farming colonies has not met with the response that was expected.

Until 1900 modern agricultural machinery was practically unknown in this country, and reports from all parts of the agricultural districts show the larger farmers and experimental farms are all commencing to use modern machinery.

REGINALD CLEAVER.

FIANCE CALLED HER.

Strange Story of a Narrow Escape Tells the Spiritualistic Circles of London, England.

Ever since those two great scientists, Sir William Crookes and Sir Oliver Lodge, declared their belief in a spirit world there has been a boom in spiritualistic circles in London, and "mediums" and "clairvoyants" are reaping the usual harvest.

A very pretty girl, who has only been "out" one season in London, was traveling down to the country to meet her fiance, who was one of a big house party gathered together for the benefit of the newly engaged couple. In the first class carriage with her was an elderly doctor unknown to the lady.

As the train was just leaving a station some ten miles from her destination the girl made a spring at the window and an attempt to get out on the platform. The elderly man retained her, however, and pointed out that it would be better to go a station further than risk her life in that manner. At the next station the very same thing occurred, and the girl seemed terribly distressed when she was again prevented from jumping out.

Finally the doctor gave the frightened girl his card and asked her in a kindly way what he could do for her. Then the girl told her story. She had seen her fiance on the platform beckoning to her to come out of the carriage at both the stations which they had left.

The doctor, a little incredulous, of course, told her that she had better get out at the next station as she felt so distressed. It was only three miles from the house and she could take a cab.

The girl saw nothing when she stepped out onto the foggy platform, and just as the train moved on a man stepped into the carriage and took his place beside the doctor.

Within three minutes of its departure that train was in collision with a goods train, and the only man who was fatally injured was the stranger who had taken his place opposite the doctor.

Young German Didn't Propose to Give the Woman Preacher a Matrimonial Chance.

A certain small village in the west, far removed from the noise and bustle of commerce, boasts a female preacher, and the lady's duties are many. One day she may visit the sick, another attend a funeral, and the next baptize a baby. One afternoon she was preparing the sermon for the following Sabbath when she heard a timid knock at the parsonage door. Answering the summons she found a bashful young

"Good afternoon!" the preacheress remarked. "What do you wish?"

"Dey say der minister lifed in dis house, hey?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yess? Vell, I vant me to kit merriet."

"All right; I can marry you," she said.

The lady's hair is beginning to silver, and the German glanced at it. Then he jammed his hat on his head and hurried down the path.

"What's the matter?" she called after him.

"You gits no chance mit me," he called back. "I don't vant you; I haf got me a girl alretty."

Woman's Lot in Corea.

In no country is the life of women more pathetic than in Corea, where it might be termed imprisonment with hard labor from the age of seven until death. Little girls are secluded from the time of their betrothal. At an age varying from 10 to 16 years they are married to men they have never seen, and go away to take their places as menials.

MAN HAS PIG'S SKIN.

Virginia Surgeon Grafts Over Two Hundred Inches of Porker's Cuticle on Patient.

Dr. Hamilton Browning, teacher of clinical surgery in the University of Virginia hospital, has succeeded in grafting the skin of a two-months-old pig upon a large surface of one of the patients under his charge.

As a general rule, grafting is made by taking the skin from the body of the person upon whom the graft is to be made, or from the bodies of the generous persons who are not afraid of a little pain. Dr. Browning, however, could use neither of these methods, as the surface to be grafted covered 223 square inches of area on the thigh of the young man patient, who had been injured in a railway accident.

Two weeks elapsed before the wound was ready for the operation. The treatment to which the pig was subjected was thorough, if no more. First the animal was shaved and washed with warm water and green soap. Then it was rewashed in the same way, and a thick coat of green soap was allowed to remain upon it for four hours. Next it was given another thorough scrubbing with green soap and alcohol. After this its body was inclosed with a strong bichloride of mercury poultice, which was left on for ten hours.

On the day the grafting began the pig was chloroformed and thin shavings of skin were taken from it and gently pressed upon the patient's wound by a nurse. The whole operation required several days, but the result was perfect. Within a few months the young man had a whole skin, had passed a rigid examination for life insurance, and had resumed his work.

MONKEY SCRUB LADY.

Animal in Philadelphia Park Becomes Proficient in Handling Soap and Brush.

"Monkeys, like men, should learn to work," says Keeper McCrossin, of the Philadelphia zoological gardens. He has taught one of his charges to overcome her distaste for soap and water and to wield a scrub brush with skill. Every day the monkey goes carefully over the inside of its cage, scrubbing floor and ceiling, back wall and iron bars, as carefully as it could be done with human hands.

McCrossin saw the monkey imitating him in his scrubbing operations. Tightly clutching a paper bag, she rubbed it over one railing after another, evincing great enjoyment. Then McCrossin gave her a big wash cloth and instructed her how to wet it in a pail of water.

It was long before she understood what soap was for, and even yet she occasionally takes a bite out of a cake, to make sure it is not something to eat.

"I intend to teach the other animals to scrub their cages, if possible," said McCrossin.

"All the monkeys in the cage take great interest in the scrubbing operations, but the trained animal will not allow them to touch the brush, soap or pail of water. At first she attempted to scrub one or two of her brothers, but it precipitated such a fight that she dared not repeat it."

Curious Eyes of Animals.

Many animals possess more than two eyes, which do not act together. A leech, for example, has ten eyes on the top of its head which do not work in concert, and a kind of marine worm has two eyes on the head and a row down each side of the body. Some lizards have an extra eye on the top of the head which does not act with the other two. A bee or wasp has two large compound eyes which possibly help each other, and are used for near vision, and also three little simple eyes on the top of the head which are employed for seeing things a long way off.

THE LAND OF OPHIR

Region Which So Lavishly Supplied King Solomon with Gold.

Abyssinia One of the Many Countries Which Has Been Credited with Possessing the Famous Mines.

Had King Solomon realized one-half the effort which the world would put forth to locate the source of his unlimited supply of gold, it is reasonably certain that that wise, and, apart from his thousand wives, good man would have left explicit and reliable instructions to guide to the spot, but, notwithstanding the fact that he still easily holds rank as the wisest man the world ever knew, he did not have keenness of vision enough to see the eager, persistent search which would be made for the land of Ophir, the place from which King Solomon's mines poured forth their great stream of yellow gold. Ophir has been located in India, Arabia and Africa, and there seems to be considerable argument which may be advanced in favor of the claims of each of these places. In addition to these, Smith's Bible dictionary tells us that Calmet regarded it as in Armenia; Sir Walter Raleigh thought it was one of the Moluccs islands, while Arias Montanus, led by the similarity of the word Parvaim, supposed to be identical with Ophir, found it in Peru.

But the land of Ophir still remains, not a myth (for that it did exist and yielded rich treasure is certain from sacred and profane history), but a mystery. And now an American, K. V. Millard, a Californian, is reported to have secured positive assurances that King Menelik has the much-wanted mines locked up securely somewhere in his kingdom, and claims to have obtained from that half-civilized but able monarch concessions which will restore eventually to the world these oldest and richest of gold mines. Preparations are being made, it is said, for the development and working of these concessions, and the world will wait with interest for news as to whether Ophir has been positively located or not. Certain it is that gold is a considerable export of Abyssinia, and that there are gold mines in that unknown country which have been jealously guarded for years is equally certain.

But the weight of opinion and evidence has always placed the probable location of Ophir much to the south of Abyssinia, in the region of the Zambesi river. The Portuguese poured out men and money in an effort to explore the country along the Zambesi, but never found enough gold to pay interest on their investment. In a paper read before the London Geographical society in 1875, St. Vincent Erskine declared that the country between the

THE QUEEN OF SHEBA'S TOWER.

Simpopo and the Sabia should be explored, for nothing can more convincingly prove the existence of large gold mines than the fact that it is death to a native to speak of them or of the ancient ruins to be found there. In the opinion of Erskine it is the ancient Ophir. "The queen of Sheba's real name was Sabia, a name which is even now given to a mine there. In some maps Sofala is called Sophir. The 'S' is merely a prefix and it is therefore reasonable to suppose that the original name was Ophir.

Mauch, the German explorer, in 1871 discovered the long sought ancient ruins of Zimbaeve, and he found the natives were accustomed to work for alluvial gold. These ruins were near Pikes Kraal, and are massive. The walls are still 30 feet in height, and are built of granite, hewn into small blocks about the size of our bricks and put together without mortar. The most remarkable of these walls is situated on the very edge of a precipitous cliff. The walls are about ten feet thick at the base and seven or eight at the top. Another portion of the ruins was the remains of an ancient tower, called "the house of the great princess," or palace of the queen.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, March 24, 1904.

MacAdoo is much ado just at present.

"The most unkindest cut of all" is J. J. Hill's endorsement of Grover Cleveland's candidacy.

"What is the origin of graft?" asks a correspondent of the New York Sun. Dead easy—"It is the root of all evil."

J. H. Tillman, of South Carolina, announces his withdrawal as a candidate for Congress. Most people acquitted of murder are satisfied to go on the stage.

The purchase of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company system by the Public Service Corporation has revived the report that a trolley line is to be established between this city and Metuchen. Such service would enhance the value of property along the route and would be beneficial to this city in many ways.

It would be a Godsend to the Democratic party if William Jennings Bryan and William Randolph Hearst would lead their regiments into the Populistic camp and abandon all claim on the army which is true to the principles expounded by Thomas Jefferson. Neither of these "journalists" would be tried for treason.

The Common Council invites you to attend its April meeting and express your views on the proposed scheme of municipal collection and disposal of garbage. Don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity of voicing your sentiments in favor of the proposed improvement, and in that way show that you are interested in the advancement of Plainfield.

Every citizen interested in the welfare of Plainfield should be glad over William M. Runyon's announcement that he will be a candidate to succeed himself as city judge. During his incumbency he has discharged his duties in a highly creditable manner and the experience he has gained in the performance of his duty makes him particularly valuable to the municipality.

The war in the Far East gives many suburban newspapers an opportunity to fill space with pictures which are of little or no interest to the general public. In the suburban district people buy a local newspaper to get the home news and they expect to find it. For what is going on in the world, outside of their own little sphere, they depend upon the metropolitan dailies.

This is the day of the man in the street—the common man. And the press is the voice of the common man, speaking a little more clearly, and a little more highly than the man speaks in his person but representing his aims and his interests. The faults of the press are known to itself, and there is a steady betterment. It is a betterment that keeps pace with that of its public. With all its admitted shortcomings, the press is right; it stands for health, safety, honor, progress, liberty. It does so, because the man in the street stands for exactly that. The newspaper that dared to stand for anything else—but it could not and would not; it would be the quickest mode of suicide. The newspaper represents all interests, not equally, but in such supposed measure as its clientele demands, and at base it must be true in all things.—Press and Printer.

We devote much space today in giving the full text of the report on municipal garbage collection and disposal, presented by the joint committee to the Common Council at its meeting last night, feeling sure that every citizen interested in the welfare of the municipality will give it attention. A careful and thorough investigation has been made of this important subject by a competent committee of men, representing the Common Council and the Board of Health, and it is gratifying to learn that favorable action on the much agitated subject is unanimously recommended. It is very encouraging to know that the committee spent much time in getting at the needed facts and figures concerning the various systems of municipal collection and disposal of garbage. These men deserve the thanks of the public for the interest they have taken. There is every reason to believe that the Common Council will adopt the scheme at its regular April meeting and that the system will be in running order at an early date.

Purchases Leonard Property.

Dr. Charles B. Lafferrow has purchased the old Leonard homestead property on West Front street, next to Leal's School, and he expects to take possession soon. He will make a number of improvements in the property.

AMUSEMENTS.

Maclyn Arbuckle, who plays Hon. Jim Hackler in "The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre, New York, has been attracting much attention through the exhibition of his paintings at the Molntosh studio. These paintings are made with grease paints such as actors use in making up the stage, and leading artists are much interested in the new process. Meanwhile, George Ade's quaint comedy continues to keep crowds laughing to the side splitting point at Wallack's.

William Gillette is now in the last two weeks of his successful engagement at the New Lyceum Theatre, New York city. When he gets through there on the evening of April 2d, he will have appeared in J. M. Barrie's delightful comedy, "The Admirable Crichton" for over five months and will have played to capacity audiences during that entire time. All the playgoers who have seen Mr. Gillette in the character of the wonderful irresourceful butler, who is the hero of the comedy have been more than delighted with the artistic work of the star and the cleverness with which this subtle character is presented. They have enjoyed the charming comedy itself for its beautiful sentiment as well as its novel amusing scenes, also for the rarely attractive quality of its production. The remaining performances are but few, and any New Yorker who has not yet seen Mr. Gillette in "The Admirable Crichton," should not fail to accept one of the remaining opportunities of seeing this play.

Sam. S. Shubert and Nixon & Zimmerman are offering to the local public at the Academy of Music, New York, for a limited engagement with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, the No. 1 "A Chinese Honeymoon" co., which, without doubt, is the musical hit of the last two years. The opera is now in its third year in London. The book and lyrics are from the pen of George Dance, while Howard Talbot has furnished the music. "A Chinese Honeymoon" is in two acts—the scenes being laid in Ylang-Ylang, which is represented as an Imperial seat in the flowery Kingdom. Of course, the management has gathered together an organization of talent which may truly be said to be remarkable in the field of musical comedy. They are led by Katie Barry, May DeSousa, Mabelle Baker, Julia Sandgreen, Mary Louise Gibben, Evelyn Dunmore, Gene Lucesha, Fred W. Mace, Wm. Pruette, Ben. Howard, Geo. Broderick, Joseph Miller and eight stunning bridesmaids and a chorus and ballet of 100. Among the popular pieces of the comedy are the following: "Roly Poly," "A Paper Fan," "I knew At First Sight That I Loved Her," "The A La Girl," "Twiddley Bits," "I Want To Be a Lidy," "Mamie Speaks the Grand Planner, and "A Little Street In Heaven That They Call Broadway."

Henry W. Savage's new comic opera production "The Yankee Consul," with Raymond Hitchcock in the star part, is the musical sensation of the season in New York, where it is playing to the capacity of the big Broadway Theatre every night. This popular playhouse, wherein so many notable plays, musical and dramatic, have enjoyed extended runs, has seldom had a more attractive offering than the present one. Alan Dale, New York's distinguished dramatic and music critic, commenting upon the season's musical productions in last Sunday's American and Journal, says: "There have been twenty musical productions here since September. Of these, how many have succeeded? You can think of 'The Yankee Consul;' that 'caught on' because it was clever and good. The others—most of them —fell by the wayside." The company in its entirety is one of the best that has ever appeared in New York, and a particularly large and well drilled chorus is a feature of the production. "The Yankee Consul" will begin its sixth week on Monday evening, March 28. Matinees are given at the Broadway on Wednesday and Saturday during this engagement.

CHANGE IN ELECTION LAWS.

Bill in Legislature to Place Spring Elections in Board's Control.

In line with the movement to simplify all the election matters, and center control of them in the hands of the regularly constituted county boards, a bill has been introduced into the Legislature in supplement to the one now turning over the spring elections. The new bill provides that the election boards have control of the primary elections, just as at a general election. At present city and township clerks superintend them.

As with the main bill, this supplemental measure is heartily endorsed by the boards. One of the reasons advanced for the passage of it is that it will insure impartiality in the distribution of printing and other contracts. The election board is non-partisan, and for that reason the plums will have to be divided. With the clerks in control, the friends of the party in power get everything to give out.

PARK CLUB PLANS SOME THEATRICALS

Entertainment to be Given on April 12 for Benefit of the Furnishing Fund.

ARRANGE TWO PLAYS

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS', "THE BICYCLERS," TO BE PRESENTED.

"Too Many Cooks," as an Curtain Raiser—Castes for the Two Performances — Gypsy Dance — Dance at Midnight.

For the benefit of the fund that is being gathered to pay for the furnishing of the remodelled clubhouse, the Park Club will hold an entertainment on April 12. The programme will be notable. The entertainment committee is in charge of the affair.

Two plays will be presented. One will be short, little more than a sketch, but the other will be of good size. The short one is to be "Too Many Cooks," in which Miss Helen Phillips will play "Mrs. Ingleby," and Miss Isabelle Milne will take the part of "Miss Maude Chesney." The longer play will be J. K. Bangs' "The Bicyclers." The cast of that is to be filled as follows: "Mrs. Robert Yardsley, an expert," C. E. Murray; "Jack Barlow, another expert," S. F. Weaver; "Thaddeus Perkins, a beginner," Walter M. McGee; "Edward Bradley, a scoffer," Clarence Case; "Mrs. Thaddeus Perkins, a resistent," Mrs. S. F. Weaver; "Mrs. Edward Bradley, an enthusiast," Miss Mabel Vandeventer; "Jennie, a maid," Miss Madeline Reed.

Between the two plays there will be a spectacular dance of gypsy character. The men in it will be DeWitt Hinkaw, M. J. Dumont, Charles Dupee, George Dupee, Lawrence Hasgbey, William F. Hobbie, Jr., Harry L. McGee, Lewis Williams; the women dancers will be Misses Elsie Brokaw, Sophie Barlow, Adelaide Elsberg, Ethel Moss, Norma Northrop, Eleanor Valiant and Mrs. William McCutchen. Miss Davenport, of Newark, is training the dancers.

After the entertainment there will be a dance. Westervelt's orchestra will furnish the music.

ROMANCE OF THEIR MARRIAGE

H. C. SMITH ELOPED IN SEPTEMBER WITH MISS GRACE M. CODDINGTON.

After a romantic elopement terminating in happy marriage on September 22, 1903, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clifford Smith, of this city, have just made an announcement of the event to their astonished parents, relatives and friends. Not until yesterday were the families of the couple made aware of the union, and as a consequence all concerned were kept busy yesterday extending and receiving congratulations and making explanations.

The bride was Miss Grace M. Coddington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Coddington, of Terrill road. The groom is well known and popular among the young men of city and borough. He was the star halfback on the Orange Field Club football eleven last fall and managed the team. He also played on the Orange F. C. baseball nine. He is in business in New York city.

The ceremony was performed in Westfield, September 22, the youthful lovers eluding the watchful eyes of parents long enough to drive to the residence of Rev. C. J. Greenwood, who, with Mrs. Greenwood as witness, made them man and wife.

TROUBLE OVER FIRE ALARMS

NORTH PLAINFIELD'S PAID DEPARTMENT ANNOYED BY FALSE CALLS.

Ever since the North Plainfield volunteer fire department went out of existence a week ago the alarm bell has frequently sounded once or two blows, particularly at night. The authorities have been trying to locate the trouble, but without success.

Chief Woolston is of the opinion that some of those in possession of *release keys or those who have tap*pers in their houses are responsible for the trouble. The possessor of a tapper can ring the bell by bringing the wires together. As a measure of precaution against a possible continuance of the annoyance, Chief Woolston is having all private tappers taken out.

Charges False Imprisonment.

Suit to recover damages for alleged false imprisonment has been started by Hetfield & Hetfield for Edward F. Palmer, a local motorman, against Pond & Company, Newark jewelers, who sold goods to Palmer on the instalment plan and charged him with not paying up.

COMPRESSED AIR AND ITS VALUE

Andrew J. Kenney Describes Its Uses to the First Presbyterian Men's Club.

A FEW EXPERIMENTS

GREATLY FACILITATES MINING AND RAILROAD WORK.

Carpets Cleaned by It—Has Been Used for More Than Fifty Purposes—The Lecture a Good One—The Committee.

The use of compressed air and a history of its development as a power in moving machinery were described Monday by Andrew J. Kenney, of North Plainfield, in a lecture before the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Kenney was formerly associated with the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company.

Mr. Kenney sketched the history of compressed air from the time it was first used in diving bells one hundred years ago. He spoke of its value in caissons. Few great machine shops are without a large number of machines for compressing air. All great mines are supplied with them. The greatest development in the uses of compressed air has come in railroad shops where there are as many as fifty different *means of employing it. One use illus*trated was its power of cleaning carpets without taking them up. Mr. Kenney admitted that electricity was a more efficient means of performing work. He gave a few practical experiments, showing the power of compressed air, and illustrated its uses with drawings and pictures.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of L. B. Hazeltine, chairman; A. V. Searing, Jr., C. E. Braider, L. H. Gates and C. E. Baseltine.

ROBERT A. MEEKER HONORED

CHOSEN EMINENT COMMANDER OF TRINITY COMMANDERY, NO. 17, K. T.

A regular conclave of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., was held last Monday, at which time these officers were elected for the coming year:

Eminent commander, Robert A. Meeker; generalissimo, George M. Macintyre; captain general, Otto Mueck; senior warden, Robert Bushmore; junior warden, Thomas Hazeltine; prelate, B. Frank Coriell; treasurer, C. H. Rugg; recorder, W. H. Sebring; standard bearer, Thomas Hanna; sword bearer, J. Z. Hatfield; warden, Bogart T. Conkling; quartermaster, Edward Nelson; assistant quartermaster, L. B. Woolston; sentinel, Caspar Bolsterle; trustees, Dr. D. C. Adams, Nelson Y. Dungan, Henry Woodland; representative Masonic Hall Association, Jacob Kirkner.

Following the election the officers were installed by Eminent Sire Jacob Kirkner and Nelson Y. Dungan.

BROOKLYN BOYS WINNERS

LOCAL Y. M. C. A. IS EASILY DEFEATED AT BASKET BALL.

Undefeated in basket ball this season, the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. maintained its record Saturday night against the Plainfield association five, winning by a score of 54 to 14. The game was played on Brooklyn's floor. *The home team played fast ball dur*ing the opening parts of each half, running their opponents off their feet. Plainfield bunched their play, and Brooklyn kept two or three men away from the scrimmages, their tactics giving them many shots for baskets without interference, Smith did most of Plainfield's scoring. Brooklyn made many fouls. The first game between the teams was played in this city February 20 and was won by Brooklyn, 37 to 20. The line-up:

Brooklyn Central—A. Behrens and Bogg, forwards; B. Behrens, centre; Begle and Salmar, guards. Plainfield —Smith and Whitford, forwards; Caboone, centre; Neal and Scull, guards. For Plainfield, Smith scored three goals from the floor and Whitford one. Caboone scored six goals from fouls. Hepborn was referee; Denton and Heinecke, referee and umpire.

—Hugh Sweeney, of Liberty street, has returned to work at Pond's after a three weeks' illness.

EXAMINATION IN CERTIORARI CASE

Special Series of Questions Propounded to Recorder Doud by Goodwin's Counsel.

MAGISTRATE ANSWERS

REPLIES FILED WITH THE SUPREME COURT JUSTICE.

Sixteen Queries in All Are Put—Five Regarded as of Great Importance by Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer.

In accordance with a rule issued by the Supreme Court, Recorder Doud has just filed answers to a series of questions put him by Assemblyman Swackhamer in the certiorari proceedings in the Goodwin case. The questions were put, according to Mr. Swackhamer, for the purpose of bringing out the alleged fact that Mr. Goodwin, at the time of his arrest, was standing on the property of the First Church of Christ and that he merely acted to prevent a trespass on that property.

Sixteen questions in all are asked in the special examination. Five of these are regarded by Counsellor Swackhamer as of prime importance in establishing his contentions. These five, with the Recorder's answers, are as follows:

Q. Was it not testified to by Andrew Love, Sr., a witness produced by the Prosecutor (Goodwin), that the Prosecutor at the time of his arrest was attempting to prevent the street commissioner from placing logs or timbers on the church lawn or lot of the First Church of Christ, of which prosecutor was at that time a trustee?

A. No, except as certified by me in return to the rule to certify entered in said cause February 16, 1904.

Q. That the street commissioner did, on the seventh day of November, cart upon and place on said church grounds, certain logs or timbers referred to herein as obstructions removed from said Grove street?

A. No. There was no evidence to that effect.

Q. Whether it was not proved that the prosecutor at the time of his arrest attempted only to prevent the said commissioner from removing obstructions from said Grove street to and upon said church property?

A. No. Nothing of that character was proved.

Q. Whether or not at said trial there was an entire absence of evidence on the question whether the street commissioner had given notice to the person or persons who had placed said obstructions in said Grove street, to remove the same therefrom?

A. No; the evidence on that point was as certified in the return to the rule entered February 16, aforesaid.

Q. Whether there was any evidence at said hearing showing to what place the street commissioner was attempting to remove the said logs or timbers at that time, except that he had hitched to a timber lying near the middle of the street, and started to pull it to one side. The team was connected to the timber by a chain, and was started toward the side of the street, and Goodwin seized them. Goodwin testified that he was standing on the church lot when he seized the team, and that the latter had crossed the sidewalk onto said lot, and that he believed the street commissioner intended hauling the timber onto said lot. From the testimony of the other witnesses, already certified in the return to the rule of February 16, it was shown that the street commissioner was attempting to remove the timber from the roadway of the street, and just started the team to pull when Goodwin ran out and seized them. Goodwin and the team were wholly on the roadway of the street at the time, and there was no proof as to the place to which the street commissioner was intending to remove or place the timber, except that he was attempting to haul it toward the gutter.

The proceedings will be continued at the next term of the Supreme Court, unless it is argued on briefs, which is unlikely. It is probable that Counsellor Swackhamer will move that all the certificated evidence, of which the above is part, and which both sides have called into the case, be struck from the records.

For Rehearing of Divorce.

Through Lawyer William G. De Mera, Anna Langer, of Hunterdon county, has applied to Vice Chancellor Stephenson for a rule re-opening the decree in the divorce case instituted by her against her husband, Elisha Langer.

Wants Coal.

When the borough Board of Education ordered coal last summer it did not figure on the extremely old-fashioned winter that the weather man handed out. So the janitor at the Watchung School has asked the authorities for more coal. He says he needs it badly, and the school board believes him. The coal will be ordered.

COMMON COUNCIL RECEIVES REPORT

Joint-Committee on Municipal Collection of Garbage Presents Favorable Findings.

CITIZENS TO BE HEARD

NO ACTION TO BE TAKEN UNTIL THE APRIL SESSION.

Complete Text of Committee's Report—Most Thorough Investigation Had and the Result is Unanimous for Adoption of System.

Following a thorough investigation of the subject of the municipal collection of garbage disposal, the joint committee from the Common Council and the Board of Health, Friday, presented at the adjourned meeting of the Council the anticipated report on the question, giving the result of the committee's investigation. Dr. E. VanD. Hedges and F. W. Dunn, members of the Board of Health, and Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow were in the lobby as interested spectators.

Mr. Tyler, who is a member of the joint committee, presented the report, and after it was read, he suggested it be laid on the table until the regular April meeting, at which time all local citizens interested in the subject may have an opportunity to speak for or against the proposition. Accompanying the report were a number of letters from local physicians and a telegram received recently from Charles J. Fisk, who was in Boston, and who could not attend the meeting of the Council early in the month. Mr. Fisk as well as the physicians spoke heartily in favor of municipal collection of garbage, declaring that the present system is a menace to the health of the city. Every one of the physicians cited some reason why a change from the present system should be made.

The physicians who communicated with the Council last night were Drs. F. C. Ard, A. F. VanHorn, E. W. Hedges, T. H. Tomlinson, P. J. Zeglio and W. H. Murray.

Mr. Tyler thought it would be wise to let the people know that any communications on the subject of garbage disposal, either for or against the proposed plan, would be accepted and appreciated. Such communications can be sent to Health Officer L. R. Thurlow, 149 North avenue.

There was also received a communication from Theodore D. Smith, who is interested in the system of garbage disposal as proposed in the report. He agrees to place the defunct Plainfield Sanitary Company's crematory in first-class working order and give a sixty-days' demonstration, the result to be decided upon by three men, one selected from the Council, one from the Board of Health and one from his company, for the sum of $8,950. The cost of the sixty-days' demonstration is to be borne by the city. The communication was placed with the report from the committee and the letters from the physicians and will be accessible in the office of the city clerk as suggested by Mr. Daniel, who thought some people might want to examine these documents later on.

This is the report of the joint committee and copies of it can be had by applying at the office of the city clerk:

Plainfield, N. J.,
March 18, 1904.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Gentlemen: The question relating to the collection and final disposal of the garbage of our city, which was referred to this joint committee by your honorable body, has been thoroughly studied and investigated. Much of the work has necessarily been done by letter, correspondence being held with cities all over the United States as to their methods of handling this very important problem. The cities of Trenton, N. J., Yonkers, N. Y., New Brighton, S. I., and Scranton, Pa., were visited by the committee, the detail methods of garbage collection and disposal in these cities thoroughly investigated and their crematories inspected.

As a result of our study and investigations in this matter we submit the following recommendations, the committee being unanimous in the opinion that they are the best means of meeting the local requirements of our city:

First, that the land and building formerly owned by the Plainfield Sanitary Company, situated on Dunellen avenue at the head of DeKalb avenue, be purchased, and the crematory at present located in the above building be put into working order.

Second, that a thorough system of garbage collection be established, the necessary wagons, horses and equipments be purchased. To do this work it will require three single-horse metal carts and six men. The garbage can then be collected from each house in our city every other day.

The estimated initial cost of putting the above crematory into working order and installing the collection system is $10,000, which is divided as follows:

Land and building	$ 2,100
Crematory	5,950
Carts, horses and harnesses	1,400
Stable and stable equipments, repairing building and grading	2,100
Unforeseen miscellaneous exp.	450
	$10,000

The estimated cost of maintaining the above system when installed would be $6,000 a year, divided as follows:

Stable expenses	$ 720
Labor	3,840
Coal and repairs	1,000
Unforeseen miscellaneous exp.	440
	$6,000

Cremation is the only real sanitary method of disposing of the garbage, and after investigating the experiences in other cities, the committee is convinced that a crematory properly operated is in no way a nuisance.

The site chosen by the committee as being the best was formerly owned by the Plainfield Sanitary Company. In 1897 this company established a garbage disposal system on the above property at a cost of over $15,000, the land and building alone costing $7,000. The crematory installed was known as the S. G. Smith or Vivartias Refuse Destroyer and is, in the opinion of the committee, one of the best, most efficient and most economical garbage furnaces. After a few months of activity, this company, through financial difficulties, failed, and the plant can now be purchased for $3,000 and can be put into its original condition for $3,950; so that for $6,950 we can obtain a plant whose original cost was over $15,000.

The amount—$3,950—which is given as the cost of restoring the crematory to its original condition, is not in any way an estimate but the actual bid of the builders.

The present method of garbage collection and disposal, besides being unhealthful, unsanitary and inconvenient, is also very expensive; over $12,000 is spent yearly for the removal, at irregular intervals, of the refuse from less than one-third of our houses. What the committee proposes is to have the refuse from every house in the city removed at stated intervals, and disposed of in a sanitary manner at one-half of the above cost —$6,000. Such a system would not be a burden on the taxpayer, but a saving.

The committee has made inquiries concerning the legal method of raising money to buy lands and erect and equip buildings for cremating garbage and refuse matter. Section No. 1 of Chapter XL. of the Laws of 1895, p. 101, authorizes Common Councils to purchase all necessary lands and real estate and erect thereon a building or buildings and equip the same with all appliances necessary and suitable for the cremation of such garbage and refuse matter. The next section of the act provides for the issue of bonds to bear interest at not exceeding 5 per centum per annum and redeemable in not more than twenty years from date of issue.

The committee, in investigating this subject, has received special encouragement from the almost unanimous sentiment of our leading physicians with respect to the importance to the health of the citizens of our city, that the present unsanitary methods of collecting and disposing of the garbage should be replaced as soon as possible by a safe, sanitary system of garbage collection and disposal under the direct control of the city authorities.

It is worthy of notice that, after studying this question thoroughly and investigating the practices in other cities with a view of suggesting the best means of handling this problem in our own city, the members of the committee have unanimously arrived at the conclusions outlined in the above report. New rope is needed for the flagpole of the borough main school. Chairman Cooley, of the building committee of the School Board, is looking for a man of nerve to put the rope in place.

TROUBLE FINDING OFFICERS TO ELECT

Borough School Board Has Hard Time Getting Willing Candidates.

DECLINATION BY JOY

REFUSES RENOMINATION FOR PRESIDENCY AGAINST UNANIMOUS URGINGS.

Vice Presidency Goes Begging Too—E. A. Overton Finally Elected President, and James R. Joy, Vice President.

Offices went begging at the organization meeting of the borough school board Monday. Pretty nearly all the members were nominated for either president or vice president, and everyone declined with an anxiety to escape the cares of office that did not seem at all feigned. The presidency was finally fastened on E. A. Overton, and James R. Joy assumed the vice presidency after declining the presidency and attempting to avoid the secondary office.

Mr. Joy had to combat the unanimous sentiment of the board to escape a re-election as president. When nominations were called for, A. V. D. Honeyman began a nominating speech in slow and careful phrase. Before he reached a name, Mr. Valiant, with characteristic terseness, interjected:

"I nominate Mr. Joy."

Mr. Honeyman looked mildly surprised. "I was about to do that myself," he said, "but I'll second the nomination made by Mr. Valiant, with pleasure." No other nominations were made.

Mr. Joy thanked the gentlemen for the honor, but declined to stand. "I appreciate the honor of being renominated, coming as it does with considerable backing, but I have thought over the matter thoroughly, and am confident the work of the board can be better done if it is in other hands. I must positively decline to serve."

In hope Mr. Joy will withdraw his declination," said Mr. Honeyman earnestly. "All the members of the board are unanimous in desiring to have him serve again, and there is no one who could fill the office better. If there was any feeling of dissent it would be different, but the desire to see Mr. Joy re-elected is wholly unanimous. I mean that," he added significantly.

"I have not reached this conclusion suddenly," explained Mr. Joy, "but after careful consideration. There are reasons which need not be published, for my refusal. It will be better for the interests of all concerned if the work is in other hands."

Samuel Townsend then nominated Mr. Overton, referring to him in complimentary terms as the senior member of the board.

Mr. Overton begged to be excused. He thanked Mr Townsend for the honor, but he didn't think he was capable. He echoed Mr. Joy's statement that the office would be better administered in other hands.

"You know you've always had your eye on that chair, Overton," said Mr. Joy with a laugh, and then Mr. Honeyman asked for the question. The call was taken up, and before Mr. Overton could protest further was unanimously elected.

Then the hunt for a vice president was begun. Mr. Valiant, the incumbent, Mr. Needham, Mr. Honeyman and Mr. Joy were nominated and all of them refused the bobor. Mr. Needham was urged to accept the office for some time, but he determinedly refused to consider it, on the ground that he was a new member and unfitted to assume office. Mr. Joy was finally induced to reconsider his declination and a unanimous vote made him Mr. Valiant's successor

There was no trouble over the election of the district clerk, E. M. Fountain being returned to the office. Mr. Fountain was not present, which may have accounted for the ease with which the position was filled.

The attitude of Mr. Honeyman toward the election of Mr. Joy, and all the other actions of the regnant antis, are taken to mean the indication of a determination on the part of the majority to maintain harmony in the board and avoid friction just as far as possible. All through the session there was not the faintest suggestion, aside from Mr. Joy's declination of the presidency and the statements it called forth, of the lines that separate Messrs. Honeyman, Cooley, Overton, Fountain and Needham, antis, from Messrs. Joy, Valiant, Woodruff and Townsend, administration supporters.

There are not many changes in the make-up of the committees. President Overton announced them as follows:

Teachers and text books—Joy, Valiant, Honeyman; supplies—Woodruff, Cooley, Fountain; grievances and treasury—Townsend, Woodruff, Needham; buildings and grounds—Cooley, Townsend, Needham; audit—Valiant Woodruff.

Superintendent Wightman called the attention of the board to the necessity of action in preparing for the commencement exercises, which are to occur on June 17. Messrs. Townsend and Woodruff were named as a special committee to arrange the affair, and secure a speaker.

Discussion over the best place for the exercises arose, and the suggestion that the First Baptist church, which is used by the city department, be hired was made. The exercises have usually been held at the Y. M. C. A. Hall. It was generally admitted that the church would afford more room, and an effort will probably be made to secure the edifice for the occasion.

R. C. A. A. IN GOOD SHAPE

ABUNDANCE OF MATERIAL FROM WHICH TO CHOOSE A GOOD NINE.

The Reform A. A. expects to enter the baseball arena this spring in rejuvenated form. The association has forty-eight members from whom Captain William O'Loughlin expects to be able to select a strong and representative nine. The old Reform Club is backing the team management.

George Myers is manager of the nine and wants to hear from Orange Field Club, Dunellen Athletic Club, Y. M. C. A., West End Field Club and Clinton Avenue A. C. He already has several dates fixed and expects to complete his schedule within a week or two. The Myrtle avenue grounds in North Plainfield have been secured and will be fitted up for practice and games.

J. J. Higgins is president of the association and Leo DeCourcy vice president. George Lindsay is secretary and Edward Smith is treasurer. Bowling is also a feature of the association's activities and James Scott is captain. The basement of Reform Hall has been adequately fitted up as a gymnasium with trapezes, punching bag, pool and billiard table, shuffle board and a full set of lockers. Business meetings of the association are held every Friday night. The gymnasium is open for members every week day night, and is governed by new rules and by-laws.

It is planned to hold a series of entertainments in Reform Hall early in April for the benefit of the club. If the association meets with success in its efforts this year, William G. Smith, president of Reform Club, promises that a swimming pool will be built in the gymnasium the following summer.

THE BOROUGH CONTRACTS

WERE AWARDED TO J. Y. WILSON AND J. W. MANHATTAN.

Contracts for the year's supply of stone for street work were let by the borough councilmanic committee last Monday.

J. Y. Wilson was awarded the order for crushed stone for roadway repairs. There were no bidders against him. He will receive ninety-five cents a ton for No. 2 stone, and $1.05 for dust, delivered on the street. This is the price the city pays the Smalley quarry for the same supplies. As an officer of the borough Mayor Smalley could not bid on the work.

J. W. Manhattan received the contract for flagstones. Fifty-one cents is the price on stone for sidewalks, and eighty cents and a dollar will be paid for crosswalk slabs. There was one other bidder.

Keeping Wires Cleared.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, had charge of a gang of men who were at work last week clearing away branches of trees which interfered with electric light and fire alarm wires. The Chief says that many trees in the city are heavily charged with electricity because of carelessness in keeping the wires away from branches, and that serious accidents are always possible as a result.

Trouble in a Church.

Because George E. Dewey, formerly of North Plainfield, the well-known wine merchant on Fulton street, New York, upon the proposal of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Kent, was accepted as a member of the Lewis Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., the Rev. Edwin M. Martin, the assistant pastor, has handed in his resignation.

Miss Anna Wooden, of Orchard place, is suffering from a severe attack of laryngitis.

Mrs. William Stryker, of Millstone, has been spending the past week with relatives in this city.

MRS. HALL TELLS OF HER FATHER'S LIFE

Daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe Returns From Lecture Tour in Pennsylvania.

HER TALK INTERESTING

DWELLS ON GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS OF DR. SAMUEL GRIDLEY HOWE.

A Philanthropist and Educator—A Benefactor of the Greek—A Generous Helper of the Poor and Blind.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall has returned from a lecture trip to western Pennsylvania. At Meadville, she gave a talk on the life and work of her father, the late Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, famed for his works as a philanthropist and educator.

Mrs. Hall touched briefly on his romantic career in the Greek Revolution, where he suffered many hardships. Toward the close of this war, he returned to America, where he succeeded in raising over $60,000, in addition to a quantity of clothing. He superintended personally the distribution of these supplies sent from the United States to the suffering people of Greece. They revived from actual starvation, a large part of the peaceful population, who learned to bless the news of America.

She spoke also of his pioneer work for the blind, and of his successful efforts in having the Bible printed for their use. He persuaded the American Bible Society to contribute the necessary funds. He printed the New Testament in 1836, the Old Testament in 1840. Mrs. Hall described the first steps in the process of educating Laura Bridgeman, Dr. Howe's famous pupil. She was the first blind deaf mute ever taught the use of language and the methods used in her case are still the standard ones. Helen Keller and many others, having been taught in accordance with them.

His work in establishing in Boston, in 1848, the first school for idiots and feeble-minded children, was also mentioned. Dr. Howe was greatly ridiculed at the time for this undertaking.

Mrs. Hall spoke of her mother's latest works, that of organizing the public charities of Massachusetts. The system which he formulated while chairman of the State Board of Charities was not only adopted in that State, but is now used in every other State and in Europe. While believing primarily in the organization of charitable works, he believed in personal ministry to the poor and unfortunate. In his first report he said:

"That our work may be well done, it must be by the people themselves directly, and in the spirit of Him who taught that the poor ye shall always have with you—that is, near you—in your hearts and affections, within your right and knowledge; not thrust far away from you and always shut up alone by themselves in almshouses and reformatories, that they may be kept at the cheapest rate. The people cannot be absorbed from their duties of charity which require knowledge and sympathy with sufferers. These no visitors, no trustees can give, since charity is not done by deputy." In these words, written nearly forty years ago, Dr. Howe struck the keynote of modern thought on this subject.

It is hoped that Mrs. Hall may give this lecture in Plainfield. The Meadville paper (Washington Star) reports it at length and calls it "a deeply interesting talk."

Mrs. Hall gave "Personal Reminiscences of Distinguished People" before the Woman's Club, of Titusville. The Titusville Herald says: "Her lecture last evening was, perhaps, as edifying a talk as it has been the good fortune of the Woman's Club to hear during the whole history of the organization," a period of about fourteen years.

—Control of the New York Morning Telegraph has been purchased from the estate of the late William C. Whitney by E. R. Thomas. This announcement is authorized by William E. Lewis, the editor of the paper.

—Until their new rooms on Somerset street are in shape, the borough ex-volunteer firemen will meet temporarily in the rear of Debele & Stahl's store.

—Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, will celebrate his sixty-seventh birthday at his home Friday night.

—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders has decided to erect a low truss iron bridge at North Branch.

—L. T. Harris and family, of the borough, will move in a few days to West Front street, near Mariners place.

REV. JOHN P. MORRIS GOES TO HIS REWARD

Former Pastor of St. Mary's Church Dies at Home of His Niece in Nutley.

BUILT CHURCH HERE

HIS LABORS WITHOUT ANY PECUNIARY COMPENSATION.

Sketch of Pious Man's Career—Sixty-Three Years of Age—Funeral Tomorrow Morning—Well-Known Here.

The Rev. Father John P. Morris to whom the Roman Catholics of this city and Dunellen owe much, died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Emil Le Bel, in Nutley, Essex County, Monday, after an operation for diabetes. For twenty-five years he had been pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church at Nutley.

Father Morris was born in Paterson, July 14, 1841 and secured his preparatory education at St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md., after which he went to Rome and pursued his theological studies at the American College there, being one of the first upon its. He was ordained there at the same time as Bishop Wigger. Returning to this country he became the assistant pastor at St. Peter's and St. Mary's churches in Jersey City and later the assistant pastor at St. Patrick's church, Elizabethport.

He came to Plainfield in 1870 as assistant to Rev. John J. Connelly, who was then pastor of St. Mary's church, and who at that time was ill. In 1871 he succeeded Father Connelly and while in this city he built the handsome edifice now used by St. Mary's church, as well as the parsonage. This church was dedicated September 8, 1880, the late Archbishop Corrigan being present. He also built the Roman Catholic church of St. John the Evangelist at Dunellen, that edifice being dedicated October 24, 1880. He was pastor of St. Mary's church from 1871 to 1883 and was succeeded by Rev. Father Smyth, the predecessor of the present pastor, Rev. Father Egan.

Father Morris never drew any salary from the church. He had a private income, more than sufficient to provide for his needs, and it is known that he gave freely for benevolent and charitable purposes. He was of a pleasant and jovial disposition and beloved by all who knew him. He was a talented musician and while he never became the author of any musical works, he always devoted much time to the art.

AUTOMOBILISTS TO ORGANIZE

PLAN TO FORM A CLUB IN THIS CITY IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

Steps are now being taken by owners of automobiles in this city toward the formation of a club to advance and protect the interests of the sport. One of the most ardent enthusiasts in the city has taken the initiative in the matter and hopes within a short time to enlist the co-operation and support of every owner of an automobile. After such a club is formed, application will be made for membership in the National Automobile Association.

There are at least one hundred owners of automobiles in this city and if a majority join the local club it will make it one of the strongest in the State. It is expected that a meeting will be held soon to effect an organization.

JAMES CLARK'S HEIRS MAKE GENEROUS GIFTS

Handsome Donations to Local Charities, to Supplement Liberal Contributions.

IN AGGREGATE $99,000

MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL RECEIVES FIFTEEN THOUSAND.

Announcement Made Today—Children's Home Given $8,000 and Y. M. C. A. $2,000—Mr. Clark a Charitable Man.

Believing that death cut short plans for further gifts to local institutions, the heirs of James Clark have supplemented his donations with generous sums in his memory. Mr. Clark's will left everything to his wife and two sons, Frank L. and James E., but they were certain he had intended to give more to the religious and charitable institutions had he lived a little longer, and unhesitatingly fulfilled his wishes. To Muhlenberg Hospital, $15,000 is given for the endowment fund. The Board of Governors is authorized to devote $5,000 of the donation to the building of the proposed nurse's home if they see fit. To the Children's Home endowment fund, $5,000 is given and $3,000 to its building fund. Shortly before his death Mr. Clark gave the Home $10,000, making the total donation $18,000.

Mr. Clark's own gift to Warren chapel's building fund was $5,000. This is supplemented by $3,000 by the heirs.

The Y. M. C. A. is given $2,000 for the boys' department building fund. The first gift was $5,000.

To Camp Wolff, the children's summer home at Westfield, the heirs give $1,000.

James Clark was one of the most charitable men of wealth in this city. His gifts were made quietly, with no parade or publicity, and much of his help to eleemosynary and religious work was not known outside of those benefitted.

CHURCH SOCIETIES AFFAIR

JOINT SOCIAL HELD UNDER AUSPICES OF MONROE AVE. ORGANIZATIONS.

A joint social was given by the Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Friday in the Epworth room of the church. The programme consisted chiefly of vocal and instrumental music. Instrumental selections were given by Miss May Brouwer and Miss Sadie Brouwer, and several numbers were presented by a male quartette consisting of John W. Daub and John P. Thompson, tenors; and David W. Jones and Juan Babcock, bass. Miss Daisy Houston was accompanist. Refreshments were served. The committee from the Ladies' Aid Society included Mrs. I. P. LaRue, chairman; Mrs. F. Wenzel, Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Miss Annie Stafford, Mrs. J. W. Daub, Mrs. J. E. VanArsdale and Miss Mary Brouwer. The Epworth League committee consisted of W. N. Sortor, president; Miss Beulah Kline, Miss Mary Cumberson and Clarence Brouard.

S. S. SWACKHAMER HONORED

MADE HONORARY MEMBER OF N. J. S. P. C. IN RECOGNITION OF HIS WORK.

In recognition of his work for the passage of humane measures, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer has been made an honorary member of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

He received a handsome certificate of membership this morning from Rev. Dr. W. N. Mackenzie, the secretary of the society. The honor is conferred on Mr. Swackhamer for his work in connection with the anti-pigeon shoot, robin and child labor bills.

Men prominent in the Society have written letters to Mr. Swackhamer thanking him for his labors in behalf of the children and birds, and asking him to continue to wield his influence for the passage of the laws designed to save young children from the horrors of mill and factory work.

Want Second Trial.

The case of Lena Cangeage against Victor Roach, in which the plaintiff brought serious charges, will probably have a second trial, as the defendant has made application to have judgment opened. Six hundred dollars was awarded the plaintiff in the Supreme Court by a sheriff's jury. William Newcorn, Esq., represents the plaintiff.

Alex. Losardi, the fruit dealer of West Front street, has just received a large consignment from Lucca, Italy, of fine Lucca oil, just the thing for salads.

YELLOWSTONE ILLUSTRATED

JAMES H. JOY TOLD OF GRANDEUR OF THE FAMOUS TRAIL.

Notable success attended the entertainment and sale of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church Thursday. It was well attended and the receipts swelled the society treasury to a material extent.

James R. Joy's lecture on the "Yellowstone Trail" furnished the entertainment. Mr. Joy's description of his trip, and the wonderful array of pictures he took, seem to increase in interest each time they are presented. His hearers listened to the graphic discourse with rapt attention, and gave every indication of great enjoyment.

After the lecture the sale was opened, and a sociable time of informal nature was enjoyed. One side of the church was prettily decorated with green crepe paper, and a shaded light shed a homely glow over a fancy goods tables, a cake table and several ice cream tables. The cakes and fancy articles sold rapidly, and the cream tables were constantly in demand.

Mrs. Andrew Lutkins presided over the fancy goods, with Mrs. Isaac Sheppard and Mrs. M. F. Gano assisting. The cakes were sold under the direction of Mrs. H. C. Nelson. The committee in charge of the ice cream was made up of Mrs. E. A. Vermeule, Mrs. C. H. Lippincott, Miss Stella Vermeule, Miss Alice Vermeule and C. H. Lippincott.

The general committee was made up of Mrs. Edwin L. Earp, chairman; Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, Mrs. C. C. Nelson.

STRUCK BY CRAZED HORSE

GEORGE GUNTHER NEARLY KILLED BY HOOFS OF MADDENED BEAST.

Enraged by an attempt to administer medicine to him, a spirited horse owned by W. J. Butsfield attacked the latter's coachman, George Gunther, Thursday night and inflicted severe injuries.

As the medicine touched its tongue the animal reared and struck Gunther a terrific blow on the forehead with a front hoof. Gunther was felled to his hands and knees, and the horse instantly leaped forward and beat him down with a rain of blows from his forefeet.

Edward Uarhahn, who was in the stable, rushed into the stall, and braving the flying hoofs, drove the crazed animal away.

Gunther was unconscious and remained insensible for some time. His hand was hurt badly by the hoofs, and he was severely bruised all over. Dr. Adams attended him.

THE STARVING BIRDS

Deaths from Hunger and Cold That Might Be Avoided.

A Severe Winter Has Cut Off Their Usual Food Supply—How the Suffering May Be Quickly Alleviated.

Our wild birds are dying by hundreds and thousands, and they are dying chiefly from lack of food. In many cases they are perishing literally from starvation, but more often the death is caused by cold, which they could stand well enough if they were sufficiently fed. Every bird may be likened to a small furnace, the fuel for which is the food it eats, and the nonconductor, its covering of feathers. When there is plenty of fuel, the little furnace is warm—warmer by some degrees than a man or a horse—but when the fuel becomes scant the furnace burns low, and presently goes out. When food is plentiful, birds have little to fear from the most intense cold. A turkey buzzard, which I have in captivity at this time is a case in point. The vulture is an inhabitant of the southern states, and seldom comes as far north as New York city, even in summer or autumn. But the individual I have here has been exposed to biting winds when the thermometer registered 20 degrees below zero, he has rolled about in the snow, spread out his wings to the sun, and preened his plumage with as little concern as though he had been perched on a chimney in Charleston, S. C. The secret was simply an unfailing supply of food.

The chief cause of the present great mortality among our wild birds at this time is the unusual amount of sleet and snow which have fallen this winter. Many of the birds depend for food entirely on the seeds which they gather from the tops of the weeds in the fields and along the roadsides, or which they pick up from the ground beneath these weeds. The snow has covered both the ground and the weed tops and cut off their food supply. The rest of the feathered population depend on berries and buds, or the insects' larvae, etc. But the sleet has come, and the berries, buds and insects have frozen or sheathed in ice, and these birds, too, are dying. It is a sad fact that hundreds and thousands are already gone, but if we, who love them, will strive to prove our love at once, we may yet save many thousands more.

Perhaps the best and the quickest way to alleviate the suffering is through the children of the schools. Most of these children have an intelligent love for the birds, and will gladly give up an afternoon, or a day, for that matter, to assist in distributing food for their feathered friends. As my own first experience may be of assistance to those who desire to try a similar experiment, I will relate it. As soon as I knew how serious the condition had become, I wrote a letter to the local superintendent of schools, asking him to kindly cooperate with me in an effort to feed the birds in and around his town, by urging the boys in the public and high school to help in distributing food the next afternoon. I requested that all who could bring bird seed, grain, suet, bread or table scraps, or anything else which birds could eat, would do so, and that the others would come provided with bags or baskets to distribute such food as my friends and I would have ready for them. The letter was sent by a messenger, and in two hours I received word from the superintendent that 34 students from the high school would be at the school building and ready to assist me at half-past two on the following day. On my arrival I found the students awaiting me, provided with baskets of broken nuts, barnyard weepings, and all manner of bird food. The boys were divided into squads of four or five, under the leadership of one who knew well some particular bit of woodland or stretch of open country. There were eight squads and they marched away in orderly fashion, each in a different direction, with instructions to cover about one-eighth of the country immediately surrounding the town. Each squad had at least one shovel, and in open places, such as fields and meadows, good generous spaces were cleared of snow and covered with seed and grain, scraps of meat and the like. Had the food been simply thrown on the surface of the snow it would soon have been buried and inaccessible, but on bare ground in the middle of an otherwise snow-covered field, it attracted the attention of every passing bird.

In every squad there was at least one boy who could climb, and the nuts in generous lumps, were tied to the branches of trees, where it was to attract the birds [illegible]

A ST. PATRICK'S SOCIAL

ENTERTAINMENT HELD UNDER AUSPICES OF BAPTIST ENDEAVORERS.

A social in which there were features appropriate to St. Patrick's Day, was held Thursday under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society, of the First Baptist church. The affair was held in the Sunday-school room of the church and it attracted an unusually large attendance. The programme was opened with recitations by Miss Hazel Grant and piano solos by Miss Carro Bird.

Then the young people engaged in a study of the arts. A number of common everyday articles were arranged on a table and the person guessing the greatest number correctly received a prize. N. Douglass Drake was successful. "The colored waiter" was represented by a black tray. "Old Ironsides," flat-irons; "An absorbing subject," a sponge; "The four seasons," salt, vinegar, mustard and pepper; "Something to adore," a key; "The Light of Other Days," a candle; "One Hundred Years Ago," 1804.

The guessing match was followed by a Shamrock hunt. Hundreds of Erin's symbol were hidden all over the room and the one finding the greatest number received a prize. Miss Josephine Serrell secured the prize.

This concluded the programme and the rest of the evening was spent in sociability, during which refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of the social committee of which Miss Hattie Mattison is chairman. The other members of the committee are Miss Bessie TenEyck, Miss Elizabeth Wilson, Miss Velma Oakley, Miss Grace Oakley, N. Douglass Drake and J. Henry Crane.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS' AFFAIR

YOUNG MEMBERS OF TRINITY REFORMED ENJOY AN ENTERTAINMENT.

With a programme of unusual merit, the entertainment of the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor of Trinity Reformed church scored an unqualified success Thursday. It was heard by an audience that filled the lecture room to the limit of its seating capacity.

The programme was long and varied, and every number was good. Every one of the young entertainers was rewarded with rounds of deserved applause.

Chief among the features of the bill was a humorous little sketch called "The Snuggles Family." There were Mrs. Snuggles and eight very funny daughters, in costumes that were jokes in themselves. The characters cleverly recited in keeping with their parts, which were enacted as follows: Mother, Anna Randall; coquette, Ida Tier; hay fever patient, Violet VanWinkle; Edna Cole; prima donna, Helen Smith; Edna Force, Cora Gano, Ida VanArsdale; baby, Edna Dilts.

Included in the other numbers of the programme were: Dialogue, William and Edson Day; piano solo, Melville Roseberry; recitation, Elsworth Bennett; piano, Ernest Stevens, Harold Schenck; recitation, Ida VanArsdale; song, Hilda Bennett; piano duet, Clarence and Arthur Hoffman; song on corn, Earl Huff; song, Miss Florence Bennett, the choir soloist; recitation, Edith Leek; song, William VanWinkle; piano solo, Cornelius Schenck; recitation, Harold Starr; recitation, Adelaide Cole; song, Violet VanWinkle; recitation, Clifford Cole; song, Paul Busby; recitation, Mildred Creamer; song, Fancy Lockey.

The committee in charge was made up of Violet VanWinkle, the president of the society, and Mrs. Josie M. Tier, the superintendent.

POLITICS IN UNION COUNTY

REPUBLICAN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MAY HOLD SPECIAL MEETING.

The Republican county committee may hold a special meeting this month to decide about issuing a call to elect delegates to the National convention. The holding of the meeting will depend upon the date set by the State committee for the State convention. The State committee will meet in Trenton Monday.

This district, the 8th Congressional, is allowed two delegates and two alternates to the National convention and one elector. The probability is that Union County will have one delegate and one alternate allotted to her, with one delegate and the elector for Morris County and one alternate for Warren. Union has had the elector at the last two presidential elections leaving Morris in line for it this year.

The district convention will be held at Trenton probably on the morning of the day of the State convention. Unless the special meeting of the Union County Republican committee is held this month, the next regular meeting will be held the second Tuesday of next month, April 12.

MRS. J. G. GILLESPIE'S TALK

MISSIONARY ADDRESS TO MARK ANNIVERSARY OF KING'S MESSENGERS.

In connection with the observance of the organization's fifteenth anniversary, Mrs. J. G. Gillespie, of Elizabeth, delivered a mission talk to the King's Messengers, a junior missionary society of the First Presbyterian church, last night.

Mrs. Gillespie told of the work that is being done in the Eastern field, describing with interesting detail a trip she took through Japan, India and China. To illustrate the costumes of some of the people she saw in the three countries, she draped native dresses that she had brought over about several members of the Messengers. Among the costumes was one worn by a Japanese priest, the only one, she said, in this country.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

At the Reform Club.

A billiard and a pool table have been added to the furniture of the Young Men's Association of the Reform Club. It is planned to have the billiard table cut down to make another pool table.

Interest in the reorganized association is growing among the young men whom it is designed to reach. There are forty members at present and the organization is growing. Besides the new attractions, there are shuffleboards, a miniature bowling alley, a punching bag, boxing gloves, various games and magazines.

T. S. Armstrong, the Park avenue druggist, gives you the benefit of years of experience in the most careful preparation of drugs and prescriptions.

SENATORS FROM KANSAS.

Moodoo Which Seems to Attach to Line of "Fated Succession"—Bad Luck Follows Them.

John T. Ingalls' "fated succession" is vividly recalled to mind by the present trouble in which Senator Burton finds himself. The brilliant Atchison statesman so designated the line of Kansas United States senators that started out with Gen. James H. Lane.

Those in the "fated succession," says the Topeka Capital, were James H. Lane, Edward G. Ross, Robert Crozier, Alexander Caldwell, James M. Harvey, Preston B. Plumb, Bishop K. Perkins, John Martin, Lucien Baker and the present Senator J. Ralph Burton. Lane committed suicide. Ross committed political suicide by voting against the impeachment of Andrew Johnson, and was driven out of his party. Crozier, who served about a year by appointment, died without leaving a single mark by which his brief senatorial career can be remembered. Caldwell resigned after two years' service to escape investigation.

Harvey, although he had been governor of his state and had made a fairly good reputation as such, made a very insignificant senator, and after three years' service, defeated for reelection and dropped out of political life. Plumb died in office at Washington. Perkins served a brief term by appointment and is scarcely remembered as a senator. Martin served two years, and left the senate poorer in purse and with less prestige than he possessed when he went in. Baker was almost a total failure, and his crushing defeat for reelection at the hands of Burton is still warm in the memory of the people of Kansas.

DISEASE NEEDS WATCHING.

Whooping Cough Not Simple Little Affair Many Suppose—Nearly as Fatal as Scarlet Fever.

Eliza H. Root calls attention, says the Woman's Medical Journal, to the fact that this disease is too little dreaded by the medical profession and that it is by no means the simple affair that many seem to suppose.

From the United States census of 1900 we find that 663 died in New York from whooping cough and 549 from scarlet fever; Philadelphia, 179 from whooping cough, 182 from scarlet fever, and so on in the different cities. Death from whooping cough occurs most frequently from pneumonia as a complication that induces heart failure, or a bronchitis may occur that ends in suffocation. Asphyxia or marasmus due to the continued ejecting of the food or loss of appetite may cause death.

Even when death does not occur, severe disturbance of the nervous system may remain, as weakness of the intellect and memory, imbecility. Visual defects, strabismus, blindness and deafness, partial or complete, and even deaf-mutism may remain. Whooping cough, it is evident, should be under the control of health authorities, subject to quarantine and other preventive measures as much as scarlet fever.

NO "DAY OFF" FOR A JUDGE.

Barristers in Great Britain Can Apply for Injunctions at Any Time and Place.

Illustrating the proposition that a judge never puts aside his judgeship, the Westminster Gazette has the following:

"Yesterday Mr. Justice Parkhill was surprised on the links by a barrister who presented an urgent request for a certain injunction. His lordship suspended his game, and after due consideration of the facts made the order, which was at once telegraphed to Cardiff, and no doubt took effect the same afternoon.

"On another occasion a barrister on a similar quest is rumored to have found his quarry bathing at Brighton. With a commendable devotion to his client's interests, he hired the next bathing machine and rapidly joined the judge in the water. The judge's surprise at being suddenly accosted in the well-known formula, 'I have an application to make, my lord, in a very urgent matter,' may be imagined. The law sometimes stones for its promptitude delay by these lightning injunctions."

Falconry in Turkestan.

In a remote part of Turkestan Dr. Sven Hedin, the explorer, a few years ago discovered the ancient art of falconry in full flower. "Among the horsemen were eight falconers," he writes, "two of whom carried eagles, the others falcons, all duly hooded. In this part of the world falconers form an indispensable adjunct to any formal display or procession. Later in the day they gave us an exhibition of their birds' powers by letting them kill four hares and a deer, all of which were presented to me."

Telephone Girls Become Bald.

A large proportion of telephone girls employed by the big companies in New York give up their places rather than incur the risk of becoming partly bald. This effect of the steel band or hood the telephone operators wear over their head plainly noticeable in the case of those who have scanty hair. On boys who act as telephone operators it is even more noticeable than with girls.

STREET SPRINKLING CONTRACT AWARDED

Council Accepts Bid of John E. Keely Who Offers to Do the Work for $867 Per Month.

TO USE EIGHT CARTS

PUBLIC LIBRARY ASKS FOR SLIGHTLY INCREASED APPROPRIATION.

Charles W. Smith Appointed Engineer on Call in Fire Department to Succeed Frank Schuck —Crushed Stone Bid Accepted.

Aside from the important question of the municipal collection of garbage as outlined by a joint committee from the Common Council and the Board of Health and presented at the adjourned meeting of the Council Friday, and published in another column, there were several other matters considered. President Tolles and Councilmen Tyler, Lee, Murphy, Gloak, Bullock, Wilson, Higham, Daniel and Garrigues were present.

A communication was received from John E. Keely offering to do the street sprinkling during the coming season for $867 per month. The contract price last year was $500, but two extra sprinkling carts have been purchased for this year, making eight in all, hence the increase in cost. Mr. Keely offers to furnish horses, harness and give care and oversight to the business under the supervision of the street commissioner and to his satisfaction, sprinkling such streets as may be decided upon and furnish a $1,000 bond, with two sureties, for the faithful performance of the work.

Mr. Gloak, as chairman of the street committee, moved that Mr. Keely's proposition be accepted and the motion was unanimously adopted.

As was expected the directors of the Public Library and Reading Room presented a petition in which they asked for an increased appropriation from the city. The sum asked for is $4,060, an increase of $600 over last year. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

The resignation of Frank Schuck as engineer on call in the city fire department was received and on motion of Mr. Lee, chairman of the fire committee, was accepted, and the appointment by Mayor Jenkins of Charles W. Smith to the vacancy, was confirmed. Mr. Schuck was recently appointed engineer of the North Plainfield Fire Department, and could not very well hold both positions. He lives in the borough.

On motion by Mr. Gloak the bids of Newton B. Smalley for crushed stone and that of Andrew Roach for culverts and crosswalks, were accepted and they will furnish these materials during the coming year.

Mr. Daniel as chairman of the finance committee, being desirous of getting the reports from the various committees early so that the tax ordinance can be introduced at the April meeting, took occasion to speak of the matter and urged a little more haste on the part of the chairmen of the committees.

WOULDN'T FILL CONTRACT

HITCH IN THE WORK OF RE-PAINTING WATCHUNG AVENUE BRIDGE.

Work on the repainting of the Watchung avenue bridge over Green brook has been held up for several weeks by the refusal of the contractor to fulfil the agreement. The hitch was removed Friday by Freeholder Westphal, who succeeded in getting another contractor to do the work.

Arrangements were made to have the Watchung avenue, Madison avenue, and Sycamore avenue bridges repainted, and the jobs were awarded to two different men. William Snell put in the lowest bid on the Watchung avenue structure, and received the contract. Then, to the surprise of Freeholders Westphal and Lutkins, who acted in the matter for Union and Somerset's joint committee, he refused to execute the order. He said he couldn't do it at the price. The boards could have held him to the contract, but decided to let him go, and asked the local freeholders to find a substitute. Yesterday Mr. Westphal secured I. N. Wyckoff's agreement to do the work. Mr. Wyckoff put in the bid next to that of Snell, but he did not take advantage of the position of the board, and held to the price he submitted. Both the other bridges are for ahead of the Watchung structure in the repainting. The Madison avenue bridge has been completed, and the Sycamore avenue bridge will be rushed to a conclusion just as soon as the weather permits.

EULOGIZED ST. PATRICK AND THE IRISH RACE.

Roman Catholic Priests Lectured on Ireland's Patron Saint and His Life.

IN LOCAL CHURCHES

FATHER CLIFFORD AND MONSIGNOR O'GRADY THE SPEAKERS.

Congregations of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Parishes Heard Eloquent Men—St. Patrick the Apostle of a Race.

"Although the Irish may have failed to achieve their dreams of nationality, they have achieved something far greater. They have produced a new race, more catholic than ever, more sturdy, more self-reliant and knit together with a closer unity." This estimate of what Ireland has accomplished was made Thursday by Father Cornelius Clifford, of Englewood, in a lecture on "St. Patrick and the Irish in History" at St. Mary's church.

Father Clifford said that St. Patrick's life was involved in obscurity; that there are two authentic documents from which we can reconstruct and build an outline of his career and his relations to the times and place in which he lived. These are the Confessio and the Epistle to Coroticus in Trinity College library, Dublin, there is a manuscript of the confession of St. Patrick's which is more than 1000 years old. Scholars have accepted the truth of the view that this dates from the fifth century because it describes and fits admirably what is known from other sources of political and ecclesiastical conditions of the time.

As to St. Patrick's birthplace, Father Clifford contended that it was probably in Scotland in the region about the Clyde. His father was Calpurnius, a deacon, and his grandfather Potitus, a priest. He was carried into slavery at the age of sixteen and became a swineherd of King Milchar in Dansaraide in northwestern Ireland. He was seven years in captivity before he escaped. After studying for thirty years, according to authentic information, with St. Germanus in Auxerre in Gaul, he returned in middle life to his career of evangelical conquest.

For a parallel of St. Patrick's career, one must go to the life of St. Paul. St. Patrick was the apostle not merely of a nation but of a race.

Ireland's history in the consciousness of the world begins with the persecutions of Henry VIII and Elizabeth, the quarrels continuing with intervening breathing spaces until the first part of the nineteenth century. Then there developed a new Ireland in Australia, the United States and Canada.

Another lecture on the patron saint of the Emerald Isle was delivered by Monsignore O'Grady, of New Brunswick, at St. Joseph's church. His subject was "Ireland, the Land of Scholars," but he dwelt to a great extent upon the life and influence of St. Patrick.

The Monsignore's address was a brilliant one, and held the close attention of the large audience. He told of the scattering of St. Patrick's followers by the invasion of Ireland, and how the establishment of many monasteries and schools resulted in Germany, Spain and France.

ANNOUNCES ITS PURCHASE

P. S. C. TOOK RARITAN TRACTION CO. TO SUPPLEMENT MIDDLESEX LINE.

The Public Service Corporation announced yesterday it had supplemented the purchase of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company property and franchises with the acquirement of the Raritan Traction Company, and the lines which it controls, and that the latter lines would be operated as a part of the system of the former.

The Raritan company has a trackage of 87 miles, and controls the Perth Amboy Railroad Company, whose tracks extend over a distance of a little more than three miles. The system runs through Perth Amboy to Metuchen, and its acquirement is described by the Public Service officials as the natural result of the purchase of the Middlesex and Somerset system, and gives the corporation complete control of the trolley lines in the eastern part of the State.

Rival Telephone Concern.

Representatives of the Central Jersey Telephone Company have been busy for some time past in an endeavor to secure an entrance into this city and it is reported that another application for a franchise is likely to be made it in a short time.

HORSETHIEF BROWN COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Bucks County Man Arrested Here, hanged himself in States Prison at Trenton.

CONFESSED HIS CRIMES

BECAME DESPONDENT AFTER CONVICTION IN UNION COUNTY COURT.

Used a Piece of Jute to End His Career—Stole Many Horses in This Locality—Left a Wife—Sentenced for Five Years.

With a rope around his neck attached to the head of his bed, Charles Brown choked himself to death in the State prison at Trenton, Wednesday night. He is the man convicted of wholesale horse thieving in several counties, the credit for his capture belonging to the local police. He was sentenced a few weeks ago to serve five years in jail.

Chief Kiely told a reporter this morning that Brown had been despondent from the time he was taken from this city for his trial at Elizabeth. The hard work and prison fare at Trenton added to his moroseness. He made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide almost as soon as he entered the State prison on February 16 last.

Brown obtained a rope from one of the prison shops and strangled himself while covered over with the bed clothes so that the night watchman could not perceive what was happening. His death was not discovered until he failed to come out of his cell yesterday morning.

Brown worked in No. 1 shop in the prison, his duty being to untie and tie up heavy rolls of mats with large pieces of jute. A piece of this jute he must have slipped into his pocket. When he retired he tied one end of the jute to the head of the bed and tied the other end around his neck. Then pulling the bedclothes over himself he deliberately pulled on to the rope with his head and body until he died.

Brown was forty-four years old, born in Georgia, and leaves a widow working in Trenton. He accused Jacob Rabinowitz, of Perth Amboy, of being an accomplice at the time that he was arrested. On February 25 he was taken to New Brunswick, where he appeared as a witness before the Grand Jury of that place against Rabinowitz. While in that city he had a sensational meeting with his wife at the depot.

COAL BARRENS CELEBRATE

FEAST AT THE EXPENSE OF JOHN A. O'KEEFFE ON ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

Barren in name, but far from barren in good fellowship and jollity, the redoubtable Eleven that call themselves the Coal Barrens held another of their dinners Thursday. John A. O'Keeffe was the host, and the affair was held at his house.

Ten of the Barrens were present: J. J. Kenney, Bro. I; William J. O'Keeffe, Bro. II; C. J. Ward, Bro. III; J. A. O'Keeffe, Bro. IV; M. J. Cashin, Bro. V; D. C. Carney, Bro. VI; J. S. Kenney, Bro. VII; Joseph F. O'Keefe, Bro. VIII; J. Russel Knowlton, Bro. IX; M. J. Whelan, Bro. X. J. H. Hillman, Bro. XI, who lives in Flatbush, could not attend.

The menu was elaborate, and the table was strikingly decorated. The menu cards as Barren dinners are always printed as "The Twelfth Member," the official publication of the organization. The "twelfth member" is the wife of the host, elected for the evening only. The menu cards last night was printed in green, to mark the day.

All the Barrens spoke. All of them tried to sing and several succeeded, notably M. J. Cashin, C. J. Ward and J. R. Knowlton.

To Elect Directors.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association will be held Monday night, March 26, at which time directors will be elected and a new series will be opened to be known as the eleventh series. Persons wishing to take shares can do so by applying at the office of the association, Liefke & Laing, 146 Park avenue, or at the office of the treasurer, W. R. Codington.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 27: "Messages From the Mission Fields."—Acts xvi, 9-16; Matt. xxviii, 19-20.

Three great missionary conventions recently held mark the beginning of a new era in the work of world evangelization. The Cleveland convention was probably one of the most influential gatherings of its kind ever held. It would not be repeated, because conditions similar will never occur again. It thrilled the church to the ends of the earth. The reports of the inspiration there experienced read like the account of Pentecost. Philadelphia and Buffalo student conventions were each in its own way of great worth. The address of Bishop Fowler was most notable, and its influence on the church must be marked. Less dramatic in phraseology, but no less impressive in matter, were the utterances of Bishop Thoburn, who seems of all men in the Methodist church gifted with the spiritual vision of an old time seer and the tongue of an old world prophet of Jehovah.

These addresses should be read in every chapter of the league in America. It is advisable to devote one or several evenings to the public reading and discussion of these great addresses. They can be had at the mission rooms and Methodist book depositories. Bishop Fowler's address has been issued in book form at a low price. Every part of our mission field sends out its hail of good cheer and call for helpers. Money and men are the needs of the hour. We have abundance of both. Oh, for the power of the Holy Spirit to fall on the church of the United States as He came on the church of Antioch when He said, "Set apart Barnabas and Saul!"

This the year 1904 should make our ears more attentive to the cry for help that becomes more insistent from our "far flung battle line." Our local chapters should once a month have a service at which extracts from letters of missionaries and extracts from newspaper and magazine articles shall be read. Such chapters are taking up the course of study of missions and by maps, essays and addresses are becoming intelligent upon and interested in this branch of our work. Many localities can have the use of a stereopticon. All such places can have the use of pictures of scenes in all our mission fields at small expense. Some of our preachers and laymen have for several years been gathering photographs from the different missions and have prepared sets of slides showing life in various fields. The missionaries have heartily co-operated in this work. Sets on Africa, China, India and Japan are available. Bishops Hoss and Hartzell have given personal aid. "Worldwide Missions" will give articles suitable for such services, and the written lectures with the slide sets will allow their use where no one can be found willing to use the stereopticon. The use of the stereopticon is increasing in public schools, and many departments in colleges are regularly equipped with them as necessary pieces of apparatus. Why should not the church, and especially the league, make more use of this means of information? Rev. Walter J. Yates, Ph. D., of Bangor, Me., has been a pioneer in this work and willingly gives all possible help. The missionary secretaries refer applicants to him.

Helping the Young Men.

One of the many valuable features of the work of the Young Men's Christian association is that it opens a free reading room in the land that presents the young men where they may spend their evenings under good influences. Among other things, the association offers social parlors, evening classes, entertainments, lectures, gymnasiums, employment bureaus, home libraries, Bible classes for Bible study, young men's meetings, etc. All these privileges are offered at so small a fee that no young man need feel debarred from them. The state executive committees of the Young Men's Christian associations are pursuing an admirable plan by which towns not ready or not large enough to organize an association may still be accorded some of the benefits of such a work, in the appointment in each town of an officer known as a "corresponding member" of the committee. He seeks out young men who are leaving home and provides them with notes of introduction to the associations in the business centers, where they will be cordially received and helped in securing employment, if needed, good homes and Christian fellowship in the church of their choice, or, if they go to the smaller places, he will introduce them to the corresponding member there, who will give the same assistance. In the state of Illinois there are over 800 corresponding members, in New York nearly 400 and a number in most of the states. If names and addresses of young men leaving their native places for other places are sent to the state office of the Young Men's Christian association in any state, at once efforts are made to be of service to them.

The Destroyer of Selfishness.

Hardships and sorrows are often times the fires which burn out the dross of selfishness from human hearts. —Universalist Leader.

A Bit of Eternity.

The day is long and the day is hard;
We get no time to rest and of keeping guard;
Tired of the sense of a fight to be won,
Of a day to live through and of work to be done;
Tired of ourselves and of being alone,
Yet all the while, did we only see,
We walk in the Lord's own company.
We fight, but 'tis He who nerves our arm;
He turns the arrows that else might harm;
And out of the storm He brings a calm.
And the work we count so hard to do
He knows it may, for Him, be service, too,
And the days that seem so long to live are His.
A bit of His bright eternities, and close to our need His helping is.

ARGENTINA'S CORN

The South American Country Making Big Strides as a Producer.

Her Soil and Climate Provide Just the Conditions Needed for the Successful Growing of Maize.

It has long been known that Argentina was a great wheat producing country, and was giving the United States a lively brush in the competitive markets of Europe, but the American farmer has believed himself practically secure in his supremacy in the raising of Indian corn, or maize. However, he will now have to look to his laurels, for the great grain growing country of South America has entered the field and is rapidly coming to the front with big yields from her vast farms. According to statistics prepared by the Argentine department of agriculture, the only ones available, 3,473,722 acres were planted in corn in 1901, and the total yield was 84,018,265 bushels, or an average of 24.18 bushels per acre. Of this crop the custom house statistics show an exportation of 46,843,282 bushels. Owing to the system of preparing these statistics, this amount is probably slightly in excess of the amount actually exported, but only slightly. This crop was grown between September, 1901, and March, 1902, and 90 per cent. of it was marketed between March and October, 1902.

Argentine exportation of corn from 1884 to 1902 inclusive, has been as follows, with the valuation in United States money:

Calendar years.	Quantity.	Value.
1884	9,119,970	$4,490,551
1885	4,245,000	2,062,266
1886	6,389,699	3,253,808
1887	9,327,100	12,323,807
1888	27,944,175	12,950,542
1889	1,554,000	1,336,845
1892	17,955,005	8,261,688
1893	3,027,100	1,633,297
1894	2,102,370	1,009,297
1895	30,494,504	9,894,171
1896	31,610,000	15,424,784
1897	14,760,664	5,796,963
1898	43,945,394	13,945,600
1899	43,945,394	12,686,479
1900	26,670,000	11,216,000
1901	47,788,911	18,226,248
1902	46,899,122	22,189,268
1903 (estimated Nov. 1)	75,756,000	27,500,000

The countries to which Argentina sends this corn are the United Kingdom, to whose market in 1902 she sent 11,658,815 bushels; Germany, who took

ITALIAN COLONISTS HOME.

4,738,985 bushels; Belgium almost as much, and France, Italy, Spain, Brazil, smaller quantities.

The production of maize, or Indian corn, in the Argentine Republic, while it has been going on for many years, is only now developing into a great industry. It is just growing out of the primitive methods that have been holding it back and which still prevent farmers from realizing much more than half what they might. The results they have are due to the marvelous fertility of the soil and the perfect climatic conditions, which, in spite of bad methods, neglect, and general ignorance, give bountiful harvests to men who would utterly fail in the corn belt of the United States if they farmed as they do in Argentina; and these men cannot long continue in this manner where they are.

Every colonist wants at least 100 hectares, equal to 247 acres, and sometimes he succeeds in getting more. This is, however, the usual limit for a family, unless there are several large boys. The rule on some large corn farms is that 25 squares or about 104 acres, shall be allotted to every able-bodied working hand. Farming as they do, a man can work that amount of land with ease until the gathering is upon him, when he must have help or suffer heavy losses.

Most of these "colonists," or renters, are from the north of Italy, and are very industrious and thrifty. They work and live on conditions that would not be endured by the poorest farm hand in our country. Yet they have here a chance that they could not have at home, and most of them become well off in a few years.

The Italian renter builds a mud house with a slim roof, all the materials being furnished by a "patron," the owner of the land. Several hardwood posts are set in the ground and small boards nailed across the top. The sheets of zinc are then spread over the frame for a roof, with a slight pitch. They are tied from post to post and cornstalks are woven in, the wire holding them up. Mud is plastered on both sides of the stalks and soon dries. A hole is left for a door, and perhaps, but not always, a smaller hole for a window, and the house is done.

Planting of corn may begin as early as August 15, but generally not until three or four weeks later, and it may be as late as January 15, though generally it is not considered quite safe to plant later than December 20. On an 18,000-acre place at San Jose de la Esquina some planting was done as late as January 12 last year and a fair crop secured. The early planted corn was ripe at the end of January, but harvesting was not commenced until the latter part of February.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 27.

Topic—Jesus' work for His own country; what can I do for mine?—Matt. iv, 23-25; xxiii, 37.

There are some countries in the world that have had a peculiar power to arouse the love of their sons and to inspire them with a deep spirit of patriotic self sacrifice. Scotland is such a country. The Scotchman the world over still loves his native land. Two gentlemen being introduced, one said to the other, "Are you a Scotchman?" The other instinctively drew himself up, raised his hand to his forehead, saluted and replied, "I have that honor, sir." America has also been a land characterized by the intense patriotism of its people. So also was ancient Palestine, the land of God's chosen people. The ancient Jews fondly loved their native land, and the modern Jew centered world-wide, still look with longing eyes toward the sacred land of their fathers. David sang, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I remember not Jerusalem above my chief joy," and Paul wrote, "I could wished myself accursed from heaven for my brethren's sakes, who are Israelites."

1. Christ felt the spell of Jewish patriotism and first of all loved His country. This love was specially manifested in His exclamation as He contemplated the future destruction of Jerusalem, the holy city, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens beneath her wings, and ye would not." In these words we have the passionate cry of the lover of his country. To found United States in His patriotism. First of all, a man must love his land if he would serve it.

2. Christ lived for His country. His public ministry was largely spent in Palestine. He went about teaching, healing the sick and doing good. He gave His life to the uplifting of His people philanthropically, educationally, socially, morally and spiritually. In these ways we can be of use to our country. We can live for it, do all we can to extend goodness, morals and religion, for as these things exist or cease to exist a country becomes strong or weak.

3. Christ obeyed the laws of His country in every instance where Christ came into contact with law He obeyed it and upheld it. He paid taxes to the despised Roman government and urged the people "to render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." If we will respect, uphold and obey the laws of our land and encourage others to do so we will greatly serve it. Every lawbreaker is an enemy to the best interests of his country, while every one who loves the law and complies with it is the friend and supporter of his land.

4. Christ died for His country. Christ died for the world; but, first of all, He died for His country, for His own people. He came first "to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." If called upon to die for our country we should be willing to do so, and in days of peace we should always be willing to practice a spirit of self denial to-ward the land that protects and guards us. Let us love and serve and pray that God may always bless our land and make it more and more Immanuel's land.

The Keystone President.

The Pennsylvania state union has a new president in the person of Rev.

DR. A. R. BARTHOLOMEW.

Dr. Allen R. Bartholomew. Dr. Bartholomew is the secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Reformed church. He is a long time Endeavorer, thoroughly conversant with its principles, and his executive ability, so well recognized in his own church, will make him a fit leader for the Endeavorer hosts of the Keystone State.

Endeavor In Great Britain.

The British Christian Endeavor year book shows 423 new societies registered last year, of which 123 are Primitive Methodists, 71 Congregational and 68 Baptist.

Empire State Convention.

The next New York state convention is to be held in Buffalo July 5, 6 and 7. Many noted speakers are being booked for the gathering.

For Prayer Meeting Participants.

The following, clipped from the Christian Endeavor World, has more than a passing word to Endeavorers:

Call for some one who does not like to go alone and so get a double blessing.

Pray daily for the meeting—seven times for it to once in it.

Talk up the meeting to every one you meet.

Never make flippant remarks on the way home about persons or parts taken in the meeting.

Greet your fellow Endeavorers before or after the meeting; never whisper salutations after it has begun.

Bring with your Bible a happy face.

I. O. O. F. DISTRICT MEETING

BUSINESS SESSION AND BANQUET UNDER AUSPICES OF THE ENCAMPMENT.

Nearly one hundred members of the fifth district, Odd Fellows' Encampment, met Thursday with Noah's Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., it being one of the regular district meetings called by District Deputy Stephen H. Schleif, of this city. Among those present were nearly all of the officers of the Grand Encampment of the State of New Jersey, and interesting speeches were made by them at a banquet following the routine business of the meeting.

Reports were received showing that the fifth district, as well as the others in the State, is in a flourishing condition numerically and financially. The banquet given by the members of Noah's Dove Encampment was in charge of a committee of which Stephen H. Schleif was the chairman.

LITERARY.

Each number of Lippincott's contains a complete novel, chosen for its quality alone. Often they are by the best-known and most popular authors, but in many cases also they are by the coming writers of fiction—not yet famous, but still fresh and unspoiled. This feature has for years distinguished Lippincott's, and given it a place with the reading public different from that held by any other magazine—yet a place much envied and strived for, as many feeble attempts at imitation testify.

The Burr McIntosh Monthly reflects the latest achievements in the art of reproduction. Each number contains about forty handsome panel full page pictures, including beautiful women, famous men, art studies, hunting, golfing, football and athletic events and H. F. Outcault's latest drawings. A number of magnificent colored prints and gravures. Enfolded with a multi-color cover and bound with silk cord. All pictures are of convenient size for passepartouting or framing. Special offer—Six Burr McIntosh pictures, free, with each yearly subscription.

A Knight of Columbia, by General Charles King, a story of the war, illustrated by George Gibbs. In this charming and romantic novel, General King seems to have surpassed all previous efforts. The hero, a graduate of Columbia College, first meets the reader in the Academy of Music, New York city, on the occasion of commencement day, in 1861, at the breaking out of the war. His magnificent speech, "A Menace to the Flag," delivered on that occasion, full of the fire of patriotism, reaches the same intense excitement, the vast audience expressing their approval or otherwise according to their political preferences, for as yet the question of "which flag" was unsettled in the hearts of many. Then comes his enlistment, and he is fully launched on the troubled seas of those stirring times. His varied fortunes are closely followed, both in love and war, there being two fervent love stories running through the entire book. The plot is intricate and exciting, holding the reader in a strong grasp from start to finish. The historical scenes of battle are depicted in a manner worthy of this talented author, who now tells for the first time The Truth About Chancellorsville, exonerating the ill-fated Eleventh Corps from the odium that has always been heaped upon it, thus flatly contradicting previous accounts. This alone will be of great interest to soldier and also to civilian. The contrasts of the mob during the draft riots in New York come in for stirring descriptions, and altogether the story is one "to warm the cockles of the heart" and arouse that healthy and vigorous enthusiasm that we all enjoy. Published in one style of binding only, 12mo, 340 pages, price, $1.50. Address all orders The Hobart Company, publishers, 114 Fifth avenue, New York city.

POLITICAL GOSSIP IN REPUBLICAN CAMP

G. P. Mellick or J. F. Buckle May Become Standard Bearer in the Mayoralty Fight.

RUNYON TO BE RENAMED

FREEHOLDERS HUBBARD AND WESTPHAL LIKELY TO BE RENOMINATED.

Charles F. Abbott Will Probably be Selected Again as a School Director—It is Said That Runyon Can Have Any Office He Desires.

Political machines are always at work, and though the next city election is too far off to enter the mind of the average citizen, the politicians are already busy figuring on the makeup of the slate to be presented at the Republican convention. A lot of importance will attach to the election, for successors to Mayor Jenkins, City Judge Runyon, Freeholders Hubbard and Westphal, and School Commissioner Charles F. Abbott are to be elected.

There seems to be little likelihood that Dr. Jenkins will run again for the mayoralty. He is serving his second term, and his practice is said to make it impossible for him to consent to renomination without making a great personal sacrifice. It is understood that he will be offered a renomination, but it can be safely said that he will not accept it.

With the Mayor's probable refusal to run again in mind, the slate-makers are casting about for the man most likely to be named in his stead. Most prominent among those who are said to have lightning rods up are James F. Buckle, former president of the Council, and Former Councilman George F. Mellick. Both are men of marked executive ability, have a large knowledge of city affairs, and possess a wide popularity. Either one would make a strong candidate and a splendid official.

It is a settled thing that Judge Runyon will be again renominated. He can have anything in the gift of the city organization, and has declared his desire for another term. That disposes of that office, for the Judge changes his mind between now and the time of the convention. There is no more popular man than the Judge in or out of the organization, and there will be no thought of a change on the city magistrate's bench as long as he may continue to want the berth.

Freeholder Hubbard has become an institution in the board, and his renomination is as certain as election day itself. Mr. Hubbard has been freeholder for nearly two-score years, most of the time in the director's chair, and he will go on the ticket as long as he may wish to serve. Up to the present time no suggestion that Freeholder Westphal be retired has been made, and it is generally believed that he will be put up for another term. Mr. Westphal has been a most active official, and is regarded by his colleagues as a highly valuable member of the board.

MISSION WORKERS.

First Presbyterian Church Home Missionary Society's Sewing Department Meets.

An unusually interesting and well-attended meeting of the sewing department of the Home Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church was held at the home of Mrs. W. W. Dunn Thursday afternoon.

The feature of the session was the report of the year's work by the Superintendent, Miss Kendall. The department has had a most successful year. Donations have been sent to several schools, chiefly among the "mountain whites" and the Indians.

Refreshments were served after the meeting, and a social time was enjoyed.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.

Comedies to be Given by the North Plainfield High School Boys.

Plans have been made for a dramatic entertainment by the Class of 1905 of the North Plainfield High School. The date of the entertainment has not yet been fixed, but the bill has been arranged, and the amateur actors are rehearsing their parts.

Two comedy sketches will be presented, "Freezing a Mother-in-law" and "That Rascal Pat." The committee in charge of the affair is made up of Miss Sadie Fountain, chairman; Miss Belle Mantz and William Nischwitz. Miss Bush, one of the school faculty, is training the casts.

Lecture on Birds.

A. Radclyffe Dugmore will give an illustrated lecture on birds in the cabpel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Monday night, March 28, under the auspices of the New Jersey Audubon Society.

SWACKHAMER FIGHTS FOR EQUAL TAXATION

Individuals Unjustly Burdened by the Present Laws Which Are Partial.

ARGUMENT IN HOUSE

NO INCREASE IN RAILROAD COMPANIES TAXES IN TWENTY YEARS.

Somerset's Assemblyman Warns Assembly of Grave Responsibility Resting Upon Members for Not Taking Action on Bills.

An effort was made in the Assembly last week to compel the committee on railroads and canals to report Bills No. 29 and 31, which provide for the taxation of railroad companies the same as individuals are taxed. Among those who spoke in favor of the bills was S. S. Swackhamer from Somerset County. He appealed with great earnestness and force of reason to the members of the Assembly to vote in favor of these bills in order to equalize taxation and compel railroad companies to stand on a par with ordinary citizens.

Mr. Swackhamer showed that the valuation placed upon railroad real estate by the State Board of Assessors is the same as was placed upon it twenty years ago, though this property has vastly increased in value and similar property owned by individuals has been raised much higher; that while citizens are taxed from $30 to $50 on the $1,000, the railroad companies are taxed but 60 on the $1,000 on one kind of property and $15 on the $1,000 on another; that by the exemption which the railroad companies are enjoying under the present law, the burden of the individual tax payers is enhanced to the extent of 25 per cent.; that the old law permits the taxation of the first class property of railroads at the rate of only one half of 1 per cent., and second class property at 1, ½ per cent.; that there is $181,000,000 worth of first class property and $41,000,000 worth of second class property; that if the individual citizens were the owners of this property, it would yield a revenue of several million more per annum than it now yields; that the railroad companies now own about one fourth of the real estate in Jersey City and a large amount in other sections of the State and are constantly increasing their possessions; that this condition of affairs is bearing heavily on the large cities, and that the burden will be increased unless relief is obtained by law; that a strong public sentiment is demanding the passage of these measures, and that the argument presented at the hearing was apparently unanswerable.

Mr. Swackhamer said that the committee was assuming a grave responsibility when it refused to report the bills; that sixty members had been elected to the General Assembly to consider, discuss and vote upon the measures which are introduced in the Legislature. He claimed that the delay in reporting the bills was sure to defeat their passage and that each member of the House was resting under a tremendous responsibility in declining to act upon a question of such vital importance. "What caused the inertia of the committee? Are the railroads more potent than the people? Are the interests of the companies more sacred than the interests of the people? Shall the people's representatives bow to the behests of the companies and turn a deaf ear to the citizens who ask this relief? By what subtle influence has the action of this committee been paralyzed? Can the members of this House resist the mighty current of public opinion, silence the voice of reason, ignore the dictates of conscience, stolidly decline to give a reason for inaction and then go back and face their constituents?"

He said that the principle of equal taxation had been at the root of revolutions and by the imposition of unjust taxes, kings and tyrants had lost their heads; he claimed that it was monstrous to permit the railroads to shirk their just burden of taxation when the citizens all over the State are compelled to bear theirs, and that those who vote against these bills would go down on the record as the friends of the railroads and the enemies of the people; that there is no principle of justice upon which an advantage can be given to the rich and the strong as against the poor and the weak, and that he who willingly permits the continuance on an unjust discrimination in favor of one class as against another is as reprehensible as if he had created the wrong. He declared that he considered it a supreme opportunity to advocate a measure which would more powerfully work science and reason and which is founded upon the principles of justice.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS MARRIED

MR. AND MRS. FRANK WYNKOOP CELEBRATED THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

After completing a quarter-century of happy married life, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wynkoop, of Dunellen, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Saturday night by entertaining about thirty relatives and friends, at an informal reception at their home where they received hearty congratulations and best wishes. The evening was passed delightfully in playing games and in listening to a musical programme. "Pit" and "flinch" were the games that provided most amusement. Several delightful solos were rendered by Mrs. Robert Giddes, of Philadelphia, and instrumental selections were contributed by Miss Emma Nelson, of the borough. Dainty refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening ended with an old fashioned Virginia reel. Gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Wynkoop included many handsome ones in cut glass and silver. Guests were present from Dunellen, Plainfield and surrounding towns.

THIS CROOK A PROFESSIONAL

BELIEVED THAT METZGER BURGLARY WAS NOT DONE BY A "RAFFLES."

None of the silverware stolen from Samuel Metzer's home on Sycamore avenue was found in the possession of Jack Weler, the gentleman burglar of Bound Brook. That job is believed to have been done by a thorough-going professional.

This is the view taken by the burglar insurance company which covers the Metzger house. The corporation has allowed the claim, and arrangements have been made to pay the loss in full. Usually the insurance company puts its own detective on the case, but in this instance no such action will be taken. The burglar left not the faintest clue for the officers to work on.

He took things that it will be impossible to trace. Most of the swag was solid silver, which can be melted down and sold without diminution of value by weight. Among the things the thief took was a $600 sable coat belonging to Mrs. Metzger, but even this cannot be traced if the thief rips out the lining and the other identifying marks, and sells the coat as a pelt.

Played for the President.

Ward Stephens, formerly organist at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and well-known in musical circles in this city, has met with great success in his work as a pianist. He recently completed a tour of the West and a few weeks ago played at the White House for President Roosevelt. So well pleased was the President with his work that he has been secured to play there again at a reception to be given. Mr. Stephens has just signed a contract to make a trans continental tour with Campanari, the noted tenor soloist. It is generally believed that he is destined to become one of America's foremost pianist.

SURPRISED H. W. MARSHALL

FRIENDS GATHERED TO CELEBRATE HIS BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

St. Patrick and H. W. Marshall were honored Saturday night. The latter by a surprise party and the former by the color of the decorations at the affair.

Mr. Marshall's birthday was the event observed by the party. Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons arranged it, with the assistance of Mrs. Marshall.

At 9 o'clock Mr. Marshall was summoned home hastily from his business, by a story that his horse was sick in the barn. He arrived in a surprisingly short time with a veterinary surgeon. He sent the veterinary away when a score of friends crowded about him with congratulations, and acknowledged that it was a real surprise.

The house was prettily decorated, wholly in green to mark the season of Ireland's patron saint. Green favors were presented.

Whist was played by the guests, and handsome prizes were given to the winners. John P. Emmons and Mrs. John Whitenack won first prizes and Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons won second prizes. Each of the women guests received a souvenir in the shape of a box of candy and the men received photographs of Mr. Marshall.

Mr. Marshall received a big birthday cake. It was covered with beautiful icing of innocent appearance, but the recipient is suspicious of its contents. It is to be cut and distributed later.

Among the guests present at the affair were: Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Tolles, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitenack, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Baker.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Margherita Monaco, of Ridgefield Park, N. J., and Charles E. Pastilwa, of South Second street. The wedding will be celebrated on April 8.

Mr. Meeker to Build the Road.

Included in the "model city" to be an attraction at the St. Louis Exposition, will be a section of New Jersey's model macadam road. Robert A. Meeker, of this city, State supervisor of roads in this State, will leave tomorrow for St. Louis to superintend the construction of this piece of road which is to be exhibited in the interest of the Good Roads' Association, of America.

Talk on Schools.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman, of the borough schools, will deliver an address before the Men's Assembly, of Grace M. E. church, Friday night. Mr. Wightman's subject will be "The Meaning of a Public School Education Today." He is thoroughly posted on his subject and a valuable talk is looked for by the members.

Military Dance.

Arrangements have been made by the non-commissioned officers of Company K for a subscription dance to be held in the armory on the Monday night after Easter.

FORMS A NEW PLAN

Northern Securities Company Reduces Its Capital Stock.

PROVIDES DIVIDEND OF 99 PER CENT

President Hill Makes an Explanation to Stockholders—Claims Acts of Company Were Not Obnoxious to the Federal Laws.

NEW YORK, March 23.—Following a day of great excitement in the stock market and numerous conferences among the leading financial interests, the new plan of the Northern Securities company has been made public. In substance it provides for a stock dividend of 99 per cent, this to be effected by a reduction of that amount in the capital stock of the Securities company.

For every share of Northern Securities stock surrendered the company will deliver $39.27 stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company and $30.17 of the Great Northern Railway company. The shares of the Northern Pacific company which were taken over by Northern Securities at 115 and those of Great Northern at 280 will be distributed on this basis.

The other assets of the Securities company, consisting chiefly of its Chicago, Burlington and Quincy holdings and Northern Pacific coal lands, will remain in the treasury of the company until some plan for their distribution has been evolved.

Official notice of a new plan, which is signed by President Hill under this date, was sent to Northern Securities stockholders in a circular letter, which says in part:

"Since the formation of your company with a view of promoting, developing and enlarging the commerce and traffic of the country served by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies and by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad company the traffic and earnings of the three railways have largely increased. The rates paid by the public have been materially reduced. The respective railways have been extended and their condition and facilities improved and increased.

"The stock of the Northern Securities company was issued solely for the shares of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies and other properties purchased by it. In forming the company and disposing of its shares no commissions were paid and the company incurred only expenses save those necessary for obtaining its charter and for the economical conduct of its affairs.

"The company's acquisition of Northern Pacific and Great Northern shares was made in the full belief that such purchases were in nowise obnoxious to any law of the United States, an opinion which has received the approval of four justices of the supreme court of the United States—namely, Chief Justice Fuller and Associate Justices Edward D. White, Rufus W. Peckham and Oliver Wendell Holmes—in the suit brought by the United States against the right of the company to hold and vote the shares. However, the majority of the court, disregarding as irrelevant any beneficial increase of commerce, was of the opinion that as a matter of law your company's holdings of the stocks of the two railway companies constituted a restraint of interstate commerce prohibited by the so called Sherman act of 1890. Accordingly the railway companies have been forbidden to permit your company to vote or to collect dividends on the shares held by it.

"Therefore your directors at a meeting have, under the advice of counsel, decided that in order to fully and promptly comply with the decree in this suit it is necessary to reduce the capital stock of the company and to distribute to its shareholders the shares of stock of said railway companies now held by it.

"To this end they have adopted resolutions recommending to the stockholders:

"First.—That the capital stock of this company be reduced from 3,554,000 shares, now outstanding, to 39,540, being a reduction of 99 per cent.

"Second.—That each 99 per cent of the present outstanding shares be called in for surrender and cancellation.

"Third.—That against each share of the stock of this company so to be surrendered there will be delivered $39.27 stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company, $30.17 stock of the Great Northern Railway company and proportionate amounts thereof for each fraction of a share of stock."

Tornado In Central Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 23.—A tornado did great damage to property and caused at least one death in central Arkansas. At Fourche Dam, four miles from Little Rock, a negro schoolhouse was blown down, and one of the pupils, Nellie Bogan, was killed. Several other pupils were injured.

FOR THEIR MIKADO

Japanese Squadron Has Another Shy at Port Arthur.

MUST HAVE ORIENTAL GIBRALTAR

Eleven Battleships and Eighteen Destroyers Pour In Their Fire—Russians Made a Sortie—Five Russians Killed. Nine Wounded.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—The emperor has received the following telegram from Viceroy Alexeieff:

"Lieutenant General Stoessel reports that early on Tuesday morning Japanese torpedo boats were discovered outside of Port Arthur by our searchlights. The guard ships and fort batteries opened fire upon them, the firing lasting for twenty minutes. At 4 o'clock in the morning the attack was renewed.

"At daylight four of the enemy's battleships appeared from the south, followed by the whole squadron of eleven ships and eight torpedo boats. Our squadron left the roadstead to meet and engage them.

"At 9 o'clock the enemy's battleships opened fire on Liaotishin, after which they took up a position behind the rocky eminence of Liaotishin and bombarded Port Arthur.

"According to Lieutenant General Stoessel the enemy's fleet consisted of six battleships and twelve cruisers. During the attack the Japanese fleet divided, the battleships and torpedo boats taking up a position between Liaotishin and Golubinsia bay (Pigeon bay), while the cruisers formed up in two divisions to the south and southeast of Port Arthur.

"The battleship Retvizan opened fire over the crest of Liaotishin against the enemy's battleships, which replied by firing on the town. Meanwhile our fleet formed up in line in the outer roadstead.

"At 7 o'clock our squadron left the inner harbor, the cruisers leading, with the Askold flying Admiral Makaroff's pennant at their head, and the battleships following.

"The enemy's battleships approached Liaotishin and fired 100 shells from their twelve inch guns at Port Arthur and 108 shells at the environs of the town.

"Our shells, fired at a range of eighty cables, were well placed. About 10 o'clock a Japanese battleship was struck by a shell and retired.

"About 11 o'clock in the morning the cruisers made a sortie, and the Japanese fleet reuniting drew off slowly to the southeast and at 12:30 had disappeared.

"During the bombardment five soldiers were killed and nine were wounded."

Viceroy Alexeieff further reports under date of March 22:

"General Mistchenkow reports that our scouts approached Anju and observed on the left bank of the Chengtang river, opposite Anju, movements made by the enemy. Up to that date the enemy had not appeared at Yongpyon, fifteen miles northeast of Anju. It is supposed that there is one Japanese division at Anju and that the majority of the corps, disregarding as irrelevant any beneficial increase of commerce, was of the opinion that as a matter of law your company's holdings of the stocks of the two railway companies constituted a restraint of interstate commerce prohibited by the so called Sherman act of 1890. Accordingly the railway companies have been forbidden to permit your company to vote or to collect dividends on the shares held by it.

"Therefore your directors at a meeting have, under the advice of counsel, decided that in order to fully and promptly comply with the decree in this suit it is necessary to reduce the capital stock of the company and to distribute to its shareholders the shares of stock of said railway companies now held by it.

The track was considerably torn up, and traffic was delayed for several hours, but the train did not leave the track, and no one was hurt seriously.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 23.—A tornado did great damage to property and caused at least one death in central Arkansas. At Fourche Dam, four miles from Little Rock, a negro schoolhouse was blown down, and one of the pupils, Nellie Bogan, was killed. Several other pupils were injured.

A New Airship.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., March 23.—William Roesche, a musician of this city, claims that he had perfected an airship with which he proposes to compete for the $100,000 prize at the St. Louis exposition.

REV. MR. M'MURRAY BIDS A FAREWELL

Thanks Congregation and the Public Press for Loyally Supporting His Work Here.

A SPECIAL SERMON

EXPECTS TO BE TRANSFERRED TO ANOTHER PLACE.

Bishop Likely to Assign Him to a Larger Field—Appointment to be Announced at Annual Conference in Newark This Week.

Words of farewell were spoken by the Rev. John McMurray, of the Monroe Avenue church, Sunday, at the conclusion of his sermon. Rev. Mr. McMurray expects to be transferred to another church by the Conference that meets this week in Newark, and if he is, yesterday will have been his last Sunday in his old pulpit.

The pastor thanked his people for their support, and for the harmonious effort they have made during his pastorate to help him advance the church and help the community. He expressed thanks to the newspapers of the city for courteous and kindly treatment. It was with regret, he said, that he faced the prospect of leaving the Monroe Avenue church and Plainfield.

After the service Rev. Mr. McMurray's flock crowded about him to bid him good-bye personally. Many expressions of keen regret over the expected departure were expressed.

During his stay here Mr. McMurray has made a strong impression on the public as an aggressive and fearless fighter against sin and evil conditions. He has been an unrelenting foe of liquor traffic and will be long remembered here as the leader of the forces that brought about the recent rous of the West End speakeasies and the defeat of John Gelt's attempt to secure a license for a saloon at Clinton avenue and West Front street.

WESTFIELD DEFEATS Y. M. C. A.

LOCAL BOWLERS LOSE IN A SERIES OF FIVE GAMES ON OPPONENTS' ALLEYS.

The local Y. M. C. A. lost three games in bowling and won one Saturday night in a series of the best three out of five with the Westfield Saturday Night Club. The games were rolled on Westfield's alleys. Plainfield won the first game by a margin of twelve pins and proved an easy victim in the last three. Westfield made high totals in all three, 740, 742 and 770. G. Ortleb was high roller with 181 and 184 in the third and fourth games. For the visitors Maurice Sutphen made the best score, 178.

In preceding games rolled on the Y. M. C. A. alleys, Westfield had been beated in five games out of six.

MUNICIPAL IMPROVEMENTS

FINISHING TOUCHES BEING PUT ON BOROUGH HALL AND FIRE HOUSE.

Finishing touches are rapidly being put on the new Borough Hall and fire house. All the main contracts have been completed, and only the painting and touching work is to be done.

Furniture from the old Council rooms is already being moved to the new chambers. It is practically certain that the place will be ready for occupancy by the firemen on April 1.

In its fire department features, the building is one of the most up-to-date in the State. It has several that even the department headquarters on this side does not possess. One of the striking arrangements is a device that will automatically light the house and release the horses at the first tap of the bell at night.

Lieutenant Campbell and his assistants are working hard to get the new department into shape for good service. Every bit of apparatus has been carefully inspected and polished, and oiled, and the Lieutenant is training the new team to respond to the taps. Both horses have responded readily to the training, and promise to become one of the best fire teams in the State.

REV. MRS. SWARTOUT-REMSEN, CENTENARIAN, DEAD

Succumbs to Pneumonia at Her Home in Sandford Avenue in Her 101st Year.

MANY DESCENDENTS

RELATIVE OF FORMER MAYOR VANWYCK, OF NEW YORK.

Daughter of the American Revolution, Her Father Having Been a Continental Soldier—Husband Died in 1876.

In her one hundred and first year, Mrs. Letitia Swartout-Remsen died at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon at her home at 25 Sandford avenue, where she lived with her son, Abram G. Remsen. Old age was the cause of her end.

Mrs. Remsen celebrated her centennial anniversary on September 1 of last year, greeting large numbers of her descendants in an informal reception. She appeared in the best of health and to the last of her life retained a remarkable degree possession of her physical and mental faculties.

Born at Fishkill, N. Y., September 1, 1803, Mrs. Remsen was the youngest of nine children. Her father was Jacobus Swartout and her mother, whose maiden name was Martha VanWyck, was connected with the family of which former Mayor VanWyck, of New York, was a member. Her early life, Mrs. Remsen spent at the old home in Fishkill. In 1834 she married Augustus Remsen, of Brooklyn, living a happy married life until 1876 when Mr. Remsen died. Twenty-seven years ago she came to this city to live at the home of her son.

Mrs. Remsen was the mother of nine children, three of whom survive her. She had nine grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren, all of whom attended her hundredth birthday anniversary celebration last fall. She was a Daughter of the Revolution, her father having been a Continental soldier. She distinctly remembered the stirring times incident to the War of 1812, in which her two brothers served. When a young woman she became a member of the Strong Place Baptist church, of Brooklyn, and had always retained her membership. She was a faithful attendant of the First Presbyterian church, of this city.

HOPE'S MINSTRELS HONORED

Y. M. A. TENDERED DINNER TO PERFORMERS AT CLOSE OF PERFORMANCE.

After a three-nights' run of immense success, the Hope Chapel Minstrel Show came to an end Friday. There was a full house, and everything went off with the proper spirit of snap and finish.

As on the other two nights the house was swept continually by gales of laughter, and bursts of applause. The quips and cracks and songs furnished unlimited enjoyment, and all the soloists and specialists were persistently recalled. Matt Sweeney made a great hit with facial play, particularly in the march in the "Essence of Ole Virginy."

After the performance the troupe and the ushers paraded to Timbo's restaurant for a supper tendered by the Y. M. A. The marchers carried red fire, and John Galvin, cornet; Charles Pawson, flute; and Edmond Texier, drum, furnished martial music. John Cose led the parade.

At the restaurant a bounteous supper was enjoyed, in an informal spirit. Minstrel songs of last year and the latest show were sung by the troupe to relieve their pent-up feelings.

It is estimated that the show cleared between five and six hundred dollars. The Junior O. U. A. M., of Bound Brook, has asked the troupe to appear there for the benefit of the Somerville hospital. It is probable that the request will be complied with.

M'LAUGHLIN SIGNS.

"Warry" to Pitch for the Star Athletic Club of Elizabeth.

"Warry" McLaughlin, who has been pitching for the New London Club, of the Connecticut State League, and who, it will be remembered pitched for Alis Club during last season, has signed to pitch for the coming season for the Star Athletic Club, of Elizabeth, claimants for the championship of Elizabeth and Union County for 1904.

A schedule extending from April 10 to June 26 has thus far been arranged, including games with Albany, Poughkeepsie, Lancaster, Reading, Chester and Brooklyn Field Club.

COACHMAN INJURED IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Patrick Sullivan Fell Beneath Frantic Horses' Feet and Was Kicked and Trampled Upon.

HIS KNEE TORN OPEN

W. P. SMITH'S SON RECEIVED BUT SLIGHT HURTS.

The Whiffletree Broke and Horses Bolted on Park Avenue, Near the Railroad—Eight Stitches Taken in Sullivan's Wound.

Patrick Sullivan, a coachman in the employ of W. P. Smith, of Belvidere avenue, was severely injured in a runaway accident on Park avenue Tuesday afternoon, shortly after 3:30 o'clock. William Smith, the seventeen-year-old son of his employer, who was with him in the carriage, was also hurt.

Sullivan and the boy were in a high two-wheeled cart, the latter driving. Just beyond North avenue the horse, a spirited little animal, became frightened at the railroad bridge and leaped forward suddenly. The whiffletree broke and the horse bolted, uncontrolled, at breakneck speed.

Directly in the path of the runaway was one of William Hand's big moving vans. The horse swerved sharply to clear it, and the cart turned completely over. Sullivan was jerked over the dashboard and landed under the horse's heels. He was kicked and trampled before the animal broke from the tangled harness and continued its dash down the street. Eyewitnesses said afterwards that Sullivan's escape from death or terrible injuries was remarkably narrow.

John Praed, a tailor, before whose shop the accident occurred, carried Sullivan into his place, and sent for Dr. Jenkins. The boy was thrown clear of the cart and escaped with a cut and bruised face.

Sullivan was dazed, his left knee was torn open, and the side of his head was cut. Eight stitches were required to close the wound. Dr. Jenkins said he was badly, but not seriously hurt, although he will feel the effects of his injuries for some time. He was taken home in a carriage.

The horse was caught at Randolph road, before any further damage was done. The cart was only scraped.

SIMMONS RE-ELECTED CAPTAIN

Y. M. C. A. PLAYERS MET LAST NIGHT TO ARRANGE FOR SEASON.

Baseball interest was enthusiastic at the Y. M. C. A. last night, a special meeting to arrange for the work of the season calling out a large number of prospective candidates. William Simmons was elected manager of the nine, and will begin work on his schedule directly after the meeting next Tuesday night. The choice of a captain was held over until Tuesday, when it is probable that a permanent choice will be made.

Lindsay Best opened the meeting and after stating its purpose turned it over to Mr. Simmons. It was decided to hold an entertainment for the team's benefit Thursday night, April 21 and, if possible, to secure the services of the New Century Trio, which provided such an excellent entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Hall New Year's night. A committee was appointed to book the Trio if possible. A. R. Humble, F. K. Armstrong and Maurice Sutphen were named as the committee, and they will report the result of their investigation Tuesday night.

Some discussion was given to the question of grounds for practise and playing and it was decided that the Myrtle avenue grounds were the most available. After the next meeting, active work will begin towards getting the grounds into proper shape for play.

TO INTEREST YOUNG PEOPLE

SPECIAL MEETINGS TO TAKE PLACE AT HOPE CHAPEL COMMENCING TONIGHT.

Young people of Hope chapel will hold the first of a series of special religious meetings tonight. A sociable will follow the meeting.

The series is designed to revive the regular weekly meeting of young people that was formerly a feature of the chapel religious activity. Some months ago interest in the meetings died away and they dropped from the church calendar. Rev. L. R. Howard, the pastor, is anxious to make the meetings a regular feature again and he has arranged the gathering tonight to perfect plans to that end.

F. L. Janeway, of Union Theological Seminary, a recent Princeton graduate, will speak tonight. Other interesting speakers have been engaged for a number of Wednesday night meetings to follow, in order to re-awaken interest in the mid-week prayer service.

WHY COX WAS MARRIED HERE

CHAPTERS OF A LOVE AFFAIR WHICH LED TO A MARRIAGE IN PLAINFIELD.

The marriage in this city, March 9, of Theodore Cox, of Lakewood, N. J., and Miss Eugenie Norwood, daughter of Carlisle Norwood, of 45 West 55th street, New York, was the fruit of a highly romantic courtship with its scenes variously laid in convent, stage and divorce court.

When, in September 1896, Theodore Cox, a well known clubman and politician, was wedded to Miss Catherine Gage, of Haverhill, Mass., a society girl of beauty and wealth, Miss Eugenie Norwood was studying at the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Paris. The monotony of the conventual life palled upon the young girl and she returned to this country to dazzle with her beauty the worldly-wise clubman, who, as a friend of her brother, visited at her home.

Cox had been a good friend to Carlisle Norwood, Jr., having helped him to go to Africa to escape his father's displeasure and fight for England in the Boer War. But a thoughtless act of young Norwood, it is said, brought about an estrangement.

Last November, Mrs. Cox sued for divorce and young Norwood's testimony at the trial to the effect that he had seen Cox with a woman not his wife was largely instrumental in securing a decree of absolute separation including a clause which forbade Cox to marry again in New York.

This provision led to the romantic ending in this city of Cox's attachment for Miss Norwood in their marriage by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of All Souls' church, Miss Norwood giving up an intended life on the stage to become a wife. The couple before going to Mr. Nickerson requested another local minister to perform the ceremony, only to have their request refused.

CONFERENCE'S APPOINTMENTS

LOCAL PASTORS AMONG THOSE OBTAINING PLACES ON COMMITTEES.

Among those selected for various committees at the session of the Newark Conference of the M. E. church, yesterday, were Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass and J. W. Jackson, conference board of home mission and church. Among others chosen members of standing committees were these:

Sunday-schools — Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, Rev. George Angleman, Rev. S. K. Declittle. Temperance—Rev. E. L. Earp. Education—Rev. John McMurray. Programme and conference anniversary—Rev. W. O. O'Donnell. To nominate standing committees for 1906—Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass. Conference qualifications, for one year—Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass, Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut; for three years—Rev. T. J. Johnson. Total Abstinence and Prohibition Society—Rev. C. M. Anderson.

Pastor Resigns.

Rev. J. Haight Bean, pastor of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, has voluntarily tendered his resignation as pastor, and when the conference meets within a short time, he will be sent elsewhere. Mr. Bean has been here two years and his work at the Mt. Zion church has been excellent. His congregation regrets to learn of his decision.

Senator F. T. Frost, of the Dominion Parliament, and Mrs. Frost, are guests of their brother, George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue, who, with Mrs. Frost, returned from Florida on Monday.

HOPE Y. M. A. DECIDES TO GIVE UP BASEBALL

No Team to be Placed on the Diamond This Season, Club Opposing Professionalism.

RUNYON, PRESIDENT

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN AT ANNUAL MEETING OF ASSOCIATION.

Minstrel Show to be Given for the Benefit of Reform Club—Club in a Prosperous Condition—The Proceedings.

There will be no baseball team to represent Hope chapel on the diamond this year. Considerable discussion, which has been going on among the members for several months, ended last night when the Y. M. C. A. at its annual meeting, decided that it would be undesirable to put a nine in the field.

One of the first things that came up before the meeting was a letter from O. B. Leonard, the owner of the Hope field, notifying the association that the use of the grounds was withdrawn. This and other conditions made the prospect of a team so unfavorable that it was agreed that no attempt to get a combination together be made. The association is against professional ball, and refuses to consider paid players.

Among the younger members of the organization there is an ardent spirit of baseball that refuses to be balked by the conditions confronting the management of the regular team, and it is probable that a junior combination will be formed. This nine, however, would not be conducted to uphold the standard of the chapel as the teams of the past few years did, and all the fans that follow Hope will have to transfer their affections to another team.

Another letter of peculiar interest was received from W. C. Smith, of the Reform Club. Mr. Smith asked the association if it would be willing to present the minstrel show again at Reform Hall. It was voted to give the show whenever the Reform Club requested it.

This action will be communicated to the club at its meeting next Tuesday night, and it is expected to bring the request immediately. It is probable that the show will be put on the Reform Hall stage in about three weeks.

Two new bowling alleys will be built for the association next summer. The condition of the present alleys was discussed, and a unanimous sentiment in favor of two new and better ones was expressed. A committee was appointed to report on the cost of the alleys and the changes in the extension that is to house them.

Another committee was appointed to revise the constitution and by-laws. The members voted to attend the Easter service at the Crescent Avenue church in a body on Sunday afternoon.

Officers were elected as follows: President, William M. Runyon; vice president, J. Fred Wharton; secretary, George E. Firstbrook; treasurer, V. William Nash—all re-elections. The following committees were appointed:

House—J. F. Wharton, chairman; James Peny, George McComb. William Dilts, Hugh Gray. Membership—Leonce Texier, chairman; Raymond McVoy, Matthew Sweeney.

Excellent reports were handed in by the treasurer and the secretary. The treasury is very strong and there are seventy-five members in active standing.

Church Society's Affairs.

The annual election of officers and reception of reports by the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Presbyterian church was postponed yesterday afternoon until next month's meeting, Tuesday, April 26. Regular routine, monthly business was transacted yesterday, the meeting being at the home of Mrs. Howard A. Pope. Plans were made for decorating the church for Easter Sunday. The hand-shaking committee for April was appointed: Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, Mr. and Mrs. John Barroughs, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar George and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pope. Refreshments were served and a social hour passed. The society will meet next month probably with Miss Bose.

Social Club's Dance.

The committee for the dance to be given Monday night by the Fourth Ward Social Club consists of H. J. Wierengs, Clinton Shannon and Eugene O'Reilley.

MISS C. M. HALL'S WORK SHOWN IN PARIS

Daughter of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Has Paintings on Exhibition.

A PUPIL OF MASTERS

THREE OF HER WORKS IN OIL ARE ON DISPLAY.

Spending Her Time Abroad Improving Her Exceptional Talents in Art—Granddaughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe.

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, of Plainfield, N. J., who is in Paris studying art, is exhibiting three paintings, "The Cypresses," "The Pines on the Hill," and "The Pines by the River," at the winter exhibition of the American Women's Art Association, of Paris.

Miss Hall, who is a granddaughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Rowe, is a New Englander by birth, having spent her early years at Newport, R. I. She is a great favorite among the American Girl Art Students in the Latin Quarter of Paris, and is the secretary and treasurer of the American Women's Art Association, whose exhibitions are visited by artists of all nationalities, not only in Paris but from all the artistic communities within touch of the French Capital.

Last year Miss Hall studied at the Delecluse Academy, and later worked in a landscape class in the Bois-de-Boulogne under Fritz Thanlow, the famous Norwegian painter, whose pictures in the Luxembourg gallery are so well known.

During the summer Miss Hall went to Brittany to work, studying near St. Malo, and this winter is studying at Colarossi's Academy de la Grande Chaumiere, working under the criticism of Messieurs Mesnard and Prinet. —Pittsburg (Pa.) Gazette.

CITIZENS ENDORSE SCHEME

ANSWERS TO BOARD'S QUERY SHOW FEELING FAVORABLE TO PLAN.

Of the 900 circular letters sent out by the Board of Health, in an effort to ascertain how many people favor the municipal control of the garbage question, 321 answers have been received up to noon today. Of this only twelve persons have expressed themselves against the proposition. This would indicate a strong sentiment in favor of the plan and it is very gratifying to the Board of Health as well as all others who are interested in seeing the plan adopted by the Common Council.

Map for Use at Trial.

To secure proof of important contentions in the suit for $30,000 against the Central Railroad for the death of Theodore Merle at one of the Dunellen crossings, the plaintiff's lawyers have hired Civil Engineer Harry VanEmburgh to survey the scene of the accident. It is claimed that the depot and freight house near the crossing are so situated as to shut off the view of westbound trains from anyone approaching the crossing on foot or in a wagon, and the surveyor is expected to establish this contention as a fact. Mr. VanEmburgh began his survey yesterday.

Easter Flowers.

Eastertide is not properly celebrated unless one has beautiful flowers and the display of flowers and plants at Miss A. M Lincoln's conservatory on Park avenue, is one that will delight everyone who loves flowers. The assortment is large and the prices are very reasonable. Miss Lincoln also takes orders for all kinds of floral decorations, personally giving the work her supervision.

Y. M. C. A. Social.

A social was held in the Y. M. C. A. small hall last night for the members of the educational department of the association. Music was provided by a male quartette led by Leonard Gavett. Henry W. Rankin did many clever feats of leger de-main and Mr. Gavett also did some mysterious sleight-of-hand work. Charles Case recited an interesting selection.

Mrs. Newmiller's Purchase.

Mrs. William L. Newmiller has purchased the property, No. 15 Vine street, from John Adelman and will remove April 1. John C. Kinney, of Grandview avenue, has rented the house now occupied by Mrs. Newmiller, No. 33 Vine street.

THREATENED STRIKE IN PAINTING TRADE

The Bosses Flatly Refuse to Grant Demand for Increase In Their Wages.

MAY GO OUT FRIDAY

JOURNEYMEN ARE HOLDING SECRET MEETINGS.

Employers Firm in Their Stand—Master Painters Form An Organization for Protection Purposes.

Unless the temper of the workmen changes very radically, there will be a strike in the painting trade in this city on Friday. Demand for increase of wages has been met with flat and determined refusal from the bosses, and prospects of trouble are strong. Both sides say they are firm in their stand, and neither will make any concession.

Agitation for an increase began among the journeymen some time ago When the dissatisfaction took shape a demand for forty-one cents an hour and half-holiday on Saturday was presented to the masters. The present rate is 34½ cents an hour, the net increase, deducting the cost of the half-holiday, being twenty-five cents a day.

After consideration of the conditions the bosses decided that the demand could not be entertained. A notice to that effect, signed by practically all the boss painters in town, was sent to the men. The latter refused to entertain the idea that conditions made it impossible for the employers to raise wages, and they insisted on getting the increase.

Since then strike talk has been growing more and more general and positive, and both sides have come to regard a tie-up as certain. The men have kept their deliberations secret, but the bosses have received intimations that the journeymen will go out on Friday, the first of the month.

The bosses are determined to oppose the increase, and are prepared to fight the controversy to a finish. In preparation for the impending trouble they organized an association, to be known as the Master Painters, last night.

Most of the big firms and contractors of the city met over Woolston & Buckle's store, and formally entered into a protective agreement. This association will be permanent. There are similar organizations of masters in other cities of the State, and big delegations from those in Newark, the Oranges and Elizabeth were here last night to help the local bosses combine.

James Hanson was elected president, and J. M. Cabart was made secretary. The first thing the association did after organizing was to vote formally *to sustain the communication of re*fusal sent to the journeymen. After the organization work, the bosses and their visitors enjoyed a social hour with refreshments and cigars.

L. B. Woolston, of Woolston & Buckle, speaking for his associates in the organization, said this morning that the bosses would concede nothing. "This demand is ridiculous," he said; "There is no cause for it. If conditions in the trade were different they would get their twenty-five cents a day advance without trouble, but as matters are now there is no warrant for an increase. It is impossible, and we will not recede from our position, strike or no strike."

Quick and Good Work.

The value of the right man in the right place is shown in Representative W. M. Lanning, of the Third Congressional district of New Jersey. Jan. 5, 1904, Congressman Lanning introduced a private bill to increase the pension of Dr. W. E. Mattison, late Assistant Surgeon Third Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry. The bill passed both houses of Congress and became a law on March 16 by receiving the signature of the President. This shows the influence of our Representative. Increase from $12 to $30 per month.

To See the Show.

When "She Stoops to Conquer" is presented by the Century players at the Princess theatre, New York, a theatre party will be made up of members of the cast in the production of the play by the class of 1904, High School. Saturday, April 23, has been decided upon as the date for the High School production. Miss Lena Bass and I. W. Travell are doing the coaching.

—The members of the High School battalion will begin to drill with guns after the Easter holidays.

ICE AT THIRTY CENTS A 100

DECIDED REDUCTION IN PRICE FOR THE COMING SEASON.

Plainfielders will be able to purchase ice for household use this summer for 30 cents a hundred. This announcement has been made by Frank T. Ostrom, who formerly was associated with the combination ice dealers in this city. The Natural Ice Company, composed of those dealers *controlling the local output of ice in*cluding the product of the hygeia ice plant, has not yet announced its rate for this season. The company previously sold hygeia ice to Mr. Ostrom, but the latter has now made arrangements to secure hygeia from out of town and also natural ice from Scotch Plains. The Natural Ice Company will probably reduce its price to 30 cents. Mr. Ostrom will erect an ice house alongside the railroad near Johnston's coal yards on South avenue, and that will be a distributing point.

P. H. S. READY TO PLAY BALL

PLENTY OF MATERIAL FOR AN ALL-AROUND GOOD NINE.

About twenty-five candidates presented themselves for the Plainfield High School baseball team on Monday, the first day of practise. Among them were two or three former members of the nine who will form a nucleus about which to gather what is expected to be as strong a school nine as any in the vicinity. The one thing that is likely to handicap the team is the fact that several prospective members are on the danger line in their studies.

The school battery will probably be Smith, a South Plainfield boy, pitcher, and Davis, catcher. Other prominent candidates for battery positions are Strong and Hansen. Craig is likely to be a fixture at short stop and Thompson is booked for another of the infield positions. Collier's height and playing ability make him a likely first baseman.

Harry Thompson is temporary captain, elected for two weeks until the weeding out process enables the members of the nine to choose their own leader. The team will play its first game a week from today with Westfield on Crescent Oval, where the boys hold their practise regularly. The other games scheduled by Manager Koons are: April 9, Brooklyn High School at Brooklyn; April 13, Newark Academy at Newark; April 20, Leal's; April 23, South Orange; April 27, Cedarcroft. May 11, Fordham College freshmen; May 14, Leal's; May 18, Battin High; May 21, South Orange at South Orange; May 25, Montclair High at Montclair; May 28, Leal's; June 4, Cranford at Cranford; June 7, Pingry at Elizabeth. All the games except where otherwise stated will be played on home grounds.

DANCE CAUSES CHURCH ROW

YOUNG PEOPLE OF CALVARY BAPTIST PROPOSE TO HOLD A MASQUERADE.

Some young people associated with the Calvary Baptist church have declared their intention of giving a masquerade ball in T. A. B. Hall on April 14. This has caused quite a stir among the pastor and officers of the church, who say that they intend being present at the ball the night of the dance. They will take the names of the church members present and subsequently take action in the matter.

Deacon Spencer Conway declares that the church positively forbids such affairs and that it is his duty to see that the discipline is strictly adhered to. On the other hand the young people, it is said, declare that they will hold the dance regardless of consequences.

Boys to See Capitol.

About ten members of the local Y. M. C. A. boys' department will leave Monday, April 4, for a four days' excursion to Washington, D. C. Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary, will lead the expedition. The Plainfield delegation will go in company with representatives of other boys' departments all over the State, the excursion being under the auspices of the State boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. Visits will be paid to all points of interest in and about Washington.

—At the closing reception to the Y. M. C. A. educational classes last night, the music furnished was by a quartette consisting of Leonard W. Gavett, L. G. Chapin, W. C. Overton and H. C. Law.

BOROUGH IMPROVING ITS FIRE DEPARTMENT

New Alarm and Water Tower Systems Among the Contrivances Occupying Attention.

FIRE COMMITTEE ALERT

A NOZZLE DISCHARGING COMBINED FLOW OF THREE LINES OF HOSE.

Devices Worth $75 Apiece—Abolition of Fire Alarm Keys—Up-to-Date Indicators to be Used in the New Fire House.

General improvement in the equipment of the borough fire department has been planned by the North Plainfield authorities. When the plans are worked out there will be practically a new alarm system in operation, and the fire apparatus will include what is virtually a water tower of great power.

At the present time the alarm system is in bad shape. The wires are worn, and hardly a box in the municipality can be depended upon to register rightly. The entire system is to be overhauled and put in first-class condition. All the batteries are to be replaced with new ones. The most notable improvement to be made in this direction is the abolition of the keys. Arrangements have been made to make every box a keyless one, so that any citizen, in case of need, can turn in an alarm without the slightest loss of time. A representative of the Gamewell system looked over the system Monday afternoon with Mayor Smalley and Chief Wooiston, and gathered his data for the change.

Both hose carts are to be furnished, on trial, with a new device that will enable them to be used much as the water towers of big cities are utilized, when extraordinarily strong streams are desired. The device, which is permanently attached to the front of the cart, consists of a big nozzle that swings on a swivel controlled by a lever. This nozzle discharges the combined flow of three lines of hose, sending a stream of terrific power in any direction desired. The nozzle is easily manipulated. This contrivance is in use by the New York department, which had a number of them working on the big fire in Wall street last Saturday.

Each of these contrivances costs $75. The company selling them has given the borough two to try for sixty days free of cost, and they will be tested during that period. Platforms have to be built on the hose carts for their erection.

The fire committee is considering the purchase of the nozzles, and it is very probable that they will be ordered. The carts are of extra length and particularly adapted to the use of the nozzles.

When the men go into the new house they will have up-to-date indicators of a character far in advance of the present ones. Patent tappers will release the horses and throw every light in the building on when a night alarm comes in.

It is probable that the bell will be abolished and alarms sounded on the city whistle, by a special code easily distinguished from that of Plainfield. It is almost impossible to hear the bell anywhere on this side of the brook without confusing it with church bells. It is not believed that the city will object to this arrangement, and no real confusion would be likely to result from it.

LEGISLATURE TO RECONVENE

RECALLED BY GOVERNOR TO ACT ON CANAL AND PIGEON BILLS.

Gov. Murphy yesterday afternoon issued a proclamation reconvening the Legislature—in special session—on April 12. The Governor in his proclamation refers to the fact that the Legislature failed to act on the report of the Morris Canal Commission and that the Anti-Pigeon Shooting bill failed to become a law. These matters are both of sufficient importance in Governor Murphy's view to warrant the special session.

The Governor will probably send in again the names of the five nominees for State Prison Inspectors who were not confirmed the last day of the session.

S. H. Whitney, who has been detained at his home in Central avenue with the grip, has returned to business.

OUR CHICAGO LETTER

WAR IN THE EAST AFFECTS THE LAKE CITY.

MARS AND THE GRAIN PITS

Russia Finds Friends in an Unexpected Quarter—An Echo of the Iroquois Fire—Marrying at a Minimum.

Chicago.—Mars came to the aid of the bulls on the board of trade, and did what they had failed to do without assistance, sent the price of wheat to close to $1.10 a bushel for May delivery.

The fact is that for the past four months Armour has been operating extensively in May wheat, and opposite to him were the greater part of the professionals of the board. Armour was on the bull side of the market, and he had the public with him, though the professionals against him. Ninety-cent wheat was the product of Armour manipulation, and in all probability 90-cent wheat would have been about the limit for the market, had not the war in the far east taken the whole thing out of the hands of the manipulators. Last Thanksgiving day May wheat was selling for around 76 cents. I know a small trader who held 30,000 bushels bought at that price. It went up half a cent, dropped back a quarter, and he became frightened and sold. Had he held his small holdings it would have netted him a profit of close to $10,000. Armour got into the market at even a smaller price, and has been buying all the way from 72 cents up to above 90. On every bushel he purchased he has made a profit, and his total to the good in these operations will amount to very close to $1,000,000. The most of this great amount has been taken from the professionals on the board, instead of from the general public, who have, as a rule, followed the Armour lead, and bought. The occasional "shakeouts" have caused some losses on the part of the outside public, but not to a great extent.

Friends of Russia.

One would not naturally look for Russian sympathizers in the ghetto district of any large city, and yet some of the most enthusiastic supporters of the Russian arms and the most ardent wishers for Russian victory in the far east are to be found in that section of Chicago's south side, to a conglomeration of the poor of all nationalities. What is more, these supporters of Russia are not subjects of King Edward. They are French Canadians, and it is not because they "love Russia more, but that they love England less," that they wish for Russian success, believing that such a success would mean a reverse for England.

The French Canadians, whether at home or in the eastern provinces of Canada, or in the states, are not loyal subjects of the government to which they owe allegiance. At home they know nothing but the traditions of France; they will not permit their children to attend the public schools in Canada, but send them to the parochial schools maintained at their own expense where nothing but French is taught. In the poorer sections of Montreal or Quebec one may see more French flags than union jacks displayed on the cottages of the people. They have their own feast days and holidays, and though they are lawabiding citizens, the British government means to have no hold upon their sentiments.

In Chicago these days one may find a French and a Russian flag waving side by side from the windows of the cottages of these emigrants. Nearly 200 years have passed since Wolf stormed the Plains of Abraham, but that the territory was once under the protection of the lilies of France has not been forgotten.

No More Theater Passes.

An echo of the Iroquois fire came at a recent meeting of the theatrical managers of the city a short time ago, when a strong organization for mutual protection was organized.

They All Pay Now.

One of the first steps taken by the new organization was to bar passes to politicians. For years the theaters have in this way paid for courtesies extended them by the city officials and the heads of executive departments.

While it was known the city ordinances were being violated constantly, the violations were winked at, so it is said, in exchange for orchestra seats. Now that the terrible catastrophe of last December has been followed by a tidal wave of reform, and vola long are no longer permitted, the passes are stopped.

It would not be fair to attribute this action of the theatrical managers entirely to this one reason, however. The fact is the demand for passes has been abused to such an extent that often half the audiences were present on "paper." With the strict enforcing of the new ordinances the seating capacity of nearly every theater has been materially increased, and if they are to continue to be operated at a profit the seats must be sold and not given away. Then, too, the managers have been doing a little figuring recently, and they find it is cheaper to comply with the laws than it is to buy leniency at such a cost as has been demanded of them. Some managers claim that it has cost them in the past $200 a day or more for "protection," which in the end proved to be no protection at all, as all have finally had to comply with the laws or remain closed.

Another item of expense which has been cut off is that of show window advertising which was paid for in tickets. In future theatrical advertising in Chicago will be confined to the columns of the newspapers, and such bill boards as are owned or controlled by the houses using them. This will mean a saving—in tickets—to each house of from $200 to $500 a week.

Love at a Minimum.

What salary is necessary to permit a man to support a wife in Chicago?

The question is being discussed in store, office, home and factory, and the discussion is the result of an order issued by one of the city banks that its employes shall not marry on less than $1,000 a year.

From the answers to the question that have been printed in the city papers it would seem that very much depends upon the girl.

Love on $500 a Year.

The social butterfly certainly cannot meet the demand upon her purse for $1,000 a year, while, on the other hand, the girl who is willing to do her own washing, who would not need a nurse girl for the children, who does not want a brown stone front on the avenue for a residence, who can make her own gowns and her husband's shirts, who is willing to wear calico in the kitchen, who will gather the firewood from the alleys, and deny herself the pleasure of a theater party every night, might manage to eke out an existence on $500 a year.

The fact is the majority of the authorities on domestic economy who have been quoted on the subject have failed to provide for any of the extraordinary expenses which are almost sure to arise in every household, but it may be that papa-in-law was expected to meet these with occasional donations.

Hundreds of young couples are married each year whose love dreams have failed to include such practical affairs as rent, groceries, clothing, doctors, etc. Hundreds of women who were parties to such marriages may be found to-day behind the counters of the State street stores, or operating typewriters in La Salle street offices. They found they had to lose a minimum of love to exist upon, and preferred to seek their old positions, rather than submit to the drudgery of housework.

The Women Workers.

One reason for the extravagant tastes that have placed a ban upon Lign Cupid may be found in the number of girls and women who find profitable employment in the stores, factories and offices of the city, and who find sufficient interest in the trades unions to which they belong to compensate them for lack of husband and home.

In no other city in America has trades unionism taken such a hold upon women workers as in Chicago. The city has 35,000 organized female wage-earners, embracing practically every calling in which large numbers of women are employed, save those of stenographers and house maids. The school-teachers have a union, and so have the scrub women, and both are organized on much the same lines.

That they find the unions interesting is proven by the large attendance at the meetings, and that the women are capable organizers and managers is proven by the orderliness of these large assemblages and the lack of discord in them. That the management of the "lady president," and the "lady walking delegate" is efficient, is proven by the increase of wages, the reduction of the working hours and the improvement in shop conditions in the various lines in which they are employed.

That they have no use for husbands may be proven by the statement elicited by Miss Richardson, of the Leslie Magazine staff, from Mrs. Mary McDermott, walking delegate of the Scrubwomen's union:

"You are the only married woman I have met so far in the movement," Miss Richardson remarked.

"Sure, and that's me to many."

"You don't seem to approve of husbands?"

"Husbands!" sniffed she, as she folded across her stomach two plump, bare hands, hands no longer red thanks to her salaried job. "Husbands! There ain't no good husbands but dead ones." WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

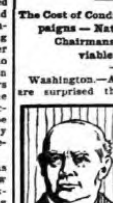
WASHINGTON GOSSIP

MEN PROMINENT IN NATIONAL POLITICS DISCUSSED.

TRAITS OF PARTY LEADERS

The Cost of Conducting National Campaigns — National Committee Chairmanships Not Enviable Positions.

Washington.—A great many people are surprised that Senator Hanna's available wealth at the time of his death should have been only $3,000,000. In some way the impression had gone out that he was worth a great deal more than that. But impressions about money are pretty sure to be exaggerated in these days when men talk about millions as they used to talk about thousands ten years ago.



The Late Senator Hanna.

Senator Hanna, of course, was a successful man of business, just as he was successful in everything else he undertook, but after he had accumulated enough to insure his own financial permanency and the permanency of his family's financial interests, he was indifferent to whether any more came to him or not.

He never cared for money in itself, nor cared to pose as a man of wealth. What he did prize was the feeling of security and power which the possession of money gave him. And still more he prized the fact that his own business success enabled him to command the confidence and friendship of far wealthier men and through them to accomplish results in business and politics which would have been impossible for one whose own business experience did not inspire respect.

It was this reputation for business acumen which stood him in good stead as chairman of the national republican committee, but it had an even greater influence upon his career in the senate, for it gave impressive weight to the opinions he expressed in debate upon such distinctively business propositions as the ship subsidy bill and the Panama canal.

Something Like Hanna.

Former Gov. Crane of Massachusetts, whose name has been mentioned more frequently than any other as Hanna's probable successor in the chairmanship of the republican national committee, is in some respects like Hanna—in others strikingly unlike him.

Like Hanna, he is a successful business man, whose own success and recognized acumen have given him unusual influence among men of greater wealth and of more far-reaching personal interests. Like Hanna, he has never met with failure in any undertaking. And, like Hanna, he is intensely loyal. Like Hanna, he inspires the confidence of laboring men as well as capitalists, and some of his most important achievements have been in the direction of bringing labor and capital to a better understanding.

Ex-Gov. Crane.

It was Gov. Crane who first suggested to President Roosevelt the idea of inviting the coal operators and the representatives of the miners' union to Washington to talk over their differences—an invitation which resulted in bringing the anthracite coal strike to an end, when it had reached its most threatening stage. The suggestion came to him from his own experience as governor of Massachusetts when he brought the striking freight handlers and their employers together for a conference in the state house and ended a strike which had tied up the business of Boston.

Unlike Hanna, Gov. Crane will never develop into an effective debater or stump speaker. He has an unconquerable aversion to public appearances of that kind, and it is characteristic of him that the few public offices he has held have been forced upon him by other party leaders against his own inclination and in spite of his protests. He has a genius for politics, is absorbed in it, and is recognized by men who stand very high in public affairs as a wise and safe political adviser, but he hates above all things the idea of holding a political office. He likes to accomplish results, but he doesn't care at all for the glamor of the reputation for having done it.

Didn't Want the Job.

Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, was asked by President Harrison to be chairman of the republican national committee in 1892 when Harrison was running for reelection. Harrison asked him first by wire and Spooner declined by wire. Then Harrison asked him to come to Washington and he came. But no pleading could induce him to take the place.

Senator Spooner.

Finally Harrison asked him why.

"I'll tell you," said Spooner, frankly. "In order to run a campaign now the chairman of the national committee in either party has to raise so much money that if he wins he is sure to be called a boodler. If he loses he is called a chump. I don't care for either reputation."

Upon that Harrison let him off without further urging.

It is a fact that a great deal more money is used now in the legitimate expenses of a national election than was the case in the early days.

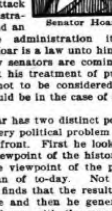
Of men now living, probably, William E. Chandler has had more experience in the management of national campaigning than anybody else. He was connected with the national republican committee continuously from 1860 to 1880, and during a good part of that time he was secretary of the committee. He was especially active in the historic campaign of 1876. Yet in all his experience he never heard of a campaign fund approaching a million dollars.

Prior to 1880 the largest fund raised was by Henry J. Raymond, chairman of the committee in 1864. He is understood to have had $500,000 with which to manage the campaign for the reelection of Abraham Lincoln. The fund for Garfield's election in 1880 was somewhat larger than this, and in 1884 both national committees had funds which were regarded as generous in comparison with what had gone before.

The first fund running up into the millions, however, was in 1888, when M. S. Quay, as chairman of the republican national committee, induced the great manufacturers of the country to contribute generously to prevent the reelection of Cleveland. In 1892 the democratic committee had a campaign fund larger than the republicans had in 1888, while the republican fund was very small. In 1896 and 1900, the republican fund mounted high, but even in those years with Bryan as a candidate the democratic fund was larger than any republican fund had ever been before. The republican campaign fund in 1904 promises to be small.

The Case of Senator Hoar.

Senator Hoar is greatly concerned lest he shall be charged with criticising the administration when in reality he intended simply to call attention to certain transactions which, he thought needed looking into.



Senator Hoar.

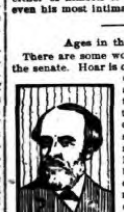
There is probably no other man in public life who would draw so fine a distinction between an attack on an administration policy and an attack on the administration itself. But Senator Hoar is a law unto himself and his fellow senators are coming to recognize that his treatment of public questions is not to be considered exactly as it would be in the case of anybody else.

Senator Hoar has two distinct points of view for every political problem that comes to the front. First he looks at it from the viewpoint of the historian, then from the viewpoint of the practical statesman of to-day. Not infrequently he finds that the results do not harmonize and then he generally acts in accordance with the apparent necessity of the hour, while placing himself on record according to his judgment of the verdict of history.

He is getting to be an old man now, and he appreciates the fact that he will probably not long remain on the public stage. He does not want the closing years of his career to be stained by what he fears his biographer may regard as a vacillating course, so he so places himself on record in such a way that after he is gone there can be no doubt about his own personal views without regard to what he may have been impelled to do in a national or party emergency. Of course he says there is no personal feeling and there is no politics in the ordinary sense of the word. He does not think, for an instant, how any position he may assume will affect the political prospects either of himself or of anybody else—even his most intimate friends.

Ages in the Senate.

There are some wonderful old men in the senate. Hoar is one of them. Platt, of Connecticut, is another of a distinctly different type — hard-headed, practical, farseeing, effective. Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama, each in his own way, is a marvel. Morgan even now having passed his eighty-first year has limitless endurance, and Pettus, the oldest man in the senate, is one of the youngest in his disposition. Then there are men whom we never think of as old—Quay, who is over 70; Platt, of New York, and Chauncey M. Depew—of equal age, each past his three score years and ten. Frye and Hale, of Maine; Proctor, of Vermont; Cullom, of Illinois, and Allison, of Iowa, are all in the class of 70—but they class themselves as youngsters.



Platt, of Connecticut.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

OWEN LANGDON'S BUDGET OF GOTHAM CHAT.

FACTORIES IN THE CITY

The Advantages Outweigh the Disadvantages with Manufacturers—Problem of the Gambling Houses—Other Notes.

New York.—A bakery has just been opened in New York which has 20,000 feet of floor area on six floors, or 120,000 feet in all, in which every part of the complicated process of manufacturing fancy biscuit is done by machinery and in which 60,000,000 packages of biscuits can be made in a year.

The Baker's Nightmare.

It is in the heart of the city, a quarter of a block from Broadway, and I wondered why it was put in the midst of the dense throng of humanity, where rents are high and wages must be also, instead of out in the fields where space is plenty and the source of supply of grain nearer.

The directors tell me that advantages in the city outweigh disadvantages. High wages are not so great a detriment in a factory where machinery does everything. In the throng of a city if an employe fails ill the place can be filled at once. If there is a break in the machinery, materials and men for its repair are near. And the biggest market in the country is at the doors.

There are a good many examples of this sort which would repay the sociologist's study. The great printing press works of Hoe & Co. are a conspicuous object in the East side. The Jewish quarter surrounds them and they were the strategic center of the riots that took place at the funeral a year ago of Chief Rabbi Joseph.

Mr. Hoe, who himself has a country home of rare beauty up in the northern limits of the city, gives a similar reason for not moving out. Some of his biggest customers are here. Here it is convenient for purchasers from out of town to visit the works. Here it is easy to get extra machinists. Against these things the cost of the land on which the factory stands and the high wages paid are not paramount.

Printeries in the Suburbs.

Of all forms of factories those that have met with most success in moving out of town are the printing offices of the magazines and other publishing houses.

The beautiful building of the Cosmopolitan Magazine at Irvington is a familiar object to people passing it on the Central or on the Hudson boats. It is old, however, that many of the Cosmopolitan employes continue to live in the city. Every summer afternoon they leave one of the fairest spots on earth, where the air is fresh and cool, and homes are abundant and cheap, and schools the best, and walks and drives elysian—to plunge into the murk and reek of the stifling city and seek their tenement homes. And though the editor in chief makes Irvington his headquarters it is necessary to maintain a New York office.

"City Advantages."

Mr. Munsey tried to establish his printery as far away as New London, but the success of the experiment was doubtful. Book publishers can do this to rather better advantage when they maintain their own plants, which is not the rule. The Putnams have a plant at New Rochelle, 20 miles away. The Appletons have a printery many miles out one is Brooklyn—but the country exactly, but at least it is upon cheap land, and tenements thereabouts for the hands are cheaper than in Manhattan. Some of the book printers' work is done as far out as New Haven.

The Harpers, however, retain to this day a great printing shop on the site of the first essay of the firm, Franklin square. There all their books are printed, though by a pretty bit of sentiment some of Mr. W. D. Howells' fine stories of country life in Ohio have been "set up" by Mr. Howells' brother who is still, as was Mr. Howells himself in youth, a country printer in that state.

To Gambling, $405,000.

District Attorney Jerome might just as well have said right out in meeting that the young man who lost $405,000 in five nights' play at faro was Reginald Vanderbilt, and that the gambling house that got the money—by cheating, Jerome says—was Canfield's. Canfield's mysterious agents deny it. That has to be expected.

The Lure.

I suppose that was about the heaviest loss ever sustained in an ordinary gambling house in a single week in this city. At any rate, it was steep enough to make even New York, which has no lack of sensations, talk a little faster for a day or two. It also caused Mr. Vanderbilt at the time of it, some 18 months ago, when he was a student in Yale and a minor, some trouble. For months he did not dare come to New York lest he might be arrested as a witness. Since then a ruling has been made by the court, in the case of an older and more cautious and calloused gambler, that Mr. Canfield's patrons need not testify to their losses if they do not wish. Mr. Jerome is trying to have a new law passed which will permit district attorneys to compel testimony. If that law passes we shall either have a new code of honor—that a man shall "perjure himself like a gentleman" as cheerfully for a gambler as now he does for a lady—or else Florida and Newport are going to be popular with a good many New Yorkers.

This little incident illustrates one of the difficulties encountered in trying to keep this town decent. Talk about the dangerous friction of a $1,000 insurance policy against a $500 barn! Imagine the pressure there may be, the money that may mysteriously pass, the risks that police captains may be induced to run, for the sake of a business that is able to fleece a single foolish boy out of nearly half a million in one week!

The smaller gambling houses can be kept shut. The famous ones that choose their customers, men whose code of "honor" will not permit them to testify, are hard to manage.

Two Picturesque Millionaires.

J. Malcolm Forbes died in Boston, Alvinza Hayward in San Francisco. They were as different as two men could well be, but both interesting.

Making a Millionaire.

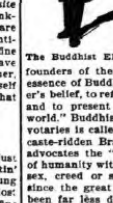
Forbes was the scion of a family prominent in Boston for generations. He inherited wealth and brains. With the latter he was enabled to see early in its history that Bell Telephone would be very valuable one day, and he became a heavy owner of its stock. Then it was cheap. So in later years Mr. Forbes was able to maintain a racing stable as famous in its neighborhood as Bonner's. He owned Nancy Hanks. His breeding farm in Canton, Mass., is one of the finest in the world. As a racehorse owner that was not enough, Mr. Forbes also was the principal owner of the America's cup defender Puritan.

Not everybody saw the Bell company thus shrewdly. A famous Boston lawyer years ago fought through some complicated suits against the Bell people. Not having any too much money in those days, they offered pay in stock. The lawyer should by that time have known as much as anyone about the telephone, but he thanked the directors and said he guessed he could use the money just at that time.

Forbes' country home was in Canton, Mass. Hayward was "raised" in Canton, N. Y. His family are now New Yorkers. His father died early, and was the mother was very poor he was "bound out" to a farmer, whom he served faithfully until he was 21. With his hundred dollars and his "freedom suit" of clothes he drifted west to Minnesota, where he married. The gold fever came and he went on to California, where he was associated with the Bonanza quartette, Flood, Mackay, Fair and O'Brien, in several mining ventures. In the prime of his life he was one of the ten richest men in the country and used to send home valuable presents to the farmer who had reared him. But the old man was nearly 80 when he died and in his later years his fortune had diminished. Whether it is a single million or more or less will depend upon the decision of the executors in disentangling a mass of valuable but heavily mortgaged property.

New York's Buddhist Temple.

A number of picturesque Americans of Japanese birth are about to found a Buddhist temple in New York. It would not be strange if it were to have some American born men and women as members.



The Buddhist Elder.

Esoteric Buddhism, whatever that may mean, has for years had many votaries here. Its principles are explained by the founders of the temple, "to glorify the essence of Buddhism, to settle each other's belief, to refine individual character and to present its influence to the world." Buddhism by these enlightened votaries is called a great refinement of caste-ridden Brahminism. Indeed, it advocates the "universal brotherhood of humanity without distinction of race, sex, creed or sect." Japan especially since the days of Perry in 1867 has been far less divided by absurd caste lines than other eastern nations.

It will be curious to see how Buddhism thrives as an independent religion without state support. There are 35,000 Japanese in the country. As yet the San Francisco temple is the only Buddhist house of worship in the United States. Chinese joss-houses are plenty, but they are different. There is in New York no Japanese quarter. And there are scarcely 25 Japanese women in the city. The Japanese women live, eat, dress and talk like other people. Most of them marry American wives, and such an event makes no more of a sensation than weddings in general have a right to make.

OWEN LANGDON.

JINRIKISHA COOLIES

IMPORTANT PART THEY PLAY IN JAPANESE WAR PROGRAMME.

Every Regiment Provided with a Corps of These Strong, Nimble Men for Packing and Hauling and Heavy Work.

The Japanese army is unique in its possession of a corps of workers which lessens the demands upon the fighting men of the army and makes their burdens lighter, thus giving them greater mobility and swifter movement, and saves their strength for the actual conflict on the battlefield. No other military organization in the world has a similar service, and this is probably due to the fact that no other nation has its jinrikisha men from which to form such a valuable army adjunct. For centuries the method of travel in the little island kingdom of Japan has been by means of man power. Before the inventive genius of an American gave to the Japanese the convenient, and easy carriage on wheels called jinrikisha, the kago, or basket car, was used. These were carried by two or four men.

Thus there came to exist in the nation a class of coolie labor which was inured to carrying heavy burdens and trained at covering long distances in incredibly short space of time. There are between 50,000 and 100,000 of these men in Japan, Tokio alone being credited with having 40,000. The opening of an electric road in that city has worked considerable hardship to the jinrikisha men, who up to the introduction of the modern method of transportation had been the sole means of conveyance.

The outbreak of the war has come just in the nick of time. While the jinrikisha men were mournfully watching the trolley cars go whizzing by, carrying many a fare which they had been wont to receive; while they were standing idly by and wondering where the modernizing of Japan would land them, the call from the army came. And they are eager to go. The spirit of patriotism burns deep in Japan. From the lowliest subject of the mikado up to the royalty which surrounds his person there is love of country and devotion which makes the little nation a unit as it faces its big and forpidable foe, Russia.

The jinrikisha corps is a regular part of every Japanese regiment, and these men go for two reasons: First, because they are true patriots, and second, because the service which is asked of them is exactly what they are fitted for. Generation after generation has followed the same line of business and a race of strong, lithe men has been the result. And the presence of these men in the army is an addition which would prove invaluable to any army.

With his blanket and his lantern the jinrikisha man joins his regiment, and attends to the packing and the hauling of the accouterments and baggage of the soldiers, and the drudgery and heavy work which would lessen the fighting powers of the soldiers. The remarkable mobility of the Japanese army is recognized by all the powers whose armies operated alongside the Japanese troops. Not even the troops of the United States, who excell those of any other nation but Japan, could keep up with the Japanese troops in the march upon Peking, during the recent troubles in China, when all the principal powers had a fighting force in the Celestial kingdom.

The reports of the campaign tell of how the American soldier, loaded down like a pack horse, broke down or threw away his load, as was the case at Santiago, while the nimble coolies of the Japland scampered here and there and came up at the end of each march as fresh and smiling as their tireless leader, Gen. Fukushima. The secret of it was that the Japanese coolie, or jinrikisha man, had a coolie work, and formed the transport corps which was mobile and swift as compared with the American four-mule army wagon trains or the British India tonga cart service. The human pony could look after himself, even when there was a stream to cross or a mud slough to argue with two coolies could take the jinrikisha on their shoulders and with cat-like tread pass over and leave the irate teamsters hours behind.

And this is an adjunct to the Japanese which is going to help fight the battles with the slower moving Russian troops. The Japanese army will be able to strike a blow and get away before the Russians can bring their guns to bear upon them, and when the Russians get into action, the Japs, like the proverbial flea, will be in some other place of safety.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

Black Chantilly Dresses Are Always Practical Wardrobe Investments.

Parisians just now are affecting gowns of nunlike simplicity in cashmere fastened with an art nouveau belt at the waist and a collar and cravat of fine plisse muslin or embroidered lawn.

Black chantilly lace dresses are being made for afternoon wear, and these are among the most practical investments in the way of dress a woman can make. Accordion plaited slips of chiffon add much to the beauty of these lace gowns. A smart chantilly gown seen recently was made over an accordion plaited underdress of cream chiffon. It was worn with a black and white toque of finely shirred white chiffon trimmed with a fall of black chantilly and two white roses.

Black chantilly will appear on parasols as well as on dresses during the coming season. It will be combined with white silk, pale pink or pale blue.

HOUSE GOWN.

The peterines or fichu stoles will be very smart made up in any material which is pretty. They are far more elegant than the square stoles of last season.

Parisians always dress simply when walking on the street, but reserve their gorgeous gowns and coats for carriage and reception wear.

The picture shows a house gown of rose veiling with a short jacket trimmed with narrow fringe, worn over a loose accordion plaited blouse. The collar is of handmade lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW DESIGNS.

New Belts—A Novel Shade of Dark Blue—The Fad With Green.

Belts this year will be well worthy of notice. Chief among these are the bands of gold braid headed top and bottom by tiny pipings of pale leather. Tooled leather belts will be seen with the walking costumes and black leather belts tooled in gold are very smart indeed. These black and gold belts are particularly effective with pale colored gowns. One was worn recently with an eggshell blue frieze suit, and the note of black and gold was further carried out in the hat, which was a black and gold tricorne.

There is a strong leaning toward navy blue, which is almost black, and this is relieved by touches of grass green. A costume of this sort seen lately at a fashionable tailor's had the skirt made in three tiers, the bolero being very loose and trimmed with braid and fringe in black and green. Green enamel buttons also added another touch of color.

CHILD'S DRESS.

We must all of us have at least one tea gown a season, and the prettiest model I have seen in a long time was of accordion kilted crepe de chine with a fichu effect and long frilled stole ends of yellow lace.

The draped blouse is novel, and it is exquisite in chiffon velours or in the richer makes of crepe mousseline. Blouses draped or gauged from the shoulder are very effective, and the trimming of lace or embroidery is arranged to cover the shoulder seam and connect the folds. Very deep yokes are quite fashionable, and many run off into shaped emplecements or form tabs over the fullness below.

The cut shows a dainty French child's gown of batiste and lace over pale blue silk.

SPRING MILLINERY.

Two Styles of Hat For Dressy and For Tailor Made Gowns.

Millinery is now occupying our minds, and it can be divided into two classes—the chic and the picturesque.

With the walking skirt and garments of a tailor made order the sailor hat holds its own. It can be made of almost any material, including canvas or sailcloth and the finest of fine straw trimmed with a scarf of lace drooping slightly in the back.

The really dressy hats have lace brims and falling curtains of chiffon and lace with wreaths of flowers.

The shepherdess shape covered with dainty flowers is pretty, but trying to any woman who has passed her first youth. Some of the most effective of these hats are of silver gray chip, the brims veiled with deep cream imitation chantilly or alencon lace and trimmed with pale pink roses and parma violets.

The pointed floral toque is well suited to the French face, and it is very fashionable over on the other side.

Crinoline hats, which have been so fashionable for the last few years, are now giving place to leghorns.

The majority of the best millinery models abroad have the brims veiled with black, which is most becoming to the face.

The illustration shows a tailor made French hat of lavender satin straw trimmed with chiffon of a darker shade and foliage.

WHAT IS WORN.

The Ever Popular White Gown. Dresses of Thin Wool Materials.

The white reception frock continues to be a favorite. It is very pretty in the new crepon de soie made up with Irish lace or coarse maltese lace.

A white cloth gown smartly but simply made is not such an expensive gown and can be worn on a multitude of occasions.

Skirts are very full, but there is no need to exaggerate them. The fullness can be held in at the waist and hips and allowed to flare out gradually. Coarse canvases, hopsacks and voiles all lend themselves admirably to plaiting.

RED VEILING GOWN.

The blouse jacket or very fancy bolero mounted over a wide belt and worn with a full skirt will be the smart thing for street wear this spring.

For bodices and blouses a careful selection is of the utmost importance. The slight figure looks well in the closely fitted berths, which goes well over the sleeves or in the fichu arrangement—anything, in a word, which detracts from severity of outline.

Voile de soie, crepe de soie, collennes, crepe de chine and chiffon voiles will be leading fabrics for dressy gowns this spring.

The new skirts are so full that they often measure six or seven yards around. This fashion is becoming to the lean, lanky woman, for it rounds her out and gives a certain grace to all her movements. The plump woman should adopt a yoke effect around the hips and hold the fullness in gores until almost the bottom is reached. This full skirt demands a petticoat carefully cut so that it will fit very snugly around the hips and flare around the bottom. Nothing bunchy in the way of strings or misplaced fullness can be tolerated with the present style in dress.

The illustration shows a gown of red veiling over red taffeta. It is trimmed with narrow black and red Persian braid. The undersleeves and chemisette are of ecru mull.

EVENING FASHIONS.

Louis XVI. Effects—Pointed Girdles and Flowered Silks.

The return of the old fashioned brocades and the tiny wreath of roses on hats point to the Pompadour influence. These small roses have been worn in the hair for some time past as well as on debutantes' ball gowns. Little straw roses have been a feature of some of the new flat hats recently imported from Paris.

There is a decided Louis XVI. appearance to many of the ball gowns made of beautifully flowered silks and brocades. The pointed corsage effect appears as well in many reception gowns showing the velvet coat effect. The vest and revers to go with this effect are handsomely embroidered and the neck is finished with an old lace jabot.

The pointed waistbands now so much in vogue are as hard to make as a bodice; they have to be so beautifully draped and fitted.

For chiffon frocks ivory gray and pale bronze are favorite colors, and a good deal of gold and silver embroidery is used.

Taffetas this spring will be softened by the addition of lace or embroidered lawns, which are in keeping with the period when taffeta was first introduced.

The picture shows an evening dress of chiffon trimmed with bands of silver embroidery and worn with a wreath of silver in the hair.

SPRING FASHIONS.

The Wide Belt—Picturesque Effects In Flowered Silks.

All shades of pink are popular for evening wear, especially Rose du Barry, an exquisite pastel shade. Taffeta frocks are being made of this shade of pink beautifully embroidered and trimmed with a Marie Antoinette fichu and pointed bodice.

The distinguishing features of the new costumes are the full skirt and the wide belts. Soft bodices are made so full that they seem to be held in place by the deep Marie Antoinette corsage. This is pretty and graceful for evening wear. With bodices of this description some kind of a draped or elbow sleeve with a wide frill is the proper thing.

Elbow sleeves are rapidly coming in again. This was always a pretty style and suitable for semidressy occasions. Some of the new dresses have sleeves simply composed of a skillfully draped puff ending in a frill of lace.

Taffeta is certainly both smart and popular just now. It is often a good plan to have silk chiffon and mull gowns made with a guimpe arrangement, which can be removed so that the gown may either be worn decollete or not, as one chooses. This has almost become a necessity for the woman with a small income now that so many dainty gowns are being worn at restaurants, just as they are at private houses, with the exception that they must be high necked.

White muslin both in plain and in fancy makes will be very much worn this summer, and so will dainty flowered effects, particularly those of the Pompadour period.

The illustration shows a flowered silk waist made with a long shouldered V shaped yoke and a wide belt of panne.

THE SULTAN OF JOLO

United States Finds Him an Unassimilable Proposition.

Peculiarities of This Mohammedan Ruler and the Portion of the Philippines Which He Governs.

According to a report which has just been sent to the United States senate, the sultan of Jolo is no longer a worthy object of American's tender solicitude and generous dealing, for five years of American control in the Philippines have demonstrated that he is insincere in his expressions of loyalty and treacherous in all his transactions. Uncle Sam has been as patient as Job, as wise as Solomon, as tender as a mother, and as persistent as a bill collector in his effort to work the new world-famous benevolent assimilation process (special American patent) upon his sultanship, but apparently with as little effect as a midsummer breeze would have in an attempt to shake the Rockies, and he is about ready to give up the task. He feels that his dusky and tricky adopted child of the far off eastern island possessions has forfeited all the rights guaranteed him, and congress may be asked to discipline or expell this pesky little disciple of Mahommet.

The Jolo islands is the central group of the four which go to make up the archipelago of Jolo. These islands lie to the south and west of the island of Mindanao. The principal island is Jolo, containing a population estimated at about 120,000, made up of Quinbajanos, or inhabitants of the mountains; Malay or Visayan slaves; Samales, an inferior race, though not slaves, and the true Moros, who trace their origin from the Mohammedan invaders, and who dominate the other inhabitants. It is to this latter group that the Sultan belongs. He is rather the spiritual head of the region than the political ruler, for the tribal system prevails throughout the islands and the chiefs, or dattos, are the real rulers, while they recognize the spiritual supremacy of the sultan, who has made the pilgrimage to Mecca. Maibun, on the south coast of the island, dirty and insignificant as it is, is the official city of Jolo and the home of the sultan. It was to this place that Gen. Bates and his party went when the treaty with the sultan was made, and which treaty has been so severely criticised in many quarters because it recognized and continued the practice of slavery in the islands. By those who have met the sultan, he is described as "not a noble character and is neither greatly loved nor greatly respected by his people." The dattos may or may not accept arrangements which the sultan makes and it is becoming more and more apparent that the United States would probably do better to treat with the individual dattos than with the sultan.

Jolo, the principal city of the island, used to be the ancient resident of the sultans, but with the coming of the Spaniards it ceased to be such. It is a beautiful spot, the cleanest city in the archipelago, made so by the Spaniards. A brick wall surrounds the city, and the Moros are shut out of the town, because of their treacherous dispositions. The Spaniards established the custom of requiring them when entering the town to leave without the gate of the city their krises and barongs (knife and sword weapons), and this rule has been wisely continued by the Americans. The streets of the city are wide and straight and well shaded. The houses are all painted or whitewashed on the outside.

The Moslem fanaticism of the Moros has resisted 350 years of effort made by Jesuit, the Dominican, the Augustinian and the Franciscan. They are not only unresponsive, but dangerously hostile to missionary efforts, and insincerity and treachery is marked in all their contact with Christianity and the people of a Christian nation. What policy the United States will adopt in dealing with the sultan in the future is one grain, but one thing is sure, he is a tough proposition for even the Americans.

FOR DRESSY WEAR.

Chiffon Cloth Has Come to Stay. Black and White Effects.

The chou will soon have to give way to the little double bow which is being seen on so many waists and gowns.

In jeweled effects bluish and greenish tints are favored, and these are mounted in dull rose gold. Green in all its shades is becoming once more popular, and it is a good thing, for few other tints look as well for spring and summer wear.

Chiffon cloth has come to stay, for it is dainty as well as serviceable and can be finely tucked and shirred. Chiffon dresses are now being made of faint colorings in dull browns and moleskin tints. Shirring is the almost invariable trimming. Dyed lace forms a frequent trimming, and a bertha or cape collar of this is always handsome.

The black cloth gown made of very fine material is extremely chic, particularly when it is trimmed with open-work embroidery which allows glimpses of a bright taffeta lining to be seen, such as a deep red or green. Among the smartest novelties are Monte Carlo toques in the long pointed shape, all covered with fruit—currants, raisins, plums even—and draped with lace.

The beauty of many of the new gowns consists in their carefully shaded trimmings.

The black hat trimmed with black and white ostrich feathers is always smart, whether in summer or winter.

The illustration shows a white straw hat trimmed with a single black feather.

FRILLS AND FASHIONS.

Trimmings Are Horizontal—Smart Gowns For Evening Wear.

Nearly all the trimmings now are horizontal.

The old fashioned shawls can be turned into very pretty evening wraps, and the same is true of wedding veils, which are made up with chiffon over soft silk.

One of the prettiest evening gowns seen recently was of black spotted net over white chiffon and silk. The waist was almost covered by a deep bertha made of three narrow ruffles. The skirt had a shirred hip yoke, and from the knees down was a mass of ruffles; each ruffle was bound with a narrow black velvet ribbon. The short sleeve puffs were decorated with tiny velvet rosettes and the velvet sash had fancifully knotted ends.

Another evening dress was of heavy white lace and chiffon. The chiffon skirt, accordion plaited, had a very deep yoke, almost an overskirt, of the lace. The waist was of the full plaited chiffon with a front piece and puffs of lace. The decolletage was outlined with tiny white rosebuds.

A pale green taffeta which is being made for a smart woman has its skirt arranged in heavy plaits from the waist. Above the knees are enormous tucks headed with ruches. Around the waist is a swathed band with knotted ends and little taffeta roses. These roses also ornament the pelerine collar and are intermingled with shades of pale pink and heliotrope.

White frocks will be worn quite as much as ever this spring and summer, and they will be supplemented by the white cloth coat and the white lace hat trimmed with a feather or white roses.

The illustration shows one of these white cloth coats. It has a cape yoke coming well down over the shoulders. It is trimmed with black and white braid.

NEW FASHION FEATURES.

Long Shoulders Becoming Marked, Boleros and Skirts.

Little coffee jackets of embroidery and lace are spring necessities. They are worn with pale blue or pale pink silk petticoats. Often the loose hanging jacket and the skirt match. In which case crepe de chine or soft taffeta is pretty when plentifully trimmed with lace.

Evening dresses of spotted net, flounced all over from the decolletage down, are very chic for slender figures.

The longer the shoulder the more fashionable the garment, so say the tailors, but this long shoulder must not stick out; it must follow closely the outline of the arm.

Little boleros are eased in at the neck and allowed to fall in soft, graceful folds, something after the fashion of a cape. The skirts are eased in similarly at the hips, so that nothing but the wide belt follows closely the figure.

Tiny bows and rosettes of taffeta are used not only on reception and evening gowns, but even on tailor mades. They are usually placed down the front of the bolero and at the back seam of the skirt.

A smart evening gown of yellow chiffon designed for an early wedding is trimmed with shirrings run through with bronze ribbon.

The illustration shows a wedding gown of white chiffon cloth trimmed with alencon lace.

MATERIALS AND STYLES.

Hopsacking For Street Costumes. Pink and Black Popular.

For tailor mades and practical frocks hopsacking of every description will be used even more than cloth. Some spotted and checked alpacas will be seen also, while the most popular tweeds will be of a rough and hairy description.

Taffeta is again being used as trimming on almost all the smart gowns and wraps. It is of a softer make than ever and for that reason will wear better.

Pink and black is a favorite millinery combination just now, especially in black chantilly and pink roses.

There is a great fancy this season for the cream underdress covered with black chantilly, black net or some other soft, light black fabric.

With a gray cloth skirt a gray mousseline de soie waist with a yoke worked out of lace can be worn. This is made up over a thin silk or satin slip. The very full puffs of crepe de chine sleeves are both tucked across and shirred to form additional fullness.

Spotted taffetas in black and brown are being revived and trimmed with quite old fashioned applications of silk and chenille, but these must be very carefully managed in order not to look dowdy.

Tailor made suits of black and navy blue taffeta will be worn this summer over very full blouses of needlework and embroidery.

SHE SENT ALL THE NEWS.

John's Wife Tells Him in a Few Words What an Interesting Time She Was Having.

Knowing the aversion of her husband to letter writing, the wife of a Chicagoan thus admonished him on his departure on a recent eastern trip:

"Now, John, as neither I nor the children can accompany you, you must be eyes and ears for us, and drop us an occasional postal card, telling us anything of interest you may see and hear. Don't forget, will you?"

As husbands do, says the Chicago Tribune, the husband promised, and took his departure. The next morning he dropped a postal card containing the following message: "Dear Wife: I reached Pittsburg all right. Yours &c."

Though disappointed, she excused the brevity of the communication on the ground that her husband was doubtless pressed for time. Two days later, however, another card arrived, bearing the startling announcement: "Here I am in New York. Yours ever." Still later came another: "I am indeed in New York. Yours—"

The wife swallowed her disappointment, and, being good at retaliation, seized her pen and wrote: "Dear husband, the children and I are in Chicago. Yours—"

A few days later she wrote again: "We are still in Chicago."

In her next communication she grew a little more enthusiastic. She wrote:

"Dear Husband: Here we are in Chicago. I repeat it, sir. We are in Chicago."

"P. S.—We are, indeed."

In due time John reached home, and fearing perhaps that his poor wife was afflicted with some sort of dementia, hastened to ask the meaning of her strange messages. For answer she slipped into his hand his own three postal cards.

"What is sance for the goose is sance for the gander," she said.

It is to be hoped that John profited by the lesson.

SHE MUST WASH HER FACE.

Unique Punishment Meted Out to Female Vagrant by a Western Police Magistrate.

An Omaha (Neb.) correspondent states that a penalty unique in the annals of the police court was imposed on Kitty Williams for vagrancy and neglect to wash her face. The woman was sentenced to the city jail for 20 days and ordered to take a bath every day.

Kitty's appearance as she stood before the bench brought a scowl to the magistrate's face.

"You remind the court of the advertisement: 'I used your soap ten years ago and have used no other since,'" said Judge Berka. "When did you wash your face?"

HATED SOAP AND WATER.

The woman admitted that it was about three months ago; she had lost track of the exact date.

She didn't like to wash in cold water when the thermometer registered below zero.

"The sentence of the court will be that you be provided with a warm cell for 20 days, a scrub brush and a cake of soap," said the judge, "and further that the jailer see to it that you take a bath once a day."

Is Beginning Life Anew.

A remarkable case is that of Mrs. Rosa Perkins, of Huntington, Mass. Her age is eighty-five, and she has been almost totally blind for several years. Within the past three months she has regained her sight, and is now able to read without glasses. Her hair which had been gray and had fallen out to such an extent as to leave her almost bald, has taken a fresh start, and her head is now covered with a luxuriant growth of glossy black.

Thursday, March 31, 1904.

Mayor Fagan, of Jersey City—the Jerome of New Jersey Republicanism.

If they keep up working that "Hd" in Gotham, its hinges will wear out and "hell" will be wide open.

Senator Kean has outwitted Representative Fowler, who claims Plainfield as his stronghold. "A friend indeed——"

What benefit will Plainfield derive from that bridge scheme of Representative Benney? This municipality does not hold any trolley stock.

A Wisconsin man was arrested fifty-five times in Porto Rico for violating the libel laws and he thinks he holds a record. This claim must amuse some Metropolitan editors.

It is not to be wondered at that the Russians are ready to credit reported victories of their forces on land and sea when it is considered that the people are great smokers of cigarettes.

A New Brunswick paper declares that some women in North Brunswick townships actually kept a secret, but then you know what funny things do happen in Middlesex county according to the papers published over there.

The manager of the largest mail order establishment in the West (in Chicago) says he depends largely on "the clean city newspaper of wide circulation" to reach people in the country. "A house, like an individual, is known by the company it keeps, and we believe in mediums which everybody respects and trusts."—Philadelphia Record.

The man who doesn't advertise in prosperous times, because he doesn't need to, nor in hard times, because he can't afford it, is like the Arkansas man who explained that he didn't repair his leaking roof in fair weather because he didn't need any roof. And, of course, he couldn't work in the rain.—Folder from American Lumberman, Chicago.

The Newark Evening News and the Trenton Times join hands in denouncing the Senate bill appropriating $35,000 for an official junketing trip to the St. Louis Fair. Only $35,000? Why good lands, the people ought to be willing to put up ten times the amount to get rid of some of the official-politicians for a time. Send the "lawmakers" out there in a body.

The progress of the negro race in New Jersey is a subject which has been going the rounds of the State press recently. Supplemental to the encouraging facts brought out in that report, we are glad to note that Miss Anna Broadnax, a bright young colored girl, has been chosen valedictorian of the Plainfield High School's senior class. Race prejudice has a bitter foe in brains in these days of progress.

Plainfield's Want Ads—

Municipal system of garbage collection and a crematory for disposal. (Joint committee report approval by Common Council at its meeting on April 4.)

Model High School Structure. (Appropriation of $135,000 has been made by Common Council; site has been purchased and contracts are about to be awarded.)

Handsome post office Building. (Senator Kean has introduced a bill in Congress asking for an appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose.)

By advancing former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, from the vice presidency to the presidency of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company, the directors of that big manufacturing concern have acted in the interests of their stockholders and at the same time paid a deserved tribute to the general worth of a man who does with extraordinary executive ability and sound business judgment. The story of the company's growth during the last twenty-two years of its existence is linked with the career of William L. Saunders and the remarkable increase in its business is indeed pleasant to the friends of this progressive and enterprising citizen of North Plainfield.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Wizard of Oz" is at home again at the Majestic Theatre, New York city, rejuvenated and as interestingly as funny as ever. Opening night a packed house welcomed back the "Scarecrow" and "Tin Woodman," Fred. Stone and Dave Montgomery, Anna Laughlin, Bessie Wynn, Lotta Faust and all the other favorites. With a heartiness that drew tears to the artists' eyes. In brief one of the New York daily papers gave the following gratifying criticism of the second edition of the extravaganza: New York Herald: "The Wizard of Oz' returned to the Majestic as popular as ever and the 'Scarecrow,' 'Tin Woodman,' 'Trixie,' 'Dorothy,' the Lion and Cow renewed their old time hits. Talk about receptions: The most exacting grand opera singer could not expect bigger ovations than were tendered the favorites and the pretty chorus."

As a certain raiser to "Man Proposes" the clever little one act comedy "Frederic Lemaitre" is presenting at the Hudson Theatre, with Henry Miller in the role of the great actor. The play is no longer a novelty, of course, but it has lost none of its hold the public. Theatrical shopkeepers will note that here is a play with plenty of heart interest. Mr. Miller has been seen in it in New York before, and it was written by Clyde Fitch for the late Felix Morris, who made a hit in it at Daly's Theatre some years ago. It is practically a one part play, and the sort of a part that an actor dearly loves to play. It is not one of those parts, however, that "plays itself." The plot is a mere trifle—the story of how the great actor Frederic Lemaitre taught a stage struck young milliner that an actor was something more than a parrot. By the way, what an excellent play this is for the matinee girl to see, or for the thousands of young women who imagine that a career awaits them upon the stage. Mr. Miller plays the title role with sincerity, and always in the right key. He looks the character. Miss Claire Kulp, as Madelene Flewry, a little stage struck milliner, is effective, and so, too, is Walter Allen as the old servant.

Forbes Robertson and Gertrude Elliott and their London company will end their engagement in "Hamlet" at the Knickerbooker Theatre Saturday evening, April 2d, and will be followed on Monday evening, April 4th, by Wright Lorimer, the young romantic actor, in his own new production, "The Shepherd King," a Biblical play with David as its centre character. Mr. Robertson and Miss Elliott will end their first American tour most auspiciously. Their production of "Hamlet," and especially Mr. Robertson's interpretation of this character, has firmly established them in the good opinion of American theatre-goers and their return to America next season under the direction of Klaw & Erlanger will be most heartily welcomed. Their last appearance in America this season will occur at Sander's Theatre, Harvard College, where they will present two special performances of "Hamlet" at the conclusion of their Knickerbocker Theatre engagement.

The Wednesday matinees at Wallack's Theatre, New York, are designed for the special accommodation of suburban patrons who find it inconvenient to patronize the evening performances of "The County Chairman." An additional advantageous feature of these mid-week afternoon representations of George Ade's immensely diverting comedy is the fact that the prices are very materially reduced from the schedule in operation at night. This enables persons living within striking distance of the city to visit Wallack's of a Wednesday afternoon and pay their railway and street car fares out of about what it would cost them for theatre tickets alone upon other occasions—an item of some importance. "The County Chairman" is still far in the lead of all funny plays of the metropolitan season.

Pauline Hall, the famous comic opera vocalist, will be the bright and shining star of the all-astral aggregation of vaudeville artists billed to appear at Keith's during the present week. Always a great favorite, ever since she was the prima donna of the McCall forces at the New York Casino, no vocalist on the stage today is in better voice and more popular.

"The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre, New York, passed its 150th performance on Broadway on Tuesday evening, and the fact was looked upon as so much a matter of course that no special effort was made to attract attention to it. There were no souvenirs and no demonstrations other than those of unrestricted merriment which always follow the progress of George Ade's delightful droll comedy of rural life in the West. "The County Chairman," as a fact, now seems as far from the end of its vast popularity in New York as it was when the first night audience, convulsed with nearly three hours of laughter, gave it a rousing demonstration of approbation. Wallack's is still crowded every performance, and the advance demand for seats and boxes extends as far as May.

William H. Crane is to again be seen as David Harum. On Easter Monday he will appear at the Academy of Music in this play which proved one of his greatest successes. Charles Frohman will give it an elaborate production and the original cast will be seen.

William Collier comes to the Criterion Theatre Easter week when he will be seen in Richard Harding Davis' new farce "The Dictator." The popular comedian has made an emphatic hit in this play which is sure to be duplicated. He is surrounded by the best company he has ever had.

The players who have been successful in Shakespeare productions at Daly's, will be seen the current week in the old English classic "She Stoops to Conquer," with Miss Matthison and Ben Greet in the principal parts. On Tuesday and Thursday afternoons Miss Matthison appears in the old morality play "Everyman," which for two seasons has interested every student of the drama.

Edwin Varey, who has had a most successful season with Ada Rehan, playing "The Merchant of Venice," "The Taming of the Shrew," and "The School for Scandal," is spending a week at his home in North Plainfield, where he is known by his name when off the stage, Edwin Phillips. On Monday the company will play a two week's engagement in Philadelphia and then close the season. Miss Rehan will sail in April for England, where she will spend the summer at her bungalow. Mr. Varey will spend the warm weather at his home. He says the patronage accorded the three productions during the past season has been phenomenal.

Richard Mansfield will end his four weeks' run at the New Amsterdam Theatre next Saturday evening and will be followed on Monday, the 28th, by A. M. Palmer's great revival of his wonderful success of thirty years ago, first presented at the Union Square Theatre December 21st, 1874—"Two Orphans." The cast will be the most remarkable ever seen in any production on the American stage. Twelve of the principal roles will be played by noted stars. The cast of the revival will be even more notable than the original, many of whom afterward became the leading American players. The following is a list of the principal players at the New Amsterdam Theatre: Kyrle Bellew, James O'Neill, Charles Warner, Frederick Perry, E. M. Holland, Jameson Lee Finney, Grace George, Margaret Illington, Clara Morris, Annie Irish, Elita Proctor Otis, Clara Blandick.

Concerning Proctor's Fifth Avenue, week of April 4. An event of considerable importance in theatricals will be the first stock presentation in any theatre of the dramatization of Mary Johnston's book, "Audrey," in which Miss Eleanor Robson starred prior to her appearance in "Merely Mary Ann." By special arrangement with Liebler & Co., F. F. Proctor has secured, not only the right to present this play, but also has the use of the scenery and costumes employed in the original production. Every effort will be made to give the piece the same artistic atmosphere as was to be noted in the original production. The cast will include Malcolm Williams, Hugh Ford, Gerald Griffin, Verner Clarges, George Bryant, John Westley, Julian Reed, Al. Roberts, Jessie Isesto, (especially engaged) Rose Stuart, Margaret Kirker, Julia Aiken, Marie Bernard, Bessie La Lestina, etc. The variety section of the bill will be stronger than ever, in keeping with the holiday season. The specialists will be led by Mme. Rialta, a mirror dancer, who will present many new and beautiful light effects.

LEAL'S SCHLDULE.

Baseball Games Arranged by School Team for Coming Season.

The Leal's School baseball management is out with a strong spring schedule of games which include contests up to May 28. There may be other games. The season will be opened on Saturday, the initial games being with the Camp Bowser team, made up mostly of former students of the school. All of the home games will be played on Crescent Oval. On Saturday, April 9, the team will play the Pingry School team at Elizabeth. The other games arranged thus far are as follows:

April 41, Westfield High School; April 16, Montclair Military Academy; April 20, Plainfield High School; April 21, Cedarcroft School; April 23, Newark Academy, all at home; April 30, Morristown Academy, at Morristown. These games will also be played at home; May 5, Pingry School; May 7, Princeton Charter Club; May 13, Cedarcroft School; May 14, Plainfield High School; May 25, Cedarcroft School, May 28, Plainfield High School.

FIFTY-FIVE YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

Mr. and Mrs. Abner Smalley Coriell Celebrate Wedding Anniversary.

AT NEW MARKET HOME

POSTMASTER OF THE VILLAGE FOR TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS.

Assessor of Piscataway Township for Twenty Years — Eleven Children Born to Couple—Well-Known Here.

Surrounded by their children and grandchildren Mr. and Mrs. Abner Smalley Coriell celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of their marriage at their home in New Market Friday night. Mr. Coriell was born on November 11, 1830. He married Margaretta Giles, his first wife, on his twenty-first birthday. Their union was blessed with three children, of whom but one is living, Andrew S. Coriell, collector of Bound Brook. Fifty-five years ago he married Catherine Blue, then eighteen years old. Eleven children were born to them and eight lived to help celebrate the anniversary Friday. They are Mrs. M. B. VanKeuren, of Eatontown; Mrs. B. G. Elliot, of Scotch Plains; Mrs. Clarence White, of Red Bank; Charles A., and Abner S., Jr., of Dunellen; George W., William L., and Katherine A., of New Market.

Mr. Coriell was postmaster at New Market for twenty-eight years. He was assessor of Piscataway Township for twenty years. He is proud of his record as a Republican voter, having never missed a spring or fall election since the Republican party came into being. In his younger years he voted with the Whigs. Two years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, but has entirely recovered from its effects. His activity and an advanced age is surprising to many. Each Christmas all his children and grandchildren gather at the old home and share the pleasures of the season with their aged relatives.

STATIONARY ENGINEERS ELECT

ARTHUR CASE IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF SAFETY ASSOCIATION, NO. 12.

The stationary engineers of the city completed the organization of "Safety Association, No. 12, National Association Stationary Engineers," at a meeting held Saturday night in Exempt Firemen's Hall on Park avenue. These officers were elected: President, Arthur Case; vice president, John Schenck; secretary, Carroll Runyon; treasurer, William Reinmann. The officers were installed by State Deputy John Callahan, of Jersey City and the name of sixteen charter members were placed on the roll.

Union Man Wants Job.

Senator Kean has indorsed the application of Charles D. White, of Summit, for appointment as secretary of the United States legation at Copenhagen. His appointment as secretary of the legation at Buenos Ayres was somewhat of a surprise. Mr. White is a young man of exceptional abilities and a splendid linguist, speaking several foreign languages. He was highly recommended by President Wilson, of Princeton University.

—Miss Elsie Horjon, a former instructor in North Plainfield, visited the borough schools yesterday morning. Miss Horton is now teaching in the New York schools.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS SERVICE RESIGNS

David E. Titsworth Discontinues as Superintendent of Seventh-Day School.

REVIEW OF HIS WORK

ANNUAL MEETING REPORTS SHOW A PROSPEROUS CONDITION.

Orra S. Rogers the New Superintendent of the School—Yearly Meeting of the Church to be Held Next Sunday.

After a service of twenty years as superintendent of the Seventh-Day Baptist Sunday-school, David E. Titsworth resigned his position at the annual meeting held Sunday at the church. Mr. Titsworth said he thought the time had arrived for a change and in retiring he presented a general report covering his period of service. It was with reluctance that the resignation was accepted.

Dr. Frank S. Wells was chairman of the meeting and Clarence Rogers was the secretary. Miss Luella Clawson, secretary for the school, gave a report showing the progress made during the year, and Miss Ernestine C. Smith, as treasurer, gave a report of the money expended, including contributions to all of the local charities, leaving a good balance on hand. Charles Neagle presented a report as librarian. All reports were encouraging to the school. From the balance in the treasury a sum was appropriated for the purchase of library books and $10 was contributed to the Children's Home, making the school a sustaining member.

These officers were chosen for the year:

Superintendent, Orra S. Rogers; first assistant, Henry M. Maxson; second assistant, Asa F. Randolph; secretary, Miss Kizzie Neagle; treasurer, Miss Ernestine C. Smith; librarian, Charles Neagle; pianist, Miss Mabel Maxson; chorister, David E. Titsworth; auditors, Mrs. F. J. Hubbard and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard.

It was announced at the meeting that next Sunday the annual meeting of the church would be held, at which time reports from all departments will be received.

A NEW ORDER OF EAGLES

BIG TIM TO ATTEND AERIE TO BE INSTITUTED AT ELIZABETH.

Next Monday afternoon an "aerie" of the Order of Eagles will be instituted in Elizabeth. More than a dozen Plainfielders, including Charles Stranzenbach, Fred S. Moore, D. J. Force, J. V. Beekman, Samuel Terry, Gilbert Menle and William Feaster, will become members.

The institution will be attended by prominent Eagles from New York and Newark, including the only Timothy Dry-Dollar Sullivan, of "De Ate," New York, who will lead the parade that will follow the institution.

Realty Conveyances.

These conveyances of Plainfield real estate have been recorded in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth: Lewis Booker et ux, to Lee Booker, northwesterly side East Third street, corner Angeline Gates, $1; William R. Bishop et ux, to Plainfield Water Supply Co., southeasterly corner North avenue and Terrell road, $350; Central N. J. Land Improvement Co. to same, southeasterly side North avenue, 1854 feet northeasterly of Leland avenue, $1,900; Joshua Loiseaux et ux, to William F. Welsh, northeasterly side McKinley place, northwesterly of East Second street, $250; Clarence W. Hillyer et al, to Ada Wells, southeasterly side Second street, corner Voorbees' land, $100.

Married Twenty Years Ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thom, of Summit avenue, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding, on Friday night. There were about twenty-five relatives and friends present to join with the bride and groom in making the event a pleasant one. The couple received many presents. Mr. and Mrs. Thom were married in Paterson twenty years ago and for several years they resided at Passaic. They have been residents of the borough about six years.

Elaborate Easter Service.

The musical programme at the Easter celebration in St. Joseph's church next Sunday will be very elaborate. Mr. A. Korff will head a twelve-piece orchestra and singers from Walter Damrosch's famous society will take part. The big children's orchestra that will assist in the service practiced its part yesterday afternoon.

—J. A. Sutton has removed from 37 Somerset street to the Chase property on the same street.

CHRIST'S ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM OBSERVED

Palm Sunday Services Held in Many Churches in the City and the Borough.

MEANING OF THE DAY

ELABORATE SERVICES HELD IN THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Sermons Preached by Local Pastors—Good Music in Several Edifices—The Distribution of Palms.

Palm Sunday was observed by churches of all denominations to a greater or less extent in this city Sunday. Although the morning was raw, and not at all spring-like, large congregations were the rule, and the first spirit of the approaching Eastertide was felt.

While not confined to them to a very decided degree, the observance was more elaborate and solemn in the ritualistic churches. Special music, decorations and sermons marked the celebration in the Episcopal churches, and solemn high mass, with processions, and the distribution of blessed palm branches were the features of the Roman Catholic services.

Sunday was the beginning of Holy Week, the week set apart to commemorate the closing scenes in the earthly life of our Lord. Its observance dates back to the early day of Christianity and is mentioned by Irenaeus toward the end of the second century, while Eusebius believed that the custom of keeping Holy Week dated from Apostolic times. It was frequently spoken of by ancient Uniters as the Great, the Holy Week, the Week of the Holy Passion. The first day of the week is called Palm Sunday, as on that day Jesus Christ entered Jerusalem upon an ass, and the multitudes in their enthusiasm cut down branches from the trees and strewed them in the way, crying out, "Blessed is He who cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest!"

The chief feature of the day in the Roman Catholic churches was the blessing and distribution of the palms before the High Mass. The palms are placed near the epistle side of the altar, and the celebrant, in violet cope, sprinkles them first with Holy Water and then incenses them. They are delivered first to the clergy and choir, who walk in procession through the church and pass outside. Then the cantors enter the church, leaving the rest outside. The hymn, "All Glory Laud and Honor," is sung, both parties—those within and those without—taking part. At the last the sub-deacon knocks at the door with shaft of the processional cross, and the whole body march up the church. The processional crucifix is covered with a purple veil, and the music is of a solemn character. Before the procession, the palms are distributed throughout the congregation, who hold them in their hands.

St. Joseph's R. C.

There was an imposing procession by 150 child choristers as the opening and most impressive feature of the Palm Sunday celebration at St Joseph's Roman Catholic church Sunday morning All the children bore big branches of palms. James Bailey, the head of the choir, sang a solo version of "The Palms" arranged by Father Miller, the rector, the children and the main choir supporting him. The rendition was exceptionally fine.

As in all the other Roman Catholic churches throughout the world, the main part of the service proper consisted of the reading of the solemn Passion from the Gospel of St. Matthew. There was no sermon.

The palms were blessed and distributed to all the worshippers. The congregation was one of the largest in the history of the church.

St. Mary's R. C.

Worshippers in large numbers attended the celebration of Palm Sunday at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church Sunday morning. The service was marked by a solemn high mass.

Before the mass was celebrated the palms were blessed and the altar boys with priests marched in solemn procession about the church. Father Delahanty was the celebrant of the mass, with Father Egan as deacon, Father Federici, of Bloomfield, sub-deacon, and William O'Keefe master-of-ceremonies. The Passion was read as the chief feature of the mass, as in all other Roman Catholic churches.

William Holmes sang "The Palms," as a solo After the service the blessed palms were distributed.

In the evening, Father Delahanty preached a sermon appropriate to Holy Week.

Trinity Reformed.

Palm Sunday was observed at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning by a special sermon of the pastor and by appropriate music. Dr. Schenck presided and the subject, "Hosanna to the Son of David." He spoke of Christ's life as a child; what His life meant to children; and what children meant to Christ. He referred to the intuition of childhood and to the child's instant and instinctive knowledge of who is its friend. Man must be as a little child in order to enter the Kingdom, must have the child's faith and the child's nearness to God.

"Jerusalem," by Parker-Rees, was sung by the regular church choir, and "The Palms" was sung as a solo by Bertram Tallamy. A. L. Titsworth was organist.

St. Stephen's Episcopal.

Special music, decorations of palm branches and sermons appropriate to the day marked the observance of Palm Sunday at St. Stephen's church. Two services were held, morning and afternoon.

Rev. William R. Harris, the rector, preached strong sermons upon the meaning of the day and the solemnity of Holy Week. The full choir was out and sang anthems and chants with fine effect.

The decorations were of notable character, and transformed the church interior. They were hung by the members of St. Ann's Guild.

Grace P. E.

Palm Sunday services attracted very large congregations to both service at Grace P. E. church. Special music was sung, and sermons appropriate to the beginning of Holy Week were preached by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector, in the morning; and the Rev. Charles Fiske, of St. John's church, Somerville, in the evening.

Palms in profusion were hung about the altar, with striking effect.

The musical programmes were unusually good. In the morning the processional was "All Glory, Laud and Honor," and benedicite by Barnaby was sung, and Garret's benedictus. The offertory anthem was "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," by Maker. It included an excellently rendered solo by Mrs. Theodore Mantz, and quartette work by Miss Ada Clark, contralto; Mrs. Mantz, soprano; William Tallamy, tenor; Arthur Chamberlain, bass. In the evening the feature was Toner's anthem "Weary of Earth and Laden with My Sin." Solo parts were sung by Mrs. Mantz, Mr. Tallamy and Mr. Chamberlain. Mrs. William Freeman, the organist, was in charge of the music at both services.

Warren Chapel.

A special sermon on Palm Sunday was preached by Rev. J. O. McKelvey at Warren chapel Sunday morning. There was special music by the choir.

Hope Chapel.

Three special events marked Palm Sunday at Hope chapel. In the morning Rev. A. H. Howard, the pastor, preached a sermon upon the observance, a spectacular lecture on missions in China, Japan and India was delivered to the Sunday-school in the afternoon, and several members were added to the church at communion service in the evening.

In his sermon Mr. Howard contrasted the triumphal entry of the Saviour into Jerusalem with the dark tragedy of the Crucifixion. Both this service and the evening one were largely attended.

Mrs. Jay Gillespie, who has travelled extensively through the Orient in the cause of missions, delivered the talk to the Sunday-school. She illustrated the dress of the Eastern people by draping native costumes about eight Sunday-school scholars: Hannah Brandt, Esther Brandt, Agnes Leighe, Willie Hunter, Harry Kenny, Elsie Rimmer, Ruth Kenny.

At the evening service the pastor preached the last of a special series of sermons on the Christian life. "Man shall not live by bread alone," was his text, and he dwelt at length upon the absolute supremacy of the spiritual life. Five new members were admitted to the church: Miss Annie Porter, Miss Emily Duvier, Miss Minnie Hartfelder and Wallace Morton by confession of faith; and Mrs. Samuel Kratsley, by letter from the Muscatong Valley church.

Holy Cross.

At the Church of the Holy Cross Palm Sunday was marked by music and decorations of much beauty. Mrs. W. L. Saunders sang "The Palms" in the morning and Gounod's "Praise Ye the Father" in the evening.

Miss Clara Denton, who has been spending the winter with relatives here, has returned to her home at Belmar.

Mrs. Moore, of Central avenue, who has been visiting her son, in California, is extending her trip to Honolulu.

Jesse Scull, janitor of the Whittier School, who has been ill with the grip, has recovered and returned to his duties.

Pauline, the youngest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. T. E. Davis, of West Fifth street, is convalescing from an attack of scarlet fever.

Illness is confining A. V. D. Honeyman to the house. He was too sick to attend the School Board meeting in North Plainfield last night.

FIRE IN THE BOROUGH; THE LOSS IS $7,500

Partial Destruction of Residence of Samuel Metzger, at Linden and Sycamore Aves.

FIREMEN'S GOOD WORK

PAID DEPARTMENT RESPOND TO FIRST CALL AND BATTLE SUCCESSFULLY.

Property Owned by David McMurtrie—Loss on Household Goods, $5,000; on House, $2,500—Origin Is a Mystery.

Responding to their first real alarm, the new paid fire department of the borough had a hot and busy time at the home of Samuel Metzger, at Linden and Sycamore avenues, Monday afternoon. A fierce fire gutted the front of the interior from top to bottom, causing a loss that is likely to reach $5,500. The new department made a fine showing, and won words of praise in several official quarters.

Just how the fire started is unknown. There was nobody home when it was discovered by the driver of a laundry wagon at 2:25 o'clock. Mrs. Metzger went out, leaving the place vacant, a half hour before, and she says there was not the slightest indication of fire when she left. When the laundryman went to the door he saw thick columns of smoke issuing from windows on the upper floors He jumped down the steps to give the alarm, and the first man he met was Capt. William Barry, of Hose Co. No. 2, who was passing the house Capt. Barry pulled box 154.

The alarm rang the wrong combination, but the engine house tapper registered right, and within three minutes the firemen were on the scene. They reached the spot before the last round of the gong ended. Chief Woolston was in front of the engine house with his rig when the bell sounded, and he was with his men from the start to direct the battle.

When the men attacked the flames, within five minutes after the alarm, the hallway in the forepart of the house was a roaring furnace. Fire filled the house from the first floor to the roof, and it looked for a time as if the place was doomed to complete destruction.

Chief Woolston and his men worked with fierce energy, and for a time there was a battle royal between the raging flames and the fire fighters who not only struggled for the mastery of their foe but for vindication as an organization. And the men won out.

Playing three lines of hose, everywhere and all over the fire, the firemen overwhelmed the flames and beat them back into submission within three quarters of an hour after the fight started. There was plenty of hot, hard work to do after control was gained, but there was no more danger of a spread. Working splendidly and intelligently, the firemen drowned out every spark, and when the recall sounded at 4 o'clock they returned to their quarters a victorious band that had won their spurs.

The lower hall of the house was completely wrecked, and all the floors were burned through the center. The flames worked right through the shingle and slate roof, eating a big hole that showed how the fiery column had raged up the cellar. Some of the furniture, which was of costly character, was saved, but most of it is a total loss. Mr. Metzger estimates the whole damage, house and furnishings, at $5,000 or more. The damage to the house, which is owned by David McMurtrie, of New York, is placed at $2,500. All the loss is covered by insurance.

Examination by Chief Woolston and Mr. Metzger failed to disclose any satisfactory explanation of the fire's start. There was a furnace burning in the cellar, where it is supposed the flames had their origin, but there was nothing to indicate that this furnace caused their start.

A big crowd watched the firemen work, anxious to see how they would acquit themselves. Nothing but praise was heard.

Chief Doane went over to see the new men in their first battle, and watched them carefully. He was warm in his praise of them after the fight, and congratulated Chief Woolston on the showing.

"They did fine," he said; "I couldn't have done better with my department."

To a reporter for The Daily Press Chief Woolston and Mayor Smalley said later that they were extremely pleased with the way the men acquitted themselves. "The service was perfectly satisfactory," said the latter, "just as we expected it would be."

The firemen worked under a good deal of personal discomfort. The Council has not yet fitten them with full equipment, and there were hardly any coats and boots for them. Among the whole force there were only two pairs of the latter.

WESTFIELD CLUB CELEBRATES VICTORY

Members of Daily Press Bowling League as Guests of the Winners of the Cup.

ROUSING GOOD TIME

WALTER C. DOBBINS PRESENTS CUP IN BEHALF OF THIS NEWSPAPER.

Speeches Made by S. C. Greves, Charles H. Denman, President Tuttle and Representatives of Elizabeth and Westfield Papers.

Genuine enthusiasm and good-fellowship the various clubs representing The Daily Press Bowling League were entertained in a royal manner by the Westfield Club, winners of the tournament, Monday. It was a great time for the league, the spirit of the occasion being inspired by the successful close of the tournament covering a period of five years and the success of the popular Westfield Club in winning the handsome trophy presented by The Daily Press, three years in succession, thereby obtaining permanent ownership.

Every member in the league was well represented, except the Park Club, Dr. Charles R. Thiers, the veteran bowler, being the only one present from the organization "across the brook." In addition to the members of the bowling teams, there were many friends present including several officials from Westfield.

The entertainment was provided by the Westfield Club and a sumptuous spread was served. There was plenty of good things to eat, and while the guests were feasting, the occasion was enlivened by popular songs, including several solos, all joining in the chorus. President Tuttle, of the Westfield Club, together with the officials of The Daily Press Bowling League, occupied seats at the head of the table. After the inner man was well filled, President Tuttle in a short speech referred to the object of the gathering and while he incidentally recited the successes of the winning club, he did not fail to speak of the feeling of harmony existing between the clubs, and it was with no little pride that he referred to the fact that the trophy had been won from true sports. He expressed the hope that this feeling of harmony and good-fellowship would continue and grow and that another year would see the league continued even stronger than during the past. Pleasant words were spoken by Mr. Tuttle for The Daily Press and three rousing cheers were given for its editor-proprietor.

In response to a request from Mr. Tuttle, the trophy was presented to the winning five by Walter Collins Dobbins, secretary-treasurer of the league, who performed the honor in the name of A. L. Force, editor and proprietor of The Daily Press. H. R. Forster, captain of the team, accepted the trophy in a short speech, in which he thanked the donor and referred to the uniform courtesy extended by the other clubs in the league. He stated that Roselle Casino won the trophy in 1900 and 1901, while Westfield had won it in 1902-'03-'04.

Then followed speeches by S. C. Greves, president of the league; Charles H. Denman, manager of the Westfield Baseball Club, and representatives of the other bowling teams, as well as representatives of the Elizabeth Journal and Westfield Leader. It was nearly 12 o'clock when the happy affair terminated, but all agreed that the evening had been profitably spent.

LODGE AFFAIR.

Entertainment to be Held at Casino Under Auspices of Six Courts of Foresters.

Representatives of six courts of Foresters in this vicinity met Saturday night and made partial arrangements for a joint meeting and entertainment to be held in the Casino on May 24. These various courts have adopted a scheme to secure new members and on the night of May 24, they will receive the new members, after which there will be an entertainment, including an address by Rev. John Kerr, of Elizabeth, High Chaplain of the order.

The courts represented are Courts Plainfield and Watchung, of Plainfield; Court South Plainfield, of South Plainfield; Court Dunellen, of Dunellen; Court Bound Brook, of Bound Brook and Court Provident, of Westfield.

Miss Pauline Denton, of Washington avenue, has returned from a visit with Brooklyn relatives.

Charles Wiggins and Fred Ohl, of Newark, are the guests of Charles Debele, Jr., of Hook avenue.

Miss Helen Knox, of Pittsburg, is spending some time with her brother, H. R. Knox, of Webster place.

E. A. Overton, president of the Borough School Board, is confined to the house by an attack of lumbago.

COMMENCEMENT DAY BOTHERS THE BOARD

North Plainfield School Directors Undecided Where to Hold Annual Exercises.

CHOICE FOR SPEAKER

PROF. LOUIS BEVIER TO BE ASKED TO MAKE THE ADDRESS.

Y. M. C. A. Auditorium Likely to be Chosen in Preference to First Baptist Church Edifice—Agitation Over an Aquarium.

Most of the business done by the Borough Board of Education at its monthly meeting Monday was transacted behind closed doors. The Board went into executive session shortly after the meeting started, mainly to discuss the make-up of the teaching force for next year.

In the open session details of the commencement exercises were discussed. The question of a hall, which lies between the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and the First Baptist church, was referred to the commencement committee, with power. The church will want double the rate that the Board has been in the habit of paying to the Y. M. C. A., and it is extremely probable that the latter place will be engaged again.

Prof. Louis Bevier, of Rutgers College, was mentioned as one of the possibilities for commencement speaker. He is a member of the State Board of Education, and is highly gifted as an orator. The commencement committee will write him in regard to the matter.

Chairman Valiant, of the finance committee, asked the Board the authorize warrants for $115—$14 for the manual training department fund, and $101 for the general fund.

Chairman Cooley, of the building committee, reported that he had ordered the janitor to put a new rope on the school flagpole, each year. This course will do away with the necessity of having a man climb the pole, which must be done every few years when the Board waits until the rope breaks.

After considerable debate as to whether the school needed a $2.50 aquarium or a $4.50 one for its nature study classes, and whether it really needed an aquarium at all, it was decided to get the $4 50 tank. Dr. Cooley, of the building committee, recommended the $4.50 one because the $2.50 kind comes in one piece of glass and has to be thrown away when something happens to its contour. The $4.50 kind has removable sides that can be replaced if anything happens to it when the children are studying nature.

RESIGNS AFTER LONG LABOR

JOHN VALIANT A SUNDAY-SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT FOR TWELVE YEARS.

John Valiant tendered his resignation as superintendent to the Sunday-school of Grace M. E. church Sunday afternoon. The letter declaring his desire for retirement was read at the regular session of the school by Assistant Superintendent Wilson.

In the preamble to his resignation, Mr. Valiant referred to his recent recovery from severe illness, and intimated that it was on account of his health that he wished to step aside. He has been at the head of the school for twelve years.

The letter was received with many expressions of keen regret and unwillingness to accept it as final. Resolutions expressing warm appreciation of his services and requesting him to reconsider his decision to retire were unanimously passed. A committee was appointed to wait on Mr. Valiant and urge him to retain his position. This committee will report to the Sunday-school tomorrow night.

John Hiscox, manager of the Sabbath Recorder office, has returned from Westerly, R. I., where he was called last week on account of the death of his mother.

Miss Bertha Willis, of Prospect place, who has been sojourning in Florida with a niece of the late Vice President Hobart, has returned home, much improved in health.

Miss Kathie Rocap, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rocap, of West Front street, has returned for her Easter vacation from Wheaton, Mass., where she attends boarding school.

Miss Rocap, of Wellesley College, has returned to her home in West Front street for the Easter vacation.

Miss Justina Smith, of Duer street, who has been quite ill, is now much improved and hopes to be out again soon.

Miss Carrie Mulford, of East Fifth street, who has been seriously ill, continues to show signs of improvement.

RESIDENTS IN MANNING AVENUE, NEAR WATCHUNG, STIRRED UP.

Disputants Finally Discuss the Matter and Come to An Amicable Agreement—The Cause of the Strife.

Trouble that threatened excitement a good deal like the Sebring matter stirred up Manning avenue, in the neighborhood of Watchung avenue, Sunday morning. The fuss arose over a dispute between Lewis Chandler, the owner of a small grocery store near the corner, and Joseph Haurand, whose house is directly behind it, regarding Chandler's right to move the store back.

Chandler's store stands right on the sidewalk line, and he wants to put it back ten feet. This would put it up against Haurand's structure.

Chandler made preparations to move the store back Sunday morning. Haurand heard of the plan and immediately protested. He objected on the ground that it would put his fire insurance rate up, and insisted that Chandler had no right back his store into contact with his building. He said flatly that he would not permit the store to be placed against his house.

There was a warm wordy battle that attracted a crowd, and things promised to be highly interesting for a time. Mayor Smalley hurried to the scene to settle it. He counselled the two men to declare a truce until both were cooler. The belligerents were quieted somewhat after a while, and Chandler allowed his building to stand, where it was.

Monday, however, he declared that he would move the store immediately. He was getting ready to do it, and Haurand was looking interested, when some friends advised Chandler to go slow, and succeeded in persuading him to leave the store where it was. Later in the day Chandler and Haurand talked the matter over more amicably than on Sunday and it is believed that it has been settled to the satisfaction of both of them.

MOTHER-IN-LAW ENDS THE DOMESTIC BLISS

John Biddolph Flees When His Spouse's Maternal Ancester is About to Enter.

WIFE NOW REPENTANT

BETTER HALF SEARCHING FOR HER MISSING HUSBAND.

Mr. Biddolph Takes Their Child With Him and Writes That Wife Can Sell the Furniture—Mrs. Biddolph Seeks Squire's Aid.

Panic stricken over the prospective visit of his mother-in-law, John Biddolph, of Scotch Plains, abandoned his wife and home Wednesday afternoon, taking his seventeen-months' old baby with him. The wife is frantically searching for him and the infant, but no trace of them has been discovered.

Mrs. Biddolph applied to Justice Clark for assistance in searching for the missing husband Wednesday night. She said that Biddolph had become implacably angered by the receipt of a letter from her mother, notifying them that she would visit their house shortly. Biddolph said he would not remain in the same house with his mother-in-law, and told his wife to choose between them. As far as is known, Biddolph had no particular feuds with his wife's mother, except the general reputation of mothers-in-law who stay at the homes of their married daughters.

"If your mother comes to see us," said Biddolph, "I shall get out. The same house will not hold the two of us." Mrs. Biddolph did not take the threat seriously, and insisted on receiving her mother.

True to his word, Biddolph promptly packed up his clothes, and taking the baby with him, left the house a short time after the spat. Mrs. Biddolph thought he was bluffing to frighten her, and allowed him to go without protest. As the evening wore on without any sign of the husband, Mrs. Biddolph became frightened. She went about the town searching for a trace of Biddolph, or the child, but no clue to their whereabouts was discovered.

Next day she received a card from Biddolph telling her curtly that he had the child and intended to keep it. "You have made your choice," wrote Biddolph; "I have the child and will take the best of care of it. As for you, take the furniture and sell it or do as you please with it, as we are through." The message closed with the hope that she would enjoy her mother's society.

There was no clue to Biddolph's whereabouts in the message, and it is believed that he will carefully cover his trail to whatever point he may decide to go. The Scotch Plains authorities gave the distressed wife but little encouragement, for there appears to be no ways for them to serve a warrant for desertion. Mrs. Biddolph told Judge Clark that she intended to hire a lawyer and institute a general search for her husband, in order to regain the child.

PRESBYTERIAL SOCIETY MEETS

TWO HUNDRED DELEGATES GATHER IN FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Plainfield members of the Women's Presbyterial Society were hostesses yesterday at the first meeting of the Elizabeth district branch of the society held in this city for some time. The meeting took place in the First Presbyterian church, a cordial welcome to the 200 delegates being extended by Rev. John S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, who officiated in Mr. Herring's absence. Sessions were held morning and afternoon.

The response to Dr. Zelie's address in the morning was made by the president, Mrs. M. J. Gildersleeve, of Westfield. Mrs. M. C. Miller, of Roselle, conducted the devotional exercises. A solo was rendered by Mrs. R. K. Miner, accompanied by Andrew Carpenter. The report of the corresponding secretary was read by Mrs. J. A Fraser, of Elizabeth; for young people, Mrs. Adrian Lyon, of Perth Amboy, reported; report on the work among freedmen was submitted by Miss Ella Beale, of Roselle; the literary secretary's report by Miss Meeker, of Elizabeth; the treasurer's report by Mrs. J. E. Kerns, of Elizabeth. An address on "Freedmen" was delivered by Mrs. Stover, of Pitesburg.

In the afternoon, a report on the conference on young people's work was presented by Mrs. Lyon. An address on "Alaska," by Rev. J. W. Kirk, of that territory, and one on "The Field" by Miss Petrie, of this city, were the other features of the afternoon session.

STORY IN CURRENT NUMBER OF POPULAR MAGAZINE BY LOCAL WRITER.

"The Forelock of Opportunity," is the subject of a quaint and picturesque short story of an artist's surprising adventure in Flanders, appearing in the April number of Metropolitan magazine, from the pen of George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place. The contribution, which is illustrated by the author, has a peculiar interest, especially to lovers of short stories.

It tells of the adventures of an artist who has many exciting experiences while seeking a valuable piece of antique iron work, which he accidently discovered, and for which he paid a fabulous price. The relic caused the artist no end of trouble, making him lose his steamer for home, with the final result of being obliged to give up his find. In compensation he received what he paid for it and arrangements were made for his passage on another steamer.

HAD $1,200 WORTH OF BOOTY

WALER DISPOSED OF STOLEN GOODS IN PHILADELPHIA.

The value of the property recovered by County Detective Totten, of Somerville, from "Jack" Waler is said to approach $1,200. Some of the jewelry and valuables were found among Waler's effects and others from women with whom he associated and in pawn shops.

Waler, it is said, posed as a Southerner of means. A number of pawn tickets were found on him at the time of his arrest which showed that he was in the habit of disposing of goods in Philadelphia. It is said he will probably plead guilty and that he has already made something of a confession to Totten.

It is alleged that Waller has operased principally in the West though claiming Richmond, Va., as his home. He is known to have arrived from the West in Allentown, Pa., this winter, whence he drifted to this city.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

CUPID FOUND A WAY.

INDIAN ROMANCE ENDS IN AN UP TO DATE ELOPEMENT.

Chief Red Fox and Pretty Ball Woman Surprise Their Folks—Railroad Men Help Dusky Couple Along.

Cupid's darts never sped truer to the mark than did the shaft sent by Chief Red Fox, of Lame Deer Indian agency, Montana, when he drew a bead on Ball Woman, the pretty Pottawatomie squaw with whom he eloped from Indian territory. He met her at the Cheyenne frontier day festivities.

They were both at the Union depot in Denver the other night, chief and squaw, happy as eloping lovers can be. They had a section in a Pullman over the Burlington out of Denver, for Chief Red Fox is a sly old Reynard and has valuable ponies on a wide stretch of hills in Montana. He was paying his way with a lavish prodigality, and the section the two occupied was provided with nuts, candy and fancy pieces of gayly colored cloth which he had bought en route for his pretty squaw wife.

The Denver Republican says that many passengers were amazed to see an Indian traveling first-class. When Indians travel they have to bear credentials. Uncle Sam does not allow them to roam at will from the reservation. Chief Red Fox was equipped with a passport from Agent Clifford, of the Lame Deer agency in Montana, which said he left that place a month ago to pay a "friendly visit" to the Pottawatomie reservation, in Indian territory.

Ball Woman had a passport, too. Hers was signed by Agent John H. Seger, of the Pottawatomie reservation, in Indian territory, and was only good for 60 days. This passport was secured upon the representation that she was merely going to the Lame Deer agency on a visit. But as soon as she was safely on the way she was joined by Chief Red Fox, and the two were married in Wichita, Kan.

Chief Red Fox was unsuccessful in his open and above board wooing of Ball

RED FOX PAID HIS WAY.

Woman, for the reason that she is an heiress and her title to an immense stretch of land in Illinois is still in the courts. The chief of her tribe used what influence he had to break off the match, and as a result of his interference Chief Red Fox and Ball Woman planned an elopement, which was carried out fully as well as the romances of their pale face brothers and sisters who skip by the light of the moon.

Joe Bush, one of the best known Indians in the middle west, was the father of Ball Woman, and through him descended to her whatever title to lands in Illinois her grandfather, Shawbenee, died possessed of.

The Indians had two modern suit cases in which they packed their belongings.

Their dress was a combination of the picturesque costumes of the nomads of the plains and of that of the civilized Indians. Chief Red Fox wore "citizen's clothes" and had a broad sombrero to distinguish him from other passengers. His hair was cut short and his feet were encased in shoes. His bride wore moccasins, small and ornamented with beads. She wore a Navajo blanket and there was little to distinguish her from the border savage. Yet inside the blanket her dress was that of the civilized woman. She wore the blanket and moccasins merely as a traveling costume. She was educated in the Indian school on the reservation.

Whether the government will take steps to stop the runaway couple is not known. Their passports are regular and the railroad men who knew they were eloping were apparently anxious to see them get to their destination in safety.

Put Their Wives in Pawn.

Wives and daughters are utilized in a curious way in some parts of India. If a man wants money he puts these members of his establishment in pawn, and his creditor detains them until the debt is discharged. The custom varies in different localities. In Malore the Yercalls pledge their daughters to creditors who may either marry or give them away, and a man who has to go to jail deposits his wife with another family of her tribe until his return. In North Arcot unmarried daughters are frequently mortgaged and become the absolute property of the holder until liquidation.

The Joy of Pole Chasing.

Commander Peary, the Artic explorer, was asked to account for the enduring enthusiasm for pole chasing. "Because," he sententiously answered, "it is full of the pleasure and anticipation, unmarred by the disappointment of realization."

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

TABLEAUX A FEATURE OF ENTERTAINMENT AT ALL SOULS' CHURCH.

Under the auspices of the Unity League of All Souls' church an entertainment was given in the church, Thursday, consisting of an imaginary magazine, pictured in a series of tableaux. First the cover was represented, then the advertisements and then one of the stories. The presentation was both clever and amusing. Those who took part in these tableaux were Miss Edna Nicholl, Miss Mabel Powell, Miss Stephanie Krom, Miss Laura Walker, Frank Thompson and Henry Wells.

An after-piece, entitled "A Strike in the Nursery," was given by Cora Bender, Osgood Sewall and Mildred McAuliffee. Following the entertainment there was chafing dish refreshments and a social time. Howard Riley was chairman of the committee in charge. There were nearly fifty persons present and the affair was an entire success.

LEE MENTIONED FOR OFFICE

HIS NAME BEING CONNECTED WITH THE TAX COLLECTORSHIP.

Councilman Robert Lee is mentioned for the office of tax collector in the event of Frank H. Smith's election as first registrar of deeds. It is said that Collector Smith can have the registrar nomination if he wants it.

It was said this morning by one of the prominent Republican workers that none of the leaders had spoken in favor of Mr. Lee yet in connection with the possible vacancy. Collector Smith said the same thing. In reply to a question put by a reporter, he said he would like to be the registrar of deeds, but that as far as he was concerned the matter of the nomination was far from being fixed.

"I would accept the nomination if offered to me, if the conditions were right. I would not consent to go up as a target for Link's friends in Elizabeth and Rahway."

Collector Smith said Councilman Lee would make a fine collector.

"He is energetic, has a lot of push, and has clerical training."

James F. Buckle, former president of the Council, also said that Mr. Lee would be a good collector.

HOPE CHAPEL WOMEN MEET

MRS. LAWRENCE R. HOWARD PRESIDENT OF CHAPEL ORGANIZATION.

At the annual meeting of the Hope Chapel Women's Home Mission Society Thursday afternoon the following officers were elected:

President, Mrs. L. R. Howard; vice president, Mrs. Struthers; secretary, Mrs. George Radford; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Brown.

Excellent and encouraging reports were handed in by the treasurer and secretary. More than the usual sum was expended for mission work by the society during the year and the membership increased by eight. It was voted to change the meeting day from the last Thursday in the month to the last Wednesday.

Mrs. Gildersleeve, president of the Women's Home Mission Society of the Presbytery, delivered an address on "Home Mission Work." She dwelt particularly on the labors of the missionaries in Alaska and among the Indians.

Refreshments were served after the session.

THOMAS STEVENS WED.

Miss Helen Ponton the Bride at a Marriage on March 9.

Announcement has just been made of the marriage of Miss Helen Ponton, of Park avenue, and Thomas Stevens, of East Fourth street, the event being celebrated on Wednesday, March 9. The marriage was performed by Rev. Dr. Parks, formerly pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, at his home in the Plains.

The bride is a native of Scotland. She came to this country two years ago and has since lived in this city. The groom has been a resident of Plainfield all his life. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will continue to reside here.

—Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Linbarger, of North avenue, have leased a flat in the Stillman building on West Front street.

DIRECTS JAPAN'S ARMY.

Field Marshal Yamagata, Chief of the Mikado's Supreme Council of War.

The generals who are leading the Japanese armies against Russia are men who have proved their skill and efficiency.

The first on the list in order of service is Field Marshal Yamagata, who is not only first in rank, but easily first in the esteem of the Japanese public and in the judgment of the government. He is a veteran of many wars, having begun service in the struggle that restored the emperor to power in 1868. In the following year he visited Russia and France studying things military. In 1872 he became assistant secretary of war—a position which in Japan is always held by a general officer of the army. In the following year he was made lieutenant general, and two years later secretary of war.

The next year saw Japan in the FIELD MARSHAL YAMAGATA.

(Chief of the Japanese Supreme Council of War.)

throes of a fierce civil war. The rebellion was led by her greatest soldier, Field Marshal Saigo, who had with him some 50,000 of her best-trained samurai. The government was compelled to put forth its greatest strength. An imperial prince was appointed to the nominal command, but as chief of staff Yamagata was the real general in chief and led the forces which crushed the rebellion.

When war started with China in 1894 Yamagata was immediately given command of the first army that invaded Manchuria. Those who were with the army at the time describe the immense enthusiasm with which his coming was greeted by his soldiers.

After the war Yamagata was made a marquis and the new military rank of field marshal was established to which he was promoted. The active interference of Russia, which deprived Japan of the fruits of victory, led the government to try to come to some understanding that would preserve the independence of Corea. Yamagata was appointed special ambassador for this purpose and proceeded to St. Petersburg, where he effected the treaty which is the basis of Japan's latest demands upon Russia. Not trusting altogether to this, Japan proceeded to double her army and greatly increase her navy. These efforts were promoted to the rank of field marshal in the army and an equal rank in the navy and organized into a supreme council of war.

Of this Yamagata was made chief, a position which he still holds. Considering the season of the year and the fact that he is over 65 years old and rather frail physically, it is improbable that he will take the field in person, but in any case he will occupy much the same place in that war that Von Moltke did in the Franco-Prussian war.

LIFE-SAVING MASK.

It Prevents Shipwrecked Persons from Swallowing Salt Water and Contains a Whistler.

A German inventor has decided that many persons come to their death through drowning at sea, even though they are able to swim or are prevented from sinking by the wearing of life belts. He maintains that the deaths are due to the fact that the waves breaking over the wearer force salt water into the mouth and nose, often resulting fatally to the victim. To eliminate this danger he has invented a life-saving mask, preferably made of some elastic material, as, for instance, rubber, shaped to conform to the modeling of the face. In the lower portion of the mask are openings covered with wire netting to reduce the water pressure, and prevent its ready entrance into the interior of the mask. Short tubes inside fever these orifices, and are provided with a hollow ball-valve adapted to automatically close the orifices against the entrance of water, without restricting the freedom of breathing. A whistle is provided to enable the wearer to signal when desired.

THE LIFE-SAVING MASK.

FIRST BAPTISTS IN ANNUAL SESSION

Congregation Elects Deacons and Hears Statements of Church Work.

REPORTS ENCOURAGING

BENEFICIENT FUND RECEIPTS $2,675 IN TWELVE MONTHS.

Rev. Dr. Chambliss Acts as Moderator—Dr. J. B. Probasco Reports for the Poor Fund Committee.

Considerable business of interest to the members of the First Baptist church was transacted at the annual meeting held March 23. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, occupied the chair as moderator, and O. B. Leonard, church clerk, acted in his capacity. There was a large attendance of members to listen to the various reports and take part in the general business.

Clarence S. Johnson, formerly of this city, and a member of the church, was given a letter of dismissal to the Baptist church, of Roselle, where he is now living, and two members of the Baptist church at Doylestown, Pa., were received by letter. Miss Mary Thicksten was re-elected a manager for the Baptist Home for the Aged at Roseville.

The terms of George F. Brown, George H. Batchelor and L. W. Randolph, as deacons, having expired, they were all re-elected for a term of five years. O. B. Leonard, treasurer of the beneficent committee, reported receipts of $3,675.95 for the year and a present balance of $6.45, the difference having been expended in support of foreign missions, the Salvation Army, Home for the Aged and various other worthy objects.

Samuel Case reported for the Sunday-school. He stated that the receipts for the year were $1,113.03, all of which has been expended with the exception of $179, the present balance. N. Douglass Drake, the new president of the Christian Endeavor Society, presented an interesting report, showing what the various commitees have been doing. The membership is sixty-one, all but ten being active.

L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the East Third Street chapel, presented his report, showing a membership of 140 in the Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 90. During the year the aggregate attendance at the Sunday night meetings was 2,941 and 1,348 at the mid-week prayer meeting. The receipts for the year were $653.05 and the balance in the treasury is $14.21.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson gave a report for the Young Ladies' Missionary Society. During the year there was raised $257.75 and $109.93 disbursed, leaving a balance of $147.82. The report for the Temple Builders, given by R. W. Barnes, treasurer, showed total receipts of $128.49 and a balance of $28.49. The difference was contributed to mission enterprise.

Dr. J. B. Probasco gave the report of the poor fund, showing total receipts of $452.96, disbursements of $309.40 and a balance of $243.46. The accounts were audited and approved by L. H. Bigiow, Jr., and T. S. Armstrong.

Following the business meeting five persons were received from the East Third Street chapel for membership, after baptism.

SONS OF OLD NASSAU MEET

PRINCETON MEN OF UNION COUNTY HOLD ANNUAL DINNER.

Princeton spirit effervesced last Thursday at the annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Union County in the Royal Arcanum Hall at Elizabeth. About fifty loyal sons of old Nassau gathered about the boards and in song and story reminded each other of old college days.

Dr. William H. Murray, of this city, presided at the dinner and Joseph Cross occupied the president's chair, with Harry Munger, of this city, in vice president's position. Conover English, secretary, and McCready Sykes occupied other positions of honor. James R. Joy, of this city, represented Yale alumni at the dinner and Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, Williams alumni. Dean Andrew F. West represented the university and told of Princeton's progress during the past year.

Among the local Princeton alumni present were Dr. William H. Murray, James Murray, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Harry Munger, J. W. Shellabarger, James Blake, Harry Woltmann, Orville Waring, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Dr. D. Hedges, Knox Taylor, Duncan Taylor, and Dr. F. W. Brakeley, of Dunellen.

PYTHIANS OBSERVE THEIR ANNIVERSARY

Unity Lodge Holds Celebration to Mark Its Twenty-One Years of Existence.

LILLIPUTIANS THERE

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE LAIBLE AMONG THOSE TAKING PART.

Knights of Columbus Hall Was Crowded—Good Programme—Refreshments and Speeches—The Committee in Charge.

The twenty-first anniversary of Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., was observed in the new lodge rooms in Knights of Columbus Hall, Thursday, in a manner appropriate to its attaining its majority. A programme of excellence was prepared by a committee and for over an hour the members, their wives, sisters and sweethearts, as well as friends, were entertained.

Orchestral music by a trio, Messrs. Gomes, Smith and Cuttle, discovered popular selections throughout the evening, after opening the programme with the "Knights of Pythias March." There were vocal selections by the Apollo quartette, of Westfield, composed of Messrs. L. Reger, H. Johnston, A. Stokey and G. VanBuskirk. They gave "The Old Oaken Bucket," "Robin Adair," and other familiar songs of old-time popularity.

Perhaps one of the most enjoyable features of the programme was the appearance of Add Hayt, of New York, who gave humorous selections, including many funny stories and not a few of the latest songs. His witticisms provoked hearty laughter and he was recalled several times. Assisting him on the piano was City Judge William N. Runyon, whose accompaniment added to the pleasure.

Another feature was the first public appearance of the Har Moni Cajew Sharp orchestra, composed of Messrs. William N. Runyon, Jeremiah VanWinkle, Jr., A. D. Pope, Ephraim Compton and Frank Putnam. The orchestra gave several selections from well-known composers, eliciting much applause.

The programme was concluded with a domestic sketch by Mr. and Mrs. George Laible, the Lilliputians, who recently returned to their home in Dunellen from a successful trip through the country. Their sketch was exceedingly funny and included both solos, duets and dialogue parts.

After the entertainment all were invited to the banquet room, where a repast was served under the direction of the committee in charge, consisting of Frank Putnam, chairman; H. J. Martin, H. E. Humpston, J. W. A. Bauernachs, William A. Dow.

Unity Lodge is one of the most prosperous secret organizations in the city. It was organized twenty one years ago and ever since has continued to grow until today it ranks among the leading societies not only in the city, but the State, and is recognized as an influential body in the Grand Lodge.

LODGE RECEIVES PRESENTS

INDIAN RELICS ARE GIVEN TO WETUMPKAH TRIBE, I. O. R. M.

Dr. Merriman's Indian relics were presented to Wetumpkah Tribe of Red Men at a special public entertainment Thursday. The collection included many valuable arrow heads, flints, necklaces and so forth, some of which could not easily be duplicated. Dr. Merriman claims that the relics were handed down from generations of his Indian ancestors. In behalf of the tribe, Richard Ogland accepted the gift and presented the Doctor with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

A speech was made by Robert Humphrey, and a song and talk given by James Clark. A. E. Willard did musical stunts, the Aeolian quartette, of Garwood, sang, Miss Edgar, of Westfield, performed at the piano, and David Dreier rendered violin selections.

The meeting was attended by delegations from Miantenomo and the tribes of Westfield and Roselle. There were many women friends of the order present. John Clark, A. E. Willard and Richard Scott formed the committee in charge of the entertainment.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. William Gaddis, of Regent street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Grace E. Gaddis, to Robert L. Guttridge, of South avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, have returned from a pleasure trip to the Bahama Islands.

WM. L. SAUNDERS IS NOW PRESIDENT

Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Co.'s Directors Elect North Plainfielder to Succeed Mr. Grace.

AN ACTIVE CAREER

FORMER MAYOR OF BOROUGH OF NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Responsible for Great Growth of Concern of Which He Will be the Head—Formerly Vice President of Company.

By the unanimous vote of the directors, William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, was elected president of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company Thursday afternoon. He succeeds former Mayor William R. Grace, New York's Democrat and financier, who died last week.

Mr. Saunders was the logical choice for the place. He has been connected with the big corporation for twenty-two years, for seventeen of which he has been highly prominent in its workings.

He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania as a mining engineer, at the age of twenty, in 1876. In 1883 he entered the employ of the Drill Company. He rose rapidly in the corporation, and in 1887 was on the board of directors as secretary of the company. Ten years later he was vice president, the position he filled at the time Mr. Grace died.

As president of the concern, Mr. Saunders has full and direct control of the vast selling department of the corporation. The vacancy among the vice presidents created by his promotion was filled by the election of George R. Elder, manager of the manufacturing department.

In North Plainfield the new head of the great company is known as exmayor and an active leader among the Washington Park Democrats. He takes an active interest in public questions, and fought for annexation and the establishment of a sewage disposal plant. He is promiment in the Park Club and the social life of the borough.

PLAN FOR PICNIC GROUND

SCHEME TO ESTABLISH AMUSEMENT RESORT AT SOMERSET ST. TERMINUS.

With the purchase of the Middlesex County suburban lines, and other general moves in the line of advancement and enlargement, by the P. S. C. has come the revival of a plan for the establishment of an amusement park at the end of the Somerset street trolley line. This scheme was broached by James Sutherland, of New York, last year, when the rumors of the big deals that the P. S. C. afterwards made began the rounds of the papers, but the idea came a little too late in the season for execution.

Mr. Sutherland is one of the men who have made money out of Coney Island attractions for a number of years, and at one time was prominent in the Surf A. C., where some big prize fights were pulled off. He ought to know a good scheme of the kind when he gets one, and he is sure that a picnic resort within a very short distance of Plainfield would pay. He is certain that the P. S. C., anxious to increase its receipts as far as possible, to carry some of the immense issues of stock, will meet him more than half way in bringing the scheme to fruition.

It is Mr. Sutherland's idea to conduct the resort on clean lines, rigidly excluding everything of an objectionable nature. There will be swings, a merry-go-round, a dairy restaurant, a band, and other simple attractions of that character. Tables will be placed plentifully about the grounds, for the accommodation of basket parties. The band would play all day, and give concerts every night.

Changes in Residence.

Among some of the recent residential changes in this city are these: John Hummer, from 1077 Arlington avenue to 521 Somerset street; Walter Webb, from 535 East Sixth street, to 522 West Second street; Joseph Dennis, from 331 Cottage place, to 515 East Sixth street; F. E. Quinn, from Codington avenue, to Westfield.

There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied direct to the affected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York, will mail it.

Mrs. P. V. R. VanWyck, of Shelle avenue, is among the Plainfielders at Atlantic City.

April 2: "Our Victories Through Christ."—2 Cor. xv, 50-58. (Easter Meeting.)

One shadow lies athwart the path of every one, however we may differ in other matters. Somewhere life ends. Beyond that point no inquiry reveals an item of our individual future. What lies beyond is of utmost interest to us. What shall I be and where? What may I know and do? What may I see and hear? These are questions holding vast possibilities of happiness or misery for each. Much could be endured and much attempted, much achieved here in life if only once we were assured the result would be worth the exertion. But that shadow chills to the bone like damp sea fog.

We are mortal! We cannot escape dying! Let us face the fact bravely. It were better to recognize its full import than to ignore it. 'Tis neither wise nor brave to close our eyes to so important a fact. We need to know its full import and find the best way to meet it.

We are mortal! What if we might somehow attain immortality? That point is impossible of attainment. But we are corruptible also. Worse still, we are actually corrupted, and, worst of all, we have done the work ourselves. We have chosen the evil and have become corrupt. We have chosen the sin and have done the wrong. We are conscious of ill deserving and of a nature impure. Body and spirit share in this corruption of nature. Physical senses and bodily appetites rule the life to such an extent that the spirit is in bondage to the sensuous until we become sensual in large degree instead of spiritual by the subordination of all powers to the sway of the law of holiness and right reason.

The only hope lies in Jesus Christ. He has ended this life completely. All its temptations assailed Him and He overcame them. He suffered and learned obedience. He submitted and accomplished all righteousness. He shunned no hardship, claimed no favors, but such as is the lot of common man He shared fully. There is no unexplored experiences in the path of the race. Whatever sort of difficulty any man must meet He has met and conquered.

The dread mysteriousness of death He has explored. What shrinking He may have had in His most sensitive nature from this ordeal of death no one can know. Perfect as was His command of the powers of life one would think the more would the prospect of cessation of life be dreaded.

But He was victorious over this the last and greatest enemy of man. Out from death He brought resurrection and became "the first fruits of them that are asleep." This is the consummation of all human history. All the goal toward which in all its past this earth has been tending. Easter is the birthday of a new race in glorified manhood. Jesus has been declared "Son of God with power" by this raising from death. He has lifted the shadow from the pathway, and where we shrank in terror we now press forward with eager expectancy. As He said, "Father, Thy will be done!" so we follow after and "count not our lives dear unto ourselves so only that we may finish our course with joy."

We have hope of blessed immortality because He has found the way and opened the path for us. But "every one who hath this hope in Him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." By the Holy Spirit we must be cleansed now and here from filthiness of flesh and spirit and put on soul purity; then we will be given new bodies in that day.

A Day With God.

The hour of morning communion adjusts the soul's compass for the new day's voyage. Throughout the busy day the sails of life are set to catch the trade winds of the Spirit. And at night, when the anchor rattles out, the tired eyes close to the music of sweet echoes of angelic hymns. Prayer at its highest thus links earth to heaven in constant communion. Man turns to God in penitent adoration; God pours of His own fullness into the receptive heart. How can our helplessness go through a single day without such reenforcement of life at its source? "Thou restorest my soul." The victories of faith are won first upon our knees.—Rev. Edward M. Noyes.

Maxims Suggesting Methods.

We never say to any sinner, Go! and be goeth to Christ.

It is not more blessed for another to be allowed to give to you than you to him.

Why do we call it the hour of prayer when it is really less than five minutes?

The subtle music of a great soul in any voice is the vocal training heaven gives.

Too much sunshine on the young plant is sure to wither it, but so also too much chill.—Christian Standard.

God's Mercies.

Few Christians have any idea how great is the multitude of God's mercies until something arouses them to count up their causes for thanksgiving. Count your mercies. It will do you good to count up your thanksgiving columns.—Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

High Models.

Set before you high models. Try to live with the most generous, and to observe their deeds. Be content, yet aspire; that should be the faith of all, and the two are quite compatible.—Frederick W. Robertson.

A New and Noble Life.

Fling wide the portals of your heart;
Make it a temple set apart
From earthly use for heaven's employ,
Adorned with prayer and love and joy.
So shall your Sovereign enter in
And new and noble life begin.—Whittier.

THE RIVAL FLEETS

A Glance at the Sea Power of Russia and Japan.

Mere Figures Place Them About Equal in Naval Fighting Strength, But the Mikado Has the Best in Many Ways.

It is no exaggeration to say that everybody's attention is being concentrated just now on the fighting value of the Russian and Japanese fleets in the far east. Ship for ship, there is perhaps not so much to choose between the two navies. Mere numbers, however, are not everything in maritime warfare—discipline, training, men, guns, armorplating, speed and coal endurance together with a host of other factors bearing on the ultimate issue of any struggle for sea supremacy have to be taken into consideration as well. In all of these the advantage is distinctly on the side of Japan. Thus, while the displacement of the seven battleships belonging to Russia and under the orders of Admiral Alexeieff at Port Arthur is 83,650 tons, that of the six Japanese battleships in the same waters is 84,950 tons. Then the gun protection of the former is less by at least one-third than that of the latter, while they also steam a knot slower than the Japanese. Altogether, as far as battleships are concerned, Admiral Togo (who commands the mikado's fleet) has not much to fear at the hands of Admiral Alexeieff (representing the czar). With regard to armament, he can rely upon 24 12-inch guns, whereas his potential enemy has four guns fewer of the same caliber. His six-inch armament, however, is inferior. In armored and protected cruisers, together with destroyers and torpedo boats, Japan has the advantage all the way round.

The principal Russian vessels of each class in the far east are the Caesarvitch, Retvisan and Peresviet (battleships); the Gromoboi and Rossia (armored cruisers); and the Bogatyr, Askold and Variag (unprotected cruisers). The first-named vessel was built at La Seyne, as was also one of her cruisers, while the Retvisan was launched at Philadelphia. The Caesarvitch, which has only recently arrived at Port Arthur, has a normal speed of 18 knots, and her guns enable her to throw a total weight of 3,516 pounds. The next heaviest broadside is that of the Peresviet, 2,622 pounds, but her armor plating is not considered satisfactory. This drawback also attaches to the majority of Russia's cruisers. Another circumstance that tends seriously to diminish the efficiency of the fleet in a combined action is that several of her bigger battleships have their guns arranged in a different fashion.

Some of the cruisers which Admiral Alexeieff is supposed to have at his disposal are at Vladivostock, where they are likely to be ice-bound for some time, and others at Chemulpo, Newchwang, and elsewhere, instead of being at Port Arthur. As, however, there are no docks suitable for their accommodation at the last-named place their absence is a matter of necessity.

Admiral Alexeieff, who is now looming largely in the public eye, has an extensive naval command of the far east and as a diplomatist. The expansion of Russia across Asia has been his fond endeavor for years past. A great impetus was given his ambition by the result of the Boxer rising of 1900. At one time he commanded at Vladivostock, being subsequently transferred—first, to the Russian Pacific squadron, and secondly, to the governorship of Manchuria. He may now be regarded as viceroy for the czar in the far east.

The actual command of the Japanese fleet is Vice Admiral Togo, an officer who, it is interesting to note, was at one time a cadet on board the British ship Worcester. Two of the vessels at his disposal, the Chin Yuen and the Hei-Yen, were captured by Japan from China during the late war. They are not particularly valuable assets, however, as one of them is 24 years old and the other 26. The coal capacity of the latter is also very inferior. Practically all Admiral Togo's other ships, however, are quite equal to any that Russia can range against them. The principal among them have been launched since 1898, and are quite in accordance with modern requirements. Of the first-class men of war, ten were built in England, one in France and one in Germany.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 3.

Topic.—Our victories through Christ.—I Cor. xv, 50-58. (Easter meeting.)

Approaching the end of His life, Jesus said to His disciples, "In the world ye have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." The inference is that since He has overcome they also can and will overcome. And this inference is correct. Christianity is a triumphant, a victorious, religion. Not only did its Head and Founder overcome, but His followers in all ages have possessed the same power and do still today. Through Christ we may be victorious over adversity, tribulation, bereavement, sin and death.

The victories especially referred to in connection with this Easter meeting are those over death and its accompanying terrors. Life is a continuous battle, but it is not fatal to the human race is death. "There is no discharge in that war," and it is looked upon with dread by the vast majority of mankind. But the child of God in Christ becomes triumphant even over this enemy and can say, "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

1. Christ gives us victory over the sting of death. Death has a sting. We do not like to think of the end of life. Life is sweet, and we fondly cling to it, finding it unpleasant to contemplate the separation from loved ones, friends and the things of life that we have loved. But, while this is true, we must sometimes consider death, and when the thought enters into our minds it carries the sting with it, and "the sting of death is sin." If we had never sinned, death would have no sting, but the law tells us of our sins, and then the thought of the future has its sting. But Christ takes the guilt of sin from us and in so doing removes the sting of sin, so that we can victoriously exclaim, "O death, where is thy sting?"

Victory through Christ! He alone has overcome the last enemy of mankind, and through Him alone can we triumph. Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." Well may we thank God for this victory of victories—victory over the fear of death, victory over the sting of death, victory over death itself! "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory."

BIBLE READINGS.

Job xix, 25, 26; Ps. xvii, 15; Dan. xii, 1-3; Matt. xxii, 31, 32; Luke xiv, 1-14; xxiv, 1-12; John v, 28, 29; Rom. vi, 1-11; I Cor. xv, 12-20; Col. iii, 1-10; I Pet. i, 1-9; I John iii, 1-3.

Dr. Bartholomew's Timely Words.

In accepting the presidency of the Pennsylvania state union, to which he was recently elected, Rev. Dr. Allen R. Bartholomew of Philadelphia wrote these timely words:

"Dr. Clark's triple watchwords for advance work are: Organize, vitalize, evangelize. May I add a fourth, liberalize, and place it first in order so that the words will form an acrostic and spell the word love, which sums up our whole duty to God and man? Liberalize, organize, vitalize, evangelize.

"Yes, we need to press the Christian Endeavor work in love until every congregation and every society will say to the young may be taught that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation he that feareth Him, believeth on Him and liveth for Him is a child of love and an heir of heaven. By its interdenominational character the Christian Endeavor society is helping to answer the prayer of our Lord when He said, 'That they may all be one, even as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they also may be in us, that the world may believe that Thou didst send Me.' In the conventions and rallies held everywhere Christian Endeavorers are brought face to face with the members of all Protestant denominations who belong to the one fold into which the Great Shepherd is waiting to gather all His saints in warfare. May the golden chain of Christian Endeavor bind our hearts with the sacred tie of a common brotherhood and thus prepare us for the perfect communion of the saints in heaven!"

Mr. Roosevelt's Good Wishes.

Through the Golden Rule I wish all good fortune to the hundreds of thousands of young people whose membership in the Christian Endeavor societies ought to and, I firmly believe, will confer such lasting benefits on this country. I trust they will remember that in order to be good men and women they must be good citizens and that they must work hard for good politics, bearing in mind that the corruptionist and the demagogue, the selfish man who tries to swindle his fellows for his own benefit and the no less selfish man who tries to arouse a spirit of hatred and dissension by an appeal to envy and the portrayal of fancied injuries should alike receive the reprobation of those who desire decency in our political life.—Theodore Roosevelt, When Police Commissioner of New York city.

CHURCH'S LAST RITE OVER FATHER MORRIS

Great Throng Fill St. Mary's Church, at Avondale, While Priests Celebrate Mass.

FATHER EGAN THERE

VICAR-GENERAL AND CHANCELLOR PAY TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD.

Quartette From St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark—Sermon by Father Kelly, of Hoboken—Interment in Paterson.

The remains of Rev. John P. Morris, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church at Nutley, and formerly pastor of St. Mary's church in this city, were laid to rest Wednesday, March 23, in the Cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre, in Paterson, after ceremonies at the church that were attended by many of the clergy of the diocese, members of the congregation, a goodly representation of towns-people of other than the faith, and visitors from this city and neighboring places.

At the close of the church services the crowd that overflowed the little edifice was allowed to view the body, which was on a bier at the head of the centre aisle and at the entrance to the sanctuary. It was in a casket covered with black velvet, with silver bars and plate. The departed pastor was robed in the vestments worn at the mass.

Among the parishioners who slowly filed up the aisle to take their last look at the face of the rector whom they loved so well there was many a tear dimmed eye. On the outside they waited with bowed heads while the casket was borne to the Avondale Station of the Erie Railroad, close by, from which it was taken to the Silk City by train. The members of St. Mary's Lyceum acted as an escort, and many of the congregation also accompanied the remains to the cemetery.

The services began with the chanting of the office for the dead by Rev. M. A. McManus, of St. Aloysius's church, of Newark, and Rev. Andrew M. Egan, of St. Mary's, of this city. The responses were made by the priests, who occupied places within the chancel rail.

The celebrant of the mass was Rev. Dean McNulty, of Paterson; the deacon was Rev. Patrick Cody, of St. James's church, of Newark. Rev. Frank O'Neil, of St. Mary's, Elizabeth, acted as sub-deacon; Rev. Monsignor Sheppard, the vicar-general of the diocese, and Rev. Thomas A. Wallace, the chancellor, were among the priests who occupied places of honor. Many of the other priests of the diocese who were expected to attend were unable to do so, as they had previously made arrangements to be present at the funeral of Rev. Edward Hart at Jersey City, which also took place yesterday morning.

A quartette from St. Patrick's Cathedral, of Newark, sang Madonna's requiem mass. It was composed of Mrs. Sarah Martin-Gribbin, soprano; Miss Clara Scanlon, contralto; Emil G. Zeb, tenor, and William Thompson, basso. Professor W. H. Hattersley presided at the organ.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Charles A. Kelly, of the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken. He paid an eloquent tribute to the life work of Father Morris.

The body was removed late Tuesday afternoon from the residence of Father Morris's niece, Mrs. Etienne Le Bel, on Walnut street, to the church. At 7 o'clock the doors were opened, and from that time until they closed at 10, there was a steady stream of visitors, who paid their last respects to the pastor. The members of the lyceum formed the guard of honor that watched at the side of the bier until the hour for yesterday morning's services.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thom, of Summit avenue, announces the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rebecca Thom, to George L. Bird, of West Second street.

Mrs. Hooley's Purchase.

Mrs. Hooley, mother of Abram and E. S. Hooley, of North Plainfield, has purchased one of Frank Brown's houses on Sycamore avenue, and will make her home there in the future.

Suit Over Castings.

In the case of the Graphite Metal Company against Charles F. Fullmer, tried before Judge Tuscey at Westfield, Thursday, the jury returned a verdict of $65.12 for the plaintiff.

Cottilion at Casino.

The next and last cottilion at the Casino, Monday night, April 4, will be noted for a variety of music. A stringed orchestra and VanEps' banjo orchestra will play alternately during the evening.

FROST LIFTED UP TOPS OF STREETS

Phenomenon Brought About by the Rigorous Winter Weather.

EXPLAINS EARTHQUAKE

THE STREET DEPARTMENT MAKES INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

One Thoroughfare Lifted Up Four Inches—Manhole and Flush Tank Wrecked—The Foundations Wobbled About.

When the earthquake question was agitating the city last winter, at the time a tremor was felt early one morning, a fugitive suggestion that the shake might have been the effect of frost in the ground was thrown out. Nobody paid much attention to it, but since then the street department has come across a lot of evidence that points to that theory of the shock as the true one.

Not long after the shock was felt Street Commissioner Gavett's men discovered that water was pouring into the manhole at Sixth and Leland avenues, through a breach in the brickwork three feet below the surface of the street. The gap was four inches high all around. It was thought at the time that some of the brickwork had fallen out. The cover of the manhole was flush with the street, and there was no indication anywhere on the surface that anything else had caused the break. The breach was stopped with blocks of wood and burlap to keep out water and gravel, and the street department gave no particular thought to the occurrence.

About a month ago the manhole caved in. The top of the manhole was left sticking about four inches in the air, and the department experts only took a short time to discover that the manhole had been broken by the lifting action of the intense cold in the ground.

Apparently, the whole surface of the street, as far as could be seen, had been lifted four inches above the normal level by the frost. There were no surface breaks anywhere, and in the opinion of the street commissioner there is scarcely any doubt that the top of the earth at that particular place rose up something like the crust of a loaf of bread. There is a lot of water that runs down the gutter of Leland avenue, and when the rise occurred, with the consequent break in the manhole, the water was diverted below ground and into the hole. The whole manhole will have to be rebuilt from the breach up.

There is no telling how many other street sept up in the air from the same cause. Probably a good many of them, all over the city, and that frost-heave would undoubtedly give the general effect of an earthquake. In extremely cold countries, like northern New England, surveyors and other outdoor workers have frequently heard the earth crack with loud report and accompanying shock, when the frost was tightening the ground.

One of the city flush tanks, at New and Fifth streets, was burst by the frost action, and many owners of houses on which ells have been built on foundations not quite so low as the main part of the house have reported that the additions give evidence of wobbly experiences during the winter.

NOW THE THREE H'S SUPPLANT THE 3 R'S

Homer J. Wightman Speaks on "The Meaning of a Public School Education Today."

TALKS TO MEN'S CLUB

LACK OF AN EDUCATION THE WORST HANDICAP, HE SAYS.

The Three H's Include the Training of the Head, Hand and Heart — Society's Two Classes.

Some highly interesting addresses have been delivered at the meetings of the Men's Brotherhood, of Grace M. E. church, but probably the most notable ever given before the association was that of Homer J. Wightman, superintendent of the borough schools, Friday night.

Mr. Wightman spoke at length on "The Meaning of a Public School Education Today." His address was full of suggestion and information on the general character of the popular educational idea of the day, and the contrast between it and the old-time schooling was brought out clearly. In substance, Mr. Wightman said:

"There is a vast difference between the schools in which you and I learned to read, write and cipher and the schools of today. There have been great changes from the three R's to the three H's, the education of the head, the hand and the heart. The three R's today form the skeleton of the work of the schools, or rather the back-bone of the work of the schools, or at least in the best schools this is the case. The old school with its limited curriculum turned out a good product. We have examples of it all around us, but will that limited curriculum meet the needs of the coming decade for which the schools are now aiming to prepare? I answer 'no.'

"The world is moving. We cannot go back to the tallow candle and the primitive modes of business and travel of our fathers. We may deplore the rapid strides of this old world of ours, but it will do no good to sit on the tail of progress and shout 'Whoa.' The education that sufficed for you and me is not going to be adequate for your children and mine. The ox-cart no longer sets the pace for commerce, neither can the three R's with a little juiceless geography set the pace for a practical education. The law of the 'survival of the fittest' still holds true. We must prepare for the 'push.' Every new day is the birthday of larger responsibilities. When pupils step from school life into life's school they have got to face these responsibilities and they succeed or fail as they are fit. The lack of an education is the worst handicap that can be placed upon a young man or a young woman who is to become the guide and companion of her children. Childhood must be the time to prepare for manhood and womanhood. 'We might as well go gunning for cannibals that whistled all year in the meadow or the robins that caroled in the sky as to try to fetch down and bag one of the past opportunities of our lives.'

"There are two things in this rapid progress that are to be deplored from the educator's point of view. First: The extravagance of the times. We need plainer food, simpler dress and less bric-a-brac. Many people are living beyond their means. Second: The impatience to achieve. The school of today recognizes that the field of desirable knowledge has so enlarged that say one person can become proficient in only one line. We realize that there is a mass of information that is essential for every field and all fields.

"It is probably better to build castles in the air than simply huts in the mud, but it is better still to be able to build practical buildings on earth. Our knowledge must be in such shape as to be put to practical use. Here is the original cry for the education of the hand. Manual training is no fad. Manual training teaches boys to use tools. That is 'not the chief object.' Manual training teaches boys and girls to be useful. That is not the main object. Manual training teaches them to apply their mathematics in a practical way. That is not the chief purpose. Manual training accomplishes something far more important than these incidental results. Manual training produces habits, habits of exactness, habits of carefulness, habits of persistence—habits that will tell in everything undertaken. Manual training teaches nobility of labor. It is democratic.

"The third H, the training of the heart, is the most important of all. Education makes either a man or a monster. To teach a child to read and not give him a taste for good literature may be a curse. To teach a child to write, if he uses his skill to forge a note or check, may be a curse. To teach him to figure, if he use his knowledge to cheat his neighbor, may be an injury. The intelligent man unless his character is sound, is simply more able to work evil than the unintelligent man. To give the child knowledge without giving him character is enlarging his possibilities for evil as well as for good. Character is the key stone of the educational arch and the whole structure is useless and a failure without it. Character training is the highest aim of the teacher today. It has been said that without a goodly use of the rod, it is impossible to make some boys smart. There are occasional cases where physical force seems for the best, but these cases are very few, and I believe that one of the greatest points of superiority of the modern school over the o'd school is the absence of corporal punishment and the close sympathy between teacher and pupils.

"Society is made up of two classes, the working class and the shirking class. The schools must teach the doctrine that hard work is the only cure for hard luck. With the kindergarten, we can now get hold of some children at the impressionable age of four. This year from four to five tells mightily in all future work of the pupil. Oliver Wendell Holmes, when asked when he should begin to educate the child, replied, 'One hundred years before he is born.'

"There are a great many subsidiary matters connected with the modern school, for which thorough preparation is demanded. Lord Kelvin says, 'Education should be first to earn a living and then to make life worth living.' Some of the things that make life worth living are called the frills of education.

"One of the hardest problems is how to give the most help to the twenty per cent. of pupils who are 'born short' in some particular (especially where we have to deal with such large classes as at present.) These square pegs that will not fit into the round holes require a great deal of thought. Those children who are not furnished with all the conveniences for thinking are hard problems. The education today is being rationalized and made practical so far as the practical will give the right habits and power and adaptability and reasonable breadth. The utilitarian idea, the real bread and butter education is applicable more to high school work where courses today permit of large freedom of choice, so that pupils can follow their interests and natural tendencies. Remember that a food for one will be medicine for another and schools in no sense should be pathological institutions. The high school is a necessity today. What are luxuries in one age are necessities in the next.

"In our own schools of twelve hundred children each with a father and a mother or a step-mother or a guardian to please, it is not one long sweet song. We have to deal with their most precious and sensative possessions. Mark Twain, in a speech in London sometime ago, said that he was coming to this country to run for President of the United States. He was going to purify politics. He said that the policy was that he believed in everything that everybody believed in. That a President who pleased only half the people was only half a President. If this last statement is true, the school superintendent is yet to be found who is a whole superintendent. I have long since given up the idea of pleasing everybody or even anybody. There is but one person that I aim to please and it is impossible to do that satisfactorily. Josh Billings has said that if we wish to please everybody we must travel on the back road. It is beyond the power of mortal. Put your trust in God and aim to please yourself.

"The old school taught subjects. The new school teachers children. The old school made knowledge of first importance. The new school makes character of first importance. The old school made Jonas of the bad boys. They were whaled. The new school reaches these through interest and kindness.

"The school of the future will give more attention to the individual and must train home makers and bread winners without loosing sight of culture."

Before and after Mr. Wightman's address there were musical selections by D. W. Meeker, violin, and Vincent Sokol, piano. The committee in charge of the affair was made up of C. R. Hardsn and D. W. Winkler.

CHAMPIONS DEFEATED HERE

THE PARK CLUB BOWLERS WON FROM WESTFIELD AGGREGATION.

The Westfield Club bowling five visited the Park Club Friday night and rolled a series of games with the Parks. The local team had the satisfaction of taking two out of the three games, even though they failed to win The Daily Press League tournament. The first game they lost by a score of 880 to 850, but the second game they took by a score of 885 to 760 and the third by a score of 883 to 879. The Parks were in good condition and they rolled in championship form. Individually the series was noted for several high scores, some of the members duplicating their scores in the series.

The series does not count for any special tournament, it being a friendly contest between the two clubs, just to show that although Westfield won the tournament, she still has the kindest regards for her worthy opponent, the Parks.

The detail score of the series is as follows:

CHONGJU BATTLE.

CZAR'S TROOPS HAD TO RETIRE

Praise Given Japanese For Pluck and Gallantry.

MANY COSSACKS HORS DE COMBAT

Russian Fleet Reported to Be Maneuvering Near Weihaiwei Preparing to Attack Togo's Squadron—Germany Looking to United States to Take Action at Newchwang, Where French Tricolor Is Now Flying.

LONDON, March 30.—Advices from St. Petersburg say the emperor has received a dispatch from General Kuropatkin giving a lengthy report from General Mishtchenko which says that an important engagement has taken place near the town of Chongju in which the Russians were defeated, retiring in perfect order. His report says:

"For three consecutive days our advance outposts attempted to draw the Japanese cavalry into action, but their patrols, after contact was established, retired beyond Chongju, about fifty miles south west of Pingyang.

"Having learned that four squadrons of Japanese were posted five versts beyond Chongju, six companies of infantry marched toward Kasan, and on reaching Chongju, as our scouts approached the town, the enemy opened fire from behind walls. Two squadrons promptly dismounted and occupied the heights 600 yards distant. An engagement ensued.

"In the town a company of infantry and a squadron of cavalry were lying in ambush. Our men were re-enforced by three companies and attacked the Japanese with a crossfire. Notwithstanding this and our commanding position the Japanese gallantly held their ground, and it was only after a three fight of half an hour's duration that the Japanese ceased fire and sought refuge in the houses. The Japanese hoisted the Red Cross flag at two points.

"Soon afterward three squadrons of the enemy were seen advancing along the Kasan road at full gallop toward the town, which two of the squadrons succeeded in entering, while the third fell back in disorder under repeated volleys from ours. A large number of men and horses were seen to fall.

"For an hour afterward our companies continued to fire on the Japanese in the town, preventing them from leaving the streets and houses.

"At half past 2 o'clock the beginning of the engagement four companies were seen on the Kasan road hastening to attack. I gave the order to mount, and the entire force, with Cossacks and infantry, advanced in perfect order and formed in line behind the hill. The wounded were placed in front, and the retirement was carried out with the deliberation of a parade.

"Our troops occupied a commanding position, but were unable to hold it. The Japanese fought gallantly, but owing to their heavy losses were unable to occupy the position abandoned by our force.

"The Japanese squadron which was thrown into disorder was evidently unable to occupy the hill which we had just evacuated, and their infantry arrived too late.

"The detachment protecting our rear guard retired quietly at Kasan, where we halted for the night in order to give attention to our wounded. At 9 p. m. our force reached Noosan.

"It is supposed that the Japanese had heavy losses in men and horses. On our side we lost nearly three officers were severely wounded—Stepanoff and Androsnke in the chest and Vasilevitch in the stomach. Schlinikoff was less seriously wounded in the arm, but did not leave the field. Three Cossacks were killed, and twelve were wounded, including five seriously.

"General Mistchenko bears witness to the excellent conduct and gallantry of the officers and Cossacks and especially praises the Third company of the Argunsk regiment, commanded by Krasnostanoff."

A Tientsin dispatch says a Frenchman named Kreautiar, an employee of the Russo-Chinese bank, has been appointed French consul-general at Newchwang. He has hoisted the French flag over the bank building. It is considered probable that this is a forerunner of a movement to fly the tricolor over all the Russian government buildings at Newchwang.

A Weihaiwei report says eleven Russian war vessels are reported maneuvering off the coast near Weihaiwei in the vicinity of the Japanese fleet.

The presence of these vessels was made known by a Chinese junk just arrived.

A dispatch from Berlin says the German government has called its consul at Tientsin to proceed to Newchwang and report on the situation there in view of the Russian proclamation of martial law will affect German commercial interests there.

Meanwhile Germany looks to America as play the leading role should diplomatic action, in the way of protest or otherwise, appear to be called for.

It is asserted here that inasmuch as the United States government brought about the localization of the theater of war, to which Russia now declares that Newchwang belongs, it is now up to America as leading power to say how far this position is tenable.

Germany is willing to accept the Russian view, mainly on the ground of the necessities of war and the conviction that Japan would have acted precisely in the same manner in similar circumstances.

A Shanghai report says that almost the whole Japanese army in Korea, consisting of 100,000 men, is concentrated at Pakchen and Anju, only small detachments being left in southern Korea to maintain communications.

A Russian division of 25,000 men from southern Usuri is advancing in two columns through Korea. The main column, coming along the east coast road, reached Pukchang, 180 miles from the Tumen river, and the flanking column, consisting of Cossacks and mountain artillery, coming along the valley of the Tumen river toward its source, has reached the coast of Lake Tadji. This column reports that the Japanese are advancing north from Gensan and that their advance guard is encamped at Chongping.

FIRST SHOTS OF THE WAR.

Russian Officer's Account of First Attempt to Destroy the Koriets.

MUKDEN, March 30.—According to a report received from an officer of the Russian gunboat Korietz, which was destroyed by the Japanese at Chemulpo, his ship technically fired the first shot of the war, but this shot was not fired until after the Japanese had fired three torpedoes in an effort to sink the Korietz.

The officer says that on Feb. 8, without knowing that there had been even a rupture of diplomatic relations, the Koriets left Chemulpo for Port Arthur with dispatches from M. Pavloff, the Russian minister to Korea, and met the Japanese cruiser and torpedo squadron while still in neutral waters. Being unsuspicious, the Koriets steamed between the two divisions of the squadron with the torpedoes still covering her guns when it was noticed that the cruisers were training their guns on the Russian vessel, but it was not until the torpedo boats began to maneuver preparatory to torpedoing that those on board the Koriets became really alarmed. It was then decided to put back into the harbor.

While the Korietz was going about the Japanese launched a torpedo, which passed astern, and then the captain ordered "quarters" sounded. The Japanese launched another torpedo, but it was only when a third torpedo was seen coming directly for the Koriets's beam that the command was given to open fire, and two shots were fired. The third torpedo sunk before reaching the Koriets.

When next day the captain of the British cruiser Talbot, at the request of the captain of the Russian cruiser Varlag, asked the Japanese admiral why the Koriets had been attacked, he replied that war had been declared at 2 o'clock the day before.

Koreans Rats Come Forth.

SEOUL, March 30.—Many Korean officials who were formerly implicated in pro-Russian movements and who remained in hiding during the recent stay here of Marquis Ito are reported now to be reappearing. They are confident and have been encouraged in perfect order and formed in line behind the hill. The wounded were placed in front, and the retirement was carried out with the deliberation of a parade.

"Our troops occupied a commanding position, but were unable to hold it. The Japanese fought gallantly, but owing to their heavy losses were unable to occupy the position abandoned by our force.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1904. NO. 14.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Corner Stone of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

MAN MADLY ATTACKS A PLAINS WOMAN

Stephen Tanquer Violently Assaults Mrs. Lamar, Using Pistol and Knife.

A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE

HE IS DISARMED AND THRUST FROM DOOR.

A Fine of $10 on Charge of Disorderly Conduct—The Aggressor and Victim are Neighbors.

In a desperate hand-to-hand encounter, Mrs. Annie Lamar, of Terrill road, better known as Mrs. Hoffman, saved her life Monday night by disarming a temporarily mad man first of a loaded revolver and then of a butcher knife. Her assailant was Stephen Tanquer, a neighbor, who pointed the revolver directly at Mrs. Lamar and pulled the trigger, the fact that it refused to snap the cartridge giving the woman a chance to struggle for its possession.

Before Tanquer could make the second attempt, Mrs. Hoffman was upon him, and after a terrible struggle wrested the weapon from his hands. No sooner had she removed the cartridges from the revolver than Tanquer was again attacking her. He seized a large butcher knife from a table and only the heroic efforts of his would-be victim prevented him from stabbing her. When she had once more disarmed him, her hands were badly cut and her body bruised by blows. Tanquer was thrust out of the house, and left for home vowing vengeance.

Mrs. Lamar went before Justice Clark and swore out a warrant for Tanquer's arrest, Constable Walpole locating the Frenchman at his home. Yesterday morning the prisoner was arraigned before Justice Clark charged by the complainant with assault and attempt to kill. The Frenchman denied that he intended to do murder but acknowledged that he had had trouble with Mrs. Lamar over money matters. His claim was that the plaintiff had owed him money for some time and that the quarrel arose when he tried to collect it Monday night.

The court decreed that inasmuch as Tanquer pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct he would eliminate the other charge as long as the complainant acquiesced. Tanquer was fined $10 and costs. He paid.

Tanquer has a farm adjoining Mrs. Lamar's on which he raises violets for the New York market. Mrs. Lamar raises vegetables. Her home has been the scene of a number of exciting events during the past twelve years.

HANDBALL TOURNAMENT.

Three Matches Played in Y. M. C. A. Championship Contest.

Three matches were played in the Y. M. C. A. championship handball tournament last night. Collier defeated Scull, 21-6; W. V. Carolin, Jr., defeated Frank Neal, 21-6; Harry Thompson defeated Luther Sheppard, 21-9. The results of the matches already played leave Koons, Carolin and Thompson in the second series of games to start probably next week. Finishing the present series, William Mundy and W. E. Neal will play tomorrow night, Manning and Ashbolt will meet Friday night, and Scull and Collier will have another trying-out Saturday.

Tack Injured Eye.

Mrs. Arthur S. Giles, of West Fourth street, is at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment for recent injury to her eye, which happened in a peculiar manner. She was putting some tacks in a carpet, when one flew up and struck the eye-ball. At first Mrs. Giles paid little attention to the injury, but the pain increased so that she was obliged to summon a physician. He had her taken to the hospital at once. It is not believed that the sight of the eye will be permanently injured.

Co. K's Dance.

Company K is planning a dance complimentary to its friends who helped them in making their recent fair a success. The non-commissioned officers of the company will give a dance next Monday night. Sergt. Charles Peterson is at the head of the committee in charge.

Borough Court Notes.

William Godown, arrested for quarreling, upon complaint of Mrs. Rose Allen, was fined $3. Richard John and Bergman Hoffman, who fought on Somerset street Saturday night, were fined, the former $15 and the latter $5.

THE YOUNGER SET'S DANCE

JUNIOR SOCIETY FOLK HAVE DELIGHTFUL TIME AT THE CASINO.

A delightful subscription dance at the Casino last night was participated in by about 125 of the younger society set. It was given by a committee consisting of Robert Abbott, chairman; DeWitt P. Brokaw, John D. Haughey, Hugh G. Baldwin and Roger T. Wilcox, members or graduates of Leal's School. The decorations for the cotillion of the preceding night were retained and the Casino floor presented the same scene of brilliancy. Green and yellow predominated in the decorations.

The patronesses were Mrs. C. F. Abbott, Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Mrs. J. S. Blake, Mrs. L. H. Higlow, Jr., Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. A. Day, Mrs. Pinto, Mrs. F. Meade, Mrs. F. B. Clark, Mrs. John Leal, Mrs. F. S. Martin, Mrs. Clifford McGee, Mrs. G. P. Mellick, Mrs. D. B. Rowland, Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, Mrs. H. T. Wilcox. Music was by Schweinfest's orchestra, of Newark. A collation was served by W. W. Warnock. The carriages were in charge of Frank Hedden, of East Fourth street.

ANOTHER NEW TROLLEY LINE

DIRECT ROUTE BETWEEN JERSEY CITY AND PHILADELPHIA.

The New Jersey Short Line Railroad Company has filed articles of incorporation with the State Secretary at Trenton, the object of the company being to extend the line of the Trenton and New Brunswick Railroad Company from their present terminus at Milltown to Elizabeth. The idea is to shorten the route from Philadelphia to Jersey City by fourteen miles of distance now lost in going by way of Bound Brook and this city.

The capital stock of the company is $3,000,000. The route is to cross the Raritan near Weston's mills and go to Metuchen and Rahway and Elizabeth, where the line will connect with the present line of the Public Service Corporation.

The entire length of the road is to be fifteen and five-tenths miles, and the road is to be built in Middlesex and Union counties. The terminus at Elizabeth will be near the western boundary of the city. The company was incorporated under the railroad act of 1903.

It is rumored at Trenton that the line is part of the Gould system of railroads, which is trying to get to New York.

An agreement has already been entered into between the promoters of the new company and the Public Service Corporation by which the cars of the Public Service Corporation will use the road as soon as it built. The trolley excursion fare from Trenton to Newark is to be $1.50 and the single fare eighty cents.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

Council Finds That Hydrant Estimate Most Remain Part of the General Fund.

It was believed that the Common Council would this year be able to take the fire hydrant accounts from the fire fund and put it in the general fund. This cannot be done, however, as the general fund has reached the limit allowed and the account will have to stand as it is for the year, at least. This sum amounts to about $4,700 and officials are agreed that the general fund, when sufficient, should be drawn upon instead of the fire department, which adds that much more to the expense of maintaining it.

EASTER SOCIAL.

Pleasant Affair by Trinity Reformed Christian Endeavor Society.

At Trinity Reformed church last night an enjoyable Easter social was given by the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Florence Bennett sang a soprano solo, E. D. Young performed on the cornet, and William Taliamy also sang a solo. A conundrum game, played with egg-shaped cards bearing questions and answers, was a feature. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge included E. D. Young, chairman; Miss Annie Searing, Miss Lucy E. Cornell, William Trembath, Frank Bach, Miss Bertha Richards, Miss Anna Randolph.

Co. K's Banquet.

Company K will hold its annual banquet the latter part of the month. George Apgar is chairman of the committee in charge.

Stephen Blanier, of Chatham, has been spending several days with relatives here.

WHY PLAINFIELD LOSES ITS TEACHERS

Local School System Handicapped by Meagre Salaries Paid to the Pedagogues.

COST OF LIVING IS HIGH

INCREASED RENUMERATION IN OTHER CITIES OF NEW JERSEY.

Only Teachers of Refinement Are Wanted Here, and There Is Great Difficulty in Keeping Them in Plainfield.

An authority on education has given this paper his views on the situation which has confronted the local Board of Education for several years responsible to a great extent in this city continually losing able school teachers. The explanation is considered of general interest and for that reason is published in full. It follows:

"Schools like those of Plainfield require the highest grade of teachers. They must be women of refinement, of education, and attractive personality. They must dress well in order not to lose the respect of their pupils and patrons. Teachers with such characteristics are hard to find, and when found must be paid salaries sufficient to support them in a condition that corresponds to their education and refinement. In order that they may do the work that we expect of teachers they must have a boarding place where they may obtain such food as is suited to their taste and such surroundings as will make life pleasant.

"Such boarding places are hard to find in Plainfield. The expense of living is steadily increasing. It is difficult for a teacher to find a place suited to her taste at a rate of board which is commensurate with her salary. A number of them have had their board raised the past year. If they live as other people of similar taste live, with the salary we now pay, they have but little left at the end of the year. Quite a number have felt compelled to board themselves under these conditions.

"Other places have been raising the salaries of their teachers, which enables them to draw away our teachers. In Jersey City, the maximum salary is $936; in Newark, $750; East Orange, $725; Long Branch, $700; Passaic, $700; Montclair, $725, or more; Rotherford, $750. Formerly we were able to keep our teachers very well, because the conditions of work in Plainfield are very pleasant, but the increased cost of living and the increase in salaries in other places now make it very difficult to retain a good teacher. Each year we lose more or less who would like to stay in Plainfield, but feel compelled to accept positions elsewhere because of pecuniary advantages offered. A report sent by Supt Maxson to the State Board last June shows that 19 of our teachers had been in service but one year; thirteen, two years; and five, three years; i. e., half of our teachers had been in the service of Plainfield only three years or less. This constant change makes it very difficult and well nigh impossible to keep up the standard of the work, and, of course, it causes much loss to the children.

"In the past ten years, living expenses have gone up from thirty per cent. to fifty per cent., while the maximum salary of our teachers has been increased only about nine per cent., so that they are practically working at from twenty-five to forty per cent. less salary than the teachers were ten years ago. Public school education cannot hold its own with civilization unless the teacher, who is the keystone of the education, is enabled to keep herself in a condition to render the best service.

"The remuneration of teachers is usually overestimated because their pay is spoken of 'by the month.' It looks large to wage earners, to think of a woman getting $60 a month, but this salary really covers but nine or ten months, yet she must live the whole year, and two months that she is not in school are of no value to her in the matter of wage earning. To get a true estimate of her wages, therefore, her year's salary should be divided by 312 days. When this is done, it will appear that the best paid grade teacher in Plainfield, who now receives $600 a year, is actually getting but $1.90 a day, while very many of them receive only $1.60 a day, which is about the price that is usually paid by our housekeepers to a washwoman or a scrubwoman, but the teacher in order to earn this salary, must spend four years in the High School and two or more years in the Normal School, losing all opportunity to earn money during these six years, and paying out hard cash in addition.

"A woman with less than a High School education may come out from a school for professional nurses and obtain $3 a day for her services. One of the graduates from the High School, a few months after graduation, went into an office as typewriter where she received at the start a salary of over $600, with the prospect of an early increase to $750. Her starting salary is the salary which Plainfield pays teachers who have been in her service twenty years or more. Two other girls who graduated from the High School a year or two earlier are receiving in other offices $600-$600 each, which is from twenty-five to forty per cent. more than a grade teacher can obtain in Plainfield no matter how long she has taught."

GLEE CLUB WELL RECEIVED

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY BOYS RENDERED AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME.

Warm welcome was extended to the Wesleyan University Glee and Mandolin Clubs at the Monroe Avenue church last night. As on their previous visits here, the Methodist college men were entertaining from the first number to the last, and applause was loud and frequent. The audience entirely filled the church, and a substantial sum will be divided between the Men's Association and Adam Neuman's Bible class, under the joint auspices of which the clubs appeared.

The programme was well chosen and all the numbers were exceptionally rendered. All the numbers were encored, but the Glee Club was the prime favorite, especially with the tuneful bits of foolishness so beloved of college singers. R. L. Foreman, the reciter, made a decided hit with three of Edmund Vance Cook's humorous juvenile poems.

In the District Court.

In the District Court in Elizabeth the case of Cannon against William C. Tracy was decided by a verdict for the plaintiff, in which he was awarded a clear title on goods replevined and an additional verdict of $34.40 for goods not recovered when the writ of replevin was served. William Newcorn, Esq., appeared for the plaintiff, and Codington & Swackhamer represented the defendant.

Monagesarian Buried.

The remains of the late Isaac P. Brown, Sr., accompanied by the relatives and a few friends, were interred in the family plot at Union, near Springfield yesterday. The pall-bearers were Albertis Brown, Wm. Brown, Allen Brown, Willard Brown, of New York; Edward Brown, of this city, nephews of the dead man, and Mr. Hamilton, of New York, also a relative.

Volunteer Firemen Active.

Warren Engine Company, ex-volunteers of the borough, held a meeting last night to discuss the organization of an exempt association. Ex-Chief Seal, Debole, Bodine and Fairchild spoke. A joint meeting will be held tonight by Warren and West End to complete the organization. Provisions will be made in the constitution for the admission of associate member.

A Cobweb Social.

A successful cobweb social was held last night at the home of J. H. Freeman, 1380 Park avenue, for the benefit of Marcoucher chapel. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Reighton and Mrs. Eugene VanCourt. There were about fifty persons present and a goodly sum was realized for the chapel treasury. After enjoying the "cobweb" features, refreshments were served.

Tickets for Performance.

The first opportunity to purchase seats for the amateur production of "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Casino will be given this evening at 6 o'clock at Armstrong's drug store, North and Park avenues, when the sale of seats will begin. No seats will be reserved in advance of the sale. The dates of the performances are May 5 and 7.

Annual Entertainment.

The Monday Afternoon Club will hold its annual entertainment on Thursday night, April 28, and the annual business meeting on Monday, May 2. Both events will be at the Casino.

Supervising Principal.

Edward E. Sage, of Gallia, has been appointed by the school board as supervising principal of the five schools of Warren township.

Edward Nelson has returned from a stay at Palm Beach.

HILLSIDE CLUB PLANS $7,000 IMPROVEMENT

Arranges to Double the Size of Its Home, the Architects Plans Being Approved.

FOR A COUNTRY CLUB

TROLLEY CARS TO BE RUN CLOSE TO CLUBHOUSE.

Fifteen Active, Eight Associate and Some Minor Associate Members Are Added—Meeting at Mr. Waring's Home.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, the leading athletic and social organization of the city, is about to make improvements to the clubhouse which will aggregate an expenditure of nearly $7,000. It is proposed to transform the place into a country club, in every sense that the name implies. Plans for these improvements have been undarway for some time and at a monthly meeting of the club held last night at the home of Lewis E. Waring, the plans as drawn and submitted by Evarts Tracy, were examined and a lengthy discussion had concerning them. It has practically been decided to go ahead with the work. Already certain improvements by the way of an addition to the clubhouse has been made, inclusive of plans for further improvements.

The front of the clubhouse which faces Plainfield will be torn out and the dimensions of the house will be just doubled, as will also the kitchen. A comfortable smoking room will be a feature, while on the second floor there will be a number of sleeping apartments, making it possible for members and friends to remain at the club over night.

By increasing the size of the house it will allow the much-needed room for social events and dances. These have been features at the club, but owing to the limited space the list of invited ones has necessarily been small.

In connection with the general improvements to be made by the club, it can be stated that the Public Service Corporation has agreed to extend its tracks from the present terminus at the entrance to the golf grounds, near the cemetery, through the roadway passing the course up to a point close to the clubhouse. The tracks will then be run through private lands to Park avenue and thence to Metuchen. There have been rumors as to this improvement, but an official of the club is authority for the statement that the tracks will be extended right away and that the club will be given satisfactory service.

At the meeting there were elected fifteen active, eight associate and several junior associate members. It is believed that when the club's improvements are made the membership will be increased by fully two hundred. The success of the club and its steady progress is a source of gratification to the officers and members and from now on a season of unparalleled success seems assured.

SOLDIER BOYS' PROFITS.

Co. K Realized $565 at Its Recent Bazaar in This City.

Company K's treasury was materially swelled by the receipts of the recent bazaar. The full reports of the committee in charge were turned in at the meeting Monday night, and they show that the organization netted close to $600.

The gross receipts were over $800. The expenses were not heavy, and the net gain was over $565. This money will more than pay for the recent improvements of the company's armory.

Committees for this year were appointed by Capt. Martin. D. W. Littell was put at the head of the Ways and Means Committee; George L. Apgar is chairman of the Entertainment Committee and Lieutenant Kitchell is head of the Finance Committee.

Sentences Suspended.

Sentence was suspended upon two culprits in the city court yesterday morning. Michael Donko promised he'd never get drunk any more and as he had behaved himself fairly well in the past Judge Runyon was lenient. William Cuben, arrested for violating a junk ordinance, was shown his error and allowed to depart.

Mr. Maxson to Speak.

Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the local public school system, will make an address at the meeting of the Public Educational Society at Somerville Monday night.

MEN'S CLUB ENTERTAINS

WOMEN THE GUESTS OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

A more than usually pleasant entertainment was given by the Men's Club, of the Congregational church, last night. The women of the church were the guests of the club. Frank O. Bristol, humorist, told funny stories that were new and bright with a command of facial expression and brogue that was capital. His fiance, Miss Mary R. Spellman, gave several charming child impersonations, receiving recalls for each one. Mr. Bristol is a former member of the Congregational Men's Club, now a resident of Brooklyn.

A lecture on "The Yellowstone Trail," beautifully illustrated, was given by James R. Joy, of North Plainfield. The wonders of the National park were graphically pictured, Mr. Joy leading a personal note by detailing some of his own experiences in it. Music, refreshments and a social time followed the programme.

The committee consisted of William Mackintosh, E. W. Millard, W. C. Morgan.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS MET

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN SOCIETY CHOOSE OFFICERS AND HEAR REPORTS.

Officers were elected and encouraging reports presented at the annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church, held in the chapel, last night. These officers were chosen: President, Fred. Lounsbury; vice president, Miss Borroughs; recording secretary, Miss Leah Hammond; corresponding secretary, Miss Mabel Conover; superintendent Junior Society, Mrs. Foltzier; assistants, Mrs. Ralph K. Miner, Miss Beatrice Miner and Miss Bertha Hill.

The chairmen of the various committees were also announced:

Lookout, T. E. Burroughs; prayer-meeting, Miss Mabel Conover; social, Miss Beatrice Miner; missionary, Mrs. John S. Johnston; flower and visitation, Miss Bertha Wilcox; good literature and temperance, John S. Johnston.

The various reports presented showed improvement and an increase in the interest and attendance. The treasurer reported all bills paid and a substantial balance on hand. The membership of both the senior and junior societies has been increased during the year.

NEW GUN CLUB.

Members of Hillside's Organization Associated for Shooting Competitions.

A gun club, composed of about thirty members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, has been formed and on Saturdays and holidays the members meet at a point near the golf clubhouse, where clay pigeon shooting is enjoyed. The club has located a suitable house back of G. P. Mellick's bungalow, an ideal spot for shooting and already the members are becoming proficient in the sport. Later on is it expected that there will be prize shooting and various competitions will be arranged.

CHANGES ITS NAME.

Central Building and Loan Association Now Title of Local Concern.

To meet the requirements of a law passed last year, the character of the Plainfield District of the New Jersey Homebuyers' League has been changed. The organization has been localized under the title of the Central Building and Loan Association.

The new law is designed to discourage State institutions, in which the money of the stockholders is scattered in investments all over the State, with attendant danger to the solvency of the concern. The branch offices are not absolutely forbidden, but a prohibitive fee is placed on them. The Homebuyers' League is the only one affected here.

The books of the District have been changed, and practically all the passbooks have been transferred. The Central's officers are as follows:

President, J. D. Loiseaux; secretary, J. F. McDonald; treasurer, H. B. McDonald. The directors are: F. DeL. Hyde, J. A. Hubbard, W. M. Stillman, John F. Dunn, F. J. Viewig, Charles H. Dunham, H. O. VanEmburgh, J. F. Daly, David M. Runyon.

The New Directory.

Mr. Wand and his assistants started today to canvass for the new city directory. He has left it as late as possible this spring so as to enable movers to get settled and thus make the directory as complete as possible.

POSTOFFICE BUILDING ESTIMATE TOO SMALL

An Appropriation of $100,000 Not Considered a Sufficient Sum for the Purpose.

MUST BE INCREASED

REPRESENTATIVES AT WASHINGTON TO BE ASKED TO CHANGE FIGURE.

At Least $40,000 is Needed to Purchase a Desirable Site—The Fixtures Cost Approximately $20,000.

Now that the first feeling of jubilation over the introduction of the matter into Congress has worn off, those who are interested in the proposed erection of a Government postoffice building here are beginning to figure out just what can be done with an appropriation of $100,000. All the men in position to calculate intelligently on the matter are agreed that the sum is much too small for the purpose. Figures arrived at after careful survey of the whole postoffice situation impel the conclusion that the appropriation, if it is to be adequate to the needs of the postal business in this city, should be almost double the sum named by Senator Kean in his bill.

Nearly half of the appropriation asked for will have to be spent for a site. At least $40,000 must be expended for the ground before a cent can be spent for the building itself. No section but the business portion of the city, and the heart of that section at that, can be considered for the site. Property in that part of the city is naturally higher than anywhere else here, and the regulations of the Government compel the purchase of a site much larger than a private structure would require. The Government requires its buildings to stand between twenty and twenty-five feet clear of adjacent structures, and a lot of sufficient size to meet this regulation could not be bought for anything less than $40,000. This estimate, if anything, is low.

In the furnishing of its buildings the Government insists upon the highest character of quality and workmanship. Only the best of fixtures and decorations can be put in it, and this item of expense can not be less than $20,000, and might very easily be more.

This leaves $40,000 for the building proper. The sum is completely inadequate for a structure that is designed to meet the requirements of the postoffice business, according to men who know just what those requirements are.

Records of such matters all over the country show that a postoffice building in a growing city like Plainfield should be built as much for future expansion as for present business. It is not too much to say that a building of that character should be planned for the needs of fifty years ahead.

If a $40,000 building is put up here the men will be crowded almost as soon as they go into it. New Brunswick has had bitter experience with parsimonious calculation on postoffice building, that points the danger of a faux pas in the local improvement. The New Brunswick structure was completed last year, and before the first of January the rural free delivery carriers were compelled to go out in the cellar, in a room originally designed as a carrier "swing" room. At the present time the postoffice here has more room at its disposal than the one in the Middlesex Capitol.

These facts, taken altogether, compel the conviction that $100,000 should be expended upon the building alone. It is understood that influence will be brought to bear on Senator Kean and Congressmen Fowler and Lanning, to secure a proper increase of the appropriation, and friends of the proposed structure are hopeful that they will readily agree to introduce the necessary amendment and work for its passage at the next session of the National Legislature.

Resigns as President.

Vice Chancellor Bergen has resigned as president of the Somerville Dime Savings Bank and at a meeting held Monday William H. Taylor was elected president to succeed him. Hon. L. A. Thompson was elected vice president and Nelson Y. Dungan, director and counsel. The other officers remain the same.

Sprinkling Borough Streets.

Preparation for the yearly sprinkling of the streets is being made by the borough street committee. The carts are being repainted, and will be put into service in a few days.

NEW YORK'S SOCIETY

FINDS DIVERSION IN RENDEZVOUSING AT THE BATTERY.

CORBIN STIRS SMART SET

Mrs. Mackay as a Novelist—Wealthy Japs Show Loyalty to Home Land —Hammond's Gift to Yale— Other New York Gossip.

New York.—For the moment society people of New York find it not odd to rendezvous at the Battery, where belles and beaux of the old Dutch regime displayed their graces and paid their court.

The Battery is the landing place for the government military post on Governor's Island, where Maj. Gen. Corbin is now installed in command of the division of the Atlantic.

Gen. Corbin is the first commanding officer Governor's Island has had in a long time who has made any social stir in the city. His marriage two years ago to a Miss Patten, of Philadelphia, who, to considerable wealth unites high social standing in that city, explains the change.

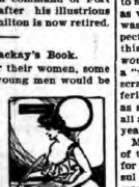
On the Battery.

Gen. Corbin is a man of mountainous physique, huge and commanding in stature, ready of wit and abounding in business ability. His war record has not greatly endeared him to the old soldiers of the fighting type about Washington, and he came at times perilously near snubbing in exclusive military circles in the capital. But anyone who imagines that without much of a military record a man can rise to be major general in the army without ability makes a great mistake. Corbin has made himself invaluable to successive commanders because of his executive ability. He is keen and coldly intellectual, never shrinks from making enemies when necessary, and knows how to obey orders. The department of which he is the head stretches from Maine to Porto Rico and includes many smaller posts.

For years New York enjoyed the rather odd social factor of a Col. Hamilton, a member of the famous family of Alexander Hamilton, in command of Fort Hamilton, named after his illustrious kinsman. Col. Hamilton is now retired.

Mrs. Duer-Mackay's Book.

If it were not for their women, some of our ultra rich young men would be heard of more seldom than they are. Mrs. Katherine Duer Mackay has just published a novel which braves criticism as if its author were not the owner of the finest country house in America and the wife of many times millionaire. Mrs. Mackay is no novice in letters. With her sister, some years ago, before her marriage, she published a book of poems, some of which were grave and of fine quality, but none of which more strongly appealed to "Long Island Sound" than the lines about "I went to Long Island City—Oh, smell! Oh—!" The tracks of the Long Island railroad from that point run past fertiliser works, dye houses and other odorous things. Which explains. Mrs. Mackay's aunt,



The "Divine Frenzy."

Elizabeth, has written several articles for Harper's Magazine of late, and she herself published last year in the North American Review a long poem which has been translated into German for theatrical presentation. The novel is "The Stone of Destiny," a rather daring allegory, in which the world-old contest between man's work and woman's love is presented.

Mrs. Mackay is an extremely clever wife, though she does not as yet rival Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger, who from the inner circle of the smartest set of New York and from the vantage point of her old Dutch aristocratic lineage, has poured out some passionate outgivings in story form to which the name of "Julien Gordon" has been appended. Mrs. Burton Harrison is another society woman well known by her rather slight stories, but as a rule New York society women are less likely than those of London to shine in the literary world.

The Japs in New York.

Remarkable is the contrast between the Chinese and Japanese residents of New York.

"Jap" and "Chink."

There are ten of the former for one of the latter, but the Japanese, few as they are, count easily for ten times as much in the financial life of the city.

There are wealthy Chinese merchants and restaurateurs in New York, plenty of them, but the typical Chinaman is still the familiar "laundry" man with his homely face and his small needs. The 1,600 or more Japanese in the city sustain a high average of personal ability and financial solidity. Some small portion of the number are engaged as domestic servants, chiefly by Japanese who have traveled in the far east; some students are working their way through college by doing housework. But by far the larger number are either experts in oriental good employed by the big department stores, or are themselves merchants upon a substantial scale. In either case they are educated men, speak English almost without an accent, and dress as other prosperous merchants do. Excepting in the consular office, I do not know a Chinaman in New York who speaks English as well as any one of 500 Japanese do.

The exploit of the New York Japanese in raising money for the cause of Nippon against Muscovy has rather astonished some old New Yorkers who haven't kept pace with new developments. The personal character of the Japanese here has not a little to do with the great favor in which their cause is held by most New Yorkers. But I do not suppose most of our people even yet appreciate to how great an extent these Japanese act as volunteer political agents of their home land. There is no country which is more devotedly served by its citizens abroad with valuable information than is Japan. It is the policy of the government to encourage its people to scatter widely upon business bent, and its students to seek education in different lands. It is recalled, for instance, that Admiral Uriu, who won the first victory of the war, is a graduate of our naval academy at Annapolis, his Japanese wife a graduate of Vassar.

Hammond's Thank Offering.

An echo of another dramatic war is furnished in John Hays Hammond's gift of $100,000 to Yale college.

When Yale Won.

No one can have forgotten that Mr. Hammond is the distinguished mining engineer who stands at the head of his profession in South Africa. It may be forgotten by some, however, that Mr. Hammond was once a prisoner under death sentence. He was taken by the Boers under suspicion of complicity with other "outlanders" in the ill-fated raid of Dr. "Willie" Jameson. Lord Willoughby and other hair-brained young men, and was shut up in Johannesburg prison.

The American government got busy to save Mr. Hammond's life. In the end, as we all know, no one of the prisoners was executed, but for a time their prospect was decidedly stormy. It was at this time that Mr. Hammond made what would have been called 300 years ago a "vow" that if he ever got out of that scrape alive he would make a thank-offering to Yale college. And he did not, as some have done in like cases, forget all about it, though he has required some years to complete the gift.

Mr. Hammond was a very close friend of the son of Secretary Hay, who went for a brief period as United States consul general to the Boer republic, and who was afterward killed by a regrettable accident at Yale.

Why do they say that American men never marry English women? An exception is the case of the handsome and gallant Gen. Thomas L. James, brave soldier in the war and postmaster general under President Garfield, who has just wedded a beautiful English girl of less than half his years. Gen. James is the president of the Lincoln national bank of this city. The bride is a daughter of an alderman of Stratford-on-Avon, who is also proprietor of the famous Red Horse hotel at Stratford, where Shakespeare in his day often caroused with other wild young blades, and where Washington Irving and other Americans of fame have from the beginning of all travel "put up."

The New Style—Walking.

Yes, it is a fact that walking is fashionable. It is perhaps an accident of the most extraordinary winter that society has spent in some years.

The trouble began in Steel Common, Asphalt and a lot of other things of more or less value, in backing which society fortunes were hard hit. One result of this was that people have stayed in New York all winter who haven't been here in a dozen years. The season has been perfect, albeit cold, with an unusual profusion of clear, rainless days. Within the past three weeks the spectacle has been seen of hundreds often advertised society leaders walking briskly about town as to leave no doubt that this form of exercise has suddenly become the mode. It does not take long for such news to travel and for hundreds to follow suit.

Cruel and unsympathetic men assert that the vogue of walking is due to nothing in the world but a desire to keep down the ever-encroaching fat. This greatest enemy of beauty is more than apparent among New York women since they gave up golf, tennis and other active pursuits for automobiling, which stimulates the appetite without giving the muscles any work.

These things are something to make us thankful for the cold winter. Most of all, it is fortunate that it did not come a year earlier, upon the heels of the great coal strike.

OWEN LANGDON

A PROBLEM SOLVED

Chicago Is to Put Her Freight Traffic Under Ground.

TWENTY MILES OF TUNNELS

Changes the War in the East Has Made in the City—Season of the Grapevine Extra—Other Gossip.

Chicago.—The Illinois Tunnel company claims to have a solution for the congested condition of the streets in the business center. They propose not to take the people off the streets by putting the street cars under ground, but to take the teams off the streets by hauling the freight of the city under ground. If their dreams prove realistic their solution will sound the death knell of the strong organization of teamsters that has held the business interests of the city within its grasp for the past four or five years.

The Death-Knell of the Teamsters.

Some years ago, during the operations of the boodling aldermen, there was passed in the city council an ordinance giving an unknown company the right to construct tunnels under every street and alley within the city limits. Like many a franchise voted by the Chicago city fathers, nothing more was heard of it until some three years ago, when excavations were begun in a quiet way in the rear of Alderman Powers' saloon. One after another little galvanized iron sheds, about three by six feet square, were erected at various places throughout the business district, and the public wondered what they were. Finally came the public announcement that the city had been undermined by a system of tunnels, 20 miles of them, cut 40 feet under the surface of the streets.

The tunnels are there, every mile claimed, and through them are rushing small electric cars at a maximum rate of 40 miles an hour. They connect with practically every wholesale and retail store of any importance in the downtown district, with every railroad and steamship depot, and through them it is expected that 90 per cent. of the outgoing and incoming freight of the business district will be hauled at a less expense than is possible with the present methods of teams.

Two Telephone Systems.

In a general way the public has understood that a new telephone company was preparing to begin operations as a competitor of the Bell system, and that they were putting their wires underground. As a matter of fact the tunnels are utilized for this purpose, and the original incorporation of the present tunnel company was as a telephone company.

It does not take long for such news to travel and for hundreds to follow suit.

Cruel and unsympathetic men assert that the vogue of walking is due to nothing in the world but a desire to keep down the ever-encroaching fat. This greatest enemy of beauty is more than apparent among New York women since they gave up golf, tennis and other active pursuits for automobiling, which stimulates the appetite without giving the muscles any work.

These things are something to make us thankful for the cold winter. Most of all, it is fortunate that it did not come a year earlier, upon the heels of the great coal strike.

ITEMS OF TIMELY INTEREST FROM THE LAKE CITY.

IN THE CRIMINAL COURTS

An Odd Case That Has Attracted Attention—Some Effects of the Eastern War—Increased Cost of Living.

Chicago.—Of the odd cases that come and go in the criminal courts of this city some of recent days have attracted more attention than the trial of Nathan Breen for the murder of Mrs. Funk. The affair was a sensational one, immediately associated with a pretty woman of the Ghetto district, but after they had become engaged they quarreled, she broke the engagement, and last November Breen shot her in front of Hull house.

Mrs. Funk.

For the first time in the history of Illinois a woman lawyer, Mrs. Antoinette Funk, undertook the defense of a murderer. That is one reason why the case attracted such widespread attention. A second reason was the peculiar defense which Mrs. Funk offered for her client, that of "propinquitive" insanity, she claiming that Breen was rational save when in the presence of the sweetheart who had jilted him, until after the shooting, when he became permanently insane.

From the day of his arrest Breen played the part of the maniac to perfection, and while a portion of the expert testimony introduced by the state to prove that he was shamming insisted that such was the case, others were not so confident, and some went so far as to say they believed the prisoner really insane. In her plea to the jury Mrs. Funk painted a brilliant word picture of the girl he ordered by the infatuated man with his sweetheart broke their engagement. It was effective, and, together with the actions of Breen in the courtroom throughout the trial, carried the jury by storm, and they brought in a verdict of second degree murder, the maximum penalty for which is 14 years imprisonment.

The

sensation connected with the trial came when Breen stood before the bar to receive his sentence. He was no longer the maniac he had been for three months, but perfectly rational, and confessed that he was shamming to save his neck, in which he was successful.

The Cost of Justice.

That the administration of justice is often an expensive process is evidenced by the trial of the carbarn murderers. The conviction of these self-confessed villians has cost the state several thousand dollars. It is scarcely probable that any one of the 12 men who composed the jury secured after a month of effort ever doubted the guilt of any one of the trio, but the expensive processes were necessary as though there was the gravest question of their guilt. Great is the expense connected with the conviction of a known murderer when he wishes to make a defense. It is but small by comparison with the expense incurred by the state where conviction must be secured through circumstantial evidence. In such cases the attorneys for the defense laugh tangle the skein of evidence offered by the state as fast, as a rule, as the attorney for the state can unravel it. The Cronin case of 1890 is an evidence of this, and it cost the state $85,000 before a conviction could be secured.

Extravagance of Dame Justice.

Another case is that of the sausage maker, Luetgert, tried for the murder of his wife. The police department, and the state's attorney had but little more than theories to work on, and though the public generally believed in the guilt of the accused, it was not proven to the satisfaction of a jury of 12 men until after the expenditure of an enormous sum by the state.

The long-drawn out trials of such characters as the car-barn murderers is to be regretted because of its effect upon the community.

The War and Yellow Journalism.

Apropos of the many startling stories of terrible battles on land and sea printed by the Chicago American during the first week or so of the war between Russia and Japan is a paragraph by Henry Barrett Chamberlain in the current number of "The Voter." Chamberlain represented one of the Chicago papers in Cuba during the war with Spain, and his duties kept him in touch with the blockading fleet at Santiago, and it was of a newspaper experience he had while there that he writes. I give the story as he tells it:

The Hearst Style of Journalism.

"During the summer of '98 I was trying to earn my living as a tug boat reporter on the blockade line in front of Santiago de Cuba. I was doing the best I could and thought that I was as active as the other fellows, but one day I received a copy of Hearst's New York Journal dated in May and telling in detail of the battle of Santiago. I had not heard of the battle and was wondering how it had been pulled off without my knowledge. I inquired of Commodore Schley, but he was unable to give me the desired information, nor could the Journal men assigned to duty in those waters aid me. One of them finally allowed, however, that some fellow in the New York office had had a psychic moment at the wrong time. That eased my mind and I hung around until the following July, when the battle was finally fought."

Something of the same thing seems to be the policy of the Chicago American at the present time. Taking its cue from the first attack on Port Arthur this paper had practically the whole Russian navy destroyed before the war was a week old, and not content with that it had fought several big land battles besides.

Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Shanghai are noted centers for news (?) of the startling variety. News stories from these places are very much like the old fable of the shepherd and the wolf. The newspaper editor who is looking for authentic reports seldom places any credence in anything that comes from them during times of great excitement. In these places there are maintained veritable news (?) factories, which are capable of turning out instantly anything that is needed to sell papers. But there is a demand for the product of these factories among a certain class of papers.

Books That Are in Demand.

The war in the far east has been productive of a campaign of education in Chicago.

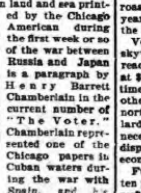
The Chicago public library contains several hundred volumes of descriptive and historical works of Russia and Japan. They are all in use, and since the first shot of the war was fired. The craving for information regarding the combatants has led many a person to the library building who never frequents the place save at such a time. The reference readers are kept busy with them from the opening to the closing hours. They have no choice of books, but are content with anything that will inform them in anyway in regard to either nation.

The statement that they have no choice of books is not entirely true. Nine out of ten applicants want works on Japan, and take books on Russia only as a secondary choice. This shows the preponderance of sympathy for the Mikado's empire in this city.

At the book stores and the book sections of the department stores there is a rush for works along these lines, and the display windows are filled with them. The manager of one of the big book stores told me a few days ago that within a week his store had sold some 2,000 volumes relating to Russia or Japan, and that the sale only stopped because of the exhaustion of the supply. Books that have been packed away in storerooms for several years, and regarded as a loss, have been brought out and disposed of at a good profit. In fact the stores are practically denuded of works on these lines, and while the Jap and Russians are fighting for supremacy the reading public of Chicago are acquiring a lot of information in regard to them.

The Cost of Living.

Eggs at 50 cents a dozen is but illustrative of the present high cost of living at the present time.



Eggs Are Soaring Skyward.

Practically all the necessities of life show an increase within the last ten years. Meats of all kinds are practically double what they were ten years ago. The better qualities of steaks and rib roasts have almost entirely disappeared from the tables of the working elements to be replaced by flank cuts, pot roasts, shanks for boiling purposes and stews. Because of the high price of beef the butchers are having a greater demand for pork than ever before, but the price of this is becoming almost prohibitive. Sirloin steaks bring 30 cents a pound, veal cutlets 28 cents, roast beef 25 cents, while but a few years ago 18 cents would buy a pound of the best meat carried by the butchers.

Vegetables like meats, have soared skyward until they are almost out of reach for the working classes. Potatoes at $1.25 a bushel are higher than at any time since 1881. The same is true with other vegetables and the staples in northern grown fruits. Milk, butter and lard have gone the same road and other table necessities have traveled, and are being dispensed with as far as possible by the economical housewife.

Fuel is more expensive by more than ten per cent. than it was three years ago; rents are up about 25 per cent., and in many of the staple lines of dry goods, clothing and shoes there is a noticable rise in prices. For example, bleached sheeting that sold for 16 cents a yard in 1902 is now worth 27 cents a yard. And the end, it seems, is not yet.

WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

A NEW GOLD ZONE

IT IS WHOLLY WITHIN THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA.

Extends, It Is Said, Over a Distance of 2,000 Miles in a Curved Line from White Horse to Bristol Bay.

The veteran miner and prospector will always tell you that he believes there are as good gold mines yet undiscovered as have already enriched the world with their yellow treasure. And he keeps prospecting. He keeps track of every district in which promises gold, and watches for a strike that will prove its value as a gold producer. The Nome district in the far northwest of Alaska, and the Klondike region on the eastern border line of the territory, have no long held the attention of the reading public, and occupied the efforts of the gold seeker, that the news of a new gold zone comes as a sort of unexpected surprise.

It is said that new discoveries indicate the existence of a second gold zone lying considerably to the south and west of the present Klondike region. The first strike in the new zone has been made in the Tanana hills, and last summer rich new placers were found in the Alsek country considerably to the west of White Horse. Gold has been discovered in the Sustina and other streams of western Alaska, while still other placers, it is said, are being worked on Bristol bay.

A zone in mining parlance conveys something the same meaning as that of the term used in geology. In the latter connection it has nearly the same meaning as horizon. A stratum or group of strata, may be characterized by the presence of certain assemblage of fossils, or by one particular fossil, and in such cases the most abundant or typical fossil may give a name to the subdivision in which it occurs. The mining zone of course is marked by the presence of gold or other mineral which may characterize the zone. The first gold zone extends from the Klondike in the east along the Yukon river, the Yukon hills, and on the west to the Nome district. The zone follows a straight line as though nature in planting her gold mines had followed something of the regular system of the farmer in planting his rows of corn.

The new zone as we have already intimated lies to the south of the old zone and apparently extends from near White Horse, the head of the Yukon navigation, along the northern foothills of the McKinley mountain range and thence westward and southward to Cook Inlet and Bristol bay, a distance of 2,000 miles. As indicated on the map here produced the zone in this case follows a curved line, keeping close to the mountain ranges all the way. It is altogether conjecture at the present time as to the value of the new zone as a gold producer. That there is really gold there is certain from the present diggings, and that it probably extends over the district is reasonably sure.

Gold was first discovered in Alaska in 1879, and since that time over $60,000,000 worth has been taken out of the mines there. There has been a steady increase in the production from year to year, except in 1901, when the production, which was $6,885,701, was $1,000,000 and a half less than the production of the year before. It may not be generally known that some silver is also produced by the mines of Alaska, but such is the case. In fact, where gold is found there is nearly always some silver. In 1902 there were $48,760 worth of silver produced. The first discovery of gold on the Klondike was made in August of the year 1896 by a man named George McCormick, and the miners from the Klondike and Canada were not slow in rushing to the new Eldorado. Whether there will be similar scenes in connection with the gold discoveries of the new zone remains to be seen. It largely depends upon the reports which come from the new fields.

Greatness.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Is Working and Hoping

RECENTLY Miss Edith Crosskill, the writer, received through the mail a notice which read as follows: "M. E. Crosskill: You are hereby summoned to appear before me on or before March — in order that I may decide upon your qualifications to do jury duty in the county of New York and that you may have opportunity to claim exemption from service, if you are entitled to exemption under any provision of the law. This notice must not be answered by letter. Please bring this notice with you. The penalty for not answering this notice is $50." Then followed the signature of the summoning official. Miss Crosskill smiled to herself, put on her street gown and her picture hat and went to answer the summons in person, as directed. "I have received this notice," she said, "and I think I have the qualifications for a juror. It is true I read newspapers, but they never influence my opinions any. I don't know any reason why I shouldn't serve on a jury." The official stared in astonishment. He eyed the bright, intelligent looking girl from head to foot. Then he said, "I don't know any reason, either, why you are not qualified to sit on a jury." "It's true," said Miss Crosskill. "I am not a citizen." "Why are you not a citizen?" asked the official. "Because I have no vote," promptly replied the young lady. "But I think if women served on a jury in a dressmaker's lawsuit they could decide whether a gown fitted without trying it on the prosecuting attorney. They would know, too, at sight the difference between an unsupported and a motif!" "You are right," said the jury summoner, "they would. Perhaps you would like to keep the summons as a souvenir. Ladies do sometimes. And, Miss Crosskill, let me give you this. It may interest you." It was a pamphlet issued by the League For Political Education.

The Women's Philharmonic society of New York is a noble organization. It is composed largely of professional musical women—piano instructors, singing teachers and voice trainers, dramatic and otherwise. The society has 140 members. I attended one of their meetings lately and felt proud of womankind. The members are as fine, intellectual looking a body of women as you would ever see, including even the ones no longer young. Music is a healthful profession, and these teachers and trainers presented a strikingly strong and attractive physique.

It is one of the glorious privileges of being a woman in this remarkable age that women may meet and enjoy themselves and entertain themselves in so many delightful and profitable ways without in the least depending ou men for their pleasure. No longer do women and girls sit disconsolate at home and complain that the men go off by themselves and have all the good times. Women now go off by themselves and have good times too.

Man is at once woman's worst enemy and her best friend.

Don't become familiar with your acquaintances, and you will keep out of a lot of trouble. Many individual and neighborhood quarrels have resulted from people calling one another by their first names.

* * *

The Japs are proving that great souls may lodge in very small bodies.

* * *

Do you ever encounter those scatter brained women who have dabbled in a dozen kinds of work and can do nothing at all really first class?

* * *

What is bric-a-brac? Generally useless articles to be dusted. They need to be very rare and beautiful to give an excuse for their being.

* * *

In a lively speech before the Women's Philharmonic society of New York Mme. Cappiani, the vocal teacher, told her audience that singing lessons and singing practice frequently cure sore throat. She also uttered some invaluable philosophy in her statement that "work never tires." The right way, she said, is to change the kind of work several times a day, going from one thing to another, resting one set of brain cells and muscles while another works. In this way we shall never be tired.

* * *

On the whole, I think I admire more than anybody else the woman who can keep her mouth shut. The Japs in the present war have given us an object lesson unsurpassed on this point.

* * *

Don't wear a hat whose top is front is fifteen inches above the end of your nose. Don't pile up your hair five inches above your forehead. A woman or girl thereby shows to all the world that she lacks common sense and also the sense of the fitness of things.

* * *

Have you heard of that famous "pea and bean census" instituted by the temperance people of London? An agent of the teetotalers was stationed on watch near each drinking shop in the city. Every time a woman entered the gin shop the detective took a bean from one of his pockets and put it into another. Every time a man went in he transferred a pea from one pocket to another. Thus the total abstainers kept tab on the drinkers, male and female.

AMERICAN NURSES.

Dr. McGee and Assistants Who Will Serve in Japanese Army.

During the war with Spain the Daughters of the American Revolution, through Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, their surgeon general, offered to the United States government a corps of trained women nurses for service in army hospitals. This would release for active fighting a corresponding number of enlisted men.

The offer was accepted. Dr. McGee, who lived in Washington, was appointed examining surgeon to pronounce on the qualifications of the women who volunteered for army work. To give the stamp of authority to her she was made a regular acting assistant surgeon of the United States army, being the first woman to hold such a post in the army of this country. From first to last several thousand trained women nurses passed under her eye. She organized an actual working corps of 2,000 of these, a number of whom accompanied our armies to Cuba, to Porto Rico and the Philippines and did service unsurpassed in the hospitals among both sick and wounded. For one, Miss Alice Kemmer of Indiana received special honorable mention for work in the Philippines. From the Philippines she accompanied the army to China during the Boxer uprising of 1900 and there, too, distinguished herself.

The experiment of women army nurses was so satisfactory that it resulted in the appointment of a permanent corps of such nurses for the regular military establishment. These are well paid, receiving $50 a month and residence quarters. They have a month's furlough every year.

At the close of the Spanish-American war and the subsequent Filipino insurrection many of the army nurses, being no longer needed, were mustered out. Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee herself retired to private life and took up once more the sociological and scientific studies to which both herself and her husband are interested.

*When the probability of war be*tween Japan and Russia became almost a certainty Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee resolved to gather a number of her experienced Spanish-American women war nurses and offer the services of them and herself to the Japanese government. It was a most humane move, as well as for the Japanese an enlightening one. They did not have women army nurses although there is a Japanese Red Cross organization. Dr. McGee made her offer to the mikado through the Japanese minister at Washington and then went to St. Louis to attend the annual meeting of the American Association For the Advancement of Science. As one of its vice presidents she had charge of the department of anthropology.

The war came. Minister Takahira notified Dr. McGee that the mikado had accepted with thanks the offer of a corps of trained American women war nurses for service in his army hospitals. Then began the bustle of preparation. The beginning was to select the nurses. There is a Spanish-American war nurses' association, and the members of this of course had first choice. One of the first to be selected was Miss Alice Kemmer. Another was Miss Stack of Washington. Miss Stack is so well up in her profession that the government appointed her to teach army hospital corps men their duties. She has been for some time an instructor in the hospital corps school in Washington. She is an expert in diet for the sick. Both Miss Kemmer and Miss Stack are illustrations of the fact that it pays a woman to know how to do something thoroughly and with enthusiasm. Women are proving that they are of use in war as in peace.

The headquarters of the American women nurses will be at Osaka, Japan, but they will go wherever they are needed in Korea or Manchuria. There will be work enough and more than enough for all who can go. The number is limited by the fund subscribed to maintain them, for the whole enterprise is a volunteer affair, supported by contributions of American women and some men. No pay is attached to the work. After the ladies reach Japan the government of that country will give them supplies and transportation, but no wages.

Dr. McGee herself is an example of that remarkable feminine American versatility which too often results in the mere scattering and wasting of noble natural endowments. In her case, however, this is not the result. She is the daughter of the famous astronomer, Professor Simon Newcomb. She has taken courses of instruction in Newnham college, Cambridge, England, and in the University of Geneva, Switzerland. Her medical education was obtained at the Columbian university and at Johns Hopkins.

MARY EDITH DAY.

A LITTLE PRAISE.

Women Read It Much More Than They Read Criticism.

There used to be a variety of woman which happily is now disappearing. I refer to the woman who didn't believe in saying nice things to you for fear of making you conceited.

"My dear, that gown is very becoming," a dear old lady said to me one day when I was at the awkward age. And for that one day at least I forgot to be awkward and nervous about myself.

"I don't see," she went on, "why you shouldn't know that life is so short and so full of sad things that I believe we should be cheered up and made happy as much as possible. I always tell people all the nice things I can say about them."

"WHY, HOW WELL YOU ARE LOOKING!"

I am not dealing with the man side of it, but I know this about women, that you can get more out of them by judicious praise than by censure. The right word of encouragement and appreciation at the right time means the world to a woman.

Mothers who don't believe in telling their daughters their good points for fear of making them conceited and who when talk becomes personal invariably call their attention to their faults "for their good"—these mothers, I say, need not be amazed if their daughters find elsewhere the praise they don't get at home.

It's as natural as the way a flower turns its face to the sun. So long as woman lives she wants to be appreciated and to be told that she is.

After all, it isn't so very hard. Try it on your friends and see how they will respond. Stifle your critical mood and if your friend comes in to see you wearing a pretty costume speak of it. Is it much of a bother to say, "Why, how well you are looking!"

And it will perhaps cheer her for the whole day.

If you don't believe me, look back on your past experiences and contrast your friends. You will find that you like best those who say nice things to you—nice things that are true, of course. One readily sees through the other kind.

We bear of our faults soon enough, and our stupidities the world flings back to our face most brutally, but the kind words of our friends we can keep in our hearts to make life easier.

ELIZABETHAN INTERIORS.

A Quaint Fashion Which Is Being Revived by Household Decorators.

The Elizabethan style of furnishing commends itself for country houses, and the dining room in the sketch could be carried out with a little ingenuity for a moderate sum.

The ceiling is of gray plaster intersected with oak beams. The woodwork is paneled in the same wood. The wide chimney, peculiar to the period, has an inner fireplace of handsome tiling in shades of green. The settles, if desired, may be fitted with green leather cushions. The long overmantel is filled with quaint old fashioned pewter and blue and white ware. The furniture follows suit and is of the same fumed oak, while the hanging lamp is of beaten copper with a lining of red silk.

Owing to its wide fireplace and cozy architecture this would make a good combination living and dining room if space is an object in the country home.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Wise Women Do Not Purchase Many Dress Accessories at Once.

Gowns of all over lace are made with broad bertbas or yokes of tucked chiffon and very full undersleeves of the same delicate material. The full skirts are sometimes decorated with wide bands of different lace, edged top and bottom with a tiny ruching of the chiffon.

Very often the lace gowns are made up over some very delicate shade of chiffon and silk and are embroidered with silk of the same color or else enriched with tiny chiffon roses.

In regard to the little accessories of dress, it is never a good thing to buy many at once. Do not accumulate neckwear which you may need at some time or other. A couple of pretty collars are sufficient and when these are worn out others can be purchased which will be fresh and of a newer style. The woman who buys much at a time is always mussy and a month or so behind the fashions.

YELLOW STRAW HAT.

The chiffon stole and muff will be seen during the spring months, but this is a fashion which requires very smart dresses and, above all, dry weather, as at the first suspicion of dampness the entire effect is ruined.

Coats are of all lengths from the tiny bolero to the long three-quarter affair reaching nearly to the bottom of the skirt. Width across the shoulders and a certain amount of fullness are the only essentials.

As long as early Victorian fashions last we shall be faithful to taffeta.

The illustration shows a new spring hat. It is a three cornered shape of yellow straw trimmed with pink roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

The Ever Popular Taffeta—Unlined Gowns a Feature of the Moment.

Some very simple and yet smart gowns are made of flowered brocades. They are made with a plaited skirt, a wide fancy belt and a plain bodice half hidden under a soft chiffon fichu. Such a gown requires no lining, and indeed the vogue at present is for unlined gowns both for day and evening wear.

GREEN CLOTH GOWN.

Carefully fitted corsets and petticoats display the figure wherever it is required. The underskirt is a matter of the greatest importance. It is composed of countless ruffings and ruchings, together with laces and festoons of ribbon work. Stiff taffetas, brocades, silks and satins are used in shades to harmonize with the gowns.

White petticoats showing a great deal of ruffling and hand work are also in vogue.

Nowadays it is quite possible to have one gown do for two occasions. This is often the case with the taffeta frock, where two bodices, one high and the other low necked, do duty for home and restaurant dinners.

A handsome wrap seen recently, which would do duty equally well during the summer months, was of accordion plaited mousseline de sole and silencon lace, with puffed sleeves, finished with choux and stole ends of yellow satin.

Pipings of black velvet on taffeta are among the prettiest of the spring effects.

Hats seem to be growing less flat than heretofore, and even when they appear perfectly flat they are not so in reality, for they are tilted on velvet bands.

In the illustration is shown a pale green cloth gown trimmed with ivory lace and embroideries of deeper green.

TALK OF WASHINGTON

TIMELY COMMENTS FROM THE CAPITOL OF THE NATION.

WORK OF CLEVER WOMAN

Accomplishments of Mrs. Arthur Powell Davis — Monsieur and Madame Jusserand of the French Embassy.

Washington.—One of the cleverest women in Washington is Mrs. Arthur Powell Davis, whose work is known throughout the maritime world. In this short sketch, I can only tell of a few things she has done. For 16 years she has calculated the ephemeris of the sun for nautical almanac published every year by the United States government. Every ship that sails the sea uses the figures this mathematical genius makes, and she has never made an error in them! She secured the position through a most difficult civil service examination, in which graduates of Yale and Harvard and other universities participated. Finally, all left the room defeated by the difficulty of the problems except the fair, young girl who was then Miss Elizabeth Preston Brown, of Virginia. She won the place over all competitors and holds it still by virtue of merit alone. A problem in higher mathematics pleases her as much as a new novel interests most women. She computed the development of the perturbative function, and made other special computations in connection with Prof. Simon Newcomb's "Tables of the Sun" and his tables of the different planets.

She calculated the orbits of several comets, which were published in the Astronomical Journal and Sidereal Messenger.

She visited Europe with Mr. Davis a few years ago and found her reputation was well known abroad. Both were recipients of many courtesies from distinguished scientists and the nobility of Europe. They visited Windsor and Warwick castles by special invitation.

Monsieur Jusserand, ambassador to the United States from France, thinks Americans attach too much importance to their Anglo-Saxon origin and neglect their Celtic ancestry. He is a man of rare accomplishments and is an acquisition to the national capital, both from a literary and social standpoint. He speaks English fluently, having served in diplomatic capacity at the court of St. James a number of years.

The affairs pertaining to the building of the Panama canal and the press of business the world's fair is giving M. Jusserand more work to do than his predecessor had for some years. France is making a brave show at the exposition. She remembers Napoleon "aligned every an empire" when he sold the Louisiana Purchase territory. There will be many Celtic visitors to our shores within the next few months. The American descendants of French settlers, Huguenots, Acadians, refugees from France during the reign of terror and others, who will greet unknown kinsmen at the fair. This influx of well-to-do and frequently distinguished foreigners to our shores will give the diplomats and consuls accredited to our country extra work.

Madame Jusserand is a beautiful woman of the best French type and makes a charming hostess at the legation. Washington has been fortunate in regard to many of the foreign ladies who preside over the homes of the diplomatic corps stationed here. One very popular chatelaine was an American woman, Miss Silverson, the daughter of a wealthy newspaper man of Philadelphia. She married Monsieur Paternostre while he was French minister here and entertained elegantly at her father's splendid villa on the heights of Georgetown. The Paternostres left here for the court of Madrid, where the American wife of the ambassador became at once popular.

Many of the foreign female contingent compose what in our capital is dull compared with the gay capitals of the old world, especially on Sundays! Across the water, the fun starts immediately after mass Sunday morning. Theaters and concerts are in full blast during the afternoon and the cafes do a big business. They have special singers and a band of music, psalms and hymns are not on the programme! It was perhaps to pander to the tastes of our foreign distinguished population that the congressional library and Corcoran gallery of art throw open their doors at noon Sunday!

Crowds throng both buildings during the entire afternoon of Sunday and they are not all foreigners by any means! In fact, it is almost the only time the government clerks have for enjoying the advantages offered by both institutions and they make the most of it. The librarian of congress had to put an extra force of clerks on Sunday afternoon, and it is sometimes almost impossible to elbow your way through the crowds in the main galleries of the Corcoran art gallery. The theaters, too, are frequently opened here on Sunday evenings for the rendition of an oratorio lecture or sacred concert. In a few years it looks as if the diplomatic corps will cease to complain that Washington is "dull and provincial."

American nurses are going to the seat of war to care for the Japanese sick and wounded. The Japanese minister has received a cable message from his government accepting the offer made by Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, of Washington, D. C., to take to Japan a party of trained nurses who have seen field service in the camps and hospitals of the United States army. No one is eligible to join the party except graduate women nurses who have been in the army.

The first party will sail early in March and proceed to Osaka, Japan, the port on the Inland sea, which is the base to which disabled troops will come when sent home from the battlefield. There they will place themselves under the orders of the military authorities to be sent wherever they are most needed. All may be together or they may be divided into different parties. There is in Japan a large official Red Cross organization which furnishes immense quantities of supplies to the army, and the American nurses will work side by side with the members of that society.

Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, who is at the head of the movement, and will take the first party to the war district, is a native of Washington. She is president of the Society of Spanish War Nurses. She was appointed acting assistant surgeon of the United States army in 1898, and is the only woman who ever held such a position. She was assigned to duty in the surgeon general's office, in charge of the army nurse corps, which she organized. When congress approved this work by making the nurse corps of trained women a permanent part of the army the pioneer stage was passed, and she resigned December 21, 1900, and has been engaged in literary work since until she took up the present project.

Washington the most beautiful city in the world? A Washington that is architectually in keeping with the standing of the nation among the world powers, is the dream of Franklin Webster Smith, a local architect of note, and a man of sufficient means to make his calling a pleasure rather than a commercial occupation.

He has been figuring on an ideal Washington for several years, and though his plans meet with but slow recognition from congress, he is not discouraged and feels that he can afford to wait for results. He has two schemes on foot which, if he is able to work out, will make Washington the most beautiful capital on the globe. He has already spent at least $100,000 in bringing these plans to perfection. Congress has already appropriated money to buy land on which to build a hall of records, in which the official documents of the governments are to be kept. Mr. Smith has invented a fireproof concrete, out of which he has modeled a hall of records somewhat after the style of the tabularium of Julius Caesar at Rome.

The other plan is the outgrowth of the halls of the ancients erected in this city by Mr. Smith and another public-spirited citizen. It is to erect on the old naval observatory site a reproduction of the most famous temples of antiquity, beginning with the Parthenon. The group will show Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek and all the distinctive styles of ancient and modern architecture. It will be an important educational factor in the growth of the nation's capital and if Mr. Smith's plan, which has received the endorsement of Senator Hoar and other leading senators, is carried out the tourists of the old world will come here to see a most beautiful sight.

THE POWER OF LOVE

TENDER PASSION STILL MOVES HEARTS OF OLD AND YOUNG.

Love for Mother Transferred to Her Young Daughter—Travels 3,000 Miles to Wed—Brave Death in Elopement.

Marie Burger was born in Germany, and lived there until she was 18 years old. Then her mother told her to come to the United States, go direct to St. Paul, Minn., and marry John Leitner. Marie was a dutiful girl, and did as she had been told. She had never seen John Leitner until he met her at the railway station at St. Paul. Two hours later they were married. And it was one of the prettiest romances the newspapers have chronicled for many a year.

Twenty-five years ago John Leitner was 20 years old, and he, too, lived in Germany. It was there that he fell in love with his bride's mother, and they were betrothed. Two months before the wedding day, however, they quarreled, and John Leitner came to the United States. The girl married another man, and thus became Mrs. Burger.

To Mr. and Mrs. Burger there came in due time a daughter, and it was this daughter, Marie Burger, who came to St. Paul and married John Leitner. She is already in love with her husband, although he is 45 years old, and she is only 20. The marriage was arranged by her mother.

Marie traveled across the Atlantic alone and was met at the station by her husband to be.

"Like her mother, for all the world," said Leitner, as the couple wended *their way through the crowded sta*tion.

"I would have known her in a thousand," Leitner declared to the deputy who made out his marriage license and listened to the story of the farmer's romance.

Mr. Leitner and Miss Burger were married in St. Paul, and will make their home in Barnes county, N. D.,

where Leitner owns much valuable land.

Love led Margaret Kavanaugh, a pretty Dublin girl, 3,000 miles across the Atlantic to wed the man whom she had known when he was almost a boy. She arrived in New York on the Etruria. Her baggage already had been placed on the pier—two steamer trunks and a Gladstone bag. Friends had decorated the baggage with white ribbons, and each trunk bore the sign, "To be married."

Naturally a big crowd waited around the white beribboned steamer trunks to catch a glimpse of the bride. She came soon, a pretty, blushing girl, on the arm of a stalwart, broad-shouldered man. The crowd gave three hearty cheers.

Several years ago M. S. Leahy, a prosperous young insurance broker of New York, met Margaret Kavanaugh in Dublin. Upon his return to New York he decided that she was the only girl in the world for him. He hadn't the courage to propose, but a friend in Dublin proposed for him and the girl accepted. She traveled across the Atlantic, and drove directly to the church from the pier.

Here is a thrilling episode in the romance of a young Kentucky couple whose names are unknown. They were running away to Georgetown, O., to be married. When they arrived at Marysville, Ky., on the opposite side of the Ohio, the girl's parents were in close pursuit.

The broad Ohio river was full of huge cakes of floating ice. But love can always find a way. The young man and his fair lady decided to cross the river at all hazards. They finally succeeded in employing two boatmen, who agreed to row them across in a small skiff.

A great crowd assembled on the river bank and cheered the elopers as their boat pushed off from shore. After battling with the ice floes, every minute fraught with danger, the little boat finally reached the center of the stream. Here it lodged in the huge blocks of ice, and was swept down the broad current of the Ohio, out of sight of the crowds of watching people on shore.

All hope of their being saved was abandoned, but after being carried two miles down the river by the ice-the sloping couple and the boatmen were picked up by a river steamer and safely landed on the Ohio shore.

THREE-YEAR-OLD BOY ROASTED TO DEATH

Three Quarters of Child's Skin Burned to a Crisp When Lad Played at Brushheap.

JOHN SIKOWFKE'S SON

ACCIDENT HAPPENED IN HIS FATHER'S YARD ON RAYMOND AVENUE.

Victim Dies When Being Hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital in an Ambulance—Pitiful Cries of the Little One.

Roasted almost beyond recognition while playing about a brush fire in his father's yard, in Raymond avenue, Monday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock, little Alexander Sikowfke, the three-year-old son of John Sikowfke, died last night shortly after 7 o'clock, while he was being removed to the hospital.

Three-quarters of the child's skin was burned to a crisp. The little fellow's clothes caught from the brush fire and in a minute flared into a blaze that enveloped him. When help came in answer to his cries, he was beyond saving.

Dr. T. H. Tomlinson attended the child at 3 o'clock and again at 7 when he ordered his removal to Muhlenberg Hospital. It was on the way to the hospital that death relieved the baby's terrible sufferings.

TO PROSECUTE MILKMEN

BOROUGH BOARD OF HEALTH TAKES IMPORTANT ACTION.

Milkmen who refuse to obey the borough health ordinance requiring them to take out permits will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. This was unanimously decided upon at the meeting of the borough board last night.

Most of the milkmen have complied with the law, but a few of the men in the business refuse to see the right of the board to make them pay the fee and insist on doing business without taking out a permit. The matter has been decided upon by the Supreme Court, however, and the board voted last night to take extreme action against the men who continue to defy them.

The penalty is $50 and costs for each offense. The inspector was instructed to notify the milkmen of the board's action, and those who persist in their defiance will be arrested and prosecuted.

The board passed the anti-spitting ordinance on its second reading. At the next meeting it will go through the third reading, and as soon as the legal formalities are attended to the ordinance will be enacted.

At present there is only one case of contagious disease in the borough.

AMUSEMENTS.

Repeatedly the time of "The Virginian" has been extended, and now, with a run of more than a hundred performances to its credit, and with the demand for seats greater than ever, it stands as one of the most pronounced successes of the season with no indication of a termination of its stay at the Manhattan. It undoubtedly will run out the season there and still be so popular that it might continue indefinitely when the usual time for closing theatres for the summer arrives. "The Virginian" evidently has all the elements that go to make a perennially popular play. It pleases all sorts and conditions of theatre goers, and persons who never have read Mr. Wisters' romance from which its as taken seem to be as delighted with it as are the thousands familiar with the book.

—Chief Woolston, of the borough fire department, went to the New Market fire Monday to see the city men at work.

—I. H. Beehm has been making some repairs and improvements to his property on Park avenue, formerly owned by R. Frechs.

—The Public Service Corporation is rapidly getting the summer cars in condition to run out with the advent of the warm weather.

—The street department has just replaced a flush tank service pipe at the corner of New and Fifth streets that was damaged by the frost.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Other Girl," which holds the record for success of all of Augustus Thomas' plays ever presented in the city, is now moving along triumphantly at the New Empire Theatre, New York city, towards the 150th performance. It is drawing capacity audiences and it will probably reach the end of its season at this house with this record of big business still the same. None of Mr. Thomas' other comedies yielded the abundant laughter which "The Other Girl" provokes and none has been so thoroughly satisfactory in the completeness of its characterizations or the thoroughly amusing quality of its situations. The fun is entirely New Yorky, of a sort which the theatregoers of the Metropolis readily appreciate and thoroughly understand. The acting of the piece is of a very high standard as Charles Frohman has put into it a remarkable cast which includes the great comedy soubrette Lionel Barrymore, Joseph Wheelock, Jr., Richard Bennett, Frank Worthing, and Elsie and Drina DeWolfe.

"The Wizard of Oz" is at home again at the Majestic Theatre, New York city, rejuvenated and as interestingly funny as ever. Opening night a packed house welcomed back the "Scarecrow" and "Tin Woodman," Fred Stone and Dave Montgomery, Anna Laughlin, Bessie Wynn, Lotta Faust and all the other favorites, with a heartiness that drew tears to the artists' eyes. New York Herald says: "'The Wizard of Oz'" returned to the Majestic as popular as ever and the 'Scarecrow,' Mr. Tin Woodman,' 'Trixie,' 'Dorothy,' the Lion and Cowrane renewed their old time hits. Talk about receptions: The most exacting grand opera singer could not expect bigger ovations than were tendered the favorites."

Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger have arranged for Wright Lorimer to make his production of "The Shepherd King" at the Knickerbooker Theatre, New York, Easter Monday, April 4. Contracts had previously been signed for the New York Theatre, but after the rehearsals had started, and the scenery had been placed on the stage of the New York for inspection, Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger decided, on account of the unusual excellence of the play and production, that the attraction should be transferred to the Knickerbocker Theatre. Such a procedure as this, before a play has been produced, is something very unusual, and it presages a brilliant success for Mr. Lorimer.

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL'S RECORD

APPOINTMENTS MADE AND REPORTS PRESENTED AT THE FIRST BAPTIST.

Interesting reports were presented nd appointments made at the annual meeting of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, held Sunday afternoon in connection with the Easter ervice. Superintendent George H Batcheler announced there appointments: First assistant, George F. Brown; second assistant, L. H. Bigelow, Jr.; superintendent of the Junior department, Miss Edith Cairns; superintendent Primary department, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; superintendent Home department, Miss Lucy Runyon; chairman missionary committee, C. W. McCutchen; benevolent committee, Miss Ida Yerker; finance committee, George A. Chapman; librarian, B. J. Shreve.

It was also announced that the annual excursion to Asbury Park would be held on July 7, and that Scotch Plains and New Market Baptist Sunday-schools have been invited to join. The Union County Sunday-school convention will meet at this church on October 13. The morning sessions of the school will begin on Sunday, June 19 and on Sunday afternoon, October 2, the afternoon sessions will be resumed.

Mr. Batcheler then announced that the attendance for the day was 397 and the collection $12.03.

C. B. Rittenhouse presented his annual report as secretary. It was stated that forty-eight members of the school recently joined the church. The membership of the main school is 376, a decrease of eighteen over last year, that of the junior department, sixty-seven, a decrease of five, that of the primary department ninety-four, a decrease of seven, making the total 434 with a membership of 134 in the Home department and sixteen on the cradle roll. The average attendance was 302, and taking out the stormy Sundays it was 292. The largest attendance was on rally day, there being 357 present. The total collections for the year were $744 93. The school is self-supporting and the financial condition excellent.

WESTFIELD'S TEAM READY FOR SEASON

Manager Denman Announces the List of Players and Partial Schedule.

PAST PERFORMANCES

OPENING GAME THIS YEAR TO TAKE PLACE APRIL 23.

The Seventh Regiment Aggregation Their Opponents in Initial Match—Many Old Faces on Union County Champion Ball Nine.

Next to the interest in what is going on in local baseball circles the cranks turn to the developments at Westfield. Five years ago ball in this section was as dead as a door nail. Westfield got together in the spirit of good and clean exhibitions and in 1900 opened their Recreation Park, then an open lot, with a fairly good outfit which included "Many" McIntyre, "Neily" Collins, "Doc" Doyle, and George Bolsterle. They opened the way nicely, came out ahead in games won and made money enough to improve their grounds.

In 1901 they bettered their team, securing VanZant, Mallen, Beck, Pollard, Burke and other semi-professionals. That year closed better than the previous and with money to the good to further improve their grounds. 1902 found the team still the best attraction in Union County until late in the season Scotch Plains started with no great pretentions but closed brilliantly. That year a Westfield made a standing with Plainfield people by reason of the memorable consolidated-Westfield series which was nip and tuck ball and good enough for any body. Last year Westfield launched thoroughly up-to-date. It's seven acre plot without tree or stump, as flat as a billiard table, enclosed and with field thoroughly grained, ample grand stand and bleecher capacity, plenty of carriage room and a full view for every spectator made the arrangements better than the average big league ground. The team was selected for winning purposes, there was no changing of players unless demanded by men going higher up and with such tried and true players as Capt Mallen, Jack Burke, Tommy Barry and Harry Jones, the team work was invariably clock work in its action.

It is now only a question of waiting for April 23 to see the Westfield team start off in its old time form. The men were signed weeks ago and are: Burke, catcher; Waller, pitcher; Smithson, short-stop; Carey, first base; Stallings, second base; Barry, third base; McManus, left field; Goldberg, center field and Capt. Mallen, right.

Of this bunch Stallings is the only man who has not had Westfield experience. Last year he was with Madison and the Baysides and is as good an infielder with a heavy bat swing as there is hereabouts. The opening will be April 22 against the Seventh Regiment team. Last year's opening was against this team and it took ten innings for Westfield to win out 6 to 5. Burke, of last year's team and later with Poughkeepsie, will be with Westfield in its first games.

Other games are April 30 with Chatham, which team defeated the Orange A. C. twice last year. May Nat. Strong's Murray Hills have a try? This team is practically the Orange team of last year. On May 21, the first of the Acelian series is on, the other dates being June 18, July 16, August 20 and September 5 a. m. The series with Alls opens here July 4 a. m., followed by July 23 and September 10 at Westfield and August 13 here. If the fifth game is necessary it will be decided later as to grounds.

Manager Denman is out with the statement that he wants the Union County championship earned and is ready and willing to meet any and all teams within the county.

POLICEMEN CHANGE BEATS

CHIEF KIELY MAKES THE CUSTOMARY TRANSFERS IN DEPARTMENT.

The most recent shake-up in the beats of members of the police force has been a thorough one. "Maury" Higgins, who has presided over the destinies of the West End for the past three years, is now preserving law and order at the other extremity of the city. Boundsman Flynn has been shifted to the West End; Patrolman McGinley has been changed from his night beat in the western part of the city to the territory around Seventh street. Patrolman Mesler is stationed at Netherwood in place of Patrolman Saunders; Hamilton has beat No. 4, Charles Flynn No. 1, Saffron 10 and 11, Overbaugh has Vanderveg's old route; and Myers and Quass have town beats.

CONGREGATION GREETS THEIR NEW PASTOR

Rev. George Mooney Preaches His First Sermon at the Monroe Ave. M. E. Church.

FAVORABLE IMPRESSION

REV. JOHN M'MURRAY WITH HIS JERSEY CITY FLOCK.

Former Plainfield Pastor Receives Hearty Welcome From His New Congregation at the Brown Memorial Church Sunday.

Rev. George Mooney, the new pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, made his first appearance in his new pulpit Sunday. He was greeted by large congregations, and produced a highly favorable impression.

Mr. Mooney was in charge of both services, morning and evening, and spoke to the Sunday-school in the afternoon. The church was crowded with worshippers at each service, and the new pastor was listened to with close attention. He charmed the congregations with his style of delivery and phrase, and all the worshippers who commented on him expressed a warm pleasure over the discourses.

He is deliberate in delivery, with a pleasing pulpit presence. He used few notes, but his discourse flowed on as smoothly as if read from manuscript.

In the course of his morning sermon he struck a personal note, expressing his pleasure over his new appointment in happy phrase. "I expect that we, as pastor and people," he said, "will become fast friends."

Mr. Mooney was warmly greeted by the church people after each service. It was the first time that the great majority had seen him.

While his successor was introducing himself to the pastorate here, Rev. John McMurray performed the first formal acts of ministry at his new church, the Brown Memorial, in Jersey City. He was cordially welcomed.

Mr. McMurray preached two Easter sermons. He made only brief personal reference, but took occasion to express his pleasure at being with his new flock. The church was filled at both services, and Mr. McMurray's arm was sore from the hearty handshaking to which he responded yesterday.

But the soreness was a source of pleasure when he thought of it this morning. When a Daily Press reporter spoke to him he appeared to be extremely happy in the remembrance of the cordial greetings that had been extended to him.

"It is a fine field," he said. "I am very well pleased with it."

Mr. McMurray and his family will not move from here to their new home until Thursday. On the afternoon of the same day his successor at Monroe will move into the Monroe Avenue parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mondeau, of East Second street, have gone to Pennsylvania, where they will live in the future.

PRESENT OF FATHER'S PORTRAIT TO CHURCH

Alexander Titsworth Gives Handsome Work in Oil of the Late John Titsworth.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONGREGATION LARGELY ATTENDED.

Officers Are Elected for the Year and Encouraging Reports Were Read—David E. Titsworth Acts as Chairman.

The feature of the sixty-sixth annual church meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of Christ, held Sunday afternoon and at night, was the presentation to the church by Alexander Titsworth of a fine oil oil painting portrait of his father, John Titsworth, who was one of the constituent members of the church and for many years prominent in its work. Mr. Titsworth presented the picture with a few impressive words and it was received with appreciation by Chairman Titsworth, for the church. The portrait will occupy a prominent position in the church together with those of others received some time ago.

David E. Titsworth was chairman of the meeting and Asa F. Randolph, clerk. After the social greeting and devotional exercises, the business of the afternoon was taken up. This included the report of trustees by J. A. Hubbard, secretary; report of treasurer, by J. F. Hubbard. These reports were encouraging and showed a substantial balance in the treasury.

The election resulted as follows:

Trustees, five years, David E. Titsworth; church clerk, Asa F. Randolph; assistant treasurer, G. E. Stillman; auditors, A. L. Titsworth and Charles H. Dunham; subscription committee, F. J. Hubbard and Orra S. Rogers; chorister, David E. Titsworth; organist, Miss Jessie Utter; head usher, Clarence Rogers. The afternoon session was concluded with a social and fellowship hour and the reading of letters from absent members.

Supper was then served by Mrs. T. B. Titsworth, Mrs. T. C. Smith, Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Miss Ida Randolph, Miss Luella Clawson and Miss Ernestine Smith.

The evening service opened with song and devotional exercises, after which there were a number of reports of an informal character. Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor, gave a brief report for the church, while Asa F. Randolph, as church clerk, submitted a report concerning the general condition of the church. David E. Titsworth, who recently resigned as superintendent of the Sunday-school after a service of twenty years, gave a brief summary of the school, and Mrs. T. C. Smith gave the report for the Woman's Society for Christian Work, telling of the work during the year. Miss Mary St. John reported for the Senior Endeavor Society, Mrs. F. J. Hubbard for the Intermediate and Mrs. I. N. West for the Junior Societies.

These followed reports of representatives of all the charitable and philanthropic societies in the city and elsewhere. There was a general interest about all of these reports, showing progress and an increase both as to numbers and contributions and the meeting showed very satisfactory results.

This committee was in charge of the meeting: William C. Hubbard, Rev. George B. Shaw, Mrs. George H. Babcock, George L. Babcock and Mrs. F. A. Dunham.

DEFEATED CO. K MARKSMEN

CO. I, OF NEWARK, WON MATCH SHOOT ON ITS OWN RANGE.

In a return match shot on the Newark armory range Saturday night the marksmen of Company I, First Regiment, defeated Company K, of the Second Regiment, of this city. The Newark team won by 18 points, the total scores being Company I, 836; Company K, 818. The conditions were ten rounds at both standing and prone, the distance being 200 and 300 yards respectively. In the former match, shot several months ago the Plainfield marksmen won by 9 points, and their defeat Saturday night caused them to feel somewhat blue. In conjunction with the local match, Captain Martin, of Company K had arranged to have Companies L, of Princeton, and B, of Camden, shoot at their respective ranges. In this match the former company won.

Harry Johnson, of Watchung avenue, is much improved from injuries he recently sustained by being thrown from his carriage.

MINOR TRANSACTIONS OF COMMON COUNCIL

Final Adoption of Resolution Providing An Appropriation of $125,000 for New School.

$1,000 FOR HOSPITAL

SETTLEMENT TO BE MADE FOR THE MYRTLE AVENUE EXTENSION.

Gas More 'Phone for the City—City Officials to be Supplied With a Magazine on Municipal Work —Tax Budget Laid Over.

The business considered at the April meeting of the Council Monday, in addition to the question of the municipal collection of garbage, was chiefly of a routine nature. All of the members were present except Mr. Wilson.

During the session Mr. Daniel called up the ordinance providing for the appropriation of $125,000 for the purchase of lands and the erection of a new High School and it was adopted on its third reading.

Under the head of petitions, several were received. One for an electric light on Midway avenue, between Berkley and Johnston avenues, one asking that Cedar brook be widened, and the channel deepened. Another from the Public Service Corporation informed the Council that one light previously ordered had been put in place and a communication was received from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital in which the Board agreed to take care of the city's poor for one year for the sum of $1,000 In connection with this Mr. Garrigues offered a resolution providing that the Council appropriate that sum to the hospital, and the resolution was adopted

City Judge William H. Runyon's quarterly report was received, showing that 123 [cases had been disposed of and $180 received in fines. Building Inspector Deane reported that ten building permits were granted during last month.

Mr. Daniel reported on several matters, one of which was a petition received December 4 last from F. E. Kinsman, regarding the purchase of property at 433-435 Pemberton avenue, under the Martin Act. Accompanying the report was an opinion from the corporation counsel, in which the Council was advised to re-imburse Mr. Kinsman for taxes paid for redemption, not including that paid representing the amount for taxes. A resolution was offered by Mr. Daniel concurring in the opinion of Mr. Marsh and was adopted.

Resolutions offered by Mr. Daniel provided for the transfer of $2,500 from the general to the fire fund and $500 from the same fund to the poor fund and for the loan of $1,500 for sewer improvements were adopted.

Mr. Gloak offered resolutions providing for a settlement with property-owners in the proposed opening of Myrtle avenue from Green brook to Compton. A resolution authorizing Collector F. H. Smith to receive money so received. These resolutions were adopted. They also provided that in case the property-owners fail to settle on the terms in the report of the commissioners, the land is to be taken for the purpose decided upon.

Mr. Gloak offered another resolution to the effect that the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company be requested to establish another telephone for the use of the street commissioner. It will be placed in the home of Mr. Gloak, chairman of the street committee, without expense to the city.

Mr. Murphy offered resolutions granting one light on Berkely avenue, between Park lane and Leland avenue and another one on Prospect avenue, between Hillside and Woodland avenues. These were granted in response to petitions.

Mr. Bullock, who has been a reader of the Municipal Journal and Engineer, an authority on matters of interest to municipalities, especially in regard to sewage and the collection and disposal of garbage, offered a resolution that the city subscribe for fifteen copies at $2 each, per year. Each member of the Council will receive a copy, as will also the chiefs of the fire and police departments and the street commissioner. The resolution was adopted, Mr. Daniel alone voting no.

Mr. Daniel stated in conclusion that it had always been the custom to introduce the tax ordinance at the April meeting, but in view of the fact that the session would be a busy one it was decided to lay the matter over until an adjourned meeting. He then moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Wednesday night, April 13

Mrs VanNest, of Bound Brook, who has been stopping with Mrs. T. E. Davis, of West Fifth street, has returned home.

Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, of Maine, the temperance lecturer, is the guest of Joel D. Manning and daughter, of Plainfield avenue.

SOCIETY'S DANCE A BRILIANT AFFAIR

Easter Week Event Attracts Plainfield's Smart Set to the Casino.

AN UNIQUE FEATURE

STRIKING DECORATIONS MAKE THE SCENES ENCHANTING.

Lewis G. Timpson Leads Cotillion—Society Folk From Out of Town Gather in Numbers—The List of Patronesses.

Full of novel features and figures, the third and last cotillion of the season was a brilliant success at the Casino Monday. As the first social affair after the dulness of Lent, it was enjoyed to the full by practically the entire society set. The Cotillion Club was out in full force. There were a number of out-of-town guests.

Handsome and striking decorations transformed the ball. The stage was hidden behind masses of Easter flowers, and broad yellow streamers stretched from the chandelier to all the sides and corners of the ballroom. Two orchestras played alternately. The string orchestra, of five pieces, was in charge of Fred and William VanEps, of this city. Austin, of Brooklyn, furnished the other musicians.

Lewis G. Timpson led the cotillion. An admirable leader as all times, he surpassed himself last night. The figures were pretty and new, and there was a wide variety and much novelty in the favors.

It was intended to be an Easter cotillion, and the character of the affair was emphasized in all the features. Just before the supper the chief surprise of the evening was sprung. A screen before the main entrance was drawn suddenly, disclosing an Easter float drawn by a monster chick. The chick trotted through the ballroom with his float, amid a lot of handclapping that amply rewarded Mr. Timpson, who designed the surprise. The float bore a big yellow egg and a chirping brood of fluffy little chicks. Souvenir eggs, filled with candies, and Easter rabbits, were distributed to the ladies from the float. Ada Johnson, the tiny daughter of the sexton of Grace P. E. church, was the chick.

Supper was an elaborate affair, served in the Casino parlors at prettily decorated tables. After supper another surprise greeted the dancers. A big poster of the "Babes in Toyland" extravaganza was hung back of a drop curtain, with the faces of the figures cut out. At a signal from Mr. Timpson the curtain was rolled up and the ladies showed their faces in the holes in the poster. The men chose their partners from in front of the poster, the ladies marching in turn behind the poster until all of them had been supplied with partners.

The patronesses of the cotillion were Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. D. C. Ivins, Mrs. J. B. Dumont, Mrs. H. O. Fleming, Mrs. C. F. Abbott and C. E. Brooks.

Before the cotillion a number of private dinners were held, to bring the dancers together. In this way Mrs. E. M. VanBuren, the Misses Waring, Mrs. T. D. Wilson and Mrs. L. E. Waring entertained.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HANNAH POPE

OBSEQUIES CONDUCTED BY SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST MINISTERS.

The funeral services of Mrs. Hannah Pope, widow of the late Elias R. Pope, were held Monday from the home in Park avenue at 7:45 o'clock. There was a large gathering of relatives, friends and neighbors, and the floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, read the Scripture selection and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, a former pastor of the church, made the address and at the close offered prayer and pronounced the benediction. Dr. Lewis paid deserving tribute to the life of Mrs. Pope, referring to her many excellent Christian qualities and her devotion to the cause of religion, as well as to her home. During the services, E. E. Runyon sang "The Homeland," and "Nearer My Home Today."

The interment took place this morning at Hillside Cemetery, the remains being placed in a vault besides those of Mrs. Pope's husband.

Contract Cases.

Suit has been instituted in the Supreme Court by Counselor F. J. Blatz, for the Trenton Abbatoir Co. against Caroline Millward for $1,000 damages, on contract, and also against Francis A. Bartlett for $1,000 damages, on contract.

MUNICIPAL GARBAGE SYSTEM IS DEFERRED

The Scheme Can Not Go Into Effect Until the Legislature Acts.

BILL TO BE DRAFTED

THE MATTER IS REFERRED TO STREET AND SEWER COMMITTEE.

Public Hearing is Given by Councilmanic Body and Prominent Citizens Speak in Favor of the Proposed Improvement.

The proposed system of municipal collection of garbage so zealously advocated by the Board of Health, the city physicians, as well as many citizens, is not to be established for the present. The Common Council has discovered that it can afford to purchase the crematory plant in the West End of the city, but it cannot see its way clear to maintaining it afterward. In other words the present means of the city will not permit it to introduce the system here now.

It has been decided that if the city is to have an improvement it must come through special legislation.

With this in view, a resolution offered by Mr. Tyler, and amended by Mr. Lee, was adopted. This resolution provides that the street committee take up the question of providing annually a system of garbage collection and disposal and that the corporation counsel be asked to draft a suitable bill to be sent to the city's representative in the Legislature for action at the special session of that body if possible. In the meantime the committee is to take such steps as are necessary in the matter and consider the data now in hand for the purpose of ascertaining what can be done at the earliest possible time toward securing such a system. Mr. Tyler's original resolution provided that the matter be considered by a committee of three of which the President be one, but Mr. Lee's amendment provided that the matter be referred to the street and sewer committee, and this prevailed.

During the public hearing on the question of municipal collection of garbage, a number of petitions were received favoring the system and some protesting against the city operating the plant in Dudley avenue, on account of the stench. Among those favoring the plan through communications were George P. Mallick, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, Col. Alfred A. Woodbull, formerly of the U. S. A., in the Philippines and now of Princeton University; Drs. J. H. Carman, J. B. Probasco, M. B. Long, Albert Pitts, N. W. Currie and W. Kempton Browning.

There was a remonstrance, signed by a majority of the residents living in the vicinity of DeKalb avenue, protesting against the operation of the crematory. A communication received from the Board of Health stated that 412 replies have been received from the circular letter sent to residents and tax-payers and of that number 389 were in favor and twenty-three were against. Dr. W. H. Murray and Dr. F. C. Ard spoke in favor of the system. Rev. E. E. Jackson was present to speak a word for his race, asking that if the system should be adopted those now engaged in collecting ashes and garbage be given preference in employment. He said that he represented people who owns $100,000 worth of property in the city.

David Hand protested against the system. He favored a plan whereby arrangement could be made to have the garbage and ashes carried to some distant point. He offered to pay the city $500 a year for the privilege, providing the city would collect the garbage and ashes and deliver it to him, he in turn to take it away. He would give a bond for the faithful performance of the work. He thought that there were others who might offer more. John Kear, of East Seventh street, approved of the system of collecting garbage, but entered against the collecting ashes should not be disturbed, as it was their only means of a livelihood.

Joseph Kitchen, a resident of the West End of the city, who was employed at the DeKalb avenue plant, when it was in operation a few years ago, gave testimony against the success of the plant. He said the plant would not destroy by fire the garbage collection in the city and that arrangements had to be made that farmers to cart the stuff away. He declared that the system never worked satisfactorily.

Mr. Lee expressed a desire that the question be taken up as soon as possible, but advocated the taking of sufficient time before adopting any plan. He thought that if the system should be adopted by fall it would be quick time. He favored a thorough examination of the question.

WOMAN ATTEMPTS TO KILL HERSELF

While Husband is at Mass, Mrs. Bridget O'Brien Cuts Her Throat With Razor.

THE INJURY NOT FATAL

CHILD'S CRY STAYS HAND OF THE TEMPORARILY DERANGED WOMAN.

Shocked by Bolt of Lightning, Mrs. O'Brien Has Been in Peculiar State of Mind Recently—In Muhlenberg Hospital.

In what promises to be a futile attempt at self destruction, Mrs. Bridget O'Brien, thirty-five years old, of 1113 West Third street, cut her throat and partially severed her windpipe, Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. At Muhlenberg Hospital this morning, Mrs. O'Brien was resting quietly and reported as on the road to recovery.

Mrs. O'Brien made the effort to end her life during the absence of her husband as the Easter service at St. Mary's church, and had her attention not been drawn to her baby daughter, Annie, who fell from her chair and began to cry, she would have accomplished her purpose. She dropped the razor, picked the child up and after rapping on the partition to call in the occupants of the other half of the house, attempted to stanch with cold water from the pump, the blood which flowed copiously from a gash about two inches long.

In response to her cries for assistance, Mrs. Elias Clickner, a widow, who, together with her son, Spencer C. Clickner, and a married daughter lives in the western half of the double house 1113 and 1115 West Third street, ran to her assistance.

Dr. F. B. Oregar was called and, after temporarily dressing the wound, ordered Mrs. O'Brien's removal to the hospital. A message was sent to St. Mary's church, and the husband, James O'Brien, and Father Egan were summoned. Father Egan administered extreme unction to the apparently dying woman.

Meanwhile Special Officer James Bolmer, who resides nearly opposite the O'Briens at 1116 West Third street, had telephoned to police headquarters from box 54. Driver Thomas O'Gorman and Patrolman Overbagh made the run from headquarters in record time. Manager James Davis in response to a call from police headquarters took the Muhlenberg Hospital ambulance and started immediately for the O'Brien home. Owing to some misunderstanding the ambulance was directed to DeKalb avenue and only arrived at the house in time to see the patrol wagon start on its way to the hospital, transformed for the nonce from an instrument of justice into one of mercy.

Arriving at the hospital Mrs. O'Brien was immediately placed in the hands of Drs. Murray and Buchanan.

James O'Brien, who is employed at the Safe Works, has lived for some time at the West Third street address together with his wife, their two boys, John, four years old, James, two years old and the baby daughter, Annie, nine months old.

During the severe electrical storm which damaged several houses in this city last summer, Mrs. O'Brien received a terrific shock from a bolt of lightning which partially unroofed the house. The occurrence seemed to make a very deep mental impression upon her as she has since been subject to periods of depression and despondency.

Under the impression that her health was failing she had placed herself under medical care, having consulted Dr. Frank M. Donohue, of New Brunswick, recently.

According to one resident in the vicinity she attempted to leap from the second story of her home a week ago but was prevented from doing so. At intervals through the past week she has spoken of dying and so frequent was her reference to this topic that her friends were much worried as to her mental condition.

Almost her first utterance yesterday after help came was: "O, Mrs. Clickner, the lightning! the lightning!" her mind having apparently reverted to the experience of last summer.

Small-Pox Patient Discharged.

Alexander Stills was discharged cured from the isolation hospital, last week, where for ten weeks he has been detained with small-pox. Mrs. Gerold, the trained nurse, has also been allowed to depart.

Dinner to Board.

The Board of Governors and the staff of Muhlenberg Hospital will be given a dinner on Monday, April 11, by former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who is president of that body.

—Mrs. Phillips, of West Front street, has moved to Brooklyn, where she will make her home in the future.

GRADUATION EXERCISES, P. H. S. ON JUNE 16

Plainfield Board of Education Arranges for Commencement Day of the Senior Class.

A GRATIFYING REPORT

SUPERINTENDENT MAXSON TELLS OF STANDARD IN COMMERCIAL COURSE.

Borrow Money for Temporary Need —Baptist Church the Place for Holding Annual Exercises— Boy to Deliver Oration.

Besides raising the salaries of teachers, the Board of Education did little Monday out of the ordinary routine of business. For the finance committee, L. N. Lovell, chairman, reported. It was voted to authorize the borrowing of $8,496.93 from the City National Bank, to meet the expense of the recent competition for the best architect's plans for the new High School building; to pay for the removing of bodies from the ground acquired for the building to Hillside cemetery; and to meet the expense of curbing and flagging the street, with a few minor expenses. The bill for removing the bodies was about $1,800 and for curbing and flagging the street, $172.

Permission was granted the Senior class of the High School to give its play, "She Stoops to Conquer," at the Casino instead of in Franklin Hall as usual, in order to accommodate a large number of friends of the class. Announcement was made of the appointments of Miss Anna Broadnax as valedictorian and Miss Randall as salutatorian for the High School commencement exercises. It was recommended and voted that a place on the Commencement programme be given to one of the boys of the class in order to emphasize the oratorical part of the school's work.

Superintendent Maxson made a strongly favorable report on the work of graduates of the commercial department of the High School. He said that one of the graduates recently took the examinations at one of the large employment agencies and was complimented on the unusually high average attained. Several other similar reports on the thorough work of graduates were cited and mention was made of the first that one young woman within a few months of graduation took a $600 position with the prospect of an early advancement to $750. Other recent graduates are receiving salaries higher than Plainfield teachers.

On motion of Mr. Cave, the committee on teachers was authorized to contract with teachers for the ensuing school year. It was announced by Dr. Probasco that the High School commencement exercises would take place in the First Baptist church Thursday, June 16. The clerk was instructed to arrange for the music and other details. The matter of advertising for bids for supplying coal, and other materials and supplies for the schools for next year was referred to the proper committees.

MRS. SUSAN DUNHAM DEAD

MOTHER OF W. C. DUNHAM PASSES AWAY AT DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Susan M. Dunham, mother of W. C. Dunham, of the Dunham Grocery Company, of this city, died Tuesday afternoon at her home in Dunellen. She had been in feeble health and an attack of the grip, lasting about ten days, greatly weakened her system.

Mrs. Dunham was born near Warrenville, and was the daughter of John Smalley. For many years she lived between New Market and Bound Brook. Fifteen years ago she moved to Dunellen, where she continued her residence until the time of her death. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. A son, W. C. Dunham and a daughter, Mrs. Isaac E. Giles, of Grove street, survive her.

The funeral services will be held from the late home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the interment will be in Hillside cemetery, this city.

Burial of Gypsy Queen.

Mrs. Reilley, the famous gypsy queen, will be buried Monday morning, the services to take place at Hillside cemetery. Gypsies from all parts of the country even as far as California are arriving to witness the ceremony. Mrs. Reilley will be buried on a knoll in the southeastern part of the cemetery.

Talk on Birds.

Miss Emily Tracy, of this city, will give a talk on birds in the library room at Scotch Plains on Monday afternoon. The lecture is under the auspices of the C. B. C. of the Scotch Plains M. E. church.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' SALARIES ARE RAISED

Action Taken by Board of Education to Prevent Teachers From Leaving the Schools.

THE PLAN ADOPTED

UNANIMOUS ACTION TAKEN ON REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Change Mean an Expenditure of Only $700—Increased Cost of Living the Reason Given for the Raise.

Plainfield school teachers are at last to have their salaries raised. The action was recommended Monday by the committee on teachers of the Board of Education, J. B. Probasco, chairman; C. F. Abbott and L. N. Lovell, and unanimously adopted by the Board.

The committee's report stated that, in the estimation of the members, the present maximum salary for teachers was inadequate. The increased cost of living during the past few years, it said, was not paralleled by an increase in teachers' salaries. Teachers have been troubled finding suitable boarding places at such cost as will leave them a fair balance at the end of the year. The maximum rate, according to the report, was materially less than that paid by any place in New Jersey of a similar standing.

These conditions, said the report further, have resulted in the loss of some of the best teachers at the end of each year, so that almost one-half the teachers have been in the service of the city three years or less. Such frequent changes, advised the report, lowered the standard of the school system to the serious loss of the school children.

The recommendation adopted was that the maximum salary for grade teachers be raised to $650 and that the maximum for women teachers at the High School be raised to $900, teachers receiving the present maximum to receive an additional $35 a year until the new maximum is reached. The change, it was stated, would entail an increased expenditure of about $700.

Sues for $30,000.

Suit for $30,000 has been brought by Mrs. Mary E. Stine, through her counsel, G. W. V. Moy, Esq., against the P. and Reading and New Jersey Central Railroads, for the death of John Stine. He was killed on the New Jersey Central tracks at Dunellen on Christmas Day.

Mayor's Brother-in-Law Dead.

BOROUGH PURCHASES WEST END'S HOSE CART

Former Volunteer Firemen Want $600 for Vehicle, But $350 is Agreed Upon.

TO BE PUT IN SERVICE

COUNCIL ORDERS THE OLD HOSE COMPANY'S HOUSE CLOSED.

Formal Acceptance of Price for Hose Wagon to be Given at Next Meeting of Borough Fathers—Only One Negative Vote.

Arrangements for the purchase of the hose cart owned by the West End Hose Company, for the use of the new paid department, were made by the Borough Council at its April meeting Friday night. The price to be paid is $350.

No opposition whatever was made to the purchase, and preliminaries attendant on the deal were quickly consummated. A committee from the former hose company, headed by Charles Keller, was present at the meeting to make the offer of the cart to the Council. After the matter had been brought up, the Council took a five minute recess to have the hose company committee meet the fire committee for formal arrangement of the matter. Within three minutes everything was satisfactorily decided. The company had originally asked for something like $600, the first cost of the cart, but the committee made no effort to insist on this price. After brief discussion the former volunteers told the fire committee that they were authorized to accept an offer of $350, and this price the councilmanic committee agreed to proffer.

When the Council re-convened Mr. Lee, of the committee, immediately moved that the company be offered the sum agreed on. The resolution went through promptly. At the next meeting the formal acceptance of the offer is expected to come in from the company, and a warrant for the money will be ordered drawn. The cart is in the new engine house Saturday.

In connection with this matter, it was moved to close the West End fire house. The new house is to be opened today, and there is no further need of the Harrison street house. Councilman Krewson (Cit.) voted against the resolution. Councilmen Humble and VanWinkle (Cits.) voted with the administration, the latter explaining afterwards that while he felt a house was needed in that section he could see no sense in keeping the present on open if there were no men to put in it.

MRS. HANNAH A. POPE DEAD

WIDOW OF ELIAS R. POPE PASSES AWAY SATURDAY ABOUT NOON.

After five weeks' illness, Mrs. Hannah A. Pope, widow of Elias R. Pope, the old-time Republican political leader in this city, died Saturday morning at 11, at an advanced age.

She is survived by two sons, F. A. Pope, at whose house on Park avenue she died; and Edward Pope, also a resident here.

Mrs. Pope was known to a large circle of Plainfielders. She was a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Her maiden name was Hannah Allen and she was born in Shiloh, this State.

Her husband, who has been dead about ten years, was one of the noted politicians of the State, and was a close friend of the late Senator Sewell. He as wealthy, and owned valuable real estate and banking holdings. He was interested in insurance and in the old gas company.

Mr. Pope was postmaster here for eight years and the leader of his party at a time when leadership called for skill of the highest character. At one time he represented this county in the Legislature.

ISAAC P. BROWN HAS PASSED AWAY

Plainfield Nonagenarian Dies From Old Age at His Home in Watchung Avenue.

MANY YEARS A MASON

CONTRACTOR WHO BUILT SECTION OF OLD MORRIS AND ESSEX RAILWAY.

Retired for Many Years—An Odd Fellow and Member of Asbestos Club, Now Known as Plainfield Club.

Isaac P. Brown died at his home on Watchung avenue early Saturday morning aged ninety two years.

He is survived by two sons, Isaac P. Brown, with whom he lived, and Warren S. Brown, of New York. The funeral was held from the house Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Interment took place in the family plot at Union.

Mr. Brown came to Plainfield forty years ago, after a successful career as a contractor and builder. He started in business early in life in Newark and became one of the biggest contractors in his line. Among his notable pieces of work was the laying of ninety miles of the D. L. and R. R. system, then the Morris and Essex R. R.

He was born near Woodbridge, of Revolutionary stock. He left home to earn his own living at fourteen, and rapidly advanced himself. By the time he was fifty-two he was ready to retire from business, and came to Plainfield to live.

He was said to be the oldest Free Mason in the State at the time of his death. He joined the order in 1846, and was a member of St. John's Lodge, Newark. At one time he was a member of the Grand Lodge. He was an Odd Fellow and a member of the Asbestos Club.

DOUBLE BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Choir's Surprise for Miss Clara Martin and Horace Martin.

After the choir rehearsal at Trinity church Friday, a surprise party was sprung on Miss Clara Martin and her brother, Horace Martin, Jr., by their fellow-members of the choir. Friday was Miss Martin's birthday and Saturday was that of her brother.

The affair took place in the church parlor. The principal feature was a "oobwah sociable." At the end of her "strand" Miss Martin found a handsomely decorated cup and saucer. Mr. Martin and the others who followed the web to its ends found things that reminded them it was April 1.

ALMOST KILLED BY EAGLE.

Wounded Bird Set Its Talons in Man's Thigh and Held On with Death Grip.

Two large bald eagles attacked Charles Read, a prominent ranchman of Redwood Valley, Cal., and he is now under a doctor's care for repairs. For some time Read had been missing sheep and lambs from his pasture, and concluding a stealthy coyote was making inroads on his flock, he set a number of traps, baiting with mutton. He discovered a large bald eagle in one of them. The eagle appeared to have worn itself out by its struggles and was lying down.

THE EAGLE ATTACKED HIM.

Read released the spring, but no sooner had he done so than the eagle attacked him. Its mate, which had been watching near by, soon joined in the fight. With their heavy wings they beat Read to the ground, all the while tearing his flesh and clothing with their talons and beaks. Read was so taken by surprise by the attack that it was several minutes before he thought to reach for his pistol, which had fallen from his pocket as he was thrown on the ground. While protecting his face with his arm he managed to get the barrel of the pistol against one bird and fired. The other was frightened away by the report. The wounded eagle sets its talons in the man's right thigh and held on with a death grip. When he recovered from his exhaustion Read found himself unable to remove the bird, as the muscles of the eagle's claws had grown rigid. He dragged himself to his cabin and was brought to the city, where the talons were cut out. The dead eagle measured nine feet from tip to tip.

A WEIRD WINTER STORY.

Strange Things Said to Have Happened When Temperature Was 35 Below Zero.

Oscar Wilte of Le Sueur, Minn., met with a most remarkable accident that very nearly cost him his life. With his rifle in hand he was attempting to get within range of a cat he desired to shoot, when the animal ran up into the frame work supporting the water tank.

Standing directly beneath the cat, Wilte shot straight up at it, carelessly forgetting the fact that the tank was within range.

The bullet killed the cat and pierced the bottom of the tank, and in an instant the water, gushing out, surrounded Mr. Wilte with a complete shower bath in a temperature of 35 degrees below zero.

Instantly his overshoes froze to the stone foundation on which he was standing, and, stooping to unbuckle them, he was chained by the spray, freezing in the terrible cold as fast as it fell into a helpless statue of ice, stiff and immovable as a stone. Only by his stooping posture, which kept his face free from the ice, was he saved from suffocation.

HELPLESS STATUE OF ICE

Soon the flow of water was stopped by the sediment in the tank flowing into the bullet hole, and a little son of Mr. Wilte, who had seen the whole affair, ran for assistance. It was necessary to loosen the unfortunate man's feet with chisels, and when he had been carried into the house by three strong men the ice had to be broken from him with clubs.

He was badly frightened by the experience, but otherwise unharmed.

The body of the cat was found frozen to his back.

Treasure in Smoke House.

While on his deathbed, Benjamin A. Worrell, of Worrells' Va., asked to have his will read to him, in which he had bequeathed vast property to relatives. He then wrote on the margin of the will, "dig in the southeast corner of the smoke house for buried treasure." In the place indicated a hoard of gold coins was found, amounting to $8,500.

WORK ON COURT HOUSE.

Dome of New County Building at Elizabeth Has Been Started.

Work has been started on the erection of the dome on the new Court House on Broad street, Elizabeth. This has been delayed for several weeks on account of the weather, but Jacob Brachlacher, of the commitee of the Board of Freeholders, having in charge the work, said that if the weather will permis this part of the work will be pushed forward to rapid completion. Much of the material for this part of the structure has arrived and it is probable that the dome will be completed within the next few months. It is planned to start work in finishing the interior of the building so that it will be ready for occupancy by January 1.

HAND'S MATRIMONIAL TALE

An idea of the comparative strength of the matrimonial market in the West and East may be gained from a letter received by Justice Hezekiah Hand from Prairie City, Oregon. Judge Hand's correspondent signs himself A. L. Dunn and says that a letter addressed to Box D, Prairie City, will reach him. Referring to the Judge's recent offer encouraging leap year and other marriages, he delivers himself as follows:

"I agree with you that He and She should mate, multiply and populate the earth. They make better men and women. If they don't avail themselves of your generous offer, they must have cold feet. You are doing the proper thing to encourage the spinsters. Bashful girls make modest wives.

"I wish we had some of your accomplished old maids out here in the West. It is astonishing to see the numbers of confirmed bachelors on this coast that could maintain a good home if they had someone to care for.

"Our Western girl is a beautiful creature but wild and hard to please, and true Eastern raised men are afraid to go against the game and take chances of figuring in a divorce suit before the honeymoon is over. Also they think there is no one can cook and keep house like an Eastern girl and from observations that's no dream.

"If your boys won't get down to business and do the right thing, kindly let me know and I shall take pleasure in placing the matter before our Bachelors Club."

PLAINFIELDERS AT LEHIGH.

Register of University a Volume of Interest to All Young Men.

The Register of Lehigh University, South Bethlehem, Pa., just issued, copies of which may be had on application, shows the attendance of 515 students from twenty-four States and ten foreign countries. In the list of students Plainfield is represented by F. R. Horne, L. W. Howard and P. S. Palmer. Union County is represented by six others, four being from Elizabeth and two from Rahway. There are fifty-four in the teaching staff.

A list of graduates of the University, 1904 in number during the 28 years of its existence, indicates that this institution is exerting a very marked influence on the industrial development of the United States, and also of foreign countries. Provision is made for worthy and needy students whereby they may postpone payment of tuition until after graduation.

HORSE BEAUTY SHOP.

UNIQUE INSTITUTION RECENTLY OPENED IN PHILADELPHIA.

Electric Massage, Pedicuring and Tooth Bleaching Applied to Aristocratic Steeds—Fashionable Gaits Taught.

A beauty parlor for horses has been established in Philadelphia. Here horses have their coats electrically massaged, their hoofs manicured and their teeth filed and whitened; and here they learn to stand properly and to move in all the fashionable gaits.

Beauty and a correct, graceful carriage are qualities as essential to horses as to women—they are qualities that increase a horse's value and insure him a good home—and therefore this equine beauty parlor of Philadelphia, which lacks no means that will aid a horse in his quest after better looks and a better deportment, is an institution both necessary and beneficent.

Probably the most interesting and novel operation to witness at the equine beauty parlor is the electrical massaging of a horse's coat. The electrical massage has the same effect on the coat of a horse as on the scalp of a man; it makes the hair thick and fine and glossy, and, where the skin has been rubbed bare, it brings on a new growth.

On a tray of sterilized nickel a number of very bright, clean instruments were spread—a horse's manicure set. There were odd-shaped knives for cleaning out the hoofs, files for smoothing off horny excrescences, polishing files and brushes for applying oil and powder.

"A good horse," said the operator, "should have his hoofs manicured every day. Then he won't go lame; his feet won't get diseased; he will look well and he will carry himself well."

The operator then described the process of teaching a horse certain ways of standing and certain gaits.

"You know how a horse should stand?" he said. "The forelegs planted firmly, apart and forward? Well, we teach this attitude with the whip. I don't mean by beating—I mean by touching. The whole thing is accomplished by setting the horse's feet in the proper position, then moving him a bit, and when he stops touching his legs with the whip till they fall into the proper position

A HORSE IN TRAINING.
(The Spectacle Hood, Used in Teaching High Stepping.)

again. It is a simple matter, but it requires a good deal of patience.

"Among gaits, the most difficult to teach is high stepping. This is done sometimes with the whip and sometimes with the spectacle hood. The spectacle hood is employed in the case of stupid horses. It consists of a hood with lenses covering the eyes. These lenses make the ground seem very near to the horse—make it seem almost up to his knees—and in order to advance he raises his feet very high, for at each stride it seems to him as though he were going over a step. Wearing this hood for a few months, he acquires the habit of throwing his forelegs up and out, and after the hood is taken off him he still sticks to the high-stepping gait.

"But the favorite way to teach high-stepping is with the whip. The horse acquires, one at a time, three movements or positions. First is the position of the leg up and stiff; second, the leg out, up and bent at the knee; third, the leg up and bent at the fetlock. These three movements, which we teach with gentle taps of the whip, compose high-stepping, and after a horse has learned them he is a high-stepper."

The operator took out a card containing the rates that are charged at his beauty parlor. The rates were:

Electrical massage, course of ten treatments	$ 5 00
Manicuring, per treatment	2 00
Tooth-cleaning, per treatment	2 50
Course in deportment, including standing position, walking and high-stepping	100 00

The proprietor of the beauty parlor is a veterinary surgeon of repute. The most expensive and fashionable horses of Philadelphia are numbered among his clients, and wherever an aristocratic wedding is to take place he can hardly attend to the multitude of fine horses that are brought to him to be burnished up.

Deepest Known Gold Mine.

What is believed to be the deepest gold mine in the world is being worked at Bendigo, Australia. The mine in question, which is called the New Chum Railway mine, has sunk its main shaft to a depth of 3,900 feet, or only 60 feet short of three-quarters of a mile. The chief problem is how to keep the tunnels and general workings cool enough for the miners to work in at such a depth. It is usually about 108 degrees, and, to enable the men to work at all, a spray of cold water let down from above has to be kept continually playing on the bodies naked from the waist upward—of the miners. Even then they cannot work hard, or they would faint from exhaustion.

COUNCILMANIC BODY IN NEW QUARTERS

The Borough Fathers Hold Their First Meeting in Fire Headquarters Chambers.

SELECT THE CALL MEN

JOHN H. M'CULLOUGH IS NAMED AS BOROUGH ELECTRICIAN.

Vote to Borrow $3,000 for the General Fund—Delinquent Taxpayers Property to Be Advertised.

Mayor Smalley announced three new appointments to the call force of the fire department, at the Council meeting last night, to take the place of men who had failed to qualify. They were C. W. Mundy, Edmund Terry and George W. Gaddis. On the question of confirmation Councilmen VanWinkle (Cit.) and Krewson (Cit.) voted nay. Councilman Humble (Cit.) voted with the Republicans.

John H. McCullough was named as borough electrician and Walter Smalley as special marshal. They were confirmed without a dissenting vote.

Councilman VanArsdale, for the police committee, reported the following statistics for March: 15 arrests; 4 suspended sentences; 7 sentences; 4 fines; $18 collected in fines.

Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, reported that the contracts for the year's supplies of flag stone and roadway stone had been let. $81 has been expended in cleaning up the streets and $74 in clearing away ice and snow. The committee was authorized to go on with the street cleaning work.

It was voted to borrow $3,000 for the general expense fund. The collector was authorized to advertise the property of delinquent tax-payers.

The meeting was held in the new chambers. There was some shifting in the seats, Councilmen Krewson and Humble being placed on the same side. Councilman VanWinkle is on the opposite side of the chamber. The Mayor's chair faces the body as it did in the old house, and Clerk Rowley's desk is in the same relative position. The "gallery" is also in the same relative position, facing the Mayor. The room is about the same size as the old one.

W. C. T. U. PARLOR SOCIAL

TEMPERANCE WORKERS GATHER AT HOME OF MISS ANNA BOICE.

Under the auspices of the social committee of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which Mrs. Frank W. Rowley is the chairman, a successful parlor meeting was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Anna Boice, in Park avenue. Despite the weather conditions, about twenty-five people were present to enjoy thelexcellent programme.

Miss Newman read an interesting account of the work of Mrs. L. M. Stevens, the National president, and her home life, and there were piano and violin duets by the Misses Burnet, while Mrs. George Powell presented a paper of exceptional merit on "Purity."

A social tea followed the programme. Mrs. Frank W. Rowley, assisted by Miss Stevens and Miss Maragret Burnet were in charge.

Next month there will be a medal contest in the rooms of the Union at which time there will be prize speaking and an entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music.

BANK WANTS ADMINISTRATOR

BRUNSWICK INSTITUTION SEEKS TO ASSERT ITS CLAIM IN SCHEPFLIN ESTATE.

Application has been made of the Surrogate at New Brunswick for the appointment of T. Ely Schenck as administrator of the estate of the late Christian Schepflin, of Dunellen. T. B. Bosraem, with Mr. Schenck, appeared before the Surrogate and made the application, inasmuch as none of the heirs had applied for letters of administration, within the forty days allowed by law. Mr. Schenck is cashier of the People's National Bank, which is a creditor of the deceased. The personal estate is valued at $50.

Mr. Schepflin, who for many years conducted a clothing factory in this city, was one of the officers of the Middlesex Bowling Green Club, having been its president for several years.

ROBERT A. MEEKER ON ROAD BUILDING

State Supervisor Explains the Art of Highway Construction to Trinity Men's Club.

NEW JERSEY FIRST

ROMANS KNEW BUT LITTLE ABOUT THE SUBJECT.

New York Uses Expensive Method—Massachusetts Next to New Jersey —Federal Government Copies After This State.

New Jersey as the pioneer State in the movement for good roads and the progress that has been made in general in road building were the subjects of a talk Thursday by Robert A. Meeker, State Supervisor of roads, before the Men's Association, of Trinity Reformed church. Mr. Meeker is an expert on the subject and his elucidation of methods of road-building and their history proved most interesting.

Whenever road-building is mentioned, New Jersey is cited as a model State. She was the first to build roads and keep them in repair under a State law. She has more hard roads outside of cities than any other State in the Union, the number of miles being 952, Massachusetts being second, and New York third, with about a third the mileage. The first roads were built in the Oranges, along the Watchung Mountains and Passaic Valley to Plainfield, and from that beginning the movement has spread throughout the State and nation.

Automobiles and especially bicycles have been largely instrumental in gathering a public sentiment in favor of good roads. In New Jersey there is a variety of soil and climate that present all conditions that a State can be confronted with for road building, hilly country, flat lands and stony and marsh lands. The plans for building roads in Jersey have been adopted by the government as a standard.

New York's method is expensive. Where road-building in Jersey costs $6,000 a mile, in New York the expense has been more than twice as great. Massachusetts has given New Jersey credit by appointing a commission to examine into Jersey methods.

There have been much sentiment and mock heroics attached to the Romans as road builders. The Roman roads were no better than dirt roads. The Romans did not know as much as Isaiah who said "cast down the hills and fill in the valleys." They did not fill in the hollows but built their roads along a straight line regardless of whether it led them over instead of around a high hill or down into a swamp. The Roman roads were well suited, however, to the marching of large bodies of infantry.

The Jesuits had better ideas of engineering than the Romans. They established many good highways in this continent and some of their work still remains, particularly in Eastern Cuba.

Good roads and the telephone have done much to aid in solving the problem of "how to keep the boy on the farm." They have brought to dwellers in cities an opportunity to appreciate on wheel or [automobile the beauties of life in the country. The New York business man is narrow, said Mr. Meeker, but the good roads movement has done much to take him out of himself and the hermit life of the city, giving him the educational force of a commingling with his fellows.

Mr. Meeker concluded with an explanation of various kinds of roads, stone, gravel, oyster shell, etc., each suited to special conditions. He also referred briefly to brick and other pavements for city streets.

President H. W. Marshall presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker. The entertainment was arranged by a committee of which Edgar F. Sheppard was chairman. A talk on insurance will be given at the April meeting of the association.

Belated Announcement.

Albert Edward Conway, of this city, and Miss Florence Sofield, of Bound Brook, were quietly married at the Congregational church parsonage, Bound Brook, on Wednesday night, by Rev. R. J. Thomson. The couple will live here.

Easter Vacation Days.

Lawrence Tweedy and Owen Fleming, of Princeton University, have returned to their homes in this city for their Easter holidays.

Leslie Sackett, of Bound Brook, has resigned his position at the Potter Press Company's plant.

Jim Scott and George Linser visited Newark Saturday to view the remains of the recent fire at the Gorke building.

MONROE AVE. M. E CHURCH'S NEW PASTOR

Career of Rev. George Mooney, Who is Appointed to Succeed Rev. John McMurray.

GENIAL IN DISPOSITION

GRADUATE OF NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY AND DREW SEMINARY.

Is Married and Has Two Sons—He Comes From Mendham—Preached His First Sermon Last Sunday.

Rev. George Mooney, the newly-appointed pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, has the reputation of being a genial person, a good worker and pastor. He is an eastern man by birth and began his preparation for the ministry in the Centenary Collegiate Institute at Hackettstown. Being graduated from there he entered Wesleyan University where he completed the course. Afterward he was graduated from Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., following which he joined the Northwest Nebraska Conference in 1894. He then became a missionary at Lander, Wyoming.

In 1896 he joined the Newark Conference and completed his studies at Drew Theological Seminary. His first appointment was at Milton, N. J., and in 1897-8-9 he was at Caldwell, Essex County, where he built the M. E. church. From 1900 to 1904 he was the pastor of the church at Mendham. He has the reputation of having been very successful in his work.

As to personality he is between 35 and 40 years of age, married and has two boys, one five years old and the other about three months. He is of medium height and stout build and dark complexion. He is said to be a good speaker.

DEAN SMYTH HOME AGAIN

FORMER PASTOR OF ST. MARY'S R. C. CHURCH RETURNS FROM ROME.

Very Rev. Dean P. W. Smyth, who is widely known here as Father Egan's predecessor at St. Mary's R. C. church, returned from a trip to Rome yesterday, surprising his parishioners of St. Joseph's church, Jersey City. He was not expected for several weeks.

While in Rome Father Smyth was the guest of Archbishop Seton, his predecessor at St. Joseph's and had a private audience with Pope Pius X. He received a special blessing for the parishioners of St. Joseph's and the pupils of the parochial school.

Father Smyth contemplated a tour of the British Isles after his visit to Rome, but abandoned his plans in that direction to join Archbishop Farley's party and return home by way of Genoa. He says his love for America drew him back irresistibly.

Father Smyth was made dean of the Jersey City district by the Bishop last summer.

TRIBUTE TO BOWEN.

Pamphlet of Translated Speeches of President Castro Dedicated to Plainfielder's Brother.

A translation into English of two speeches of General Cipriano Castro, president of Venezuela, has been published and dedicated to Hon. Herbert W. Bowen, U. S. minister to Venezuela and brother of Henry H. Bowen, of Watchung avenue. In the introduction of the pamphlet, Pedro Rafael Rincines, consul general of Venezuela, thus addresses Mr. Bowen: "In presenting to you the translation of two of the most notable documents produced by our patriot President, I beg to acknowledge the integrity and honesty of your character, which in the attack of 'three Powers' against Venezuela, led you to stand by the side of the righteousness, and won for the cause of 'Justice' the most enviable laurel in your diplomatical career. Please accept my warm admiration and sincere esteem."

George Morton, of West Front street, has taken a position at the New Jersey Central Railroad shops at Elizabethport.

Three hundred carpenters at Dubuque, Ia., went on strike Friday for an eight-hour day.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 10.

Topic—How the world's standards conflict with Christ's.—Matt. v, 6-8; I John ii, 15-17.

That there is a difference between the standards of the world and of Christ cannot be denied. The world in this sense is of course the carnal world, the hearts and lives of unregenerate men, the world of false business principles and standards, the world of sinful pleasure, the world of selfishness and of sin. Christ recognized the difference referred to, and He and the apostles laid emphasis upon the fact that Christ's people were to come out from the world and be separate from it, not conformed to it, but transformed by the Spirit of God.

The beatitudes of Christ are an illustration of the difference between the standards of Christ and those of the world. Christ said, "Blessed are the poor;" the world says, "Blessed are the rich." Christ said, "Blessed are they that mourn;" the world says, "Blessed are they that refrain from affliction and mourning." Christ said, "Blessed are the meek;" the world, "Blessed are the strong and aggressive." Christ, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst;" the world, "Blessed are they that have plenty to eat and drink." Who can read these beatitudes of Christ, who can understand the Christ spirit and the world spirit, and not be convinced that they are as far apart as the east from the west? Christ was in the world, but not of the world, and so His disciples, though in the world, should not be of it.

But since the standards of the world and Christ differ, how do they differ? They differ in their very spirit and foundations, which determine their external character. The difference is internal and then external. Christ's kingdom is founded upon love, unselfish, self denying love; the world kingdom upon selfishness, retaliation and hate. The world says: "Love those who love you and hate those who hate you. Mistreat those who mistreat you." Its law is that of retaliation and its rule "Do unto others as they do unto you." How different the standards of Christ—"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute!" Why? That we may be like God, who blesses the just and the unjust alike. But is the standard a possible one? Can we give love for enmity, blessing for curses, goodness for hate and prayers for mistreatment? It seems incredible, and yet by the grace of God it is possible, and for that grace we should pray and labor if it is not already ours. An unloving, selfish, retaliating professor of Christianity is one of the most pitiable objects in life and a stumbling block in the way of others. Let us shun the world standard and cultivate the Christ standard. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. * * * for the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

BIBLE READINGS.

Dan. i, 1-8; Matt. iv, 1-11; v, 1-12; Mark iv, 14-20; John xv, 17-27; xvii, 9-17; Rom. xii, 1,2; II Cor. vi, 14-18; Heb. xi; I John iii, 10-18; iv, 4-21; v, 1-5.

Oregon's President.

John A. Rockwood, president of the Oregon Christian Endeavor union, is a native of New York and a graduate of Amherst college. He has been a teacher and is now connected with the Oregon Railway & Navigation company. He is a Congregationalist and has the distinction of having been a member of the second Christian Endeavor society formed in Oregon. He has put his business tact and earnest enthusiasm into Christian Endeavor, and the splendid strides the society has made in Oregon are due in no small part to his efforts. Mr. Rockwood was chosen state treasurer in 1900 and elevated to the presidency in 1902.

JOHN A. ROCKWOOD.

Your Own Soul Fired First.

You can't have too much organization if you have life enough to vitalize it. Get the life that is "hid with Christ in God" and your Endeavorers. Get your own soul on fire, and then you will have some life to give to others.—Dr. F. E. Clark.

Quiet Hour Comrades.

An interesting accession to the comrades of the Quiet Hour is a list of nineteen sent from the French Evangelical church of New York city.

Nuggets From Dr. Clark.

Let me give you these three watchwords for this year: Organize. Vitalize. Evangelize.

We are only half organized in our church work—that is, we are organized in a slipshod way. God can use an organization in the religious world.

The difference between a mollusk and a man is a matter of organization very largely.

Finding out every one something to do" is the ideal of Christian Endeavor.

The very worst mistake is never to attempt anything for the Lord. Better attempt and bungle in it ever so badly than never to attempt at all.

There are new fields to conquer, new victories to win, more young people whom we can win. New generations are constantly coming forward. Are you looking after them? Are you reaching out for them?

OHIO'S NEW SENATOR.

CHARLES DICK WILL SUCCEED THE LATE MARK A. HANNA.

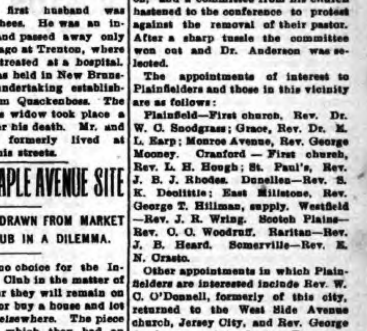
Has Had an Active Career in Ohio Politics and Was a Close Political Associate of McKinley.

Charles Dick, of Akron, O., is only one week younger than President Roosevelt. He was born at Akron and received what education he has in the public schools, where he studied until he was 14 years of age. He then commenced to work his own way in the world, clerking in a store two years and in a bank six years; his next position was in a factory, where he was employed for two years keeping books. At 24 years of age he went into the grain and commission business with Lucius C. Myles; at 28 years of age he was appointed auditor of Summit county, serving two terms. During these years he studied law, and was admitted to the bar by the Ohio supreme court.

Always active in politics, he was in 1884 chosen chairman of the republican county committee, and, as such, was in very close touch with the late President McKinley when the latter won his campaign for congress in Summit county. This led to McKinley calling upon Dick to help him in his campaign for nomination and election for the governorship and later for the presidency.

He has been campaign chairman for the Ohio republicans from 1892 to 1903. In 1894 and 1900 he was secretary of the republican national committee, and in 1902 and 1896 he was delegate from the Nineteenth district to the republican national convention. In 1900 he was delegate at large and in charge of the western headquarters at Chicago.

When the Spanish war began Gen. Dick, then lieutenant colonel of the Eight Ohio national guard infantry, at once enlisted with his regiment, serving in Cuba until the fever mortality around Santiago grew so great that Gen. Shafter ordered Col. Dick to Washington to report personally to President McKinley on the urgent need for change. It was Col. Roosevelt who urged Col. Dick to this duty. While he was still in service the Nineteenth congressional district republicans nominated and elected Col. Dick to congress to succeed Representative Northway, who died.



GEN. CHARLES DICK.
(Mr. Hanna's Successor as United States Senator from Ohio.)

The district of Giddings, Garfield and Ezra Taylor, proud of its memorable past, has approved Gen. Dick's congressional service by repeating reelection, and unanimously urged upon all Ohio republicans that the closest political associate of McKinley and Hanna was the most fitting successor for the latter in the United States senate. In 1900 he served where McKinley wanted him, and last year, to help Hanna, he complied with the latter's request not to contest with Herrick for the gubernatorial nomination, and then conducted for Hanna and Herrick the most successful campaign Ohio ever had. Such services and sacrifices for the republican party have made him friends in every county.

Not only has he been closest to McKinley and Hanna in all party politics, but his public service has steadily strengthened Gen. Dick's capacity for congressional duties. Few members of the house of his years have greater influence there. Elected major general of Ohio national guard upon its reorganization, after the Spanish war, and also by his comrades, president of the National Association of national guard officers, he succeeded in securing from congress the first complete militia law.

Navies of the World.

Of vessels, battleships, cruisers and scouts of over 1,000 tons now in commission in the world's navies, Great Britain has 201, aggregating 1,516,000 tons displacement; France, 96, aggregating 676,000 tons displacement; Germany, 73, aggregating 382,000 tons; Russia, 43, aggregating 329,000 tons; United States, 35, aggregating 295,000 tons; Italy, 28, aggregating 259,000 tons; Japan, 31, aggregating 208,000 tons. But if the 19 vessels now in course of building in the world's shipyards were completed, the tonnage of the United States would be more than double, and she would occupy third place, instead of fifth, with France still second and with England's power only three times as great as ours.

Heard at Jefferson's Lake.

Joseph Jefferson has a lake well stocked with fish on his Louisiana plantation. Not long ago he came upon a stranger fishing there. Stepping to his side, Jefferson politely invited his attention to the fact that he was fishing in a private reserve, in violation of the law. The stranger smiled easily. "You are mistaken, sir," he replied. "I'm not catching your fish; I'm feeding them!"

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 10: "Two Standards of Life."—Matt. v, 43-48; I John ii, 15-17.

Necessity for food, clothing and shelter drives men to work. This physical demand lies at the bottom of arts, science and trade. Progress in these develops other demands of the nature. The pleasurable and ornamental satisfy the cravings for the beautiful and harmonious and have as legitimate a place as the merely useful. Even potatoes are more than tubers and have a value other than for food, else foliage and flowers were needless. The world is beautiful. To him who has eyes to see and ears to hear there are pictures and music. Beauty and sublimity, melody and harmony, pervade it. There are sweet things and luscious tastes. There are cooling and invigorating drinks, breezes and perfumes. Sensations of exquisite pleasure are awakened by these things. Health and happiness come in their train. Well being is possible to us in a world made as this world is.

Perhaps one might know how to use it! Eyes are good for seeing and ears for hearing, and each power of our being has its proper function. In the world around us are multitudes of things and powers which appeal to these powers, and through our senses and other faculties reveal to us the great, complex world about us, of which we are part. But there is more than this to it. Things and their activities are not all there is. In it all and beyond it all is God. He is in control of the whole. Deeper and deeper goes the conviction within us as the horizon broadens around us that all this doing is not only caused by Him, but is full of purpose. Because our activities are not wild and wilful but directed by rational intelligence and a purposeful will we say the world without us shows God everywhere immanent and transcendent. We say so because we see and hear and know Him. Those other creatures may know or fail to know of Him, however the world may appear to them, this is what it means to us. All power is His power. All activity is manifestation of His will. All order is His law to human minds, and harmony are revelation of His nature.

And we can understand these things. We can know the language. Through sights and sounds God talks with us. We think His thoughts, comprehend His purposes, feel the thrill of His pleasure, catch the impulse of His activity, share in His work and nature and, awakening, cry, "My Father!" Doing this we master the world mystery and know that in all changes we shall abide with Him forever.

Falling this, what then? We eat and drink and dress and sing and dance and die. We love and hate, get and give, but know only the things which pass. All thought and care placed on the visible and present matters of the world, we never come to the vision of Him who makes all worlds. We know about His, but never come to know Him. "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," we never attain to His pardon, peace and life.

This life is worth much or little according to the way we use it. If used only to gratify the cravings of eyes, flesh and vainglorying spirit it is of little value. If the standard be the perfection of manhood after the pattern of the divine it has eternal and infinite worth.

Spiritual Beauty.

Beauty of character makes it winning and lovely. There may be soundness of doctrine in a narrow bigot, there may be rectitude and justice in an unlovely zealot, there may be purity in one whose virtue lacks all human warmth and sympathy, there may be consecrated zeal in one who has narrowness and moral uprightness that is altogether devoid of the beauty of holiness. Spiritual beauty comes from the heart. The character may be noble or strong or even grand when its chief element be the loyalty of the will to conscience, but in order that it may be beautiful it must have both feeling and freedom. It must have sympathy and spontaneousness. The virtue of Jesus was always beautiful. It was so full of human feeling and of divine power. It was not hard for Him to be good, and His goodness was never hard. His truth, His purity, His fortitude, His justice, were always filled with His love. His moral strength was always infinitely graceful. His divinity was human in its manifestation.—Northern Christian Advocate.

Infexible.

There is no sure road to invariable right actions, acts and words are always road of habit. No man can be sure of thinking, acting and speaking right at any one time who is not in the habit of doing it at all times, and the only way to attain the habit is not to err in the first. To acquire the habit of temperance, for example, the man must never in one act venture to excess. To acquire the habit of veracity he must never in one word depart from the truth.—Robert E. Speer.

Look Within.

The divine principle of work is the vital principle. God works from within, outward. When God wishes to bless His people He has first to get into the hearts of His people. It is when He is enthroned there, when He dwells there, that the life of blessing is fully known. If we therefore would prepare the way of the Lord we must prepare our hearts; if we would discover stumbling blocks we must begin our search here.—Rev. G. H. C. MacGregor.

A Man's Wealth.

The wealth of a man consists in the number of things he loves and blesses and in the number of things he is loved and blessed by.—Carlyle.

MARRIED IN SECRET; NOW LIVING HERE

Frank Berry, of North Plainfield, Wedded to Mrs. Voorhees, of New Brunswick.

CEREMONY IN JANUARY

PASTOR OF SOMERVILLE REFORMED CHURCH OFFICIATED.

Her First Husband Died a Few Months Ago—Second Marriage Followed Shortly Afterwards—Now Resids on Lincoln Place.

A secret wedding has just leaked out, which is the preliminary courtship stage, was deeply impregnated with romance. The bride is Mrs. Jessie VanTine Voorhees, formerly of New Brunswick, and the groom Frank Berry, of this city.

The marriage ceremony was performed in Somerville about the middle of January by the Rev. Mr. Cranmer, pastor of the Reformed church, at that place. The witnesses to the ceremony were members of the pastor's family. Mrs. Berry has lived nearly all her life in New Brunswick, and as Mrs. Jessie VanTine was known to a host of friends as an accomplished pianist and soprano singer. Mr. Berry is in business here and he has provided a home for his bride on Lincoln place. The groom's gift to the bride was an uprights piano.

The nuptials have been guarded so zealously that even their most intimate friends did not learn of the wedding until a few days ago, and then the happy couple were extended congratulations.

Mrs. Berry's first husband was Ferdinand Voorhees. He was an invalid for years and passed away only a few months ago at Trenton, where he was being treated at a hospital. His funeral was held in New Brunswick, at the undertaking establishment of William Quackenbos. The marriage of his widow took place a short time after his death. Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees formerly lived at Hiram and Dennis streets.

CAN'T GET MAPLE AVENUE SITE

PROPERTY WITHDRAWN FROM MARKET AND GUN CLUB IN A DILEMMA.

There is now no choice for the Independent Gun Club in the matter of deciding whether they will remain on Maple avenue or buy a house and lot for their range elsewhere. The piece of property on which they had an option on Maple avenue has been withdrawn from the market.

The gun club got a chance at the property through a hitch between the owner and the present lessee. It looked as if the matter would not be smoothed and the club put up $100 to secure an option on it. The tenant heard of the offer and the news stirred him to active negotiation with the landlord, and he settled the difference between them. Owing to a peculiarity in the agreement between the lessee and the landlord, which the club knew of, the organization cannot hold the owner to the option.

Where the new range is to be found the organization now has no idea. There is division of opinion as to the best location. Some of the members favor an outlying location and others believe one nearer the center of the borough would be better.

SAFE-GUARDING YOUNG WOMEN

PROTECTION TO BE AFFORDED BY W. C. T. U. AT ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

The Women's Christian Association, of St. Louis, realizing that efforts will be made by unscrupulous persons to entice young women to that city on the pretence of giving them employment during the exposition, have organized what is known as a "Travelers' Aid Women's Christian Association, and in communications sent to the W. C. T. U. throughout the country, have asked co-operation in providing safeguards for these young women.

This association, together with the W. C. T. U., and other organizations in St. Louis, has arranged for headquarters, where women visiting the exposition can go and secure respectable lodgings. The women are asked to wear a knot of blue ribbon on the left side of the waist and when they reach St. Louis look for committees at the railroad station wearing a blue badge with "Travelers' Aid of Women's Christian Association, St. Louis," printed thereon in gold letters. Women throughout the country are asked to lend their assistance to this plan.

CONGREGATION WON; DR. SNODGRASS STAYS

Pastor of First M. E. Slated for Presiding Eldership, But His Flock Registers protest.

REV. M'MURRAY LEAVES

REV. GEORGE MOONEY TRANSFERRED TO MONROE AVE. M. E. CHURCH.

Grace M. E. Secures Rev. Dr. Earp Again—The New Presiding Elder is Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of Westfield.

Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, has been transferred by the Newark Conference to the Brown Memorial church, Jersey City. Rev. George Mooney, of Mendham, has been sent to the Monroe Avenue church. The great surprise for the Elizabeth District was the appointment of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of Westfield, to be presiding elder of the Jersey City District. Among those mentioned for this place were Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass and Rev. Dr. J. L. Herbst.

Excluding the cases in which supplies were announced, there were twenty-three changes in the Elizabeth District, twenty-four in the Jersey City District, nine in the Paterson District, a total of eighty-seven.

The cause of the delay in the making of the appointments was due to the difficulty that the Bishop experienced in deciding upon a presiding elder for the Jersey City District. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, was decided upon, and a committee from his church hastened to the conference to protest against the removal of their pastor. After a sharp tussle the committee won out and Dr. Anderson was selected.

The appointments of interest to Plainfielders and those in this vicinity are as follows:

Plainfield—First church, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass; Grace, Rev. Dr. M. L. Earp; Monroe Avenue, Rev. George Mooney. Cranford — First church, Rev. L. H. Hough; St. Paul's, Rev. J. E. J. Rhodes. Dunellen—Rev. S. K. Deelittle; East Millstone, Rev. George T. Hillman, supply. Westfield —Rev. J. R. Wring. Scotch Plains—Rev. O. C. Woodruff. Raritan—Rev. J. B. Heard. Somerville—Rev. E. N. Cranston.

Other appointments in which Plainfielders are interested include Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, formerly of this city, returned to the West Side Avenue church, Jersey City, and Rev. George Angleman returned to Piermont, N. Y.

TO EXHIBIT INVENTION.

A. C. Rogers Plans to Show a Fire Department Contrivance at the Exposition.

Albert O. Rogers, of this city, is contemplating sending to the St. Louis exposition an exhibit of his electrical apparatus for registering alarms at a fire station. A system which includes many of his own inventions and improvements has worked successfully at the local fire headquarters since its installation two or three weeks ago. By means of it, when an alarm sounds at night, the building is lighted throughout on the instant of the ringing of the gong; a clock registers the time of the alarm; and the doors to the stables are automatically swung open.

TROLLEY DODGERS.

Name of Team Which Will Succeed Hope Nine in the West End.

In place of the Hope chapel team there will be another West End amateur baseball combination this season. Twelve good players have been secured for the nine, which will be strictly amateur and local.

Edward DeAvoy is manager of the nine, and George Hoffman will make a great reputation during the first league season on St. Mary's, is captain. The nine will go out for practice April 16. Games have been booked, and the team will start in at home on Decoration Day. No name has been chosen for the aggregation yet, but the men are calling themselves the Trolley Dodgers and it may be the only title they will play under.

Administrators Appointed.

Letters of administration have been granted by Surrogate Peter F. Daly, of Middlesex County, to William S. Stevens, of Dunellen, estate of Francis S. Stevens. Personal estate $1,000, also to Nelson Runyon, of this city, estate of Alfred Cottrelly, personal estate $100 and to Anna T. Carman, of Dunellen, estate of William H. Carman, personal property, $576.44.

Work is being rushed at the Manganese Steel Safe Company's plant. The plant has been running all night for the past week.

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE RESURRECTION

Beautiful Services in Churches and Sunday - Schools Mark Easter Day in Plainfield.

GOOD MUSIC A FEATURE

GENERAL OBSERVANCE OF THE DAY BY VARIOUS DENOMINATIONS.

Sunday-School Exercises Particularly Attractive — Addresses at the Several Services — A Big Gathering of Presbyterians.

All the Easter celebration was confined to the churches Sunday. The weather refused to have anything to do with the occasion. A cold northerly wind, that sometimes reached the strength of a miniature gale, whistled up and down the streets, and made mock of the hardy who appeared in spring attire. There was plenty of sunshine, however, and the church parade was large, if not as showy as an ideal spring day would have made it. All the churches were crowded, both morning and evening.

The stranger and the occasional worshipper were out in full force, attracted by the special musical programmes. All of the large churches, and most of the smaller ones, had the latter feature. Flowers in profusion decorated altars and platforms, with the ever-popular and time-honored lily in evidence everywhere.

The ritualistic churches had special services. Several of the other churches held Sunday-school celebrations, with elaborate exercises and programmes. The Episcopal churches held carol services for the children.

Easter exercises were held at the First M. E. church both morning and night, including anthems by the chorus choir, with solos by Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and Charles L. Lewis. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass, delivered sermons appropriate to the day. There was an elaborate display of flowers, palms and Easter lilies.

The Sunday-school held special exercises in the afternoon in Vincent chapel, which were in charge of Superintendent J. R. Joy. There was a service entitled "The Resurrection," in which all the classes took part. In addition there was an exercise by the primary department. Nelson A. Miller conducted the musical part of the service, and assisting were Robert Davis, cornet; Alvah Davis, trombone; A. H. Derby, double bass; R. Wilson Derby, violin. Miss Gertrude Sharp presided at the piano and Mrs. Thomas MacDonald sang soprano solos. Many of the flowers used in the church were also used in decorating the chapel.

The Easter services at the First Baptist church in the morning, consisted of anthems by the chorus choir, with solos by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; George Smith, tenor, and William Holmes, baritone. The pulpit platform was decorated with a large collection of beautiful flowers, palms and lilies. Assisting in the services were Miss Florence Wolfert, violin and Mrs. B. T. Barnes, piano. Howard Case presided at the organ.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Sunday-school held special exercises and observed its anniversary. The school sang carols, the choir rendered anthems and there was an offertory selection, organ, piano and violin, and the primary department sang an Easter carol. The offering was for the Nethewood Fresh Air Home. A feature was a short address by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, who did not fail to interest both old and young in a brief talk on the significance of the Resurrection. The Scripture readings were conducted by Assistant Superintendents George F. Brown and L. H. Bigiow, Jr.

The programme as published previously was followed at the Park Avenue Baptist church. At the morning, as well as night services, there were several candidates baptized by the pastor, Rev. E. A. Finn, and the latter also delivered appropriate sermons. In the morning several anthems were rendered by the chorus choir. At night the children's services were held. In addition to the singing of carols there was a selection by the women of the church and school, recitation, "He is not Dead," Adelbert VanBrakle; dialogue, "The Choir of Spring," Walter Canning and Mabel Stutsman; recitation, "A Basket of Flowers," Edith Lowry; exercise by Juniors, "A Legend of the Cross."

The church was beautifully decorated with potted plants, palms and flowers, all arranged about the pulpit platform. The chorus choir was in charge of William N. Runyon, and D. E. Davis presided at the organ.

In addition to the above there was a vocal duet by Marjorie Brown and Lillian Cuming, an exercise by Arline Brown, Marjorie Brown, Autumn Delany, Edith Lyons, Lillian Cuming, Isabelle VanBrakle and Eleanor Stutsman. The stringed orchestra was under the direction of G. W. V. Moy.

At the morning services these persons were baptized: Miss Edith Lyons, Stewart Freeman, Howard Freeman and Edgar Freeman. Those baptized at night were Walter VanWinkle, Gordon Moy, Miss Mildred Odam, Miss Ethel VanWinkle, Miss Autumn DeLany, Miss Isabelle VanBrakle, Miss Mabel Kline and Oliver Ulmer.

The church pulpit was prettily decorated with Easter lilies, flowers, palms and ferns. Mrs. W. S. Lowry was chairman of Easter programme committee. The school met in Sunday-school room and marched into the church in a body. G. E. Hall furnished a pretty Easter souvenir for entire school.

Special musical services at the First Presbyterian church in the morning and evening attracted large gatherings. Rev. Charles E. Herring preached in the morning on the subject, "Touch Me Not," and in the evening on "Over Against Bethany." The regular church quartette were soloists.

At the First Presbyterian church in the morning, a collection especially offered to meet the indebtedness of the past year netted $630.

At the First Presbyterian church in the afternoon, appropriate Easter exercises were held by the Sunday-school. Recitations were given by May Woolston, Lucile Ewart, Hazel Hyatt, Iola Schenck, Gladys Edsall, Louis Bullman and Horace Adams, from the primary department. "The Life the Light of May" was the title of the general exercise presented. Superintendent Cave had general charge of the exercises and Miss Grace P. Williams, superintendent of the primary department, conducted the work of that branch. Pamphlets descriptive of missionary work, "The Dawn of Light in Many Lands," were presented the members of the school. A collection for mission purposes was made. Rev. C. E. Herring gave an address.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie conducted an Easter service in the morning at the Crescent Avenue church. There were special musical programmes morning and evening, a praise service being held in the evening. The church was beautifully decorated.

Elaborate Easter exercises were held by the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in the afternoon and attended by the schools of Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels.

Rev. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, extended the pastor's greeting and George A. Strong the superintendent's. "Hail Him" was sung by the entire school, following which Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, led in responsive reading. Psalm XXI was repeated by pastor and school. Rev. F. D. Tildon, of Bethel chapel, read the Bible lesson, and "Christ Has Risen" was sung by the school.

"Ring Glad Bells," a hymn sung by the school, was followed by prayer offered by Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel. The members of the Crescent Avenue church primary department sang "Awake, Awake, O Sleeping Earth." The Beatitudes were read responsively with Supt. H. C. Squier, of Hope chapel, leading.

After the school had sung "Ring Praise," Rev. J. S. Zelie gave the address of the afternoon, following with a prayer. Other hymns were sung, prayer by the school was led by F. H. Andrews and the benediction pronounced by Mr. Zelie.

There were 400 members of Hope chapel's Sunday-school present including a delegation of fifty from the Hope Y. M. A.

Exercises were held at noon by the Unitarian Sunday-school, to mark the Easter celebration.

Carols formed the main feature of the programme. There was a recitation by Hope Sperry in addition, and an Easter talk by the pastor, Rev. A. C. Nickerson. Each child was presented with a blooming plant. Supt. E. R. Smith was in charge of the exercises.

There was a special musical programme at the regular church service, before the Sunday-school observance. Mrs. Guy Bender and Alex. Van Oss rendered the solo parts. Stephen Haff, the organist, was at the organ.

Combining the regular evening service and the school meeting in one, the Congregational church held an elaborate and notable Easter celebration for its Sunday-school in the afternoon. The programme included primary class exercises, carols by the school, instrumental solos and a talk by the Rev. C. E. Goodrich, the pastor.

The chief feature of the primary numbers was an exercise entitled the "Little Gardeners," in which three groups, representing the diggers, the sowers and the gleaners, took part. The children in the exercise included Leslie Allen, Francis Baker, Colin Millard, Russell Tomlinson, Walter Glaesmer, Carter Goodrich, George Land, Joseph Mattison, Harold Tomlinson, Irving VanAlstyne, Roy M. Wyckoff, Edward Voorhees, Donald Updike, Clark Mundy, Thelma Curtis, Nina Clubertson, Edna Mundy, Helen Weseman. Thelma Curtis rendered a recitation and Helen Weseman, a tot, sang a solo.

Kenneth Shupp played trombone solos and W. Paulding De Nike rendered 'cello selections. Ralph Lane, of Holy Cross church choir, sang.

Miss Mary E. Robinson, the superintendent of the department, was in charge of the primary exercises.

The special Easter service and music at Trinity Reformed church in the morning brought out a large congregation. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck preached a strong sermon on the subject, "An Easter Message," taking for his text, "If a man die, shall he live again?" The Easter music was rendered by the chorus choir and these soloists: Miss Florence Bennets and Miss Edith Mooney, sopranos; Miss Harriett Randall, alto; E. Young and Horace Martin, Jr., tenors, and Bertram F. Tallamy and Horace Martin, Sr., basses.

The children's Easter exercises at Trinity Reformed church at night were largely attended. The primary children, drilled by their superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Tier, had the largest part in the programme and acquitted themselves well.

"Victory," an exercise, was presented by ten children of the primary department, Clifford Cole, Harold Storr, Elsie Tier, Helen Roberts, Rosamund Rogers, Helen Wooley, Lillie Smith, Edith Richards, Margaret VanDeventer and Edna Oliver. Other exercises were "The Gifts of Spring" in which parts were taken by Lula Trewin, Mildred Fromer, Clara Lee, Anna Vail, Ella Porter and Beatrice Tier; "Easter Hose" given by Milford Maefee, Arthur Compton, Jocelyn Meade, Raymond Cutter, Jack Rogers, Harold Williams, Eddie Wearren; "God's Garden," given by Ada Smith, E. Fritz and Maud Maefee.

Recitations from members of the primary department were: "Life Is the Song," Gretchen VanZandt; "An Easter Crown," Adelaide Cole; "A Living Christ," Marion Blair; "A Robin in the Tree Tops," Adelaide Fritz; "The Message of the Lilies," Helen Wooley; "An Easter Bonnet," Elsie Tier; "A Song of Easter," Helen Leitheusser; "The Dear Easter Story," Ralph Martin; "God Wants Us to be Glad," Emily Ryno; "The Lily's Sermon," Edson Day.

An exercise was presented by these members of the junior department: Ida VanArsdale, Russell Abbott, Janette Neil, Cora Gano, Bertha Hoagland, Annette Wilson, Howard Dubois and Gertrude Knandon. Several selections were heartily sung by the entire school, led by W. H. Leek, who had drilled the school for several weeks. Miss Hazel Martin, piano; Mrs. G. W. Sauns, violin; Elmer P. Wheeler, flute, and E. D. Young, cornet, formed a stringed orchestra that was very much enjoyed.

The church was very prettily decorated for yesterday's Easter services, the flower committee of which Mrs. J. C. VanDyke is chairman, having charge of the work.

The Easter services at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday morning, included special music by a chorus choir, under the direction of David E. Titsworth, chorister, and Miss Jessie Utter, organist. There was a beautiful display of flowers. Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor, delivered a sermon on the topic, "The Glory of Christian Inheritance, through Christ's Resurrection."

Appropriate Easter services were held at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung. In the afternoon, Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor, of Park avenue, made an address, and there were exercises by the school. In the evening Rev. George Bowers conducted the services. The decorations consisted of flowers and palms. A violin trio assisted in the services.

Special Easter services were held at Monroe Avenue church in the afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school. Walter M. McGee, the superintendent, was in charge. The church was prettily decorated with all kinds of flowers. The services consisted of the singing of carols by the school, an address by the new minister, Rev. George Mooney and an exercise by the primary department children under the direction of Miss Haff, the superintendent.

Besides the Easter services held at the St. Olive Baptist church in the afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school, the programme for which was published on Saturday, there was a special service last night, at which time the quarterly report was presented for the Sunday-school by Miss Mary Randolph, secretary. This showed an average attendance of 125. The sum of $23.65 was collected, making a balance of $60 11 in the treasury. Superintendent Pollard presided at the church with $17 as an Easter offering.

The pastor, his wife and mother were each presented with handsome bouquets, as was also Mrs. Sarah Lane. Joseph Mitchell was in charge of the programme. M. C. Debbins, former superintendent of the school, made a short address, as did also the pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson.

Grace P. E. church held a long carol service for the children of the Sunday-school in the afternoon. The full choir led the singing.

A feature of the service was a carol solo by one of the children, Norman Finch. The rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, delivered an Easter talk.

St. Stephen's P. E. church also held a carol service in the afternoon. Rev. William Harris, the rector-in-charge, spoke.

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the East Third Street chapel, Easter exercises were held at the chapel in the afternoon. The programme included violin solos by Frank Malin; recitations, Walter Anson; singing, Christine Visbrock, Elsie Hone and Robert Anson; recitations, Sarah Harper, Elsie Hone and Maria Visbrock; singing, Frances Connett and infant class and Lizzie Frank. There was also an address by Superintendent L. W. Randolph.

The evening service included vocal solos by Miss Miner, contralto; violin selections by Frank Malin and R. W. Barnes; anthem; selections by Mrs. L. G. Leggett, while Rev. L. G. Leggett spoke on the "Dawn of Glory."

DRUGGISTS' MEET IN ANNUAL SESSION

Union County Association Chooses Frank Rowley, of This City, As Its President.

THE NEW OFFICERS

DISSCUSION OF STANDARD COMBINATION OF DRUGS.

Trade Journal to be Supplied Each Member—Mr. Cadmus is Elected to Membership—The Organization is Prosperous.

Dispensers of pellets and pills from all over the county gathered here yesterday afternoon to attend the annual meeting of the Union County Druggists' Association. There was a good-sized and representative gathering, which met in the Y. M. C. A. building.

As usual, the Plainfield pharmacists were prominent in the session. T. S. Armstrong, who has been president for three years, and H. J. Shaw, who served as treasurer for the same period, were tendered renominations, but excused themselves from further service.

Another Plainfield man, Frank Rowley, was elected to the presidency. George Horning, of Elizabeth, was made vice president; J. C. Smith, of Rahway, was elected secretary, for the fourth time, and William Reickers, of Elizabeth, was elected to succeed Mr. Shaw as treasurer.

A lot of routine business was transacted. Usually a part of the meeting is devoted to some scientific paper and a discussion on its contents, but the press of business was so great as yesterday's session that no time was available for this feature. Trade matters, such as the make-up of prescriptions and standard combinations of drugs, were discussed at length.

It was voted to make the "Apothecary and New England Druggist" the official paper of the organization. This publication is conducted by practical pharmacists, and is controlled by an organization including over a 100 drug men. The Association voted to subscribe it for every druggist in the county.

Mr. Cadmus, the senior member of the firm that succeeded E. S. F. Randolph in the drug business at Watchung and North avenues, was elected to membership.

During the past year the association has held its own, several new members taking the places of those who died. Financially the organization is strong.

DR. R. R. SINCLAIR WEDS

NUPTIAL CEREMONY AT WESTFIELD, DR. ARD BEING BEST MAN.

Miss Beatrice Merwin Hanan and Dr. Robert Ross Sinclair, both of Westfield, were married there Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Orth, in the presence of a large number of guests. The house was attractively decorated with the season's flowers. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, Westfield, but now presiding elder of the Jersey City District, assisted by Rev. Dr. G. F Greene, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Mrs. George Taylor, of Westfield, as matron-of-honor, and these bridesmaids: The Misses Banker, of Elizabeth; Miss Mabel Grove, of Philadelphia, and Miss May Innes, of Easton, Pa., while Miss Dorothy Day, of Westfield, was flower girl.

Dr. F. C. Ard, of this city, was best man, and the ushers were S. H. M. Englis, of Danbury, Conn., and H. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield. The bride was given away by her brother, Richard Hanan.

A reception followed the wedding and later in the evening the couple left on a honeymoon trip. When they return they will live in Westfield, where Dr. Sinclair is a successful practicing physician.

Repairing Old Hospital Building.

Morris Abrams and M. Weinberger, owners of the old Muhlenberg Hospital property, yesterday began the work of improving the same. It is the intention of the owners to make four dwelling houses out of the former hospital building and otherwise improve the property.

—Ernest R. Ackerman will give his lecture on "Glimpses of Foreign Lands" at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Tuesday night, April 26.

CHURCH SOCIETY CONTEST

LUNCHEON WON IN FIRST M. E. ORGANIZATION'S COMPETITION.

For increasing the membership, a contest was held by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First M. E. church, beginning February 15 and ending yesterday afternoon. The number of new members obtained reached the gratifying figure of sixty-three.

Sides had been taken by the members of the society, one captained by Mrs. N. W. Pike and the other by Mrs. L. M. French. Mrs. Pike and her followers were victorious, adding forty-three to the membership list to twenty for Mrs. French's workers. The defeated side will, according to agreement, tender the victors and the new members a luncheon Wednesday, April 20.

PLAINFIELDERS IN PILGRIMAGE

TRINITY COMMANDERY MEMBERS TO GO TO TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE.

A number of the Knights of Triplity Commandery, No. 14, Knights Templar, of this city, accompanied by their wives, will attend the Triennial Conclave of Knights Templar at San Francisco, California, in September next. Arrangements have been completed with the Pennsylvania Railroad, by which the New Jersey Knights Templar will make the pilgrimage on a special train of five Pullman cars, which will leave Jersey City on Monday morning, August 22, at 10:14 o'clock. The party will be in Chicago the next day, stopping a half day. On Wednesday, a stop of two hours at Cheyenne will be enjoyed, and on Friday the pilgrims will be in Sacramento for two hours. Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 27, 28, 29 and 30, will be spent in sight-seeing in the Yosemite Valley, while Wednesday, August 31, the party will reach Los Angeles, where three days will be devoted to viewing the glories of the City of Angels and nearby points. Saturday, September 3, will see four hours at Santa Barbara, and eight hours at Paso Robles. On Sunday Del Monte and San Jose will be seen, and the next four days will be devoted to the Conclave in San Francisco.

On the homeward trip Salt Lake City will be seen September 10, and the next two days will see the visitors at Colorado Springs, Garden of the Gods, Pike's Peak, etc., and Tuesday, the 13, at Denver, Wednesday at Kansas City, and Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the World's Fair grounds at St. Louis, where the train will be side-tracked and occupied by the tourists, who will arrive home the following Monday. The train will consist of three sleepers, a dining car and baggage car and about 100 are expected to make the pilgrimage. Many side trips have been provided for and no detail which will contribute to the enjoyment of the trip has been overlooked by those in charge.

MEMORIAL DAY FOR PYTHIANS

CRESCENT CO., NO. 13, U. R., K. OF P., MAKES ARRANGEMENTS FOR DAY.

First steps in the arrangements for the approaching memorial day annually observed by the uniformed knights were taken by Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. P., at a business meeting last night.

A committee consisting of David Bowden, Robert Gow and William Young was appointed to plan the details of the observance.

Memorial Day will be on June 19. As in previous years the knights will march in uniform from cemetery to cemetery, in this city and Scotch Plains, to decorate the graves of dead Pythians.

It was voted last night that the command go in a body to Portchester, N. Y., on June 5, to decorate the grave of Harvey L. Patterson. He was killed in the Westfield wreck.

INCREASED LICENSE FEE PLEA TUESDAY

Corporation Counsel Reed to Make Argument in Somerset Court on Behalf of Council.

WANT A RAISE TO $600

DELEGATION OF NORTH PLAINFIELDERS TO BE PRESENT.

Liquor Men Have Not Organized to Oppose Council's Movement—Judge Schenck Informed on the Question.

Every arrangement has been made by Corporation Counsel Reed, of the borough, for his appearance before Judge Schenck in the county court in Somerville to plead for an advance in the saloon license rate in North Plainfield, in accordance with the strongly worded resolution recently passed by the Borough Council. Mr. Reed will ask the court to set the fee at $600.

Next Tuesday is the date set for the hearing in the matter. The day was chosen by Judge Schenck himself and he will come to court prepared to give the question full and careful consideration. Judge Schenck has not been in ignorance of the sentiment in the borough and of the action taken by the Council, and he has posted himself pretty thoroughly on the question of license advance already. It is believed that favorable action is certain.

Corporation Counsel Reed said last night that he, for one, was confident Judge Schenck would consent to the increase. Coming with the weight of an unanimous vote of the Council back of him, Mr. Reed is sure that his arguments for the increase will have a lot of weight with the Court. More than the action of the Council, however, is the undoubted preponderance of sentiment in the borough in favor of the advance, of which Judge Schenck can scarcely be unaware.

It is extremely probable that Corporation Counsel Reed will be accompanied by a delegation of representative citizens who are actively in favor of the increase. Although no arrangements have been made for the organization of a delegation, several well-known men, including Councilman Lee, have declared their intention of being in court when the matter comes up.

No action in regard to the proposed increase has been taken by the liquor men, at least as far as can be seen. They have made no utterances, individually or collectively, and if they are working against the advance their moves are being made with the greatest secrecy.

MAD DOG CAUSES TROUBLE

BIRD FAMILY HELD AT BAY UNTIL THE SAVAGE CANINE IS SHOT.

Chased about the house and finally driven outdoors by a mad dog, the family of Lewis Bird, of Duer street, was thrown into a lot of excitement late last night. Nobody was bitten, but the brute had things pretty much his own way until Officer Sherman ended its frenzy with a bullet.

The dog, a family pet, went mad suddenly at about 10 o'clock. It leaped about the room, frothing at the mouth, yapping and snapping wildly. Mr. Bird tried to quiet it at first, but the dog was completely crazed, and rushed about the house in the traditional manner. Terrified by the animal's actions, the family finally bolted for the street, and left the dog in complete control of the house.

Officer Sherman was brought to the scene a short time after, and he went in after the brute with drawn revolver. The dog wasn't hard to locate, and the unterrified cop shot it dead before it could reach him.

Then the Bird family heaved a concerted sigh of relief, and resumed possession of their home.

PROMOTION FOR ACKERMAN.

Real Estate Man of Public Service Made Traffic Superintendent.

Colonel E. W. Hine, assistant to President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, announces that John Ackerman had been appointed traffice superintendent. Mr. Ackerman, who has had charge of the company's real estate, will now develop new business, such as trolley parties, excursions, etc., and will have charge of all the business parks controlled by the company.

—The trolley tracks along West Front street are being repaired by a gang of Italians.

TWO YOUNG MEN DISAPPEAR FROM HOME

The Absence of Briant Johnston and Thomas Sellers Worries Their Relatives.

A HASTY DEPARTURE

THE PRESENT WHEREABOUTS OF THE PAIR UNKNOWN.

Not the Result of Dime Novel Reading—Neither Took Very Much Money—Home Life of Both Said to be Pleasant.

Wearying probably of the tameness of life in quiet Scotch Plains and possessed by a desire to see something of the world, two young men of the village have strangely disappeared. Without saying a word to their families, Briant Johnston and Thomas Sellers left their home Monday and no word of their whereabouts have been received by their much worried parents. It is said that the pair confided to their friends that Philadelphia was to be their first stopping place, that from there they intended to go to several other cities, possibly never to return.

Both boys are nearly twenty years of age. Johnston has always been quiet and industrious. He has been learning the trade of his father, William D. Johnston, mason and contractor. Sellers is the son of Mrs. George Dorne and has been variously employed about town. His pranks have several times brought him before Justice Clark, though he has never been charged with any serious offense. The home life of both has been pleasant and neither has been a dime novel reader.

The last seen of the boys was when they took a car for this city about 11 o'clock Monday morning. It is said that, while waiting for the car, they told some companions they were bidding good-bye to the 'Plains and starting out to see the world. It is known that they did not carry a very large amount of money with them.

VANNETTO'S SENTENCE.

Colored Disturbance Maker is Given His Just Dues by Recorder Doud in Borough Court.

Unable to put in any defense against the charge of disorderly conduct made by Charles Jensen, the hotel keeper whom he struck and bit Monday night, Walter Vannetto, colored, whose arrest was noted in yesterday's Daily Press, was fined $15 or fifteen days by Recorder Doud in the borough court last night. Vannetto has been up before the court several times before, and the Recorder scored him severely in passing sentence. He was told that if he appeared in the borough court again his sentence would be much heavier. Vannetto had no money last night and if the fine is not paid by this afternoon he will be taken to Somerville.

EXEMPTS' EVENT.

Plainfield Firemen Make Merry in Their Park Avenue Headquarters by Holding a Smoker.

A jolly time of strictly informal nature was enjoyed by the Exempt Firemen's Association in their hall on Park avenue last night. The old firefighters spent a couple of hours in a smoker arranged by President V. W. Nash. Capacious clay pipes were passed around, and a plentious store of tobacco was handy. Chat was enjoyed while the pipes burned up the sweet and soothing granulated weed, and the Exempts had as much fun out of the comfortable little smoker as a long programme and much speech-making could have afforded.

The International Convention.

The International Y. M. C. A. convention will be held this year at Buffalo, N. Y., from Wednesday, May 11, through Sunday, May 15. There will be a large number of delegates from this city, it is hoped. Among them will be Stepehn Caboone, president of the association, F. H. Andrews and William D. Murray. All part of North America will be represented at the gathering, and also China, Japan and India.

The Boys' Banquet.

The second annual banquet for the members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., will take place this year at the association building, Tuesday, May 3. It is probable that addresses will be made by several interesting speakers and every effort will be made by Secretary Kenneth Bobbie and those assisting him to give the boys a memorable evening.

GARBAGE COLLECTION MEASURE TOO LATE

Draft of Bill Allowing City to Raise Funds by Taxation for the System Not Introduced.

PRESENTS ONE BILL

MEASURE FILED ALLOWING TAXATION FOR POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Understood That Purpose of Latter Proposed Act is to Bring About Needed Relief From Burden on General Appropriation.

For the special benefit of Plainfield and with the apparent purpose of assisting the Common Council in the solution of the municipal collection of garbage, Assemblyman Moffett introduced a bill in the Assembly yesterday providing for a tax of one-quarter of one per cent. in cities for maintenance of police departments.

It is believed here that the purpose is to provide money for the maintenance of the police department and allow the money now appropriated from the general fund for that department to be applied to the work of municipal collection and disposal of garbage. It is said that this would afford one feasible method of securing this improvement for Plainfield and the police department would be cared for by a direct tax.

Evidently believing that the special session of the Legislature would last more than one day, those interested in the bill which was drafted by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh at the request of the Council to be introduced at this session of the Legislature, failed to get the proposed measure into the hands of Assemblyman Moffett until this morning. The draft of the bill was left at Mr. Moffett's home last night while he was in Trenton, and of course nothing could be done regarding it.

The measure provides that the city *shall have the rights to raise and ap*propriate money for the municipal collection of garbage and that there shall be no Legislative restriction as to the amount beyond the limitations of the State law.

FORMER FIREMEN ELECT

NORTH PLAINFIELD VOLUNTEERS COMPLETE ORGANIZATION.

Organization of the North Plainfield Firemen's Exempt Association was completed last night at a meeting of the ex-members of Warren and West End Companies. There is a charter membership of over forty, and twenty-five or more are expected.

Officers were elected as follows: President, George Fairchild; first vice president, Charles Keller; second vice president, J. J. Stahl; treasurer, Jacob Higgins; financial secretary, William Debele; recording secretary, David Bodine. Trustees: Dennis Baglin, Lambert Bodine, William Pasch. Representatives to the State organization: David Bodine, William Demarest, Charles Keller.

The association will meet on the second Tuesday of each month. Benefits will be paid to exempts. Later the organization will affiliate formally with the State association.

WORKING FOR A SCHOOL SITE

BOROUGH BOARD ALSO MAKES PLANS FOR COMMENCEMENT.

More discussion in regard to the proposed new school was held by the North Plainfield Board of Education at a special meeting last night. It was decided to go into the matter of site location thoroughly, and the building committee and other members of the Board were authorized to secure options.

The date for commencement is June 17. Prof. Louis Bevier, of Rutgers, a speaker of remarkable eloquence and force, has been secured as the orator of the occasion. The exercises will be held, as heretofore, in Y. M. C. A. Hall. September 13 was set as the date for reopening after the summer vacation.

Miss Wood's Wedding.

Invitations have been issued by Francis Wood, of Franklin place, to the marriage of his daughter, Miss Minnie Wood, to Ralph K. Harvey, to be celebrated on Saturday, April 30, 12 o'clock noon at the Church of the Ascension, New York.

SETTLING OF RICE'S ESTATE

WASHINGTON HALL BUILDING A PART OF THE MURDERED MAN'S PROPERTY.

It is expected that on Tuesday, April 19, the affairs of the estate of the late W. M. Rice will be settled in the Somerset county courts, and soon afterward work will be started to put Washington Hall building in thorough repair. This valuable piece of property, located on West Second street, belongs to the Rice estate, but nothing can be done with it until the certain matters are settled in the court.

Just now the local representative for the hall is Borough Collector George F. Brown and he is looking after the interests of the property, under the direction of Former Judge Bartine, of Somerville, one of the executors of the estate.

LINDABURY FOR CHAIRMAN

SELECTED TO PRESIDE OVER THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic State committee will meet in Trenton tomorrow night and is expected to decide upon the man who will go before the convention as delegates at large.

Former Senator Smith is slated for chairman of the State delegation to St. Louis. He will be one of the delegates-at-large. His associates as such will probably be Robert Davis, of Hudson; Johnston Cornish, of Warren, and either former Judge Howard Carrow or State Senator Thomas M. Ferrell, as the representative of South Jersey.

In the selection of Richard V. Lindabury for the chairmanship of the State convention tomorrow, at which the delegation to the St. Louis convention will be named, some Democrats believe they can foresee a desire on the part of the party leaders to bring Mr. Lindabury forward prominently at this time so that he may be called upon, perhaps, to become the standard bearer of the party in the gubernatorial fight of this year.

Mr. Lindabury is one of the foremost lawyers in the State and is a former resident of this city.

All the delegates to the Democratic State Convention for the election of National Convention delegates in this county will meet for caucus in Elizabeth tonight. The Plainfield delegates is expected to be there to a man.

Of the nine men from here, seven are recognized as Hearst supporters. These seven will be led by Frank Shattle, the engineer-in-chief of the Hearst boom in this city. The majority of the delegates throughout the county are claimed by the Hearst men, according to J. D. McAleer, an ardent Hearst supporter, but the real fact is that the Congressman's few friends were badly beaten.

The delegates will go to Trenton to-morrow, when the convention is to be held. The Plainfielders will leave early in the forenoon.

At a meeting of the Hearst Club Friday night the delegates will report on the proceedings of the convention. It is probable that the club will take steps for another mass meeting in the interest of its candidate.

REPETITION OF PROGRAMME

AUDIENCE AMUSED BY TRINITY REFORMED JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS.

There was a big turn-out for the repetition of the entertainment of the Junior C. E. Society, of Trinity Reformed church Tuesday. The affai was originally given March 17 and proved so amusing as to make the demand for having it repeated general. The young people all did themselves proud.

The feature of the entertainment was again "The Spiggins Family," a humorous sketch in which Mrs. Spiggins and eight daughters in comical costumes figured. The parts were cleverly taken as follows: Mother, Annie Randall; daughters, Ida Tier, coquette; Violet VanWinkle, bay fever patient, Helen Smith, Beulah VanWinkle, Edna Force, Ida VanArsdale, Cora Gano, Edna Dilts. The other numbers on the programme consisted of songs, two soprano solos were very pleasingly sung by Miss Florence R. Bennett. Miss Violet VanWinkle, president of the society; Harold Schenck, vice president, and Mrs. J. M. Tier, the superintendent, were in general charge of the entertainment. A silver offering was made for missionary purposes.

—Miss Mabel Stewart has resigned her position with the Crescent Embossing Company to take a place as typewriter in New York.

POSTPONEMENT OF PARK'S THEATRICALS

Plays to be Produced by Amateur Talent on Tuesday Night, April 26.

CASTES ANNOUNCED

PROCEEDS TO BE USED FOR CLUB-HOUSE FURNISHING FUND.

Mrs. Charles A. Reed Supervising Arrangements—The Gypsy Dance to be a Prominent Feature —The Plays.

Instead of holding their theatricals last night as originally intended, the members of the Park Club will give the entertainment Tuesday night, April 26. The programme will be the same as announced for last night, excepting that "My Turn Next" a comedy by Thomas J. Williams, will be played instead of John Kendrick Bangs' farce, "The Bicyclers."

"My Turn Next" is said to be a laugh-producer of exceptional merit. It is for laughing purposes only, although giving excellent opportunities for good comedy work. That these opportunities will not be neglected, the following competent cast is proof: "Tarraxicum Twitters," a village apothecary, Walter M. McGee; "Timbolus," his professional assistant, C. E. Murray; "William Sirap," a traveller, Clarence Cass; "Farmer Wheatear," from Banbury-Utility, S. F. Weaver; "Lydia," Twitter's wife, Mrs. S. F. Weaver; "Cecily," her sister, Mrs. E. T. Wilson; "Peggy," Twitter's maid, servant and housekeeper, Miss Mabel Vandeventer.

The other play, a short sketch, will be given as originally planned. Its title is "Too Many Cooks" and it is a breezy little farce, cleverly written. It is up-to-date dialogue, and the merits of a specific servant girl problem receiving an excited discussion from "Mrs. Ingleby," a part taken by Miss Helen Phillips, and "Miss Maude Chesney," acted by Miss Isabelle Milne. This will serve as a curtain-raiser.

Between the plays, as already announced, there will be a gypsy dance, performed by eight men and eight women. The dancers are being trained by Miss Davenport, of Newark.

The entertainment is planned for the benefit of the fund to pay for the club's new furnishings. It is in charge of the entertainment committee, most of the cares of preparation being assumed by Mrs. Charles A. Reed. Dancing will follow the theatricals with music by Westervelt's orchestra, of Newark.

W. G. BESLER NOT TO LEAVE

HIS LEASING ANOTHER HOUSE IN NORTH PLAINFIELD IS SIGNIFICANT.

W. G. Besler, the Central Railroad vice president and general manager, has made arrangements to move from former Mayor Fisk's house at 16 Rockview avenue to a house owned by W. J. Buttfield on the same street, opposite Mr. Buttfield's own residence. The change will take place the first of the month.

This action on Mr. Besler's part is taken to indicate that he has positively decided to continue in the Central management, although he has not definitely announced this in connection with the reports that he is to become the president of the Erie road.

Another nail in the coffin of the Erie rumor was driven by President Baer, of the Jersey Central, yesterday. He denied positively that Mr. Besler is to leave the Central.

July 4th Plans.

Albert Perry is steadily planning the details of the Prideville Fourth of July celebration announced two weeks ago. All the G. A. R. and U. V. U. posts in this section will be invited, and a patriotic address will be delivered to them at 1 o'clock in the grove. A dancing platform is to be erected, and the young people will have music to keep them interested after the Independence Day programme is completed. It is expected that a parade by the veterans will be a feature of the celebration.

Birthday Surprise.

A pleasant birthday surprise party was given in honor of Miss Ethel VanNess at her home on Watchung avenue, Monday evening, April 11. The evening was spent by playing various games and dancing. Refreshments were served at a late hour. There were thirty-five guests.

BUZZING ALARM CLOCK.

Successfully Used to Scare a Burglar Who Was Armed with a Six-Shooter.

Ernest Saidler, who had been employed as lineman for the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, in Anaconda, Mont., had a thrilling experience with a bold burglar one night recently. Saidler repaired to his home quite early during the evening, and at ten o'clock, was fast asleep, dreaming of fortunes to be his in after years.

Saidler reports that about 10:30 o'clock he was awakened by a noise at the window. He raised his head, and was startled to see a stranger making his way toward the bed. Saidler was not at all certain as to what course to pursue, yet he felt that he could not afford to lose the $145 in cash and a gold watch and chain, which were in his clothes not far distant from his bed. He looked about him for a weapon with which to attack the midnight intruder, but could find nothing that seemed at all likely to put him on an equal footing with the man, who held a big six-shooter in his hand, as he approached. Driven to desperation Saidler grabbed the alarm clock resting on a nearby table, and, with a yell that would have done credit to an Indian, he threw the now buzzing alarm clock at the burglar.

The intruder was so dazed by the blow from the clock that he hardly knew which way to turn. He made his get-away quickly, however, and was out of the window and gone before Saidler decided on another move. Saidler considers that he escaped from the thief quite luckily.

FIGHT WITH COYOTE.

Woman Attacks Beast, Aided by a Dog, and Ends Its Life with Blow from Ax.

Mrs. C. P. Horton, who lives on a ranch near Falcon, Col., had an experience recently that she will not soon forget, in the shape of a battle with a ferocious coyote. In the end the woman and her pet shepherd dog, Ne-o, were the victors, and the brute was dispatched with an ax.

Mrs. Horton and her dog were near the ranch house when a hungry and fierce-looking coyote attacked the dog. The woman made haste to the woodshed, where she secured the ax, that being the weapon most available, and rushed to the assistance of her fast weakening canine. The enraged coyote made an ineffectual attempt to reach the woman, and her dress was badly torn by the claws of the animal when it sprang at her throat. Mrs. Horton finally struck the coyote a blow that disabled it, and then with a few well directed blows the beast was killed.

The dog was badly used up in the fight, suffering severely from the sharp fangs of its antagonist, but will live, Mrs. Horton was not badly injured. The coyote was undoubtedly driven to its fierce attack through hunger, it being very gaunt.

Red Tape in Germany.

The Deutsche Juristenzeitung records the following instance of Prussian red tape: A woman who disappeared from her home was legally adjudged dead after a time. Three years later she reappeared, proved her identity beyond a doubt, and demanded a passport and other legal documents which Germans are required to possess. The authorities, however, refused to give her the documents, declaring that legally she was dead, and the law courts decided that she could not appeal against the ruling that she was dead, because too great an interval had elapsed for an appeal to be allowable. The courts of Prussia are [illegible] still dead, though [illegible] to the absurdities of red tape.

CAY YOUTH WAS SILENCED.

How Archbishop Farley Made Short Work of a Chap Who Had More Lip Than Brains.

Archbishop Farley dedicated last month at New Rochelle a handsome church that Adrian Iselin had built and gives to the town.

During the dedicatory ceremony a friend of the archbishop said:

"When he was private chamberlain to Pope Leo some 20 years ago Mgr. Farley, as he was then called, had occasion to meet all classes of people. Wits of the world tried their hands against him now and again, but in these encounters the wits met with defeat always, for a keener, readier mind than the archbishop's does not exist on the globe.

"They say that Mgr. Farley was crossing one day from New Haven to Dieppe when a young Frenchman attempted to take him in hand. This young man scoffed at religion and at clergymen, but he was, of course, unable to anger monsignore, or to draw him into an argument.

"Finally the foolish youth resorted to open ridicule—to sheer impudence.

"'Gentlemen,' he said in a loud voice, addressing himself to the entire company, and at the same time winking in the clergyman's direction, 'gentlemen, I am informed that in the strange land of Madagascar, whenever they hang a priest they hang a donkey along with him.'

"The young man laughed, and Mgr. Farley, looking at him mildly, said:

"'Well, let us both be thankful, my young friend, that we are not in Madagascar.'"

GEN. ALEXEI KUROPATKIN.

Famous Military Leader Chosen to Lead the Russian Land Forces in the East.

Gen. Alexei Nicholaevitch Kuropatkin, who is to be commander-in-chief of the Russian army in the east, has been minister of war since 1897. He is a man with a remarkable military record, having fought in the Pamirs, in Turkestan, in Africa and in the war with Turkey, distinguishing himself especially at Plevna, where he was chief of staff under the renowned Skobeieff. He is now 55 years of age, and comes of a noble family. At Paris, in 1874, he won the Legion of Honor for assisting in reorganizing the French cavalry, being the first Russian officer to gain that prize. Then he engaged in the campaign in Turkestan, wrote a book about his adventures, and was accorded the gold medal of the Geographical society. Kuropatkin entered the Turkish war as a lieutenant and emerged a colonel, and from that time his advancement has been rapid. He is the man who engineered the usurpation of Finland, and he has been a prominent figure in promoting the Trans-Siberian road. He is credited with being a master of the science of war, and his history of the Balkan campaigns is considered to be a military classic.

Happiness Made Her Tell.

Clara Nuremberg, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., kept her marriage to Herbert Foshay a secret for two years and then told it because she was so happy that she wanted all her friends to know it. Clara and Herbert were married on April 3, 1902, one evening when their parents supposed they were at the theater. It was a runaway match, but last week they received the secret, were forgiven, and are keeping house in a New York flat.

Sewed Button on Finger.

While operating a button-attaching machine at a Portland, Ind., shirt factory, Miss Nora Teeters had her thumb caught in the machine, and a steel button was tightly riveted into her thumb, the staple binding the two parts of the button being forced cleanly through the member. The button was removed with a pair of pincers.

TO "MORGANIZE" SOCIETY.

New York Financier, It Is Reported Will Hereafter Be a Social Light in London.

Like most London houses there is nothing in the exterior of 13, Prince's Gate, just off Hyde Park, to indicate that it is not most ordinary and stuffy dwelling. It is one of a solid block, all exactly alike, and separated only by the party walls.

But appearances are deceptive, for the house is the London home of Pierpont Morgan, and contains most of those wonderful old treasures for which Mr. Morgan has been paying unknown hundreds of thousands of dollars in the last few years, with the expectation of taking the pictures over to the United States eventually when he can come to terms with the customs authorities.

Although the house is always ready for use at a moment's notice it has been little occupied. Such dinner parties as the financier has given there were not strictly society functions, the guests being less interested in bridge than in larger forms of gambling. But now Mr. Morgan is to blossom forth, following the example of the Bradley-Martins in buying the house adjoining his own and knocking the two into one. This move is especially interesting, for Mr. Morgan's next door neighbor at 14, Prince's Gate, was Mrs. Whenley, of Pittsburg, whose death recently resulted in the dispersion of a huge property among her relatives here and in America.

MORGAN'S LONDON HOUSE.
(It Contains Some of the Rarest Art Works in Existence.)

Rumor credits Mr. Morgan with the intention of spending more time over in England in the future and going in for society on a larger scale than he has ever dreamed of doing before. He was present at the dinner given by Mr. Choate to the king and queen through a personal expression of the king's approval, and with this and other royal recognitions on the one hand, and with his financial connection with so many of the British aristocracy on the other hand, Mr. Morgan could fill his house with the social elite without having to stop the gaps with any nonentities. It seems to be the understanding that he has lately acquired rather a taste for this sort of thing.

VICE ADMIRAL SKRYDLOFF.

Selected by Czar to Take Command of the Russian Fleet in Far Eastern Waters.

The early reverses in its war with Japan have suggested to the St. Petersburg government the necessity of changing its commanders in the far east. Admiral Stark, who allowed his fleet to be surprised in the harbor of Port Arthur, is the first to be displaced, and indications point to the appointment of Admiral Skrycloff as chief naval commander in Asiatic waters. Viceroy Alexieff has already been relieved of the supreme command of the land and naval forces in Manchuria and Gen. Kuropatkin, former head of the Russian war office, has assumed command of the land forces in the field. Admiral Skrydloff is reputed to be an excellent officer and administrator and earned many laurels while commander of the Black sea fleet. He was a close observer of events at the time of the Chino-Japanese war and is supposed to be acquainted with the fighting tactics of the mikado's navy. Admiral Skrydloff is in the prime of life, being only 45 years of age.

NEVER IS FOUND NAPPING.

Congressman Babcock of Wisconsin Is High Priest of the "Get There" Cult.

Joseph Weeks Babcock, of Wisconsin, who has managed the republican congressional campaign for five campaigns, is known as the "Sage of Necedah." This does not indicate the silvered locks and snowy beard that are supposed to be the outward signs of ripened wisdom. There is no silver about "Bab," as he is more familiarly known among his congressional colleagues. He has the outward appearance of a prosperous, well contented business man. He is of stocky build, generous girth, florid complexion and wears a black mustache and chin whiskers and a full suit of black hair. He has a Teutonic cast of countenance, but there is no German strain in his blood. He comes of an old New England family, and first saw the light of day at Swanton, Vt. He is rather proud of his connection with the old New England family of Weeks, and prefers to be called by that name instead of the more familiar Joseph.

JOSEPH W. BABCOCK.
(Wisconsin Congressman, Who Runs Congressional Campaigns.)

Mr. Babcock is a living exponent of the gospel of "get there." He is a successful business man with a decided taste for politics and a faculty of landing in any position he wants. Asked if he can do anything, Babcock always answers: "I reckon I can." When the time came to elect representatives to the Fifty-fourth congress, the republican leaders went to Babcock and asked him if he could act as chairman of the campaign committee. "I reckon I can," was the answer. "Can you elect a republican house?" was the next query. "I reckon I can," was the brief response. How well he performed his duties was shown by a republican majority of some 40 in the house.

THE VISCOUNT DE HAYASHI

Japanese Ambassador at London Is Considered Prince of Oriental Diplomats.

Mouern Japanese diplomacy has won many notable victories. It is therefore but natural to conclude that the mikado wants to strengthen his diplomatic corps in every way, especially at this time when several European nations have not yet made up their minds whether to sympathize with Russia or Japan in the present conflict in the far east. By reason of the importance of London as a diplomatic center it is highly essential that Japan should have a representative of the highest attainments at the court of St. James. And such a person is Viscount Tadasu Hayashi, Japanese ambassador to Great Britain. He was enobled for his distinguished services at the Japanese foreign office during the war with China. Viscount Hayashi was born at Sakura, Shimosa, Japan, in 1850. He went to England in 1864 to study, and while still a young man began his official career in his own country. He was first governor of the province of Kobe.

Romance in a Hospital.

A case of appendicitis started a romance in the lives of Miss Elisabeth Branderstein, of New York, and Dr. George H. Reichers, of Brooklyn. Miss Branderstein, who is young and pretty, was a nurse at the German hospital, and was herself attacked by appendicitis. Dr. Reichers performed the operation which saved her life, and, having saved it, she gave it to him to guard forever.

Even Tramps Have Rights.

The Iowa supreme court has decided that a tramp has rights which a trainman must respect, affirming a decision from Pottawattamie county, in which Joseph Johnson secured judgment for injuries sustained by reason of forcible ejection from a moving train.

FIRE ORDINANCES OF 1815.

Those in Force Nearly a Century Ago Were Quite Stringent and Covered Many Points.

Fire ordinances are by no means modern or even complicated, at least in proportion to the new inventions and causes, electric lights and other elaborate and inflammable fixtures, and to the various inventions and methods of prevention. Nearly a hundred years ago there were ordinances as numerous and as long for the prevention and extinction of fires. In 1815 Detroit had an elaborate fire ordinance. It ordered every householder to provide a pair of water buckets and a wooden vessel holding 20 or 25 gallons, "with two loops strongly attached thereto," which were always to be kept full of water in a place where it could not be frozen and to have a ladder or pole of sufficient weight and strength to sustain said vessel. To each chimney of his house he must attach a substantial ladder, to be fastened to the roof, and another ladder long enough to communicate with the first.

Every male person capable of giving

ANCIENT FIRE APPARATUS
(In Use in the City of Detroit Almost 100 Years Ago.)

assistance must, on the alarm of fire, repair to the scene, carrying one or more of such vessels, and obey the orders of one of the trustees. Twelve householders appointed by the board of trustees were to provide themselves each with "a good felling ax" and repair to the place of the fire. Six others were to be provided by the corporation with three battering rams, to be used at fires. There were also 24 to be provided with "fire-hooks." Every shopkeeper must provide himself with two three-bushel bags with which to beat out the fire.

For neglecting to provide these various implements a fine of five dollars was imposed; for neglect of duty at fires, a fine of ten dollars.

The present habit of disregarding fire ordinances would seem to be an inherited one. But at least this cannot be said of the failure to enforce the ordinances. The record shows that at least once a week there was some complaint of noncompliance. An entire session, July 2, 1821, was taken up with the business. Nearly 40 delinquents were fined from 75 cents to $1.25 for being "deficient" one or more ladders, having ladders in bad condition, lack of bags or buckets, or for not having their names on them. All would seem to have gone to the fires, for no fines are recorded.

TOGO IS A CRUEL FIGHTER.

Japanese Admiral in Charge of Port Arthur Fleet Always Shoots to Kill.

Vice Admiral Togo is one of the popular heroes in Japan. He is called the "fighting admiral," a title which he won during the war with China. He was at that time in command of the second class cruiser Naniwaand, which struck the first blow at the enemy. During the war, this ship and her commandgr, who was then only a captain, saw morseervice than any others in the navy.

Togo is by no means a humane man.

VICE ADMIRAL TOGO.
(Japanese Commander, Who Won the Battle at Port Arthur.)

He is a fighter, and an arbitrary one at that, and what he says he means.

When the British ship Kowshing, loaded by the Chinese with soldiers and stores, was caught near the Corean coast and refused to obey Togo's orders to follow him, he warned all Europeans to leave the ship and then promptly torpedoed her and blew her up, not even helping the Chinese who were struggling for their lives in the water.

Snake Torpid in a Tree.

Charles McGuire and John Crouch, of Zionsville, Ind., felled a large tree which stood on a farm owned by James Brendel. When the tree had fallen to the ground a large hole, which appeared to be a squirrel den, was found in the forks of the tree, about 30 feet from the butt. In this hole a torpid blacksnake five feet long was found. Mr. Snake had crawled into this hole last fall to lie in wait for squirrels, and had unexpectedly been caught by the cold weather.

THE STORY OF A PIN.

IT SAVED INNOCENT PRISONER IN ITALY.

He Would Drop It and Then Hunt for the Little Thing for Hours, Thus Diverting His Mind from His Misfortune.

From a Boston gentleman comes the story of an unusual experience, which owes much of its charm to the fact that it is literally true. A few years ago this man met in Boston a lady, and he observed that while otherwise dressed beautifully, she always wore a brooch, peculiar, because, while it was encircled with handsome diamonds, the center was a common dressing pin covered with glass. On her most elegant toilets—and they were many—this pin was boldly in evidence among pearls, diamonds, emeralds or whatever jewels the caprice of the wearer suggested.

As the man and woman became friends he remarked that his attention had been attracted to her by this queer brooch, with its strange center, and asked if there was not some history connected with it.

She replied: "You are right, there is. This common little pin is very sacred to me, and for that reason I had these fine jewels put around it and always wear it.

"My husband and I were traveling in Italy, gay, light-hearted, without a care in the world, when, not very far from Rome, some gendarmes approached and without warning arrested him, saying: 'You are the man who committed this murder, and you are our prisoner.' Nothing but these few words!

"Imagine my anguish and despair when I saw him shackled and led away to be incarcerated in a dungeon in Egyptian darkness and perpetual silence.

"I summoned up all my courage and lost no time in seeking the American consul, as well as every other man from America whose voice could be heard in my behalf. After almost superhuman efforts they secured his release. When he returned to me, pale and haggard, almost the ghost of his former self, he told me this story:

"In moving his hands restlessly one day, or it might have been night for all he could tell in the darkness of his tomb-like cell, his fingers touched a pin on the lapel of his coat and it fell on the floor. He stooped to pick it up, and it seemed as if for awhile his thoughts were distracted from himself. Then it occurred to him that this simple pin was a godsend. It would prove a diversion and perhaps save him from madness. Again and again he would throw the little pin down and then go on his knees and grope for it. When he got more than an hour at a time he played thus in the Stygian blackness of the living tomb. The act of throwing it away followed often by prolonged search, the intense anxiety for fear he might not find it, took his mind completely off himself and his desperate situation. It was a lafter day and, of course, very unpoetical and unbeautiful version of 'La Picciola,' but it saved my dear husband's reason, and I would sooner part with my diamonds or any jewel I have than this little, unconscious messenger of mercy, a little, insignificant, common looking pin. Do you wonder at me?" Then, with an arch smile, she said: "There must be something interesting about the pin, for you have never asked me what ground these officers had for arresting my husband. In a nutshell, the real murderer's picture was enough like him to convince them that they had found the real criminal. C'est tout!"

Cured by a Glove Button.

Somewhere upon British soil there is a young doctor who has within the last few days learned a lesson which should be invaluable to him in his future practice. Having accompanied his betrothed to a theater, while the house was in semi-darkness she suddenly complained of feeling faint. The doctor took something out of his pocket and whispered to her to keep the "tabloid" in her mouth, but not to swallow it. She did as she was told, and soon felt all right again. The tablet, however, showed no signs of dissolving, and in the end, being curious to discover what the tasteless, indissoluble substance that had proved so efficacious could be, she slipped the undissolved substance into her glove for future reference. When she got home she took it out of her glove again and examined it. It was a bone glove button.

POWER OF THE FLAG

STARS AND STRIPES SUCCESSFULLY STOPS WIFE BEATER.

Russian Jew's Better Half Flaunts It Defiantly When Quarrels Arise —Mother-in-Law Also Seeks Its Protection.

By the use of a small silk American flag the wife of a Russian Jew protected herself from the abuse of her husband, kept the latter out of jail, and steered their troubles clear of a divorce court.

The incident came to the notice of Judge Hoard, one of the best-known jurists of Shelbyville, Ind., and it is he who tells it in the Chicago Tribune the story as it came to him in the course of his services as a lawyer. It will also explain to a great many people who have passed a certain little home in Shelbyville why a flagstaff has been erected in the foreground and why the stars and stripes are there displayed on every occasion during the year.

One afternoon while the judge was sitting in his office a woman entered the door and in broken language managed to convey to the lawyer the fact that she and her husband had had trouble and that the neighbors had advised her to consult a lawyer. She told the jurist that the man with whom she had emigrated from a distant land beat her, and, as she explained, "I t'inks he 'buse me too much."

The lawyer managed to make her understand that, under the laws of this country, the husband could be punished for such an offense. When he explained that she could have him arrested and placed in jail, she bold up her hands deprecatingly, and when she was further told that such an act would furnish the ground for a legal separation the expression that came to the face of the faithful wife clearly told the lawyer that the idea was abhorrent. "O, no, I not do that! I only t'ink he whip me too hard," she said.

The judge was quick to see that it was a case in which his professional services would not be employed, so he undertook to offer a little advice gratis. Taking a small flag from a drawer of his desk, he passed it over to the woman, telling her that the next time she and her spouse had trouble she was to wave it in his face and to tell him that he dare not strike her with the flag in her hand. It was difficult for the woman to clearly understand, but when she went out of the office she had folded the flag inside of her corsage, and the judge dismissed the matter from his mind.

A few days after that a Jewish-looking man entered the lawyer's office in a towering rage. "What's dat you tell my wife about me no dare strike her vile a flag she holds roit her hand?"

It didn't take the judge long to see that he had a chance to cultivate the seed he had sown a few days previous. He told the irate Russian that his wife, claiming the protection of the flag, could cause his arrest and imprisonment, and, if she chose, could divorce herself from such a husband.

"A month or so after that," relates Judge Hoard, "I had occasion to go down to the depot to meet a friend, and while there I noticed among the people in the waiting room the little Russian woman who had sought my advice. I was induced to question her as to how she was getting along and as to what old Glory had accomplished for her. She told me that she was at the train to meet her mother, who was coming over from the old country. She managed to convey to me that she had written home to her maternal parents explaining the laws of this country, that however much men whipped their wives in Russia they were not allowed to do so here and go unpunished. Then she proved to me that she had brought about a wonderful reform in the ideas of her liege lord, that he had not only ceased to beat her, but that she carried about with her, but with his own hand he had erected a tall staff in their humble dooryard, and from its peak a big flag waved on every holiday of the year.

"The man, his wife, and his mother-in-law are now all living under the same flag, and it doesn't appear to me that I will ever be able to earn a fee from any trouble that family may have."

The German Wine Industry.

According to the Moniteur Vinicole, Germany holds the eighth place in the list of wine-producing nations. It is claimed, however, by wine connoisseurs that German wines, as far as flavor and bouquet are concerned, are surpassed only by those of France.

Old Stubborn in Jail.

A stubborn man in Lewiston, Me., refused to pay his poll-tax, and defied the authorities to collect it. He is now in jail, and has been playing checkers with his nose against the bars since August 5. Every day he stays in jail adds $1.75 to his poll-tax of two dollars.

HANDSOME GOWNS.

Real Lace Is Used as Trimming. Liberty Satin a Favorite.

Liberty satin is being used a great deal for evening dresses, and this rich and pliable material makes up well with a few shirrings or a bit of fine lace.

Quantities of lace are used on everything and especially on fine hats. The lace veil which drapes the brim and falls in a curtain behind is one of the prominent features of millinery. Most of the new shapes are very simple and adapt themselves well to this draped style of trimming.

A shepherdess shape and the old Dolly Varden are again to the front, while variations of the French sailor appear in chiffon and in fancy straws, leghorns and crinolines.

The draped veil, in spite of criticisms against it, will be with us again this summer, for nothing is more becoming to a young face than a background of chantilly or chiffon.

The colorings used at present are very beautiful. The fancy for browns and yellows has not abated, and rose tints in all shades from purplish to pure white will be seen all through the summer months.

A new method for treating the backs of the skirts is having a deep box plait formed of several small plaits on each side. These plaits, which are stitched securely down at the top, produce the necessary fullness at the bottom, and this is further accentuated by means of ruches or flounces. In some of the skirts, however, there is a decided tendency to bring a great deal of the fullness to the front by means of gathers. The result is that the gown stands out as much in front as at the back, but the effect can hardly be termed graceful.

In the illustration there is represented a dinner gown of pale gray liberty satin. It has a bertha of point de venise lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SPRING FASHIONS.

New Tints For Street Wear—The Hip Yoke on Skirts For Stout Women.

White brown is still a favorite shade with Parisiennes, it divides honors with a bright shade of blue, and the leading dressmakers are showing blues in all shades, from navy to bright periwinkle.

Navy blue cheviots are always smart for morning wear, especially when trimmed with a flat black and silver or gold braid and gold or silver buttons.

Some boleros are being made with white cloth waistcoats embroidered in gold or silk the same color as the bolero.

Quillings of velvet and of satin are more popular than ever on cloth and on silk gowns and even on hats.

The hip yoke is proving a godsend to the woman of plump figure. It corrects the full skirt, which is now a necessity to every smart gown, and it makes it possible for her even to look graceful in it.

Speaking of the full skirt, there are revised editions of it suited to the stout woman. One model especially has a V shaped yoke of strappings and a series of inverted plaits stitched down to the knees. The fullness in this skirt is therefore only around the feet, where it is most needed.

The hat in the picture is of pale blue straw trimmed with twists of pale blue panne and pale blue feathers.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

Elaborate Handwork on the Simplest of Them—Soft Materials.

The best trimmings, except those of oriental stuffs, used on pongee are in soft tones. Some of them resemble the work done on old samplers, and in general a quaint old world effect is aimed at.

The new blouses are apt to strike terror to the heart of the woman with the small purse, because they are all of them, even the plainest, so expensively covered with handwork and embroideries. Even the simplest flannel shirt waists are enriched with heavy wool or silk embroidery.

A dainty crepe de chine waist recently designed for a young matron in the smart set was of a delicate biscuit shade, trimmed with bands of pale blue and shirrings of white ribbon edged with black chantilly. Another very dainty blouse was of coarse gray lace trimmed with crossway folds of gray linon de soie.

White mull, white and ecru nets, crepe de chine and chiffon cloth are favorite materials. Openwork bands of taffeta and of chiffon embroidery, both in black and in white, are very pretty trimmings, although in colors they lose somewhat of their richness, and dyed lace is to be preferred.

The newest materials for stocks are cross stitched canvas, mummy canvas and coarse linen, with Russian and Hungarian embroidery effects in the vivid national colors.

The illustration shows a waist of white mull, trimmed with fine tuckings and openwork bands of fine taffeta embroidery. JUDIC CHOLLET.

TONES AND MATERIALS.

Coarse Alpaca Canvases and Hopsacking—Pale Colors.

Coarse alpaca and canvases are excellent for hard wear, and voile, too, of a heavier make will be used for tailor mades of the dressier style. Canvases promise to be more fashionable than cheviots. Hopsackings in gobelin blue and dull green will be worn all summer long. They are being trimmed *with bands of taffeta and fancy but*tons.

The dressy spring tailor mades are of pale colored cloth, heliotrope, champagne and gray. They are trimmed with dyed lace and self colored embroideries.

Brown will continue popular for some time to come, for leading dressmakers are even making silk tailor mades of it for summer wear.

Bright shades of periwinkle and electric blue are giving way to darker blue tones, which are always smart for country and seashore wear.

A great deal of old fashioned embroidery is being used on bands of taffeta in pastel shades. These form panels and yoke pieces on silk or crepe de chine gowns.

Pastel toilets, soft combinations of pale pink, pale blue and pale yellow or pale green are particularly becoming to brunettes and lend themselves well to the Louis XV. fashions now in vogue.

The cut shows a pale gray cloth tailor made. The blouse has a wide yoke, coming well over the shoulders. The fullness gathered into this falls over a wide belt. The skirt is very full and has an odd buttoned front panel. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHION HINTS.

Skirts Without Trains—The Vogue of the "Ready Made" Suit.

The skirt of the moment for street wear is cut round and full. It just clears the ground when worn with high heels, and it is a little shorter, if anything, in the back than in the front.

Boleros are of every variety, long or short, loose or fitted in at the waist. They sometimes even lose distinction as boleros by having tiny basques added to them.

Nowadays many of the most smartly gowned women buy their costumes ready made. This is a very good idea *unless one can afford the most expen*sive tailors. The simple and yet wholly smart tailor made is a product of the best houses. The cheap tailor cannot give the same irreproachable fit, and so he seeks to hide this by much trimming. On the other hand, at the shops one can often find for a reasonable sum copies of French models, which with slight alterations may be made to fit almost if not quite perfect*ly. Nowadays, too, the styles are so* intricate that it is not always possible to see from descriptions or drawings how they will suit the figure. For these and many other reasons ready made garments are finding more and more buyers.

Brown has been and is still the rage in Paris, especially those shades which verge on the bronze and even on the yellow.

The flowered ribbons with gold threads woven in the border will be very fashionable for sashes. Perfectly charming is the girdle shaped sash of soft silk adorned at the back with three large flowers—roses, pansies or poppies—the ends being finished with flowers also.

The illustration shows an evening dress of black flowered mousseline over black taffeta. The trimming is of chantilly lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SMART MILLINERY.

Hats to Be Worn With Tailor Mades Are of Rough Straw.

The hat to be worn with tailor made costumes will be of rough straw. This is trimmed with wide, soft ribbon scarfs.

The narrow floral toque seems to be a great favorite among well dressed women. It is particularly attractive made of white roses, with the top en*tirely composed* of their shaded green leaves.

Hats of fine black straw will be enriched by a curtain of fine black chantilly lace, and under this may be concealed one or two red roses. The black hat of the summer season will be a lacey affair, having a high crown banded with velvet and jet.

Ecru lace picture hats will be trimmed with wide ruffles of lace and chiffon and rosettes in blue and pink pastel shades.

Tricorne shapes in all varieties of straw are trimmed with roses and bands of tiny roses.

Tailor made shapes trimmed with a single pale blue or white sea gull are extremely smart.

Cloth trimming will be found on everything, from silk to homespun. A very charming example was a summer frock of willow green relieved with black chantilly, on which white cloth bands formed a lattice, the bands being finished with small gold buttons.

The picture shows a French hat of ecru leghorn. It is trimmed with roses and twists of pale blue ribbon.

DRESS REFORM.

The Lesson of a Play—The Modes of the Moment.

Yesterday I went to the theater to see "The Admirable Crichton," and I was struck as I never have been before with the miserable hampering of modern garments for women, such as are considered necessary for the young ladies of the hour. The first act and the last show us the conventional evening dress of young ladies, with the long skirts and low bodices. The skirts hamper every movement and bring them to the most rigid conventionality, which means unnaturalness. The waists—well, there is little to say about them, but the shoulder straps seemed to hold the arms as in a vise. All the wearers could do was to laggingly walk around, dragging their trains, and loll and finally fall asleep in easy chairs and incidentally bicker, as loving sisters sometimes do.

During the other two acts these same girls are on a desert island, shipwrecked and dressed in such rags and tags as they saved from the wreck. Then, when these had literally worn out, they had somehow managed to weave some coarse stuff, and with this and skins they made suits something like a man's hunting costume when he must be his own tailor. Needless to say they were becoming. But their becomingness is not why they are mentioned here. The girls who wore them ran up ladders, leaped over rocks and through windows, hunted, fished and seemed to be fairly wild with the very joy of living in this unconventional costume. Their movements were as free and unconstrained as those of the wild gazelles and as graceful, and their spirits fairly bubbled over. Then, in the last act, they were tripping and stumbling in the long skirts, weak, weary and languid again. The sermon is a good one, and I think every woman present sighed for the delightful freedom of those island suits.

The Germans are making great efforts toward reform in such things, but they have reached only the stage where corsets are discarded. Many of our sensible women also have reached that point.

It will take me some time to get my ideas out of this tangle and down to such a point that I can tell with customary enthusiasm of the dresses of the hour. Well, as it must be done, here it is: In the first place, material varies so widely that one can say almost anything and still be right. For the bright spring days in the streets we find so many pretty woolen mixtures and plain stuffs that a choice is not easy. But as we must wear dresses one made after the model shown here would not be so very bad, except that *the skirts are so much longer than na*ture requires. This particular gown is of basket weave in dark brown on the cut. The skirt is fitted to the figure by many small plaits and one deep plait in the back. There is a shaped flounce at the foot, and this is finished with a thick featherbone piping and a row of small bows of brown cloth, each having a dull gilt button on it. The waist opens at the left side under the tabs and has a pretty arrangement of velvet as a revers collar over a chemdefeat them. His beloved Adsuma went with him. A furious storm arose, which threatened to send Yamato Dakeno Mikoto and all his heroes to the bottom of the sea and snuff out forever the sprouting empire of Japan.

This disaster would have happened, says the tradition, except for Adsuma. She felt certain that the god of the sea was offended at the Japs, and only the sacrifice to him of something most beloved of them all would appease him. Dressing herself in her most gorgeous robes of scarlet and gold, merely telling those around her that she was going to offer her life to the angry god, before she could be prevented this glorious Adsuma plunged into the boiling sea and was drowned. Then the waters immediately calmed down, so tis said, and Yamato Dakeno Mikoto led his seamen on to victory, and his rule was established.

All the district of Japan near the scene of this heroic act of a woman was named for Adsuma, and from that day to this wherever the sacred name can be bestowed it is given. From that day to this, too, the mothers of Japan instill their little sons and daughters with the splendid story of Adsuma. Little girls are taught when the sacrifice of their lives can help their country not to hesitate a moment. Where can life be given better than for one's country?

Every day the Jap mother gives her children a lesson in patriotism. There is a sort of ceremonial bowing and reverencing the present mikado and the ancient heroes of Japan. Then the little mother tells the young ones tales of the grand deeds of the ancient heroes and of their ancestors. The glorious victories in war of the Japs are dwelt on. The names and exploits of great Japs who have deserved well of their country are dinned into the children's ears as an American mother dins into her children not to soil or tear their best clothes.

It is no wonder that with such mothers the Japs are the most patriotic people in the world. No wonder even the common sailor or soldier deems it the highest honor he can achieve to die for his country.

If we were so unhappy again as to have a war on, my dought soldier and sailor volunteers would step forward in plenty. But it is in time of peace that patriotism is really made. Boys and girls should be taught to love and serve their country in time of peace. They can serve their country by upholding with all their souls that country's purity and honor.

In inculcating patriotism into their children Japanese mothers are greater and wiser than American mothers. In our country patriotism seems dying down to embers and ashes. Only American mothers and teachers can supply the fuel which shall renew and cause it to flame up gloriously. The boys who are to be the municipal, state and national officials of the future should learn from their own mothers that incorruptible honesty which counts their country's public administration a thing too white to be soiled. Each of them should be taught so say as they say their daily school lessons, "Never through me shall the good name of this country suffer in war or in peace."

In every house, in the room the children frequent, there should be portraits of our great heroes draped in the national flag. In that room let American mothers instruct their children in the patriotic deeds and spirit of high honor of the builders of our nation. And if the mothers themselves do not know of these things—well, they can learn. isette of white linen. The sleeves are made with the caps and puff and the cuff. These cuffs are wide or narrow, as the owner may wish. Some of the tailored sleeves have a bell shaped upper part, reaching to the wrist on the outside of the arm and to the bend of the elbow on the inner seam.

Flounces, on the straight, on the bias, shirred at the top and plaited, are all in style, and shaped flounces are by no means out of fashion. It depends somewhat on personal taste and on the cost of the material. Bias flounces are most economical, as they do not need to be so full as straight ones.

All dresses, no matter of what material or for what purpose they are used, are made deep on the shoulders, and when it is not possible to do this the caps of the sleeves are so arranged as to create the appearance of width. Some have caps as part of the waist, and these make the shoulders appear much wider, even as men's coats are built out.

Hats that are bonnets and bonnets that are hats are among the newest millinery. Flat hats with wide tulle strings to tie under the chin and trimmed with poetic wreaths of roses are among those best adapted to wearing with the pronounced 1830 styles, which are now a fixed fact. Yet the tight habit skirt is going to die a hard death.

Some of the new coarse colored linens are offered for tailored suits. They are in all the season's best colors—dark blue, brown and the grays and biscuits.

LOVE OF COUNTRY

A Lesson For American Mothers

IN the Japanese navy is a beautiful warship called the Adsuma. The name is that of a large province in eastern Japan. Like so many other Japanese names, it recalls to the brown native a tradition of ancient glory and heroism, this time of the heroism of a woman. Adsuma was the beautiful wife of Emperor Yamato Dakeno Mikoto, beloved not only of her husband, but of all her people, a few thousand years ago.

Well, Yamato Dakeno Mikoto's little country, which then constituted only a few of the islands of Japan, was attacked on the north and east by enemies who sought to take over his land for themselves. Yamato started out valiantly with his warriors in a ship to

HOLDS UP A HIGHWAYMAN.

Iowa Man, Stopped by a Robber, Turns Sleuth and Gets Watch and Revolver.

Elmer A. Emmert, victim, turned Elmer A. Emmert, victor, and the transaction cost a Chicago highwayman a $20 revolver.

Emmert lives in Dallas City, Ia., and came to Chicago to spend Sunday. He was walking in Wabash avenue, near Van Buren street, when some one tapped him on the shoulder. He turned and looked into a revolver barrel.

"Up with your hands!" commanded the man at the other end of the barrel.

"Why, certainly," said the man from

"HAND OVER THAT, WATCH."

Iowa. He had been there before and know how to be accommodating.

"Hand over that watch," continued the highwayman.

"Certainly," and a gold watch and chain exchanged owners.

"Got any cash?" (from the highwayman).

"Been in Chicago for two hours," answered Emmert.

The highwayman turned and walked south.

Then Emmert began to run his hands through his hair. His friends in Iowa would have known that was thinking. He examined the footprints in the snow, and he chuckled as he murmured to himself:

"Nails on one side and none on the other."

He started south. Every ten steps he stooped and looked at the white covering. He caught his man at Harrison street. His clinched fist descended and the highwayman fell like a log. He was still dazed when he rolled over and gazed at his late victim.

"Shell over that watch!" said Emmert.

Many things were floating within the circle of the highwayman's vision, but he knew the exact location of the watch, and he produced it.

"When a man catches a thief he gets a reward, don't he?" demanded the farmer from Iowa.

"He do," replied the highwayman, and he gave his weapon to Emmert.

Laid an Egg as Purchaser Carried Her Home for the Purpose of Making a Stew of Her.

Francis Repetto, of Chester, Pa., thinking he would like a chicken for dinner, went into the market and purchased a large Dominick hen. He carried the hen under one arm and a bundle of groceries under the other.

"Hey, mister, your hen has laid an egg," shouted a small boy, as Repetto pushed homeward through the crowded street.

The boy picked up the egg, which had dropped to the sidewalk, and which did not break in the fall, handed it to the astonished man, and, as it was still warm, there was no mistaking the fact that the hen laid it.

"That egg has saved the life of that hen," said Repetto. "If she is good enough to lay while being carried in the street she is good enough to keep for her fruit."

"Hello" Girls Get Bald.

A large proportion of telephone girls employed by the big companies in New York give up their places rather than incur the risk of becoming partly bald. This effect of the steel band or hood which telephone operators wear over their head is plainly noticeable in the case of those who have scanty hair. On boys who act as telephone operators it is even more noticeable than with girls. One boy who operates a switchboard is almost entirely bald in a band running from one side of his head to another. He has been at the telephone switchboard for two years and now wears a cushion underneath the steel hood to protect his head from the pressure.

WERE ENEMIES, ARE CHUMS

Two Neighbors, on Anything But Cordial Relations, Forgot Conventionalities at a Fire.

"It is curious how a fire will make people forget conventionalities," said an M street woman to a Washington Post reporter. "For two years I've lived where I live now, and I've never made the acquaintance of my next-door neighbor. Indeed, what with the birds she keeps and my pet cat, we've gone beyond being mere strangers, and have become almost open enemies. We've looked the other way when we chanced to meet, and the atmosphere has been anything but cordial.

"The night of the fire at the church near us I flew to the window at the first sound of the engines. I couldn't persuade my husband to put on his coat and go with me, so, as fires have a perfectly irresistible fascination for me, I dashed out alone. Almost the first person I saw was an intoxicated negro, and I simply reached out and took hold of a strange woman's arm. She was alone in the crowd, as I was, and we clung together for support for a half hour or so. We talked as if we'd known each other always, and it wasn't until I was chilled enough to think of going home that I really looked at the woman's face. It was my next-door neighbor, and we both laughed when each recognized the other.

"We went off home like old cronies, and had a cup of hot tea together before we parted. I like her immensely, and I hope she likes me. We've been marketing together twice, and once to the matinee. We're going to be chums, and if there hadn't been a fire in the neighborhood, I suppose we'd have gone on forever detesting each other."

SIMPLICITY OF THE POPE.

Once Prepared Coffee for a Guest with His Own Hands Assisted by a Count.

One morning early, writes William J. D. Croke, concerning the new pope, in the Century, a friend of mine, a Venetian nobleman, called on him. Mgr. Sarto had said mass and settled down to work. His sister had gone out to mass, or for the household marketing, which they were doing at the Rialto on August 4, 1903, the day of wonders in their simple life.

"Has the count taken coffee?" asked the bishop.

"Well, to tell the truth, no, because the business was urgent, and I have come straight from the railway station," the guest replied.

No excuse availed, and Mgr. Sarto rose and went into the kitchen. So the bishop of ducal Mantua and his guest might have been seen there talking and laughing, while monsignor coaxed the charcoal with a black kitchen fan, the coffee fizzed in a tin pot on the range, and the count and cardinal sat down, in order to save his distinguished host what menial service he could. Then they had coffee together at the kitchen table.

CITIZENSHIP OF INDIANS.

Legal Status of Claimants to Rights in Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes.

The Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship court, created in the summer of 1902, to pass upon the rights of court claimants to citizenship in those nations, and which has been in session since October of that year, has rendered its first final decision on the merits of the cases before them. The court holds, according to the Kansas City Journal, that an intermarried citizen could not marry out of the tribe. The Choctaw council passed a law that when a man, on the death of his Indian wife, married a white woman he forfeited the rights of citizenship. The citizenship court holds that this would violate the treaty of 1866, something the Choctaw council would object to.

The court has not yet admitted any white children of such marriages, though 300 are seeking admission. Nor has the court admitted any of the claimants who seek admission on the claim of possessing Indian blood, three cases, involving 40 persons, having been rejected. Eight intermarried citizens have been admitted.

Some British Estates.

During the last year 63,310 estates, representing a capital of £270,473,307, were admitted to probate in the United Kingdom, says the London Mail. Of these 32,295 had a capital value of £500 or less, 9,767 of between £1,000 and £10,000; 2,112 of between £10,000 and £25,000; 1,337 of between £25,000 and £100,000, and 290 of more than £100,000. It is estimated that there are probably 100 persons in the United Kingdom who have at their own absolute disposal £5,000,000 each, and about 400 others have between £2,500,000 and £5,000,000. The largest estate of the year was that of Samuel Lewis, the well known money lender, which was valued at £2,572,658. The next biggest was that of Col. Harry McCalmont, which was sworn in at £2,000,000.

An International Affair.

In the large power plant installed in the Mysore country, in southern India, the timber came from Australia, the insulators from Italy, the hydraulic plant from Switzerland, the penstock pipes from Scotland and the entire electric plant from America.

Typewriting Record.

The world's typewriting record is held by a woman, who has accomplished the remarkable feat of writing 20,400 words in six hours. She had only ten minutes' rest and refreshed herself with pickles and charlotte russe.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, April 14, 1904.

The result of the Democratic primaries in this city shows that the William Randolph Hearst boomers are not being caught napping these days.

The Bayonne ministers have started a crusade against Sunday baseball. Let the good work be successful. There are still six days in the week for sports.

Good ads are tailor made. The hand-me-down sort are usually written on the spur of the moment without thought of the value of space or results. Measure every feature of the thing to be advertised. Jot down every item that will likely appeal to this or that person. With these measurements you are in a position to construct an ad that will fit.—Omaha Trade Exhibit.

There is a new song going the rounds of the press and it runs as follows: "We don't want to buy at your place, we don't want to trade there any more; you'll be sorry when you see us going in some other store. You can't sell us any state goods, we have opened wide our eyes; we don't want to trade at your store, because you do not advertise."—West Plains (Mo.) Journal.

Already there appears to be much interest taken in the proposition to inaugurate annual horse shows in this city. The plan is to have the initial exhibition in June and there is no doubt that the undertaking will be a success considering the names of those who are promoting the scheme. There is no reason why Plainfield should not have a show equal to any given in the smaller cities of the United States. We have enthusiastic sportsmen and we have stables of horses of the best breeds. The truth is that Plainfield is going to make other cities envious in this undertaking.

Some people are so unreasonable. Here is Plainfield making months at congress because the allowance for the postoffice was only $100,000 while a site would cost $40,000—that is the kind of site Plainfield wanted. Let them take a lesson from Perth Amboy, where a public spirited land-owners just gave the site, free and clear and without a second's hesitation. As he is Plainfield.—Perth Amboy Observer.

Uncle Sam has not yet become an object of charity and it is not at all necessary for Plainfielders to put their hands in their pockets for him. Besides there is just a little difference between real estate values in Perth Amboy and Plainfield.

The interest shown by President McCarter and his assistants in the proposition to build a trolley line between this city and Metuchen is encouraging. The P. S. C. has given Plainfield good attention of late, the men at the head of the trolley company knowing that there is money to be made here. There can be no question but that the proposed line to Metuchen would be a profitable investment. Not only would it connect that borough with the large business houses here, but it would be a short route to the Pennsylvania railroad. Plainfield building interests are moving southward and beyond doubt many dwellings would be erected between here and Metuchen if people are assured that the trolley line will be built. In addition, the line will form a connecting link with Perth Amboy, which is not easy to access to Plainfield at present.

HE BURIED HIS SON HERE

JACKSON S. POUND COMES TO OLD HOME TO ATTEND THE OBSEQUIES.

Jackson S. Pound, about forty years ago a resident of East Front street, adjoining John Taylor Johnston's property, and who at that time conducted a bakery, where George Voehl now has a similar shop, on West Front street, came to this city yesterday on the sad errand of burying his son, Arthur Pound. The dead man was twenty-six years of age.

He died Wednesday night at the home of his father, 42 Bond street, Brooklyn, N. Y., of hasty consumption, and the interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery. Mr. Pound has another son, who is married, and a daughter, Mrs. Nellie D. Waid, a widow.

Mr. Thurlow to Speak.

The Somerset County Board of Agriculture will meet in the Court House at Somerville Saturday afternoon, April 16. The speakers and their subjects will be: Mrs. F. H. Valentine, "Poultry Raising For Profit;" L. R. Thurlow, "The Production of Market Milk;" Herbert P. Phillips, "The Silo and Absolute Necessity on the Farm."

AMUSEMENTS.

Charles Frohman is presenting William H. Crane in the dramatization of "David Harum" at the Academy of Music for a limited season. The production is as elaborate as good taste and opportunity will permit. As for the cast it is practically the same as was seen during the original run at the Garrick Theatre. It is nearly four years since the play was first given to the public and its success since has been something extraordinary. It has had two runs in New York and one of its seasons was spent in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. Mr. Crane's success as the old fellow who held that "a man might be straighter'n a string in most things and yet never tell the hull truth about a hoss" has been of immense volume.

Novelty is the keynote of F. C. Whitney's latest stage production, "Piff, Paff, Pouf," which is to be seen for the first time on any stage at the Casino. That was the note which Stanislaus Stange hit when he wrote the book, and it was that which first attracted the attention of the producer, F. C. Whitney. To keep up this important feature in a production intended primarily for Broadway, Mr. Whitney called to his aid the two most successful song writers of the period, William Jerome and Jean Schwartz. They have written some remarkable successes in "When Mr. Shakespeare Comes to Town," "I'm Tired," "Rip VanWinkle Was a Lucky Man," "Mr. Dooley," "Bedella," etc., but both feel certain they have all the others discounted with "The Ghost That Never Walked," which Eddie Foy will sing in "Piff, Paff, Pouf." The ghost song is only one of twenty big numbers arranged for this play with novel settings and "business."

Unquestionably the biggest hit of the season in New York is Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul" at the Broadway Theatre. The spacious auditorium of the Broadway has been filled to its capacity nightly ever since the piece was produced in New York, and the fame of the attraction has spread over Manhattan Island to such an extent that the record for big business made by "The Prince of Pilsen" last spring and summer at this theatre bids fair to be eclipsed by the present offering. It is not hard to understand the reason for the success of "The Yankee Consul." Whatever elements go to making musical comedy, or comic opera, desirable, are to be found in this production, and all of the best. One feature alone, however, would be sufficient to carry the Yankee Consul, if it is needed carrying, and that is the work of Raymond Hitchcock in the title role. Screamingly funny and ridiculous as he is throughout the performance, he does not resort to horse-play. In his comedy, he is ably supported by Eva Davenport. Their heart to heart talks are wonderfully droll. Matinees are given at the Broadway on Wednesday and Saturday. The best seats at the Wednesday afternoon performances are $1.50.

"The Virginian," having passed its one hundredth performance, runs on at the Manhatten Theatre, New York, with unabated popularity. On the occasion of its one hundred and tenth performance, on Wednesday evening, April 6, valuable souvenirs were distributed in the forms of copies of "The Virginian," Owen Wister's popular novel from which the play was made. A special edition of the story had been issued by the publishers for this event. It is profusely illustrated with scenes from the play, portraits of the actors, etc., and were treasured by all lovers of the story and admirers of its stage version fortunate enough to get copies. There have been so few plays in New York this season that have achieved long runs that the great success of "The Virginian" at the Manhattan is all the more notable.

"The Other Girl," which holds the record for success of all of Augustus Thomas' plays ever presented in this city, is now moving along triumphantly at the New Empire Theatre, New York city, towards the 150th performance. It is drawing capacity audiences and it will probably reach the end of its season at this house with this record of big business still the same. None of Mr. Thomas' other comedies yielded the abundant laughter which "The Other Girl" provokes and none has been so thoroughly satisfactory in the completeness of its characterizations or the thoroughly amusing quality of its situations. The acting of the piece is of a very high standard as Charles Frohman has put into it a remarkable cast which included the great comedy sextette Lionel Barrymore, Joseph Wheelock, Jr., Richard Bennett, Frank Worthing, and Elsie and Drina DeWolfe. Besides the humor of the comedy there is a delightful love story which appeals strongly to women and which is effective in its appeal for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees at the Empire are always crowded.

"The Girl from Kays" is the greatest musical show New York has ever had. It has set the big town crazy and is drawing packed houses to the Herald Square Theatre, where it is now approaching its 100th performance. This musical comedy provides the completest evening's entertainment one could desire. It delights all classes, and is making a record of triumph which succeeding musical comedies will find it very hard to equal. "The Girl from Kays" is a great big medley of music, mirth and song with a dazzling background of the prettiest young women the stage affords all wearing the most gorgeous and expensive gowns. The gown display alone is sufficient to attend and hold women theatre-goers. The fun of the piece begins at 8 o'clock and for over three hours it continues, a merry and melodious torrent broken at frequent intervals by the roars of laughter of the audience.

Charles Frohman will present at the Grand Opera House, during the week of April 11, Clyde Fitch's greatest comedy of wit and sentiment, called "The Girl with the Green Eyes," and written to supply a leading role for Clara Bloodgood, especially adapted to her unique art and fascinating personality. That the play gives a fitting opportunity for the display of her extraordinary talent is manifest from the fact that it placed Mrs. Bloodgood immediately in the foremost place among American comediennes.

Following "The Girl With the Green Eyes," another Henry W. Savage offering will be the attraction at the Grand, making the third of the great American manager's shows that has been seen over here this season. "Peggy from Paris," that clever successor to George Ade's initial effort "The Sultan of Sulu," will be the bill and it seems sure to repeat the splendid impression created by "The Sultan" and "The Prince of Pilsen." With the engagement of "Peggy From Paris," at the Grand, week of April 18, there will be four Savage shows playing in New York, and each one a high success.

Richard Carle and his new musical comedy, "The Tenderfoot," have had their run at the New York Theatre extended indefinitely. This bright young comedian and his play have made one of the great hits of the year in New York and the theatre in which they are appearing is packed at every performance. The engagement was originally for six weeks and Wright Lorimer in "The Shepherd King" was to follow. The packed houses and the demand for seats far in advance showed that a genuine hit had been made and Mr. Lorimer was transferred to the Knickerbocker Theatre to temporarily replace Carle. It is said that Mr. Carle and "The Tenderfoot" will run far into warm weather.

"The County Chairman," at Wallack's Theatre, New York, will reach its 175th metropolitan representation with the matinee performance today. The long run of George Ade's capital comedy has shown a singular evenness in the matter of attendance—a fact due mainly to the limitations of the auditorium, which, large as it is, has been almost invariably tested by crowds of eager spectators. This, apparently, is a season when most persons seek entertainment producing laughter, and "The County Chairman's" extraordinary popularity is undoubtedly based upon the incessant mirth that marks its progress from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

Pennsylvania Railroad's Washington Excursion Tours.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's seventh three-day personally-conducted tour to Washington will leave New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Elizabeth, and Trenton April 14. Round-trip rates—only difference being in the hotel selected in Washington—are, $12 and $14.50 from New York; $10.50 or $13 from Trenton, and proportionate rates from other points. Tickets cover railroad transportation for the round trip and hotel accommodations. A special side trip to Mt. Vernon may also be taken. All tickets are good for ten days, with special hotel rates at expiration of hotel coupon. For itineraries and full information apply to Ticket Agents; Tourist Agents, 263 Fifth avenue, New York; 4 Court street, Brooklyn; or Geo. W. Boyd, General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

Judge Parker as a Boy.

"Resolved, That statesmen help us more than warriors." Judge Parker had the negative in that debate. He wasn't a judge then—just a country schoolboy. The facsimile of the minutes of that meeting of the school debating club in the handwriting of "A. B. Parker, Secretary," is an interesting feature of the life of Judge Parker, told in photographs in next Sunday's New York World. There are lots of other interesting features—how up-to-date doctors restore the dead to life, how a woman won $3,500 at Monte Carlo. If Henry Ward Beecher was alive today would he be a Christian Scientist? His granddaughter says he would. She tells why in next Sunday's New York World.

Handball Tournament.

Two games were played in the Y. M. C. A. handball tournament Saturday night. C. S. Koons defeated Harry Thompson, 21 to 11, and Harry Scull beat P. E. Collier, 21 to 3.

DAN CUPID SOLVES UNPLEASANT SITUATION

Route to This City Proves to be a Road to Matrimony for Two Young Tourists.

A SECRET MARRIAGE

AUTOMOBILE BREAK DOWN, BRINGS GOOD LUCK.

Russell Jacobus, of Cedar Grove, Wins a Bride as a Result of Accident to Touring Machine—Bride From Upper Montclair.

Though responsible for a good many troubles, the automobile isn't generally regarded as a matrimonial agent. It is, though, once in a while, and there was a case of it right here in Plainfield last Thursday night.

Seated disconsolately in a motionless automobile was a girl. Down on his knees in the dirt, examining, fitting, hammering and now and then saying something under his breath, was a man.

"O, dear," said the girl. "Isn't this perfectly dreadful? What are we going to do?"

"Don't know," said the man, thinking hard.

"Mamma and papa will be so angry, and what will the neighbors think?" The girl was almost in tears.

"Let's get married then."

"O, this is so sudden," said she demurely. "Still I don't see what else we can do. The automobile simply won't go, and we can't stay here all night."

And so it was done. The couple, who were Miss Hattie Sigler, daughter of Isaac Sigler, of Upper Montclair, and Russell Jacobus, a drug clerk of Cedar Grove, hied themselves to the home of Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, and were made one.

The bridal pair came to this city Thursday afternoon and had dinner. Then, as they were about to start for home, their auto broke down. Jacobus visited all the repair shops in town but it was after 10 o'clock and they were closed.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobus spent the night at a hotel here, telegraphing their parents the next morning. The bride's father was displeased at first but finally wired back his forgiveness.

This in substance was the story appearing yesterday in the New York papers under a Montclair dateline. It was shown to Rev. John S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church, this morning. Mr. Zelie admitted that he had married the couple as stated but said that he had questioned both parties closely in regard to their parents' consent and had been told that they were acting with their parents' knowledge and approval. Mr. Zelie also thought it was nonsense to presume that their inability to get back to Montclair was responsible for the marriage. There were plenty of trains, he said, and it was not so late as stated when the couple called. It was still daylight, about dinner time, he explained.

EASTER MUSIC REPEATED

PROGRAMMES ENJOYED YESTERDAY BY LOCAL CHURCH PEOPLE.

A large congregation was attracted to Grace M. E. church last night by the repetition of the Easter musical programme. The renditions were exceptionally fine.

There was a string quintette in addition to the organ, composed of George Spier, Miss Helen Shupp, Dyckman Steckler, violins; G. W. V. May, viola; and C. K. Shupp, 'cello. A feature of the programme was a soprano solo by Miss Helen Shupp, with 'cello obligato. Kenneth Shupp directed the music. Miss Alice Carroll was at the organ.

A large congregation thoroughly enjoyed the Easter music repeated by the choir of the First Baptist church, last night. The beautiful anthems were given by the chorus in an excellent manner, while the solo parts by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs F. M. Ward, contralto; William Holmes, baritone and George Smith, tenor, were all to be desired. A feature of the programme was the opening selection of the service by Miss Florence Wolfert, violinist, accompanied by Howard Case, organist. During the service, the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, gave a short appropriate discourse.

Victor Harris, who is to play at the Casino Thursday evening, will be the guest of Mrs. W. L. Saunders.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Miller and son, Russell, of Orchard place, have returned from a visit at Morristown.

William Drake, of Richmond street, has recovered from a recent illness.

LINE TO METUCHEN NOW A SURE THING

President McCarter and Other P. S. C. Officials Drive Over Route as Far As Oak Tree.

ON TO PERTH AMBOY

A DIRECT TROLLEY CONNECTION WITH THE SEA SHORE.

Officials the Guests of George P. Mellick—The Rights of Way Being Secured—Some Very Liberal Grants.

Assurances are given of the possible extension of the trolley from the present Arlington avenue terminus, near Hillside Cemetery, past the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, the Gentlemen's Driving Park and on to Metuchen, connecting with the line at that place. On Saturday a most important step was made in the furthering of this project through Oak Tree, Metuchen and thence to Perth Amboy.

Former Councilman George P. Mellick, after several interviews with Col. Hine and Mr. Hendricks, of New York, the largest property owner on the proposed line, succeeded in making arrangements for all interested to lunch with him on Saturday afternoon. President McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, Col. Hine, his assistant; Mr. Stanley, general superintendent; Mr. Ludlum, district superintendent; Mr. Hendricks, J. Wesley Johnson and Former Councilman E. T. Barrows, the last named being the chairman of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds committee, partook of the lunch.

After luncheon Mr. Mellick's guests were taken in automobile and carriages to the golf grounds, where, despite a heavy downpour of rain, President McCarter made a personal inspection from where the Arlington avenue branch stops to the driving park, and then was driven by Mr. Johnson through Woodland avenue to Oak Tree.

Mr. Hendricks, who owns from the cemetery to Rahway road, gave assurance that he would deed the trolley company twenty feet of his frontage and Mr. Johnson, on behalf of Mr. Quinn and the driving park, offered the same, which will give the trolley company a private right of way to the golf club and driving park. From the latter point, two routes are under advisement, one to continue through Woodland avenue to Oak Tree and the other to continue on private way alongside the driving park to Park avenue, crossing the Lehigh Valley tracks at that point, both routes to connect with the dead end of the Metuchen tracks beyond Oak Tree.

President McCarter gave evidences of his pleasure at the hearty co-operation of those present, as well as his satisfaction at the possibilities of the country to be opened up and gave assurance that work would be started as soon as the balance of the consents could be obtained.

This route will be a part of the main line to the seashore and it means to Plainfield that with a fifteen minute headway and large cars, ample accommodations will be given to those interested in the Allis Oval, Muhlenberg Hospital, Hillside Cemetery, Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the Gentlemen's Driving Park; also to the thousands of citizens who desire a comparative short route through beautiful country to the seashore and the drawing to this city of a large trade for the local stores.

NO DEBT IN THIS CHURCH

TRINITY REFORMED'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT SHOWS CHURCH PROSPEROUS.

The printed financial statement of Trinity Reformed church for the past year, was presented to the congregation Sunday by Robert Clark, Jr., chairman of the finance committee, and comparisons with last year's statement made. It is highly gratifying to the members of the church and congregation that such an excellent showing is made and that another year is started with the church out of debt. The total receipts for congregational purposes, for the year were $5,786.68 and there is a cash balance, with all bills paid, of $129 26. The benevolent contributions amount to $634 47.

Miss Sadie Munday, of West Fourth street, entertained a number of friends at an informal reception at her home Saturday night.

Wilbur Hubbard, of New York, was a recent visitor at the home of his brother, John Hubbard, of Central avenue. He expects to leave soon for Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Bonnell, of Orange, have been visiting Mrs. Bonnell's brother, A. J. Branson, of Crescent avenue.

RURAL DELIVERY ROUT

FRIENDS OF HOSPITAL GUESTS OF MR. FISK

President of Board of Governors Host at a Banquet at the Casino.

PROMINENT MEN THERE

AN ELABORATE AFFAIR AND AN ENJOYABLE TIME.

List of Toasts and Those Who Responded—Handsome Decorations and Splendid Music —Mr. Fisk a Genial Host.

For the purpose of bringing together those who have much to do with Muhlenberg Hospital, former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, as president of the Board of Governors, gave a dinner to his colleagues and the members of the medical staff, in the Casino, last night. It was an elaborate affair, no expense being spared in the arrangement of various details.

The tables were arranged in the oblong fashion, the centre being filled with plants, palms and flowers and in the centre of the foliage was a small table hidden from the view of the guests. Soon after they were seated, Frank Dwyer, a member of the "Wizard of Oz" Company, suddenly appeared on the table and gave a lively dance. The floral decorations about the stage were also attractive, and here Brooks & Denton's banjo and mandolin orchestra of six pieces, discoursed popular airs while the dinner was being served by John W. Holland, of Philadelphia. Another pleasure was the singing by William Richter, of New York.

There were unique features about the table decorations. In front of each guest stood a small French doll, representing a Red Cross nurse. In one hand she held the menu card, bearing the familiar Red Cross sign, and in the other a package of cigarettes.

After the very excellent menu was enjoyed, there were several speeches. Mr. Fisk acted as toastmaster and after a few introductory remarks, others were called upon to respond. In each speech hearty appreciation was extended to the host for the pleasure afforded and his unselfish and untiring labors in behalf of Muhlenberg Hospital were recounted by all.

Others who spoke and their toasts were:

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, "Founders of the Hospital;" Dr. F. C. Ard, "Eye-opener;" Charles H. Brooks, "Our Nurses;" Dr. E. W. Hedges, "Our Medical Staff;" Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, "Our Assistant Medical Staff;" Evarts Tracy, "Our Architects;" Craig A. Marsh, "Our Legal Advisor;" Ernest R. Ackerman, "Our Ladies' Auxiliary;" former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, "Our City."

Mr. Fisk took occasion to refer to the early days of the city, when there were two doctors here. The town was then known as a health resort. He said that he did not care to have any business with physicians, unless they had money to put out. He would then give them a good rate of interest.

These persons were present:

Charles Joel Fisk, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, Alexander Gilbert, John B. Dumont, Dr. F. C. Ard, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Mr. Sanderson, H. M. Stockton, Dr. T. S. Davis, Mason W. Tyler, Craig A. Marsh, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, Dr. A. F. VanHorn, J. Kirtland Myers, William R. Cock, Howard Huntington, Thomas R. VanBoskerck, Lewis G. Timpson, Dr. Norman H. Probasco, William C. Kinney, Augustus B. Fisk, George Cox, Mr. Swartout, Evarts Tracy, Charles H. Brooks, DeWitt C. Ivins, H. G. Runkle, S. L. Schoonmaker, Lewis E. Waring, Dr. G. W. Endicott, Dr. J. B. Probasco, George P. Mellick, Elliot T. Barrows, A. H. Atterbury, E. H. Ladd, Jr., Ernest R. Ackerman, Dr. P. S. Cregar, Dr. P. J. Zeglio, William L. Saunders, Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, Dr. Albert Pittis, Frederick H. Andrews, George A. Chapman, Dr. J. H. Carman, Dr. William H. Murray, John M. Whiton, J. Evarts Tracy, William E. Lowe, O. T. Waring, Dr. Monroe B. Long, Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, Samuel Huntington, George H. Goddard, J. Franz Babbard and Dr. Ellis W. Hedges.

—Announcement is made that Charles H. Warren, formerly vice president of the New Jersey Central, and lately with the Rock Island Railroad, resigned his position with the latter road. He has not disclosed his future plans. George Wilden, formerly connected with the mechanical department of the New Jersey Central, yesterday assumed the position of superintendent of motive power of the Erie Railroad. He has much ability and a promising future.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Miller, of East Ninth street, are spending a few days at Atlantic City.

WOMAN'S EXCHANGE LUNCHEON

DELIGHTFUL REPAST IS SERVED AT THE PARK CLUB.

Under the auspices of the Woman's Exchange, a large and most successful luncheon was given yesterday afternoon at the Park Club. There were no special features, except that the luncheon was a delightful one and the 120 women present fully enjoyed it as well as a game of cards subsequently. The menu was arranged and served by Steward Johnson, of the club.

The Executive Board of the Exchange had the affair in charge. Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, assisted by Miss Anna Murphy, being the leaders. It is believed that about $70 will be realized as profit. The Exchange is at all times in need of financial assistance, owing to the fact that it is not self-supporting and a great deal of work is required to manage it successfully.

WM. H. HILLMAN BURIED

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES, AT WHICH TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE.

Beautiful floral tributes from the many friends of William H. Hillman at his funeral yesterday attested the wide esteem in which he was held. The services took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the late home, 923 West Fourth street. Rev. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, was in charge, assisted by Rev. George Mooney, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

To mark their appreciation of his services at various social affairs and his faithfulness in behalf of the church, the members of the Young Men's Bible class, of Monroe Avenue church, sent a floral tribute. "We Never Say 'Good-bye' in Heaven" was sung by Elmer E. Runyon, and "Some Time We'll Understand," by Charles Lewis. The interment was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were George B. Fountain, George Hillman, of this city; Fred Nearing, of Brooklyn; Mr. Thurston, of Middletown, N. Y.; John Hillman, of New York, and Thurston Hillman, of Rahway.

MAY FORM A POST HERE

SPANISH - AMERICAN WAR VETERANS TALK OF ORGANIZING.

Talk of the formation of a post by the Spanish-American War veterans in this city, which arose last year, has been revived. There are more than enough volunteers here to organize a good-sized post, and several of the young men are striving to bring one into existence.

Between forty and fifty men are eligible to membership here. There are perhaps twenty-five who enlisted in the army, most of them in the Third New Jersey Regiment. The other eligibles are the ex-members of the naval militia, most of whom served on the auxiliary ship Badger.

J. D. Macnab, instructor at the High School, is the one most actively interested in the proposed post. He served in one of the New York regiments. Mr. Macnab broached the idea last year, but it did not receive a very cordial reception from the Plainfielders. None of the latter reached the front, and by far the greater number of them feel that under the circumstances the formation of a post would be rather silly and vainglorious than otherwise. Some of them characterize the idea of a post composed of "veterans" who never had a chance to get near the enemy and were never in the slightest danger of being wounded as ridiculous.

DISTURBANCES AT STATION

COLORED PEOPLE'S CONDUCT COMPLAINED OF BY RAILROAD COMPANY.

Officials of the New Jersey Central have notified the pastors of the various colored churches in this city that they would like to have their co-operation in preventing the weekly Sunday night disturbance at the North Avenue Station. Many colored persons congregate there during the evening after church services and their loud and boisterous talk and actions has caused much annoyance. The colored pastors have been informed that unless the practice is stopped the offenders will be taken by the city jail and a charge preferred.

Rev. Scott Wallace and "Deacon" Spencer Conway, of the Calvary Baptist church, have taken the matter up and announcement of the fact was made on Sunday. They told the congregation that there is no need of the colored people assembling at the railroad station and they wanted them to stay away or suffer consequences.

BISHOP'S DAUGHTER WEDS DEPOSED CURATE

Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, Who Officiated, Ignorant of the Circumstances.

MARRIAGE MARCH 29

BRIDE A SISTER OF T. U. DUDLEY, OF NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Groom a Curate of St. Michael's Church, Said He Was a Christian Scientist — The Bishop Refused to Talk.

Because Miss Katharine Dudley, daughter of the late Bishop Thomas Underwood Dudley, of Kentucky, was married to George Sherman Richards, at the Brick Presbyterian church, on Tuesday, March 29, when there had been public announcement that the wedding would take place at Grace Church Chantry on April 4, much comment has arisen. George Sherman Richards is a deposed curate of St. Michael's Episcopal church at Amsterdam avenue and Ninety-ninth street. Miss Dudley married him, it was said, against the wishes of her family, and it was even declared that the trouble over the affair had hastened Bishop Dudley's death.

That they were not married at an Episcopal church, as was the bride's wish, is believed to be due to the fact that the clergyman was unwilling to marry a deposed priest. On this phase of the situation no one would speak.

Two or three days before March 30, when the wedding was held, George Sherman Richards called on the Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, of the Brick Presbyterian church. He explained to that clergyman that he wanted to be married, and had been attacted to him because of the name, which was the same as his own.

"He was a Christian Scientist, he told me," said Dr. Richards. "The lady, he said, was an Episcopalian, but many of the clergy of that denomination objected to celebrating the marriage ceremony in Holy Week, so they had decided to ask me to marry them. I knew neither one, so made inquiry whether either had been married before, and whether any of their friends or relatives would attend the ceremony as witnesses. Mr. Richards assured me as to that. I married them. A sister of the bride and her brother, I think, and a few others were present. I did not know that Miss Dudley was a daughter of Bishop Dudley until some time after. I certainly did not know that Mr. Richards was a deposed clergyman."

"Would you have married them if you had known about it?" Dr. Richards was asked.

"That would depend on the circumstances," he replied.

Bishop Coadjutor Greer would not discuss the affair. When asked if Bishop Potter had given instructions that the marriage should not be held in Grace church, he said that Bishop Potter must reply to that inquiry.

Bishop Potter said that he had not issued an order forbidding the marriage of Miss Dudley to the deposed clergyman in Grace church. He knew about that case, but said that that question had not come before him.—New York Tribune.

Miss Katharine Dudley, the bride, is a sister of T. U. Dudley, of North Plainfield. Rev. Dr. Richards is the former pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

COUNTRY DANCE.

I. C. T. Club Plans to Hold Grotesque Affair on April 28—The Committee in Charge.

Country dances have become a regular feature of the I. C. T. Club season. Another of the popular grotesque affairs has been planned for April 28.

It will be a regular old-fashioned shindig, with barn-like decorations, and refreshments to match the character of the occasion. As at former dances of this sort, attendance is other than distinctly "rube" costume will be discouraged. The orchestra will be garbed as farmers, and play from a straw-made bower.

The committee in charge of the affair is made up of Raymond McVoy, Berlin Banks, V. W. Nash, Jr., Leonce Texier, George B. Cose, Edward Heartle, Charles Heartle.

Robert Barnes, of Staten Island, has returned home after a visit with his sons here.

—All the reserved seats are taken for the entertainment to be given in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course on Thursday evening, but there are plenty of good seats for those who come early.

For farming and garden implements of all kinds go to the H. E. Gayle Hardware Company store. Here you will find a large assortment of the best goods, also a full line of garden seeds and general household articles.

NOT TO NOMINATE FOWLER ON MAY 10

Fifth Congressional District Committee Runs Amuck of Primary Laws.

LONG DELAY NECESSARY

MUST DEFER THE CONVENTION UNTIL NEXT SEPTEMBER.

Morris, Warren and Union Counties All Favor the Renomination of Hon. Charles N. Fowler for Member of Congress.

Reports that the Republicans of this Congressional district are going to nominate their candidate at Trenton on May 10, just previous to the State convention for the election of National convention delegates, have been going the rounds of the State press. The provisions of the new primary law make such a course impossible.

Much as the Republicans would like a long Congressional campaign, they will have to wait until after the September primaries before nominating. The primary election law is plain and specific on that point. There is no way of avoiding the provisions that "there shall be held primary elections for the selection of delegates to conventions of political parties, and for the nomination of candidates for * * * members of Congress * * * who shall be nominated at conventions composed of delegates chosen at primary elections held pursuant to this act, and that these primaries shall be held on the second Tuesday of September."

It is practically assured that Congressman Fowler will be nominated to succeed himself. Leaders in Morris and Warren Counties have already declared for him, and it is said Country Chairman Hamilton F. Kean has announced that Mr. Fowler is to be the candidate.

Congressman Fowler has not said anything himself, but it is known that he would accept a renomination.

'PLAINS BIG POULTRY FARM

WHERE THE ORPINGTON FOWLS, DUCKS AND PIGEONS ARE RAISED.

There is a poultry farm in Scotch Plains that is noted for containing some of the finest fowls in existence. It is the property of William Cook & Sons and is situated on the Springfield road about a mile and a half from the village.

William Cook is the original breeder of the famous Orpington fowls, ducks and pigeons, which take their name from his house and village in England. These fowls are generally recognized as the best in the world. They are remarkable layers, producing large, brown eggs and are said to be without equal as table fowls. They bring the highest prices in the New York market.

In 1903, Mr. Cook and his son, Peter Cook, came to this country with 120 fowls which they exhibited at the New York show. They showed in twenty-six classes and won twenty-four first prizes, nineteen seconds and many thirds and fourths. In several of the newspapers it was stated that the fowls were the finest ever seen at the poultry show.

The Cook farm is always open for inspection and visitors will invariably find its attractions interesting and instructive.

MRS. HOLDEN BURIED.

Aged Resident of New Market Laid at Rest in South Plainfield.

Mrs. Louisa Holden, aged seventy-six years, wife of Frederick Holden, died at her home in New Market Friday night, after a long illness. She was a life-long resident of that place and was well and favorably known. She is survived by a husband and two daughters, Mrs. John M. Dayton, of New Market and Mrs. Arthur Toppan, of Rahway.

The funeral services were held from the late home this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. Arthur S. Phillips, of Bound Brook, officiating. During the services vocal selections were rendered by Miss Emma Nelson and Miss Jessie Haynes. The interment was in the cemetery at South Plainfield and the bearers were Edward Richards, Mr. Haynes, C. E. Kelly, William Farmer, Phillip Jenner and Albert Curtis.

GYPSY BANDS BURY THEIR BELOVED QUEEN

Three Hundred of the Nomads Gather About the Bier of Mother Zibbie Riley.

A DIGNIFIED SERVICE

1,500 CURIOUS PEOPLE, MOSTLY WOMEN, DISTURB THE MOURNERS.

Members of the Cooper, Harrison, Stanley and Riley Families—Funeral at Hillside Cemetery —The New Queen.

Gypsies from all over the East gathered at Hillside cemetery yesterday afternoon to attend the burial of Mrs. Zibbie Riley, who was recognized as their queen for more than half a century before she died a short time ago near Philadelphia. Brown-skinned nomads, men and women, were there from places as far West as Ohio and a far South as Kentucky and Florida, to pay a last tribute to the dead ruler. There never was such a gathering, and never such an occasion, before in Plainfield's history.

Fully three hundred of the restless Romany folk were at the grave. Quiet and subdued, their wonted animation stayed by the solemnity of the occasion, they silently bade a final farewell to the one they had all called "Mother."

Nine families were represented in the gathering. The great majority of the mourners were from the Harrison, Riley and Cooper families, who roam over nearby places. They were led by Naylor Harrison, who lives at Madison, the head of the Harrison family, whom the three families named recognize as chief. The Stanley's, a great clan, were largely represented, headed by Richard Stanley, who lives in Brooklyn.

Blatherers were there in force. Not less than 1,500 curious spectators thronged the Hillside slope to see the gypsies bury their queen. So heavy was the traffic over the Arlington avenue line that the half-dozen or more extra cars were inadequate.

At the cemetery the behavior of the crowd seriously interfered with the burial. The sightseers crowded about the mourners in such numbers that the undertaker and the clergyman were compelled to ask them to keep back several times.

At 3 o'clock the gypsies went to the vault where Mother Riley's body lay, to pay the last act of homage. The swarthy band gave evidence of deep emotion as the solemn procession proceeded.

The behavior of the crowd at that point was such that Funeral Director E. E. Runyon indignantly rebuked the pushing, swaying mass of people that pressed insistently about the mourning gypsies. Most of the sightseers were women, well-clad and refined looking to a very great extent, but Mr. Runyon felt compelled to remind them sharply that they "were not at a show."

From the vault the queen's body, resting in a casket that quite befitted her rank, was borne to the grave by six of her grandsons: William Harrison and Leonard Harrison, sons of Naylor Harrison; William Harrison, his nephew; James Cooper, Heeman Harrison and William Harrison, a son of the noted James Harrison, who died three years ago. When the eager crowd was pushed back sufficiently to allow the burial to proceed, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E. church, read the last words over the body, and the casket was lowered at the foot of the handsome monument described in Saturday's Daily Press. About the grave were the near relatives of the dead queen, including her granddaughter, Mrs. Posey Harrison, who succeeds her as ruler of the gypsies.

Mrs. Posey Harrison, mentioned as the dead queen's successor, is the daughter of Naylor Harrison, who married Mother Riley's daughter. Four years ago, when the "Mother's" health began to fail seriously, she said she desired her granddaughter to follow her as queen, and the wish was acceded to by them all. In this case, the granddaughter was named as the queen-to-be, and she was hailed as ruler when Queen Zibbie died.

Queen Posey is a handsome young woman, beloved and respected by all the Eastern gypsies. She is the wife of "Buckey" Harrison, who is wealthy. She lives with her husband "on the road."

There was a report that "Father" Riley's body, which is in a vault in Auburn, N. Y., would be buried at the same time as that of his wife, but Chief Naylor Harrison denied that there had been any such intention. "That will be done later," he said.

There is no improvement in the condition of Mrs. T. E. Davis, of West Fifth street, and much anxiety is felt concerning her.

BOARD OF TRADE THANKS SENATOR KEAN

Appreciates the Interest He Manifests in Endeavoring to Secure Postoffice Building.

DISCUSS THE PLAN

T. O. DOANE BELIEVES AMPLE APPROPRIATION SHOULD BE MADE.

V. W. Nash, Sr., Expresses Opinion That a Supplementary Appropriation Can be Obtained—The P. S. C. is Scored.

By a unanimous vote Thursday, the secretary of the Board of Trade was requested to convey to Senator Kean a vote of thanks for his efforts in getting a postoffice building for this city. The gratitude of the Board was also given to Congressmen Fowler and Fleming for their co-operative efforts, which, it was hoped, they would continue.

Much discussion was given by the Board to the article appearing in The Daily Press of Wednesday regarding the adequacy of the sum of $100,000 for a building such as will meet the needs of a growing city like Plainfield. T. O. Doane thought that the article revealed good sound sense. "I am tired and sick," he said, "of seeing things done in Plainfield just for today." The Chief disagreed with V. W. Nash, who expressed the belief that with the passage of a bill providing for a $100,000 building, it would still be possible to obtain an additional appropriation if the need for it developed.

Postmaster Bird spoke in uncomplimentary terms of the New Brunswick government building, which he said was no credit to the city. It did not provide as much floor space as the local office has at the present time in the Babcock building. President Woolston thought that to advocate a higher appropriation would be ungrateful in view of Senator Kean's efforts. In regard to the expense for a lot, Chief Doane spoke of the wonderful advancement in price that would follow the announcement that the government was looking for a site.

The Public Service Corporation came in for its usual share of "knocking." The delay in the work on the tracks along West Front street below Clinton avenue was the leading source of complaint. The members regarded the time taken for the repairs, three weeks, as unwarranted by the conditions of work to be done. They voted to send a communication to the street commissioner stating that the Board of Trade protested against the condition of West Front street as left by the P. S. C., and requesting that it be put in proper condition by the corporation at once. Charles Runyon expressed the idea that it would be a good thing if the Elizabeth cars were put through to Bound Brook instead of having the terminus at Dunellen.

The Vermeth Car Fender Company, of Elizabeth, asked permission to give a practical test of its fender which is designed to take a man up instead of throwing him down and under the car. The matter was referred to the Public Service Corporation with the request that the test be allowed.

A communication was received from the St. Paul Board of Trade asking for the privilege of exchange of rooms for members visiting in one city or the other. It was voted to extend assurance of the exchange of courtesies.

The New York Board of Trade and Transportation asked that the Plainfield Board pass resolutions requesting Congress to pass the bill to re-establish a deep sea marine service. The communication was favorably acted upon.

FLORODORA DANCE.

Social Organization Holds Masquerade in the Olympia Hall.

Under the auspices of the original Florodora Club, a most successful masquerade ball was held Friday night in Olympia Hall, on Sycamore street, near Fourth. There was a very large crowd of young persons present and the make-up of the various costumes were unique and amusing. The merry dancers remained masked until 12 o'clock, when the identity of each person became known. Supper was then served, after which dancing was continued until an early hour this morning. Prof. Charles Suhr's orchestra furnished music to the satisfaction of all.

He also won debating honors in the Freshman class contests last year. The debate will be held at Williamstown the last week in May.

MRS. S. A. ANGLEMAN DIED FRIDAY MORNING

The Mother of Winfield S. Angleman Passes Away at Age of Sixty-Four Years.

FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

SHE LEAVES A HUSBAND AND FOUR CHILDREN.

Pleuro-Pneumonia Was the Cause of Her Death—Lived in This City All Her Life—Interment in M. E. Cemetery.

Mrs. Sarah A. Angleman, aged sixty-four years, died Friday morning about 5 o'clock at her home in West Front street. She had been in poor health for several years and about a month ago she contracted pleuro-pneumonia from which in her weakened condition she was unable to rally. Mrs. Angleman lived in this city practically all her life.

She is survived by a husband, Abraham Angleman, a daughter, Miss Ida Angleman, an assistant editor in the Methodist Book Concern, New York; two sons, Winfield S. Angleman, a practicing lawyer here and Charles H. Angleman, who is city clerk of Rahway. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. Mary J. Clarkson, who lived with her.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from the late home and the interment was in the Methodist cemetery in Plainfield avenue.

DOG AND CAT FEED WOUNDED TRAPPER IN CANADA WOODS.

Canine Takes Prey from Puss and Carries It to His Crippled Master—Story Vouched For by Parish Priest.

An odd story of how a cat and a dog provided food for a solitary trapper who had been injured by one of his own traps, was brought to Montreal a few days ago by Rev. Father Dufriche on his return from the Hudson Bay territory. Father Dufriche got the tale from another priest, known as Pere Martin, who had personal knowledge of the incident.

According to Father Dufriche's story, Henri Le Blanc left the Lake St. John region late in the fall to trap with a kindred spirit named Bossart about 150 miles northwest of the lake on the edge of the Hudson Bay district. Bossart had a cabin miles from any other habitation, where he lived with a tabby cat for a companion and mascot. It has been Le Blanc's custom to spend several months each winter with Bossart, and this year as usual he took his Newfoundland dog, Jacques, with him. The dog and cat were on the most friendly terms and the quartette enjoyed themselves until early in December, when Bossart fell ill.

The trapper was afflicted with a slow fever and upon recovering went to the nearest village, 40 miles distant, to consult Father Martin, who administers to the temporal as well as to the spiritual wants of his isolated parishioners. The priest advised the trapper to remain in the village for a couple of weeks until he had regained his full strength, and this he did, sending word to Le Blanc by a half-breed Indian who was journeying north.

The day after receiving the message from the Indian Le Blanc left the cabin to shoot a deer for food and had the misfortune to step in a snow-covered wolf trap that he had set several weeks before and subsequently lost. The teeth lacerated his left foot and ankle and it was with great difficulty that he reached camp. Here he dressed the injury the best he could, but red socks he had worn poisoned the wound and the next day he could not take a step.

There was little to eat in the house and Le Blanc was soon in a desperate condition. Bossart was to bring meal and bacon, and with fresh meat brought down by rifles this would be adequate. But with the pantry bare and his foot getting worse every hour the trapper had a good look at starvation. Jacques, STEPPED INTO A WOLF TRAP.

Le says, made no fuss, but the cat howled all night and in the morning he crawled to the door and let it out.

The woods were full of red squirrels and chipmunks and he knew that the animal could look after itself. Jacques kept close to his master until noon, licking his hand and appearing greatly distressed. The pangs of hunger were gnawing both, and Le Blanc sought consolation in counting his beads and praying. He was thus occupied when Jacques suddenly cocked his ears, ran to the door and scratched. Then he ran back, looked up in his master's face and showed great excitement. Le Blanc had reared the Newfoundland from a puppy and knew that he had some good reason for wanting to go out. So he opened the door.

The dog shot through the portal and the next minute Le Blanc heard him in a spirited altercation with his friend, the cat. In bolted Jacques, carrying a squirrel in his mouth and proudly wagging his tail. Behind him came the cat in a great state of mind. The dog held his head high in the air and dropped the squirrel on Le Blanc's couch.

The trapper quickly skinned the squirrel, cooked it and divided it into three parts. One-third went to Jacques, another to himself and the remaining portion to the cat.

The cat soon went on a second foraging expedition. A little later Jacques sneaked after her, picked up her trail and hung around for developments. Two hours later he reappeared carrying a young rabbit and followed by the indignant cat. The next day she got two squirrels and an old cock grouse. The catch was duly rescued by Jacques and presented to his master.

For eight days this programme was repeated, while the trapper's foot grew worse, matterated and finally began to mend. He, the cat and the dog got thin, but they had some strength left on the eighth day when Bossart, who had improved more rapidly than was anticipated, arrived drawing a toboggan loaded with provender.

Lad Has Made a Seventy on Local Greens—His Reputation is Widespread—He Refused a Very Tempting Offer.

From a humble beginning as a caddy, Martin O'Loughlin, of this city, has risen in four years to be one of the best as well as one of the youngest golf players in North Jersey. His services as golf professional at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club have been secured for the coming season, his preparation for the position consisting of two years' of professional play during which he has lost but a single match.

O'Loughlin is but sixteen years old. Four years ago as a caddy at the Hillside Club he began his practice at odd moments after hours, his natural best for the game gradually bringing him out into a proficiency that attracted much attention. Last year he was made caddy master at the club.

Last summer O'Loughlin broke two of Reinhart's records for the Hillside links. When the Princeton champion established a record of 78 for the course, O'Loughlin made a score of 75. This mark was in turn lowered by Reinhart who made 71 on the same day that the young professional established his final triumph with a score of 70. O'Loughlin is a popular boy with the members of the club and is as modest as he is skillful.

In addition to his work on the Hillside links, O'Loughlin has made a name for himself throughout the county. He played three matches with David Honeyman, a well known Westfield professional, on the Union County Club course, winning two and tying the third. In the tie match, Honeyman had the game all but won when O'Loughlin made a sensational shot through an opening in a tennis net for the last hole and a tie score. The gallery, needless to say, went wild over the exhibition, though O'Loughlin modestly says it was mostly a good luck shot.

Another record that O'Loughlin has made is on the links of the Inwood, L. I., Golf Club, where he lowered the mark from 91 to 88. He has also had success on the Baltusrol Club course.

O'Loughlin has recently received a very flattering offer from Columbia College, South Carolina, to act as professional coach for the institution, a position now held by Eugene McCarthy, formerly instructor at Hillside. This offer the boy declined to decline on account of his youth.

The Hillside Club management expects to send O'Loughlin as its representative in the national professional championships the coming season.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SESSION

GRACE M. E. CHURCH ORGANIZATION HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING.

Closing a successful year, the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church held its annual meeting last Friday. Good reports were handed in from the secretary and the treasurer. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, Raymond Brokaw; secretary, Andrew Wilson; treasurer, J. Russell Harden; first vice president, chairman of the devotional committee, Miss Mary G. Steiner; second vice president, chairman of the mercy and help committee, Miss Adah Van Horne; third vice president, chairman of the social committee, Miss Della Voehl; fourth vice president, chairman of the literary committee, Mr. Hetober.

In his report, W. M. Warren, the retiring secretary, stated that the membership had increased about twenty during the year. Fifty-two meetings were held during the year, an unusually good record.

Ranks as the Highest Grade by Doctors.

The safest wine to use is Speer's Port Grape Wine in ranks above all others for medical purposes; it is a diuretic and tonic. For weakly and aged persons it has no equal, being made from a rare grape.

Divorced From Matinee Idol.

Mrs. Annie Grace Smock has been granted a divorce from her husband, Hobart Smock, a soloist, who is well known here and is a relative of the late Garret A. Hobart. The couple have not lived together for over a year.

HEARST'S BOOM IS LAUNCHED HERE

A Mass-Meeting in Central Theatre Attracts Those in Sympathy With Him.

J. E. MARTINE SPEAKS

FARMER-ORATOR AVOIDS ENDORSING RADICAL MAN'S CANDIDACY.

Democratic Regular Organization Unrepresented—The New York Speakers Fail to Appear—Mr. McAleer the Chairman.

William Randolph Hearst's candidacy for the presidential nomination was boomed in approved style at the mass meeting of the Hearst Club at the Central Theatre Thursday. The club was disappointed by the New York speakers advertised, but James E. Martine and a substitute orator from the Metropolis woke enthusiasm for the New York editor.

As far as the audience went, the meeting was successful, but it was almost a fizzle at the platform end. The regular party organization here was totally unrepresented. After waiting vainly until almost 9 o'clock in the hope that the advertised speakers would put in an appearance, the meeting was opened, with Samuel Bell Thomas, who was sent out from New York to take the Hon. O. J. Kindelon's place, as the orator of the evening.

There was close to 300 hundred men in the audience when Secretary J. D. McAleer, of the Heart Club, who acted as chairman, called the meeting to order.

Of the long list of vice presidents named in the advance notices of the meeting practically none appeared to take their places on the platform. Besides the speakers and Chairman McAleer, the only ones on the stage were Frank Shaible, the Hearst leader here, P. M. Bacon and James Jiovino, of Watchung avenue.

Watchung avenue the club was started.

Mr. Bell devoted most of his time to proving that Mr. Hearst has made and is making no effort to secure the nomination for the presidency. The speaker said Hearst was a noble minded young man who worked for the people and the Democratic party, and the people themselves had aroused of their own accord to sweep him into the nomination and the presidency. Statements painting Hearst as a self-seeking hunter for the nomination were declared by the speaker to be malicious lies.

Mr. Martine carefully explained that he was not there to endorse Hearst's candidacy, although he knew him to be a "modest, intelligent, dignified and honorable young man." In the course of a characteristic assault on the trusts and the high protective tariff he reiterated his position of neutrality as to candidates several times. He spoke so highly of Hearst, however, that the faithful were frequently encouraged to applaud loudly.

DRIVES THE PEST AWAY.

Electricity as Means of Ridding Gardens of Undesirable Tenants, and Hastening Plant Growth.

Among the many uses to which electricity is being put in these days the latest is the ridding of gardens of their insect pests. A European scientist, while drying by electricity an ingot mold buried in the earth, noticed that earth worms were coming out of the ground as fast as they could and hurrying away from the vicinity of the electric disturbance, which seemed to excite them greatly.

Working on this, Herr Halberger tried other experiments to determine the exact effect of electricity on earth inhabitants. One experiment consisted in burying a terminal of a 110-volt circuit in the earth, and as soon as the switch was closed every worm and underground insect within a radius of a yard or two came to the surface and made haste to leave the infested zone. Elaborating again, he placed several electrodes a couple of yards from one another, and in that way a considerable tract of land was cleared entirely of creeping and crawling things.

It has been suggested many times that it might be possible to hasten and increase the growth of plants by the application of electricity, and if to this can be added the destruction of the vermin which attack the roots it might pay farmers to install electric generating stations for the treatment of their growing crops.

HOW MEN MAY LIVE LONG.

Goldwin Smith Tells the Secret of His Youthfulness and Vigor—Boyhood Habits Helped.

Goldwin Smith, the famous historian, educator, journalist and essayist, who is the literary life of Canada, has brought out a good deal of comment on the problem of old age, with mental and physical soundness, says the Cleveland Leader, by his own opinion of the influences which have helped him celebrate his eightieth birthday in good health and able to do brilliant and valuable work in his chosen field of labor.

Prof. Smith thinks that he owes much to his freedom from hard tasks, in school or otherwise, when a boy. He was a sickly child and his chance of even average length of days seemed poor. But he was allowed much freedom in boyhood, to roam the fields and play instead of sticking closely to books or taxing his mind severely. It is hardly necessary to say that Goldwin Smith was still a young lad, however, when he began to work seriously in school, and at Eton and in the university he was a brilliant student. Another point he makes much of is his lifelong habit of working in the early morning rather than late at night, and getting sleep in the hours of darkness, nature's time for rest. He also testifies to his constant care as to outdoor exercise and his moderation in eating and drinking.

PREFER THE MEAT.

Poor Children, Unlike Their Well-Fed Brothers and Sisters, Let Cakes and Candies Pass.

"What do you suppose it is at a dinner given to the poor that the children like best?" propounded a young Germantown woman.

"Why, the cakes and fruits and candies, of course," promptly replied a young man who had several brothers and sisters at home and thought he ought to know, says the Philadelphia Press.

"Not at all," the young woman answered. "I always supposed as you do until I helped serve the other night."

"Well, what is it?" somebody asked.

"Meat," answered the young woman; "meat of any kind or description, from roast turkey to cold beef. You couldn't pass the plate too often. They seemed to care little for biscuits or salads, but it was more meat every time. I heard little fellows making another with the number of pieces he had eaten, and it was nine against seven. One wee little girl was ready to cry when the cakes came round. She had eaten so much meat that she couldn't find a bit of room for the cake, so I got a piece of paper for her to wrap her cake in to carry home. Several of the little ones at once concluded to follow her example, and carried their cake and candies away with them."

LIVING EASY.

Food May Be Had for the Picking in the Fiji Islands—Climate Is Equable.

No one can do justice to the soil or scenery of Fiji, unless he has seen both the natural beauties and the golden harvests. The climate is equable; not oppressively hot in summer and delightful in winter, it is both healthy and pleasant, and the sky is always bright and the air remarkably pure. Never was there such a lazy, happy climate as this, writes Oliver Partridge, in the Four-Track News. From the snow white clouds to the easy swing of the palms Nature moves languidly. There is no need for hurry.

Food may be had for the picking, and clothes are unnecessary. Vegetation runs riot in the rich soil and sunshine. Fringed cocoanut sprays, with nuts in clusters at their base, broad banana leaves sheltering great bunches of fruit; tangles of peaceful ferns impenetrably thick, clumps of supple bamboo, lance-leaved mango trees heavy with purple and gold deliciousness—these and a thousand more delight the epicure and charm the artist.

FANWOOD COUNCIL, R. A., 21 YEARS OLD

Anniversary Celebration in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains, Attracts a Large Audience.

ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD

THE GRAND VICE REGENT MAKES AN ADDRESS.

Entertainment of a High Order—Dancing Had Not Been Forgotten—History of the Flourishing Organization.

Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, celebrated its twenty-first anniversary April 6, by tendering a "coming of age" entertainment and dance in Excelsior Hall.

Standing room only was available long before the curtain rung up for the opening of the programme. This was furnished by Chantrell and Schuyler, a vaudeville team from Brooklyn. Their several numbers, which included "Hamlet Up-to-Date" and "Matrimonial Jars," convulsed the large audience with laughter.

James Rogers, grand vice regent of the State, was introduced and gave a short but pointed talk upon the work of the order and the amount of good it was doing in providing safe fraternal insurance at a small monthly cost to its members.

At the close of the entertainment the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed, this pleasant feature was continued until a late hour. The only intermission being at midnight, when refreshments were served. Many guests were present from Plainfield and other nearby places. The committee in charge were James H. Buckley, chairman; Charles Kyte, Howard D. White, William Noble, William E. Collins.

Fanwood Council, No. 744, was organized March 16, 1883 with a small charter membership, the first regent being the late George Kyte. The Council has steadily grown until today it numbers 115 loyal members working under Regent J. Edward Ruth.

WEST END CLUB'S SCHEDULE

MAKEUP OF TEAM WHICH WILL USE ST. MARY'S DIAMOND.

A Plainfield baseball nine that will make things interesting for its competitors in this and surrounding cities is the West End Field Club managed by William F. Walters. A likely bunch of ball-tossers have been signed for the season and a schedule of games with strong teams has been started. The team will use the St. Mary's grounds for practice and home games. Players signed are Stites, catcher; J. Galvin and "Art" Jacot, pitchers; John Jacot, first base; "Dick" Scott, second base; John Emery, third base; John Martin, short stop; "Bill" Magne, left field; "Ohill" Parent, centre field; and Jacot or Galvin, right field.

Galvin on the slab is reputed among the best of the local twirlers. He formerly occupied the box for a college nine and is said to have mastered all the mysteries of speed, change of pace and curve. Stites, his companion spell-binder, is a graduate of the borough High School and Plainfield A. A. nines. Jacot on the first corner has had experience on the Plainfield A. A., and Martin at short has been connected with the same team for two years. He has a bright future in front of him, is a strong hitter as well as a sure fielder. He is expected to equal the record of his brother "Britt." Magne has proved his fielding ability with Hope and Clinton Avenue. Other men whom Manager Walters expects to sign are Fred Winn, George Taylor, George Kean and "Al" Squiers.

Games have been scheduled with the Clinton Avenue and Reform Clubs, of this city, the Marions, of Newark, Jeffersons, of Orange, and Essex and Anchor A. C. nines of Jersey City. Negotiations are also being made for a game with the General Electrics, of Newark. The team will open its season Saturday, April 16, with Clinton Avenue, and will play its first game on the St. Mary grounds the following Saturday, April 23. The date for the first game with the Reform Club is May 7. A practice game will be held tomorrow with a team from Pond's Tool Works.

A Choir Change.

Commencing May 1, a paid quartette will take the place of the chorus choir at the First M. E. church. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist, will remain, but Charles L. Lewis will resign. It is believed that Mrs. Thomas MacDonald will be the soprano. The other members of the quartette will be announced within a short time.

PLAINFIELD'S STORY, PAST AND PRESENT

The Queen City of New Jersey As Seen by an Old Resident of the Ideal Municipality.

SCHOOLS UNSURPASSED

HISTORIC SPOTS WITHIN AND WITHOUT THE CITY LIMITS.

Article in The Suburbanite Signed H. E. B.—A Progressive Community — Some of its Attractions.

The current number of The Suburbanite contains the following story on "Plainfield as seen by an old resident," signed "H. E. B.," who is presumed to be Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue.

"Plainfield is one of the most progressive cities in New Jersey. Beautifully situated on a plain below the Watchung Mountains, it is rapidly growing in wealth and population. It is indeed 'the Colorado of the East'—the title which it long has borne. Only twenty-three miles from New York, its citizens come and go from the great Metropolis in little over half an hour.

"Probably no city in New Jersey presents a gayer appearance morning and afternoon on the departure and arrival of the through express trains. It is the usual thing for nearly a thousand passengers to board a morning train. In the afternoon North avenue sees at times 100 to 150 private carriages awaiting the arrival of their various owners. Saratoga and Newport at the height of the season in this respect have a close rival in Plainfield.

"Very different was the time less than half a century ago when a single train left Plainfield in the morning, returning at night. A bell was rung before the departure of the train to let the people know that it was about to go. The station, a rude affair, was in charge of one man, who officiated as ticket-agent, baggage-master, freight-handler and bell-ringer. As far back as 1870 there were only three public hacks in town, while today there are over fifty, to say nothing of the four lines of trolley cars.

"Plainfield, with her sister city, North Plainfield, has a population of about 25,000, and it is growing rapidly. Hundreds of new families arrive every fall and spring to make it their permanent home. New Yorkers and Brooklyn lose many of their best citizens, who come to Plainfield to enjoy the numerous advantages that can be obtained here in the way of churches, schools, public library, golf and tennis clubs and other attractions.

"Beautiful and costly residences line its broad streets and avenues from old Scotch Plains to the Netherwood Heights and through Grant and Clinton avennes towards Dunellen.

"Plainfield has many historical places within its boundaries, notable among which is the Harbarger place, where Washington once made his headquarters. At Washington Rock, on the Watchung Mountains, from which one at night can see the flash-light in the lighthouse at Barnegat, Washington in the Revolutionary War watched the marching of the British troops to Trenton. The old Quaker meeting-house, built in 1788, looks just as it did when it was erected and is good for another century or two in its barolike simplicity.

"Plainfield is rated from its club oars. For many years she 'Roosters,' as the old, stay-at-home Jerseymen were called, have made way for the 'Commuters.' Here, on the way to and from the city, are held the quiet caucuses of leading bankers, brokers, merchants and business men of New York, which have resulted in making Plainfield what it is today.

"Years ago the political cry was:

"'No king, no clown
Shall rule this town'—

And that is the reason why political 'bosses' are held in disfavor and only come to the front to be overthrown. It will be a long day before her patriotic people will allow Plainfield to run in debt, their demand to the City Fathers being 'pay while you go;' and 'A national debt being a national blessing'—the old Civil War inspiration of Jay Cooke—finds no favor among the taxpayers of Plainfield.

"The people, too, are liberal spenders. No public schools in the country can rival those of Plainfield. The St. Louis Exposition in April will show to the nation what is being done in fine work by the children of this famous city.

"Mahlenberg Hospital, owing to the generosity of the Plainfield people, rich and poor alike, has carried on a noble and useful work. Their generous contributions are fast aiding in completing this grand institution.

"Plainfield, while a city not set upon a hill, sheds her influence world-wide. It almost seems that nothing happens of importance in this hemisphere without some Plainfielder, directly or indirectly, being mentioned. No other city in the State receives as much notice in the metropolitan papers. Readers of the New York Herald often remark at the first-page headings of the cities where it is represented: New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Philadelphia and Plainfield—that this town must be quite a city to be so named.

"It is, therefore, not surprising that the stranger loves to linger long within its gates. Here life is worth living. Nothing is too good for Plainfield, and what she has not is not worth having."—The Suburbanite.

HOPE CHAPEL'S ANNUAL MEETING

Membership and Revenue of the Flourishing West End Church is Increasing.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS

THERE ARE 620 PUPILS IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Thirty-Three Have Been Added to Church Roll During the Year—

Robert Storah Chosen Treasurer.

In all branches of work at Hope chapel, prosperity was evidenced by the reports submitted at the annual meeting of the chapel Thursday. The election of treasurer and assistants took place. Robert Storah was chosen treasurer, and Fred Wharton, Thomas Hendry and Donald McInness, assistants.

The report of the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard indicated that for the year ending April 1, 1904, thirty-three members had been received in the chapel, twenty-seven by confession of faith and six by letter. There had been twenty-six baptisms, six of adults and twenty of children. The losses were three by death and eleven by letter. The offerings for the year showed an increase of about $60.

Superintendent Squires, of the Sunday-school, reported a membership of 620, an increase of twenty and stated that the condition of the school was the best in its history. The average attendance was about 330. The treasurer's report for the Young People's Society was read by Miss Mabel Firstbrook for Mrs. A. B. Lewis. More than $60 was raised during the year, $14 being left for the new young people's society, $25 being applied to the kitchen fund and the rest for mission purposes.

Other reports received were from Miss Annie Thain, secretary, and Mrs. L. R. Howard, of the Ladies' Aid Society; Mrs. George Radford, secretary, and Mrs. Joseph Brown, treasurer, of the Ladies' Home Missionary Society; Miss Gertrude Hunter, of the Wednesday evening Bible class; W. T. Schneider, of the Choral Club; Mrs. F. B. Cregar, of the sewing class; Miss R. B. Tracy for the Jolly Workers; Henry Pierce for the Boy's Athletic Club; Peter Sweeney for the Boy's Friday Night Religious Club; Vice President J. F. Horton for the Young Men's Association, and additional reports for the Sunday school Bible classes, Mrs. Walter Bradford, for the women's class and Donald McInness for the men's class.

Honors for Mr. Squires.

Charles A. Squires, son of Henry C. Squires, of Watchung avenue, has been appointed as one of the resident staff at Presbyterian Hospital, New York city. He stood third in the competitive examination and so secured choice of branch of service whether medical or surgical. Among the competitors were seventeen men from the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Small Houses.

Tony Marra has given out the contract for two four-room houses to be erected on East Front street opposite the Randolph place. The houses will measure 18 by 24. E. V. French is the architect and Contractor Kane is the builder.

Forty-Sixth Births in March.

According to the vital statistics of the Board of Health for March there were seven marriages, forty-six births, one still birth, twenty-six deaths, making a total of eighty.

Edward Havey, of West Front street, is entertaining his brother from out-of-town.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 17: "The Transforming Power of Christ."—Rom. xii, 1, 2; Phil. iii, 20, 21.

The character of our religion is clearly shown by the use we make of our bodies. This is true not only of Christianity, but of all religions. In seeking means to satisfy our bodily appetites and needs, in preservation of health and physical life, all recognize their dependence to a great extent on an overruling power. Well being comes from obedience to the will of this Supreme Power outside ourselves. How to obtain favorable notice and benefits from this source is a most important question. On its right answer depends all our happiness and welfare. The answers to it have varied through all extremes of the scale, from the most superstitious self indulgence to the utmost fanatical self torture. Oftentimes, indeed, the opposite extremes have been closely joined.

Being in a world of material things, gratification of appetites has been found helpful to physical health. So men have concluded that good for self and honor to the Power that rules would best be reached by gratifying to the limit all cravings of appetites. So they have by gluttony, drunkenness, licentiousness and every sensual excess tried to reach the pinnacle of earthly enjoyment and good. This was ever and now is largely characteristic of all heathenism. It is forming its ideals according to the most fleshly lusts and material things. It is conformity to the world. In its nature it is the same whether found in temples of Corinth, parks of Antioch and palaces of Rome in the days of Paul, in boulevards of Paris or in civilized vice of Paris, Chicago, New York and country crossroads of today. It never yields purity nor peace nor pardon. It diseases body and debauches the spirit and ruins society and dishonors God.

Seeing that such results always follow indulgence of bodily cravings to excess and that seeking for the pleasure to be had in such indulgence brings misery, men have tried to find a better way by starving the appetites by fastings, abstinence, infliction of pains and penances and practice of all kinds of asceticism and self denial. But such bodily excesses have profited little when so pursued, whether in Hindostan or Christian lands. The body has been emaciated, but the spirit has not been emancipated from the bondage to corruption. The appetites of soul have not been permanently purified. Peace and pardon do not come so.

Jesus has a very different method. In this respect Christianity differs from all other religions and gives the only satisfactory way of living. Hence is the only religion adapted to all men and hence the obligation on all who profess it to carry the "good news" to all others possible.

Here we find body and spirit are good for each other. Appetites are indications of needs. Needs are to be properly supplied for the good of the spirit and the glory of God are found in the act of supplying them.

Here lies the parting of the paths. Body is servant to spirit, ever to be kept as such in subjection. Eat so as to be strong and fitted for work. Make the body the most efficient instrument possible for the soul that is in it and must depend on it for development. Self indulgence for mere pleasure is vicious and sinful, forever weakens the powers of soul, wastes the forces of body needed for real work and often binds in steel fetters of habit both body and soul. This not only injures the man, but defrauds God of the man's service to Him.

Jesus shows service of God to be the only right, good and perfect path for soul life. He gives knowledge of God's will to all who seek. He gives power to all to do it. He gives joy to all who do it. This mind to do God's will instead of seeking self gratification and such gratification is a renewing and transforming gift of grace. The aim of life is shifted the diameter of the world. Now the body takes its place as servant of the soul, which is servant of God. The body in its place and work until fashioned like unto the glorified body of Christ.

Holiness and Humility.

The highest lesson a believer has to learn is humility; and that every Christian who seeks to advance in holiness may remember this well! There may be intense consecration and fervent zeal and heavenly experience, and yet if it is not prevented by dealings of the Lord there may be an unconscious self exaltation with it all. Let us learn the lesson, the highest holiness is the deepest humility, and let us remember that it comes not of itself, but only as it is made a matter of special dealing on the part of our faithful Lord and His faithful servant.—Andrew Murray.

Blessed Errors.

There be some honest errors wherewith I never found that God was offended. That the husband should think his own wife comely, although ill favored in the eyes of others; that a man should think more meanly of his own good parts than of weaker in others; to give charitable, though mistaken, constructions of doubtful actions and persons—which are the effects of natural affection, humility, love—were never censured by God. Herein alone we err if we err not.—Bishop Joseph Hall.

What God Blessed Once.

It's wiser being good than bad.
It's safer being meek than fierce.
It's better being sane than mad;
My own hope is a sun will pierce
The thickest cloud earth ever stretched.
That, after Laud, returns the First.
Though a wide compass round be fetched;
That what began best can't end worst,
Nor what God blessed once prove accurst.

—Robert Brownings.

USED PRINTER'S INK

CRIPPLED MAN WANTED BRIDE SIMILARLY AFFLICTED.

Got What He Wanted by Judicious Newspaper Advertising—Loss of a Finger Leads to a Happy Marriage.

In an eastern paper recently there appeared the following curious advertisement:

Matrimony.—Advertiser, a young man of fit, of good family, steady, and in receipt of a good salary, is anxious to meet with a young lady who, like himself, has had the misfortune to lose the right leg. No other applicants save those who have lost a leg will be considered. Address, etc.

The young man, it appears, who had a year before met with the accident which had deprived him of his right leg, was extremely sensitive about his misfortune, and could not be convinced that he was not an object of pity to everyone with whom he became acquainted, especially women.

He therefore hit on the novel plan of advertising for a partner similarly afflicted in order that he might be sure that she was not marrying him in pity. He had a large number of replies from girls who were pretty and sound in wind and limb, who declared themselves perfectly willing to marry a one-legged man and look after him all the days of his life, but these generous offers the young man threw aside at once. Even some applications from correspondents who, though they had met with painful accidents, were not afflicted in a manner similar to the advertiser.

One girl had lost her right hand, another an eye, a third her nose, and so on. These offers were also rejected. Among the batch, however, were four who had each lost a leg; but as two of these were over 40 they were also laid aside as unsuitable.

The remaining two were asked to appoint a place of meeting, which they did, and the young fellow interviewed them. One turned out to be a negress, which debarred her from securing the prize, but the last appeared to be just the girl the advertiser was looking for. She was young, healthy, pretty, bright, and—she had lost her left leg. The young man gave and received "full particulars," which turned out so satisfactorily that the two are now man and wife. The marriage is said to have turned out a particularly happy one.

One can hardly believe that the fact of having lost a finger, and that the little one, would so prey upon a man's mind as to induce him to contemplate self-destruction, yet this was the case with William Driege, a man who was employed at one time on a farm in Kent, England, and who lost his digit in a threshing machine. After the accident Driege became so depressed and melancholy that his friends had some fears of his losing his reason. In vain he was joked about his accident and asked if he hadn't nine good fingers left, but his melancholy only increased. Then one day his brother, who was trying to arouse him from his depression, lost his temper and declared that he ought to receive a good hiding instead of sympathy.

"LOOK AT MARY WELLS."

"Look at Mary Wells," he exclaimed, indignantly; "she lost her finger the other day in a guillotine at the bookbinders' where she's employed, and she don't go sneaking round about it. I'll bring her round to see you, and if she don't make you ashamed of yourself I give it up."

He was true to his word and next evening brought the young woman round. She was the liveliest girl William Driege had ever met, and she succeeded so well in cheering up the melancholy one that he begged her to come again. This she did, and several times after, until William was so much improved that Miss Wells suggested that there was no further need for her visits.

This, however, was by no means to William's taste, and he there and then asked her if she would continue her visits indefinitely, which, after some hesitation, she agreed to do. William has since been heard to say that the loss of his finger was the greatest piece of luck he ever had, since in return for it he obtained the prettiest little hand that one could possibly desire to possess.

Big Traffic in Cocaine.

The United States is buying 30,000 ounces of cocaine a year at about three dollars an ounce. Of this only a small proportion is used legitimately. It robs its victim of his mental faculties and destroys his moral responsibility in shorter time and in greater degree than any other drug.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 17.

Topic.—How Christ transforms lives.—Rom. xii, 1, 2; Phil. iii, 20, 21.

The Christian transformation of a human life is its complete change from sin, selfishness and worldliness to the love and service of God in Jesus Christ. It is the entire consecration of our inward and outward lives to God. The heart is changed, and the life is changed. We "present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service." Moreover, we are "not conformed to this world;" we do not have our lives fashioned after the world, but are transformed, changed in spirit and in life.

That Christ can transform the human life is indisputable. This fact is not only thoroughly testified to in the Scriptures, but abundantly proved in human history. Saul of Tarsus, the unbeliever and persecutor, was transformed into one of the most devout advocates of Christianity; Augustine, the infidel and skeptic, became a true defender of the faith; John B. Gough, Francis Murphy and many others have been turned from the power of strong drink to sober and powerful advocates of temperance and sobriety; prodigal sons and daughters have been changed into most obedient and faithful sons and daughters. Therefore, in speaking of Christ as one who is able to transform lives, we are speaking of a fact and not a fiction. And all unregenerate hearts and lives need to be changed, for "the natural heart is enmity toward God, for it is not subject to the law of God; neither, indeed, can be." It needs, therefore, to be transformed, and Christ alone can transform it.

But how does Christ transform lives? Paul answers this question for us, when he says, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." The word mind here includes the entire psychical being—emotions, affections, conscience, intellect and will. The entire inward man must be renewed, and this is done by the power of the Holy Ghost. It is His especial office work to regenerate the human soul, to renew our minds, to transform the inward motives of life, which will also result in the transformation of the outward life. One of the most efficient agencies through which we receive the power of the Holy Ghost to regeneration is prayer. Whoever is convicted of the sinfulness of the old life and desires and prays for the new life will not be denied. This was the psalmist's experience. Convicted of his sinfulness, he prayed, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." His prayer was answered, and so will ours be.

But complete transformation is not accomplished in the life. Christ's work of transformation begins here, but it does not end here. When He comes again He "shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of His glory." Now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is."

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. vi, 3; Ps. ii, 7-11; Ezek. xi, 17-21; xviii. 30-32; John ii, 1-11; iii, 1-16; I Cor. xv, 51-58; Gal. v, 16-26; Phil. iv, 8, 9; I John iii, 1-3.

A Well Known Endeavorer.

One of the most active and prosperous Christian Endeavor societies in New York has its home in the Marble Collegiate church, of which Rev. Dr. David James Burrell is pastor. Dr. Burrell is a lifetime Endeavor enthusiast and has espoused the cause with voice and pen. At state and international conventions he has spoken with frequency.

REV. DR. D. J. BURRELL.

A Message From Dr. Clark.

Things I should like to have happen in 1904:

First.—An effort made to start a Junior society in every church where there is a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

Second.—Five thousand new pupils recorded in the correspondence school, many of them taking the Junior course, which fits Junior superintendents for their work.

Third.—Ten thousand new Christian Endeavor societies started, many in neglected neighborhoods (schoolhouse societies), business societies, mothers' societies (to pray for and help the Juniors), senior societies (of older Endeavorers and others to attend the mid-week meeting), prison societies, floating societies, school societies. What a variety and what opportunities! Surely I have set the mark none too high when there are such large possibilities.—Rev. Dr. F. E. Clark, Writing From Steamer's Deck at San Francisco.

Dr. Clark In New Zealand.

Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., president of the World's Christian Endeavor union, has obtained the prettiest Christian Endeavor convention in Dunedin, New Zealand. Hearty greetings were sent to America, and it was predicted by many that this great organization, with its millions of members in all parts of the world, will be a great bond of fellowship between the young people of the world. Dr. Clark had an interesting interview with the premier of New Zealand, who expressed great interest in and friendship for America and Americans.

METHODIST LEADER ON LONDON'S POOR

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse's Absorbingly Interesting Talk at the Crescent Avenue.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION

PAINTS VIVID PICTURE OF THE DOWN-TRODDEN WORKINGMAN.

Strong Plea to Arouse Christian Aid in Relieving Distress—600,000 Live in One-Room Dwellings.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, of London, known as one of the great leaders of Methodism in England, a widely read author and a leader in work among the poorest classes of London, addressed a large gathering at the Crescent Avenue church April 6. Mr. Pearse is a fascinating speaker, direct, epigrammatic, original, with a full command of humor and pathos. He presented the scenes of London slums, the usefulness and need of the work among them, so strikingly as to capture the complete sympathy of his hearers, and to make the hour or more during which he spoke pass like five minutes. Rev. J. S. Zeile, of the Crescent Avenue church, presided over the meeting, and Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, introduced the speaker.

The work done to improve conditions in West London was the subject of Mr. Pearse's address. London with its population of six and a half millions has a bigger slum problem than almost any other city in the world. A million people in the city are living under conditions which the law condemns as unsanitary. Six hundred thousand are living in one room dwellings. In some cases three families exist in a single room, one having possession for the first eight hours and the other two following in their turn.

Individual instances were given to show the horrors of the ways in which a large portion of the "other half" lives. Many of them never know a bed, sleep in their working clothes; one boy, when he first placed himself gingerly between sheets, exclaiming that it was like lying on cold treacle, the English for molasses.

Children barely out of arms labor for six pence a week. The workingman in the poorest classes spends a third of his salary for rent. There is no brighter outlook for him, little hope of improving his condition, unless the churches and their institutions can see his need and stretch out a hand in fellowship. He has no place to go for recreation except to the public house. The public house is open six nights in the week, and made attractive to him. The churches are closed. He cannot conceive of having an enjoyable time without getting drunk.

Mr. Pearse made a forceful plea for less of self-complacency and selfishness among church-members. His idea was that the Christian is a man who receives the good and passes it on to his less fortunate neighbor. The work of the churches should be active among the unfortunate classes.

The naturalness of the poor man's hatred and envy of everything of wealth was illustrated. New York, London, Chicago and the other large cities of the world are built on volcanoes, he said, and the thing to do is for the churches to wake up; substitute for the socialism of hate the socialism of love, and change the socialist's cry of "down with everything that's up" to "up with everything that's down." The church should get out of its rut and welcome new ideas.

The danger of selfishness in religion was the dominant note in the greater part of Mr. Pearse' speech. The "aristocratic" aloofness of church people who pride themselves on their godliness he condemned. "I know what makes blue blood," he said, "it is blue with cold." It scorns to mingle with the "riff-raff," to distribute its benefits when such distribution calls for sacrifice of personal comfort and disagreeable work with poverty and evil. "If the devil himself should give me a match, I'd rather light the gas with it than be in the dark," he said.

Building Permits.

Building permits granted by Inspector T. O. Dunne: To James B. Gettridge, of Netherwood, for two dwellings on South avenue; to I. M. Wyckoff, to remove a barn and paint shop from 441 West Front street to the rear of 556 West Front street; to Adam C. Blair, for a frame dwelling on Park avenue; to William H. Codington, of Martinsville, for a store and dwelling on Church street.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Talford, who have been on Long Island for several months past, are guests of friends in this city.

ELKS' GALA TIME AT INSTALLATION

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., Members Join in An Enthusiastic Meeting.

JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS

ENTERTAINMENT AND REFRESHMENTS AS FEATURES.

District Deputy Everson Installing Officer—William N. Runyon is Again the Exalted Ruler—The Programme.

It was playtime for the Elks last night. They never do much except gambol, but the play April 6, was of the superabundant sort, because the Benevolent and Protective brethren had an installation of officers to celebrate.

All the members were out, and visiting brethern from out of town helped to make the occasion joyous. The affair paced off in true Elk style, with much song and jollity.

These were the officers installed: Exalted ruler, City Judge William N. Runyon; esteemed leading knight, A. D. Findlay; esteemed loyal knight, L. I. VanAlystine; treasurer, L. B. Wooiston, secretary, Walter H. Freeman; tiler, Edward G. Searing.

Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, of New Brunswick Lodge, No. 294, was the installing officer. He was assisted by Louis Wolfson and H. P. Garretson, also of New Brunswick Lodge.

Trustee for one year, C. A. Reed, being out of town, could not be installed.

Exalted Ruler Runyon announced the following appointive officers: Esquire, Thomas Hanna; inner guard, John Bowman; organist, George Schoonmaker.

After the brief business of the installation fun and frolic held the boards until a late hour. Pedestoes served an elaborate collation that more than met the high standard set by the noble Elks in such matters.

There was an impromptu programme of song and story, with a few light dance steps to lend variety to the entertainment. Plainfield Lodge is rich in talent, and under the guidance of the exalted ruler, whose sobriquet is the Prince of Entertainers, the members did things that would make a musical extravaganza seem weak and unsatisfactory.

The lodge has come pretty close to finding itself, and every meeting brings it nearer to the first rank in membership and standing in the eastern section of the order.

ERNEST S. SUFFERN WEDS

MARRIES MISS GEORGIA L. GREENE IN ALL ANGELS, NEW YORK.

Miss Georgia Louise Greene, daughter of James Gardner Greene, of New York, and Ernest Salisbury Suffern, of Sycamores Avenue, North Plainfield, were married yesterday at noon at All Angels' Episcopal church, New York, Rev. Dr. Townsend officiating. There were over two hundred guests present.

The bride was attended by Miss Kathryn Berry, of Elizabeth, as maid-of-honor. Robert A. Suffern, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Phillip S. Suffern, E. C. Suffern, brothers of the groom; Charles A. Parke, of Englewood and Anthony Mankel, of Mt. Vernon, the latter being classmates of the groom at Williams Collge, Class '01.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's brother, Richard Greene. Upon their return from a southern wedding trip, the couple will reside at Elizabeth.

Fire Department Mascot.

Along with the new house and new apparatus the borough fire department is to have a mascot, in true professional fire fighting style. The mascot is a pert little fox terrier, yclept Towser, owned by Lieutenant Campbell, of No. 1 Hose Company. Towser has been living around the old engine house on Somerset street for the past few days, and knows now what the sound of the tapper means. Every time the bell sounds he has a species of canine hysteria that last until the apparatus rolls out.

McAll Auxiliary Delegates.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. James Fields, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. F. G. Mead and Miss Dietrich have been chosen delegates to attend the State Conference of the McAll Auxiliary to be held in South Orange Wednesday, May 4.

Plays in Parish House.

Grace church Guild will hold a sale in the Parish House April 20 and 21. A hot supper will be served each evening and two plays will be given in which Mrs. C. E. Brooks and Miss Mascott will take part.

SOMERSET COUNTY'S SHRIEVALTY NOMINATION

Mayor Smalley and Charles Sebring Both Decline to be Candidates for the Office.

MR. NELSON UNDECIDED

BOUND BROOK MAN, WHO IS IN BUSINESS HERE, MAY BE THE MAN.

Nelson is Considered a Strong Man—The County is Not Rich and the Emoluments of the Office Are Not Tempting.

Somerset County Republicans are having something of a hunt for a shrievalty candidate. Three men have been offered the nomination, of these two have declined and the third is still undecided.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, and Charles Sebring, of Sebring's Mills, are the ones who have refused to consider the place. Fred Nelson, who lives in Bound Brook, but who is in business here and has a wide circle of friends on both sides of the brook, is the present possibility.

None of the men approached cared for the place because it has no particular attractions. Somerset is not a rich county and the emoluments of the office are not tempting. Neither is the prestige.

Mayor Smalley would not consider the matter and Charles Sebring was equally decided in his refusal to run. Mr. Nelson, who was interviewed by a reporter last night, said he had not made up his mind upon the question.

It is said that Mr. Nelson would make a strong candidate. He is widely known, and has a host of good friends. He conducted the hotel in the Notch for several years, and his location there made him a familiar figure to many men from all over Somerset. Those who know him feel sure that he would make a most efficient official.

REV. DR. GEBHARD'S PLEA

IMPRESSES UPON LOCAL CONGREGATION THE NEED OF MORE MINISTERS.

A call for young men to enter the Christian ministry and to parents to assist by encouraging in their sons a natural bent towards the work was sounded Sunday by Rev. John G. Gebhard, of New York, secretary for the Board of Education of the Reformed Church in America. Mr. Gebhard spoke at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning and night.

Mr. Gebhard made a plea at night for men to put the making of life ahead and above the making of a living. He showed what Christ meant when he said, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." God will provide well for a man who is doing His service. Want does not touch the man who is doing the right and who is beginning Christian progress. The present day tendency to make the "mammon of unrighteousness" the chief aim in life was severely censured. Mr. Gebhard illustrated the value of the man who places a life ahead of a mere living by references to President Roosevelt, Dr. Lorenz and Secretary of War Taft. He mentioned the fact that of a graduating class of 600 at Harvard last summer, six had prepared themselves for the ministry.

In the morning Mr. Gebhard spoke of the work of the Board of Education of the church which, by means of $150 scholarships, is assisting deserving young men through college to prepare themselves for the ministry. Similar scholarships were formerly given High School pupils, but, because of the fact that so many of them afterwards changed their minds about entering the ministry, it was decided to devote the entire fund for the benefit of college students.

PROMOTE MR. LYNN.

Pond Machine Tool Company Makes Him Superintendent of its Machine Shop Here.

After nearly eleven years' service with the Pond Machine Tool Company, Frederick G. Lynn has been appointed superintendent of the machine shop. This action, which expresses the appreciation of Mr. Lynn's employers, was taken to relieve Manager James T. McMurray of a portion of the rapidly increasing cares of management resulting from the growth of business of the last few years.

Mr. Lynn, who at one time worked for the Niles Tool Company at Hamilton, Ohio, came to Plainfield in 1893 to take charge of the lathe department.

BETTER ROAD TO NEW MARKET

MOVEMENT TO SECURE A MACADAMIZED HIGHWAY FROM THIS CITY.

Talk of the macadamising of the road from New Market to Seventh street has been revived in the Middlesex villages. Freeholder Alexander Manning, of Piscataway, is said to be at the head of a decided movement to bring the improvement about.

The idea was broached several years ago, but the matter was allowed to drop. Interest in it, however, did not wholly die out, and recently Mr. Manning espoused the plan.

When he was proposed for a renomination last spring and opposition to him was fomented by the supporters of Joseph Fields, of Bound Brook, this improvement was mentioned by his followers throughout Piscataway as one of the things that his return to the board would bring about.

Whether this had anything to do with it or not, Mr. Manning received the nomination and the subsequent election, and now the Piscataway men are waiting for the new road. The people in the township would be very largely benefitted by it, and those who drive from here to the township would find it a most attractive road. Its construction would undoubtedly increase traffic between the two points, and probably divert an appreciable amount of trade from New Brunswick to this city.

J. A. RUNYON BURIED.

Funeral Services Held Saturday, Rev. A. F. Todd Officiating.

The funeral services of J. Alba Runyon were held Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the late home, 114 Lafayette place. Rev. A. F. Todd, of Dunellen, officiated. There was a large display of flowers. The interment took place in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were Charles McNabb, Frank VanWinkle, Walter Walker and Daniel VanWinkle, members of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

Y. M. C. A. Nine Ready.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball nine will hold its first practise of the season Saturday afternoon on the Myrtle avenue grounds, the weather of last Saturday necessitating a postponement. The work of preparing the grounds for play will begin probably tomorrow. Manager Symons has received challenges from the Dunellen A. C., Plainfield A. A., and other teams of the vicinity. Games will undoubtedly be arranged with the school nines.

Mrs. Daboll to Wed Again.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Mrs. Blanche Cooper Daboll, of this city, to Rev. Nathan Stanton, of Buffalo, N. Y. The wedding will take place early in the summer. Mrs. Daboll was the wife of the late Nathen Daboll.

Fifty Years Wedded.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Barkalow, of Lincoln place, have issued invitations for the observance of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, to be held at their home on Tuesday night, April 26.

DRAG-HUNT DESPITE RAIN

SPORT ENJOYED BY PLAINFIELD FOLKS ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Unpleasant weather conditions were no sufficient to dampen the enthusiasm of the followers of the drag-hunt Saturday. The usual Saturday run to hounds was held with about ten of the faithful in the saddle. By the courtesy of several farmers, an uninterrupted cross-country run was made possible to Dunellen.

The followers of the hunt met at Rockview avenue and Rockview terrace in the borough, going along Greenbrook road to the Cadmus farm, where the scent was laid, for the hounds. From the Cadmus farm, the chase continued through the McMahon farm and along the meadows to Dunellen.

At Dunellen there was a check, the hounds losing the scent. Proceeding through the town and across the railroad tracks, the scent was regained, the chase continuing to New Market. The return was by the meadows along West Seventh street, and the finish at Grant avenue. In spite of the weather, the hunt was most enjoyable and successful.

Among the party were R. A. Shebearie, Charles Issmay and Mr. Webster, of New York; Miss Gertrude Noe, of Westfield; Dr. M. O'M. Knost, Irving Clark.

There will be another hunt next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

MRS. ANGLEMAN BURIED.

Rev. Dr. Snodgrass Officiates at Services at the House on West Front Street.

The funeral services of Mrs. Abraham Angleman were held from the late home on West Front street, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, there being a very large gathering of relatives, friends and neighbors. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, conducted the service, reading appropriate Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a short address. There was a large display of floral tributes, including one from the Epworth League of the First M. E. church.

The interment took place in the M. E. church cemetery in Plainfield avenue and the bearers were Howard Randolph, L. E. Hart, John Cory and John McNaughton.

J. H. Cose Sues.

J. H. Cose, trading as J. W. Cose & Son, has sued A. J. Winans, on contract, in Justice Smalley's court. The litigation is over the price of roofing work. The case will be heard April 21. Walter Hetfield, Jr., of Hetfield & Hetfield, represents the plaintiff.

Picture by A. D. Shepard, Jr.

A picture out of the ordinary line of subjects in Saturday's issue of the Evening Mail is called "Bringing in the Mess" and is the work of Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., of "The Gables," Fanwood. Mr. Shepard is a member of the Adirondack League Club and his picture is a hunting scene of that region.

THROUGH TROLLEY TO BOUND BROOK

President McCarter Says That the Cars Will Run Between Bound Brook and Elizabeth.

MAYOR DRAKE'S WORK

LINCOLN'S FOUNDER CALLS P. S. C.'S ATTENTION TO PRESENT CONDITION.

No Transfer at Dunellen—Straight Run Means a Great Saving in Time—A Benefit to Plainfield People.

Responding to the general demand for such an agreement, President McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, has announced that the cars on the Front street line are to run on through Dunellen to Bound Brook. The improvement will go into effect just as soon as the necessary details are worked out at the head office of the corporation.

President McCarter's action in the *matter was brought on by a communi*cation from Mayor Silas Dewey Drake, of Lincoln. Writing as the Lincoln Board of Trade, Mayor Drake called President McCarter's attention to the inconvenience and annoyance to the patrons of the line attendant on the present break in the run at Dunellen.

The connecting cars from Bound *Brook run only at half-hourly inter*vals, and the delay resulting from the transfer arrangement, which is aggravated by the absence of any sort of company waiting room, has been the source of much complaint from the public.

Ready recognition of the justness of Mayor Drake's request for a change was accorded by President McCarter. He replied promptly to Mr. Drake, agreeing that the change suggested was necessary, and promising to put it into effect "just as soon as possible." He thanked Mayor Drake for calling his attention to the matter.

There are a number of mechanics in the city who will be directly benefitted by the change to a great extent. Most of the employes of the Aluminum Press Works, which will open in Dewey Park within a week or two, and of the Levering & Garrigues plant, in Dunellen, live here. The straight run to Bound Brook will save them a material amount of time in the journey to and from work.

WHATSOEVER CIRCLE'S SALE

TRINITY REFORMED ORGANIZATION RAISES FUNDS TO FULFILL A PLEDGE.

Under the auspices of the Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, of Trinity Reformed church, a most successful sale of cake, candy and fancy stock collars was held in the parlors of the church Saturday afternoon. Despite the disagreeable weather there was a good attendance at the sale and about $25 was realized as profit. Everything was disposed of except a few stocks. Mrs. Fred VanEmburgh was in charge of the cake table; Mrs. Leonard Smith the candy table, and Mrs. Virginia Chickering had charge of the fancy stock collars. These women were generally assisted by various members of the Circle. The proceeds from the sale will be devoted to the fund being raised to fulfil the Circle's pledge in support of the King's Daughters' city nurse.

PRIZE CONTESTS.

Cup and Medals to be Trophies in Inter-Scholastic Athletic Meet.

The cup to be awarded the winner of the interscholastic athletic meet to be held next Friday afternoon at 2:30 will become the permanent possession of the school whose team scores the greatest number of points. Silver and bronze medals will be given the individual athletes making the largest scores, and ribbons will be awarded winners in each of the events. Each team will consist of three men, every man to enter all the events.

Death of E. A. Nichols.

Emory Adelbert Nichols, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Nichols, died at his late residence, Prospect avenue, New York, Friday, April 6. Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Nichols were former residents of Plainfield, their home being on Rockview avenue, now owned by former Mayor W. L. Saunders.

Hospital Board to Meet.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital will hold an important meeting Monday night, April 18, to take further action regarding the erection of the nurses' home and isolation ward.

Musical at Holy Cross.

A musicale will be held in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross on Thursday night, April 21, under the auspices of the Woman's Guild.

NEGRO IN CONGRESS

Race Question Again Injected by Scott of Kansas.

GROVER CLEVELAND AS A CANDIDATE

Williams Defended Attitude of the South—Names of Parker, Williams and Hearst as Presidential Candidates Brought In.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The race question again was injected into the proceedings of the house of representatives when Mr. Scott (Kan.) delivered a long address, in which he referred to his previous statement that it was current in Kansas that ex-President Cleveland had dined C. H. J. Taylor, a Kansas negro politician. He read several letters from Kansas citizens that it had been Taylor's boast that he had received such social attention from Mr. Cleveland. He also said that Mr. Cleveland while governor of New York had signed a bill providing for mixed schools.

In a spirited reply Mr. Williams (Miss.), the minority leader, defended the attitude of the south toward the negro and said that discussion of the race question by the Republicans was an old game by which when the Republican party found itself confronted with issues that threatened its supremacy it began to wave the bloody shirt.

Mr. Williams, referring to Mr. Barthold's statement that President Jefferson had dined a negro, provoked laughter and applause when he said that "every man knows that if the nigger ate at Monticello he ate in Jefferson's kitchen and not at Jefferson's family table." The people of the south were going to lift the negro race gently, sanely and in the proper way. It had the kindliest feeling for the negro.

"You can't deflect us from live pending issues," concluded Mr. Williams. God, he said, had given the colored man to the south as a trust, and that trust should be kept. There was not to be a hybridized south. He wanted the country to know that he was speaking as a southerner, with the best interest at heart of both the white and black inhabitant.

At the instance of Mr. Bartlett (Ga.) a letter from ex-President Cleveland was read, as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Bartlett—I have received a number of inquiries similar to yours touching my invitation to Fred Douglass to a wedding reception and signing while governor of New York a bill providing for mixed schools.

"I do not suppose that Mr. Thomas E. Watson believed or had any reason to believe either of the allegations when he made them. At any rate, they are both utterly and absolutely false.

"I cannot afford to devote a great deal of time in denying such foolish tales. I shall therefore attempt to cover every phase of the subject now and for all time. If so happens that I have given my personal attention either when sleeping or waking, alive or dead, on my head or on my heels, dined, lunched or supped or invited to a wedding reception any colored man, woman or child. If, however, I had decided to do either of these things neither the fear of Mr. Watson or any one else would have prevented me. When I was governor a movement was made in the legislature to abolish separate colored schools in New York city. I opposed the measure, and it failed. I do not find that I interposed a veto and have forgotten the course the matter took, but I know that whatever I did was in favor of maintaining separate colored schools instead of having them mixed."

After its reading Mr. Bartlett said that whenever Mr. Cleveland's name was suggested as a possible candidate of the Democrats for president the Republicans seemed to get very much excited and afraid. Mr. Bartlett added:

"I know he will not be nominated. I know, too, that he does not desire to be nominated."

He said he also knew that the Democratic party would nominate some one who was a true Democrat, and he added with some deliberation:

"It is not very difficult now to state who that will be."

"Does the gentleman know who it will be?" inquired Mr. Dalzell.

"Yes," said Mr. Bartlett; "the whole country knows. Judge Parker of New York," which elicited Democratic applause.

Mr. Lacey (Ia.) asked Mr. Bartlett if he was not discourteous to his colleagues, Williams (Miss.) and Hearst (N. Y.).

"I withdraw in the interest of party harmony," ejaculated Mr. Williams, amid a laugh.

Mr. Hearst was not in his seat.

Tucker is Confident.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 13.—Thomas F. Vahey and Charles H. Innes, counsel for Charles L. Tucker, who is charged with murdering Miss Mabel Page, visited the young man at the Middlesex county jail here. As Mr. Vahey passed from the jail after a conference of an hour or more with Tucker he said: "I found Tucker in the best of spirits. He is absolutely confident that he will be cleared of this charge, and he does not worry about it."

Her Work For Indians Ended.

APPLETON, Wis., April 13.—Miss Caroline Jones, who as an Indian missionary in the fifties worked alone among the wild tribes of this state, particularly in the Lake Winnebago and the Fox river territories, is dead at the age of eighty-one. She narrowly escaped death by fire at the hands of Indians several times and was more than once in captivity.

LOCATION SELECTED FOR BAND CONCERTS

Free Musical Feasts to be Given on Coward Tract Opposite the Tier Place.

TO BE TEN IN NUMBER

PROCEEDS OF MINSTREL SHOW TO COMPLETE FUND FOR PURPOSE.

Attraction at the Casino on May 10 and 11—First Public Band Concert on June 2—The Arrangements in Detail.

Satisfied that the coming minstrel show will be a great financial success for the benefit of his music fund, Bandmaster Ben LaVere is planning the details of a notable series of popular summer concerts.

This year the concerts are not to be held in the city park. Bandmaster LaVere believes, with a number of other people interested in the concerts, that the park is a little too far out of the central limits of the twin municipalities, and he has chosen a spot midway between the two places to hold his concerts.

It is proposed to build a bandstand on the J. B. Coward tract directly opposite the Tier place. While this will put the concerts technically in the borough, it is practically right in the central point between the two places, and much nearer the heart of this city han the park. Mr. LaVere's plans include the erection of a number of seats before the bandstand, for people who feel that they would prefer to pay ten cents rather than stand up for two hours.

If $300 is netted by the minstrel show there will be a series of ten concerts. $700 will supply the ten, and $350 has already been realized, the recent fair in Saengerbund Hall netting that much. This year there will be no passing the hat, or other objectionable features. Just as many concerts as there is money in hand to pay for will be given. It is confidently expected that the show will more than make up the necessary amount for ten concerts, however, and a weekly treat for two and a half months seems assured to the two Plainfields.

LaVere's band this year will be one of the finest organizations of its sort in cities of the same size as Plainfield. This is recognized by the musical people in the metropolitan district, and soloists of note will be sent here by all the music houses. It is proposed to have a different soloist each week. If there is money enough, the series of ten concerts will be extended. The first of the series will be given June 2.

No doubt of the entire success of the minstrel show is entertained by Mr. LaVere and the other men at the head of the enterprise. The amateurs have been rehearsing for three months, and they are said to be practically ready to present one of the snappiest and entertaining shows ever seen in this city. May 10 and 11 have been chosen as the date for the show, which will be given at the Casino.

There are a score of talented young men in the troupe, all amateurs. They will fill the first part. The troupe is being coached by "Doc" Greenwood and J. C. Martin. The second part will be full of good specialties secured by Mr. LaVere. He is in hopes of getting Billy Raymond, of Bowley, Haviland & Dresser, who would be a great drawing card. An orchestra of ten pieces, led by Mr. LaVere, will furnish the incidental music.

J. W. WIKOFF BURIED.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck Conducts the Funeral Services at His Late Home.

There was a large attendance last Tuesday at the funeral services for John W. Wikoff, which took place from the late home, 817 Richmond street, at 11 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was in charge, Mr. Wikoff having been a member of the church. There was an abundance of floral tributes. The bearers were Edward Randolph, Nathan Randolph, Fred Gray and Henry Staats. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Shoot at Dog Corners.

An interesting shooting match took place between two teams of four men at Dog Corners Saturday afternoon. Frank Terry, Percy Terry, Jacob Terry and Harry VanNess composed the winning combination. The shoot was at fifteen blue rocks apiece. After the shoot "Sol" Thayer, who was on the losing team, showed that he could do as good work as anyone of the winners by knocking thirty-five straight.

New Paint Store.

Harry A. Zimmerman and Fred Stetter have formed a partnership in the paint business. They will open a store on Somerset street. F. J. Biats, Esq., drew up the papers.

MRS. DUNHAM BURIED.

Funeral Services Held From Her Late Home in Dunellen.

The funeral services of Mrs. Susan M. Dunham were held yesterday afternoon from the late home, Prospect avenue, Dunellen, at 2 o'clock. Rev. L. H. Livermore, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, conducted the service. Interment took place in Hillside cemetery.

May Elect Assistant Pastor.

The officers and members of the Calvary Baptist church are contemplating the advisability of appointing an assistant pastor to Rev. Scott Wallace, whose duties have increased largely with the growth of the congregation. There is also some idea of enlarging the church itself.

AMATEUR MINSTRELS SCORE DECIDED HIT

Big Crowd Made to Roar With Laughter at the Show in Reform Hall.

APPLAUSE UNLIMITED

THE HOPE CHAPEL Y. M. A. BOYS' CLEVER STUNTS.

No Dull Features—Sweeney Wins Fresh Laurels—"The Coming Man" Amuses the Audience.

Lovers of a laugh were on in force Tuesday night for the minstrel show by the Hope Y. M. A. troupe in Reform Hall and they were rewarded by large portions of unadulterated merriment dealt out in big chunks. There wasn't a dull feature on the list which was completely changed from the original as presented at Hope chapel.

In part I of the programme only a few of the most popular numbers were retained from the original production. All of the end men made hits. Their jokes made everybody joyful and their songs brought forth invariable demands for more. Mr. Sweeney's "Trouble" appealed especially to the audience, and his fun-making and generally clever work made him solid in the affections of the audience throughout the olio. The topical song with new lines added, as sung by George B. Cose, was more popular than ever. This was the programme of the first part:

"In the Evening by the Moonlight," by the company; grand overture; opening chorus—"My Honey Lou," by the company; "Warm Gas," Mr. Firstbrook; "My California Poppy," Messrs. George B. Cose, Texier and company; "Old Black Joe," Bertram F. Tallamy and company; "Trouble," Mr. Sweeney and company; "Balmy Breezes," Mr. Texier; "It Ain't no Disgrace to Run When you Know Sheered," Mr. Firstbrook and company; "Blue Bell," Mr. Muir and company; "Heated Atmosphere," Mr. Johnson; "Take me Back to Old Viriginia," Louis V. Tallamy and company; "Show me the Way to go Home, Babe," Messrs. Sweeney, Firstbrook and company; "Rolled Wind," John H. Cose; "Doan You Cry Ma Honey," Mr. Jeffery; "He was a Sailor," Mr. Texier and company; "Baked Tornadoes," George B. Cose; "Hallelujah," John H. Cose and company; topical song—"If I Only Had the Proper Sort of Pull," George B. Cose and company; "Hot Air," Mr. Sweeney; final chorus—"General Hardtack—On Guard," by the company.

A. E. Willard opened the second part with his convulsing "rube" act performed with Coney Island variations. Plantation pastimes consisted of some side-splitting manoeuvres in the dance. M. D. Sweeney, John H. Cose, Leonce Texier, Bertram C. Firstbrook, Alexander Muir and the scarecrow shook their feet and the sides of the spectators at the same time. John and James Galvin in their own act were as clever and funny as ever and Elmer D. Cutting's illustrated songs were effectively rendered.

For the after-piece, "The Coming Man" was repeated with the characters eloquently renamed as follows:

J. Percival Hall, a dejected benedict, William N. Runyon; Bedelia, his big bone consort, Matthew D. Sweeney; Shadow, a meek and faithful lamb, John H. Cose; Freddy, a spry messenger laddie, Bertram C. Firstbrook; Leonidas, the coal baron, George B. Cose, and Fauntleroy Gilhooly, the coming man, John Galvin.

Alexander Muir was interlocutor; the bones were Samuel Johnson, J. H. Cose and M. D. Sweeney; and the tambos, Leonce Texier, B. C. Firstbrook and G. B. Cose. Judge Runyon, who engineered the production again, presided at the piano. These were the chorus and specialty artists: Frederick W. Bowden, Elmer D. Cutting, John Duckworth, William J. Firstbrook, Herbert R. Finck, John R. Fritts, James Galvin, John Galvin, Hugh J. Gray, Elmer Hoffman, Harry Hoffman, Edwin B. Howes, William Jeffery, George McComb, Alfred B. Marsh, David R. Martin, Joseph Martin, Wallace O. Martin, Charles Pawson, James Penney, William S. Porter, Olando J. Roseberry, John R. Slorah, Manns Squier, Joseph Sweeney, Bertram F. Tallamy, Louis V. Tallamy, Charles J. Vincent, Alfred E. Willard, Henry Williams, Benjamin W. Evans.

The committee consisted of: George E. Firstbrook, William Dilks, Charles A. Dixon, Raymond McVoy, V. W. Nash, Jr., Edward Texier, J. Fred Wharton, William Hoffman.

JENSEN GOT HIS LICENSE

COURT GRANTED APPLICATION, THE PETITIONER AGREEING TO CONDITION.

Under somewhat novel conditions, Charles Jensen, who conducts a hotel at Greenbrook road and Somerset street, was granted a renewal of his liquor license by Judge Schenck at Somerville yesterday.

The license was given after Corporation Counsel Reed and Nelson Y. Dungan had argued pro and con on the proposed increase of the fee. Judge Schenck asked if Jensen would consent to agree to pay the difference between the old and new fees if the advance was ordered. Mr. Dungan, after consultation with his client, said he would. The court accordingly granted the license under the proviso that if the fee went up Jensen would immediately pay the difference.

If Jensen had refused the agreement the court would have withheld the renewal until the question of advance had been settled.

LEG CUT OFF BY THE CARS

ELIZABETH LAD MEETS WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT WESTFIELD.

Harry Bush, aged eighteen years, of 154 Pearl street, Elizabeth, had his left foot cut off, while he was stealing a ride to this city on a coal train, yesterday afternoon. The accident happened just west of the Westfield station on the New Jersey Central and the lad was hurriedly brought to this city and taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, in the ambulance. While the injury is a serious one it is not likely to prove fatal.

Bush, it is said, has made a practice of "jumping" on coal trains and had become quite expert. It was while moving about on one of the coal cars that his feet slipped and he fell. His left foot went under the train and was severed from the leg. His relatives were notified and they arrived last night.

REV. J. H. ZELIE MODERATOR

SPRING SESSION OF THE ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY HELD YESTERDAY.

The spring session of the Elizabeth Presbytery was opened yesterday in Elizabeth. Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of Crescent Avenue church, was elected moderator.

Twenty-eight pastors and twenty-four elders were in attendance. Be*sides Rev. Mr. Zelie, Revs. J. O. Mc*Kelvey and F. D. Tilden were present from here. Among the elders was Stephen Cahoone, of Crescent Avenue church.

Rev. Mr. Casselberry, the new minister at Dunellen, was received into the Presbytery. The session will close today.

REPORTORIAL CHANGE.

Richard M. Larned Leaves The Daily Press Staff for a Better Position.

Richard M. Larned, a valuable member of The Daily Press reportorial staff, has resigned his position to take a place "on the desk" of The Newark Advertiser. He will be succeeded by Gordon Wilson McQuistion, of New York. The change will take place Saturday. Mr. Larned possesses every qualification for the position he has accepted. After being graduated from Dartmouth College he served for some time in a reportorial capacity on the Boston Journal. His service on The Daily Press has been very satis*factory.* Mr. McQuistion is a graduate of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and has spent some time at Yale University. Recently he has done reportorial work on the Brooklyn, N. Y., Citizen.

Mrs. M. A. Johnson's Funeral.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary A. Johnson, wife of Samuel Johnson, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the late home on Park avenue in Middlesex County. Mrs. Johnson died yesterday in her fiftieth year, as the result of a stroke of paralysis. A husband and three children survive her, besides two sisters, Mrs. Eugene O'Reilley and Miss Susie Steers, of this city.

Paying Forfeit.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First M. E. church, who were successful in securing the greatest number of new applications, are enjoying a luncheon in Vincent chapel this afternoon. According to the arrangements of the contest the losing side is giving the luncheon and all the new members are present to participate in the good time.

HIGHER LICENSE FEE MATTER IN THE COURT

Corporation Counsel Reed's Argument at Somerville for Increased Rate in Borough.

COUNCIL'S APPLICATION

LAWYER FOR SALOONKEEPER MAKES A PROTEST.

Decision to be Announced Later—Justice Garretson Absent—Judge Schenck and Justice Fort on Bench.

Strong argument in favor of the proposed increase of the borough license fee was presented yesterday by Corporation Counsel Reed before Judge Schenck, of the Somerset Court, and Supreme Court Justice Fort, in whom is vested the power to order the advance. But one voice was raised in opposition to the borough's request, that of a lawyer, who appeared to secure a license for Chas. Jensen, a North Plainfield hotel keeper.

Several well known boroughites, including Collector Brown and Ex-Fire Chief Stahl, were present to hear Mr. Reed's plea.

In bringing the matter before the court, Mr. Reed presented the resolution asking for a $600 license fee passed by the borough Council on March 14, when the corporation counsel was instructed to lay the matter before Judge Schenck. Proceeding with his argument Mr. Reed pointed out that the fee in Plainfield is $700 despite the fact that the saloons are compelled to close at 11 o'clock. The two municipalities from practically one community, and the fees should not be so widely divergent as at present. The taxpayers of the borough, he said, were entitled, or a matter of right, to ask fees at the liquor dealers commensurate with the value of the privilege.

Most of the arrests in the borough, he said, resulted directly from the liquor traffic. Two successive Councils had unanimously passed resolutions asking for the higher fee, he said, and pointed out that the three members recently elected had all voted for the last resolution.

That the liquor element opposed annexation had become well known. This stand was easy to understand when it was remembered that a union of the city and borough meant increase of fee and shorter hours. For their stand on the annexation question, many of the people of county and borough, Mr. Reed intimated, were inclined to uphold the liquor men in their fight against higher fees. But the whole matter was in the hands of the court, he said—the court had absolute power to act as it deemed best. As he did not believe the court would allow its views on annexation to influence its disposition of the question. It would probably be to the interest of anti-annexation to have the fee raised, because, he said, the difference in the license regulations was one of the things that kept the question of consolidation before the public, and uniform regulations would do away with one argument in favor of union.

When Nelson Y. Dungan appeared to present Charles Jensen's application for a renewal of his license on the hotel at *Somerset street and Green*brook road, he took occasion to assail the validity of the claim that the fee was too low. He said the test should be whether or not the liquor dealer could make a profit and not what the people of the borough wanted. In the light of that test the fee was already too high. He declared the agitation in favor of higher license to be a scheme of Mayor Smalley by which he hoped to pull himself from the hole into which the increased cost of the new fire department had dropped him. He was trying to make the liquor dealers pay the new department's bills.

He denied that there was any business in the borough. Nobody stopped there to traffic, everyone going over into the city. He maintained that the fee could not be raised in North Plainfield without similar advance everywhere else in the county, and that nobody but Mayor Smalley wanted the advance.

Corporation Counsel Reed, relying to Mr. Dungan's argument, contended that the court could fix the fee in the borough without regard to the rest of the county. There was no foundation, he said, for the statement that Mayor Smalley was the only one who wanted the fee raised.

"Why," he said, "the resolution which I have presented here was passed after the last election. Three councilmen who voted for it had just taken their seats. They had just been elected by the very people who opposed Mayor Smalley, and they had no part in the establishment of the new fire department. They represented the very latest expression of the sentiments of the voters. Their hearts beat in perfect unison with the great throbbing pulse of the people, whose voice is the voices that rules in such governments as ours, and every one of them voted for this resolution. Personally, it matters not to me whether the court listens to the wishes of the people of the borough as expressed by their representatives, or harkens to the plea of the rum seller. I was directed to present the matter to the court, and have done so. It is for the court to decide."

Judge Schenck listened to the arguments every attentively, and seemed impressed by what Mr. Reed said. He promised a decision on the matter just as soon as possible after consulta*tion with Judge Garretson.*

The new grand jury of Somerset County is a remarkable one. Among those on it are Ex-Senator Thompson, Alex. W. Mack, the millionaire mill owner; Director William J. Logan, of the Board of Freeholders; Ex-Sheriff George A. Bell, Charles F. Behring, Freeholder Augustus Mobus, Dr. John D. TenEyck, Ex-Freeholder Eugene V. Cruser and Ex-Freeholder Robert Zerigebel.

In the absence of Justice Garretson, who will be away during the whole term, the Supreme and Circuit causes have been referred to Judge Schenck for trial.

Before the argument on the liquor dealer's side was heard the court took a little fling at the saloons. Nelson Dungan objected to a hearing of Mr. Reed's remarks unless the dealers' side was presented. The court replied that there was no other side; a man applying for a license has no more to say than a man going to be hanged. The court hinted that if Mr. Dungan didn't wish to hear Mr. Reed's argument he was free to leave the room.

BURGLAR AT WORK AGAIN IN DUNELLEN

Marauder Enters Residences of Howard Giles and Lloyd Nelson.

HE TAKES TO FLIGHT

MAN GETS NOTHING AT EITHER PLACE EXCEPT TROUBLE.

Caught in the Act at Mr. Giles' Home—Boarder Scares Him Off at Mr. Nelson's House.

Two attempts at burglary were made in Dunellen, supposedly by the same man, at an early hour yesterday morning. He was savvy and quick; but all he got for his trouble was two scares and as many hard runs to escape.

His first attempt was made at the home of Howard Giles, on Grove street. Mrs. Giles was awakened by the burglar's movements and aroused her husband and son, William. Mr. Giles and his son slipped downstairs and caught the burglar in the act of filling his pockets with silverware.

They were armed and ready to shoot, but before there was a chance for gunplay the thief took alarm and jumped for a window.

It was closed and locked, but the burglar went through it without pausing. Most of the sash went with him, but he escaped injury and fled into safety in the darkness before Giles and his son could reach him or get their guns going.

A little while after a boarder at the home of Lloyd Nelson, of Prospect avenue, heard the prowering burglar at work in a lower room. Her alarm scared him into flight again before he had secured any loot.

The second failure evidently disconcerted the raider, for nothing more was heard of him in the borough. While only one man was seen, it is presumed he had a confederate on guard outside the houses. There is a strong suspicion in the borough that the burglaries, like most of the others that have taken place in Dunellen during the past year, was the work of some local or nearby resident.

Miss Estelle Maag, of Jackson avenue, entertained a number of friends last night at a pit party. The play was greatly enjoyed and the affair passed off delightfully. Refreshments were served.

ITS BASEBALL SEASON COMMENCES APRIL 30

Scotch Plains Makes Arrangements to Start Its Schedule With a Game Next Week.

LINEUP ANNOUNCEMENT

JIMMIE MONTROSS TO PITCH IN ALL LIKLIHOOD.

Ed. Hand to Manage the Team—Baseball Committee Consists of Hand, Haskard and Jahn—Bitter Feeling Against Johnson.

After juggling with the baseball question for several months, the local fans have decided that Scotch Plains will have a baseball team to represent the village on the diamond this year and there is joy once more among the rooters and lovers of the National game.

On Monday night it was practically decided to get into the game once more. The decision was made final yesterday. So the rooters are once again in their element and happy. Edward L. Hand will manage the players and arrange the schedule of games. Arthur Haskard, who has guarded the strong box of the treasury so successfully in the past, will not as secretary and treasurer. The baseball committee will consist of Manager Hand, Secretary Haskard and Philip Jahn. While it is not positively decided yet, the club expects to open the season Saturday, April 30, with the Newark Field Club.

The lineup will find many of last year's team wearing the local colors again, as Manager Johnston has already signed several of them. The personnal of the team will probably be: Allen, catcher; Davis or "Smiling" Jimmy Montross, pitcher; Moore or Baldwin, 1b; Enright, 2b; Crusius, ss; Williams, 3b; Conley, lf; Taylor, cf. Right field position will be filled later.

If the club meets with the support it has in the past the club will no doubt strengthen up the weak spots in the team as fast as they develope. This has been the custom in the past and the lovers of the game will probably find Scotch Plains holding its own with the other teams before the real baseball boom is started.

The election of George H. Johnston as a member of the Alls Club and his appointment as one of the managers of the baseball committee, has led the Scotch Plains baseball cranks to believe that they have been made the victims of a double cross deal between Plainfield and Westfield. Some of the more rabid rooters have claimed so for several months past and now even more conservative ones are beginning to admit it.

Manager Johnston at first declined to act in his official capacity, unless he was assured of assistance by some*one who would arrange the schedule.* This was done and Edward L. Hand was made assistant manager. Then the cry was made that players had doubled on their last season's figured and finally three weeks ago the club held a meeting and decided not to enter the game this year. This decision came as a bomb-shell to the 'Plains' fans, but it did not seem to surprise certain other people. Since the last meeting the lovers of the National game have been figuring and have come to this conclusion:

Scotch Plains has had a winning team for several years past and money has been made. In this respect the team from the 'Plains has been a menace to the treasury of both the Plainfield and Westfield clubs. The grounds have been more easily reached than either those in other nearby towns, this being greatly in favor of the team down the road. The "trust" seeing the danger which faced it for the present season, probably decided upon a little game of "shut out" and surely everything points that way, according to the people at the 'Plains.

Manager Denman, it is said, asked the Alls Club management to agree not to play the coming season on the Scotch Plains grounds. It is also alleged that he told certain persons to boom George Johnston for manager of the Alls Club team, as it was a sure thing. The final brick was no doubt laid when the former manager of the 'Plains aggregation became a member of the Alls Club. The rooters in the little town down the road claim that the hand has not been played out yet and the chances are Scotch Plains will be represented on the diamond this year with a strong team as it is possible to get together.

Y. M. C. A.'S W. A. PLANS

SCHEME TO HOLD ENTERTAINMENT TO REPLENISH TREASURY.

To make arrangements for an entertainment to be held May 17, a special meeing of the executive board of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held yesterday afternoon in the association rooms. The idea of the entertainment will be to replenish the treasury of the auxiliary and enable it to continue its good work in behalf of the association. It is likely to be in the nature of a supper. The social committee, of which Mrs. L. M. French, is chairman was left in charge.

Definite arrangements were made for the banquet to be given the members of the boys' department Tuesday, April 26. About 140 will be seated at the tables to be placed in the gymnasium. The banquet is given the boys by the association in general with the Auxiliary in special charge.

A SOCIAL OF MEASURE

"BROWNIE BAND" ENTERTAINS AT MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

The "Brownie Band," an organization of young men from the High *School under the leadership of Ches*ter Briggs, assisted last night in making the measuring social at Monroe Avenue church a success. The social was held under the auspices of the Sunday-school and the members and friends turned out in large numbers.

An amusing and profitable feature of the affair was the fact that each person paid an admission fee in accordance with their height. The charge was three cents a foot and is estimated that each person paid on an average of about fifteen cents, while a few extra tall ones had to give up additional pennies to fill during.

The entertainment given by the "Brownie Band" consisted of selections on the mandolin and banjo, while in addition a collection of fresh jokes were presented to the enjoyment of all. The band practically furnished all of the entertainment, after which refreshments were served. The committee in charge was composed of Blanchard Randolph, Mrs. Pierson, Miss Georgia Beekman and Miss Ella Beekman.

MISS M. E. F. RANDOLPH DEAD

IN HER SEVENTIETH YEAR SHE SUCCUMBS TO COMPLICATIONS.

Miss Mary E. F. Randolph, aged sixty-nine years, died yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Randolph, of Myrtle avenue, with whom she had lived for many years. She had been ill for a month with a complication of diseases.

Miss Randolph was the daughter of the late Edward F. Randolph, who resided many years in West Second street. She was a member of the First Baptist church. One brother, Sylvester F. Randolph, of West Eighth street, and a niece, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, survive her.

The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS.

Casts for Two Plays to be Given by School Boys.

All arrangements have been made by the members of the junior class of the North Plainfield High School for their approaching amateur theatricals. Two plays will be presented on April 22, in the main room of the Somerset street school.

The casts have been filled as follows: "Freezing a Mother-in-law," Carl Steiner, Marshall Ward, Otto Mueck, Agnes Bailey, Gertrude Townley. "That Rascal Pat," Clarence Hand, Frank Webster, Laurie Milne, Sadie Funnian, Mary Robley.

The amateurs have been carefully drilled and a highly successful production is expected.

Minstrel Man Leaves.

Samuel Johnson, who made so much of a hit as the Hope minstrel show in Reform Hall last night, has left for New York to take a part in Haverley's minstrels next week. Before leaving town he participated in a luncheon at Timbo's restaurant with the rest of the members of the troupe.

SCARCITY OF COAL IN THE LOCAL YARDS

Small Supply on Hand Due to a Scheme to Raise the Prices.

CAN'T FILL THE ORDERS

PLAINFIELD DEALERS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR CONDITION.

The Present Rate of $6 May be Increased Soon—The Operators' Excuse for Delaying Shipments.

Scarcity of coal among the local dealers is the cause for considerable anxiety. For several weeks past they have failed to get their usual supply and in consequence there is a shortage in nearly every yard in town. One large dealer has not received certain sizes of coal since the first of April, while the other sizes have been running low.

Notwithstanding the shortage there has been no disposition on the part of the local dealers to advance the price of anthracite. It is still selling for $6 a ton, the price quoted April 1. Next month, according to custom, the price will gradually advance at the rate of ten cents per ton per month, until the past winter price of $6.50 is reached.

There have been many opinions offered regarding the scarcity of coal, the most likely being that the operators are withholding the supply until the price returns to $6.50 per ton. In case the operators do this it will not give the local dealers any chance to place the next winter supply during the summer months. One of the line agents in town today made the statement that the operators have booked more orders than they can fill during April, in fact it is likely to take them the best part of two months to deliver the stock thus far ordered.

There is not a local dealer who has not received during the past few days any number of orders for domestic size coal and they are having considerable trouble in their deliveries.

The scheme of holding back the supply until the prices advance is a new one and it places the local dealers in a troublesome position. If it is adhered to it will not give them any chance of making a little extra profit, which is usually the case in the summer time. The line agents are doing their best to hurry the coal along, but are free to admit that the high powers hold the key to the situation and un*less they want to send the coal out* they are powerless to do anything.

SEEKS VINDICATION.

Lincoln Man Arrested on Criminal Charge to Take Action.

Criminal action instituted by L. D. Pond & Company, of Newark, against Edward E. Palmer, of Lincoln, has been discontinued. Palmer was arrested by a Newark detective a few weeks ago, charged with obtaining goods under false pretences. He purchased a watch from the company on the installment plan, the company alleging that he gave the wrong address for delivery. Palmer claims that the watch was not as represented and that he made proper offers for its return. He has placed his case in the hands of his attorney, C. M. Dolliver, Esq., of this city, with instructions to take such legal action as the case merits.

Coach Young's Success.

While Director Edward Young is uniformly successful in coaching plays, he is best in preparing Shakespearean productions. He has given much careful thought to "The Taming of the Shrew" and the charity performance of that Shakespearean comedy at the Casino May 5 and 7 will be prepared with more than the usual care and elaborateness.

NERVY LITTLE FELLOW.

Gen. Huertas, Commander in Chief of Panama's Army, Has Creditable Military Record.

Gen. Esteban Huertas, commander in chief of the Panama forces, is a gallant little fighter who entered the service as a bugle boy when he was only nine years of age. He was such a good bugler that there was great rivalry among the officers to obtain his services. When he was 12 years old he was spirited away from the command with which he was serving at the time and brought to Panama, in order to prevent his being identified and returned to his former place, his name was changed. He has seen much service. He was in the trenches during the whole of the great battle known as the "seven-day fight" in Panama three years ago. Under his leadership his troops fought desperately, and at the conclusion of the struggle there was a pile of 400 dead men in front of them. Gen. Huertas has a great reputation as a strategist. Once he was given a detail of 60 men and ordered to capture a battery of five pieces, which was located near the sea shore. He took five men and made a cautious detour to the rear of the position he wished to take. Then his 55 men landed in a boat. Without sight of the defenders of the battery. As soon as the enemy got busy in front he pounced upon them from the rear with his little squad, and got their guns without the loss of a man.

His latest exploit was the capture of his two superior officers during "the bloodless revolution." He agreed to assist the secession movement, and although the time had been set for the outbreak, he had not told his officers or his men. It seems Colombia got wind that trouble was brewing on the isthmus, and quietly sent out forces to put down the movement. Two superior officers walked into the barracks one afternoon and took Huertas unawares. None of his subordinates happened to be in the room when they walked in. One of them said: "Are you aware, sir, that a rebellion is about to break out here?" He replied that he knew it. "Are you ready to resist it?" He told them he was to his last man. "Loose there," he said, pointing out the window, "see those guns trained on the street, and I will show you how well drilled are my men." He walked to the door, gave an order, and in a moment a detail of 30 men filed into the room. He ordered his two superior officers arrested, and sent word to the rebels to come after their prisoners. It was a nervy trick and might easily have cost him his neck. Gen. Huertas has but one hand, having lost the other in battle. He is hardly five feet tall and weighs only 107 pounds. He is very gallant and is the lion of the hour in Panama.

steam and street railways. He was born in Perry county, Ohio, Sept. 26, 1841, went to Missouri in childhood and there was graduated from the state university in 1860. He was admitted to the bar in 1863, but went to New Mexico, where he became a member of the legislature, and was subsequently attorney general of the territory and United States district attorney. He was delegate in congress, 1873-77. Then he moved to West Virginia, and has since been prominent in traction, gas and mining corporations. Senator Elkins was secretary of war from 1891 to 1895.

RAYNER FOR SENATE

FAMOUS BALTIMORE LAWYER TO SUCCEED LOUIS E. M'COMAS.

Gained National Fame by His Magnificent Defense of Admiral Schley—Condensed Sketch of His Career.

The career of Mr. Isidor Rayner—scholar, statesman, orator and lawyer, delegate, state senator, congressman, attorney general and United States senator—has been a notably brilliant one from boyhood.

He was born in Baltimore April 11, 1850. His father was a learned gentleman, distinguished for business sagacity and success, as well as for his generous philanthropy and public spirit. His mother was a woman of excellent discretion, generally beloved for the sterling virtues of her character and for the kindness and benevolence of her life.

His early education was probably received at the hands of his father. Until he was 15 years of age he attended a private school. He was devoted to literature and declamation.

At 15 years of age Isidor Rayner entered the University of Virginia. There he promptly distinguished himself in his studies and was popular with the faculty and students. His interest in letters and oratory increased, and he became a leading figure in the Jefferson society, the membership of which embraced Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia; John S. Wise, now of New York; the late Henry W. Grady, of Georgia, and Former United States Senator Charles J. Faulkner, of West Virginia. From among men of this sort the brilliant Baltimorean was chosen, in 1868, as anniversary orator of the Jefferson society. The subject of his oration upon this occasion showed the bent of his sympathies. It was "Civil and Religious Liberty."

After pursuing his academic and legal studies at the university, he returned to Baltimore and sought admission to its bar. He continued his legal studies for a brief period in the law office of Brown & Brune, and in due course was admitted to practice.

Mr. Rayner is a thorough and finished student of his profession. He is deeply learned in the common law and in the decisions of the courts of Maryland and of the United States. He is a fine special pleader, and has also a remarkable memory for cases, and from the thirtieth to the last volume of the Maryland reports there is not a case which Mr. Rayner has not read. At the trial table he shines most brilliantly. His speeches in court are clear, direct, forcible and marked by eloquence not easy to be equaled.

(Recently Elected to the United States Senate from Maryland.)

Mr. Rayner's method of preparing his more important legal arguments may best be illustrated by Everett's description of Mr. Webster's state of mind as he "sat an hour and a half with" him "the evening before" the reply to Hayne. "The battle had been fought and won within, upon the broad field of his own capacious mind; for it was Mr. Webster's habit first to state to himself his opponent's argument in its utmost strength, and having overthrown it in that form, he feared the efforts of no other antagonist."

It was Mr. Rayner's defense of Admiral Schley that caused a national wave of commendation. The inquiry is well remembered.

The sudden death of Judge Jere M. Wilson, senior counsel for Admiral Schley, threw upon the Baltimore advocate the entire burden of the case. He was not an admiralty lawyer, but when the crucial moment came he was saturated with his subject. Laying down his copy of the specifications, he talked with alluring facility in pleasant tones, until, becoming warmed up with earnestness, he sweeping entangling webs, scoffed at tricky memories, lashed as with "scorpion whips" the alleged traducers of the man whose fame rang around the world.

It was a triumph worthy of the forum. From every part of the union came congratulations to the orator. His biography was spread over the country by the newspapers. His picture was besought by women and men. His speech in pamphlet form was demanded of the public printers by admirers miles and miles away from the scene of its delivery, where interest ordinarily would seem slight. But with becoming modesty he said: "The occasion made the speech, not the speech the occasion."

Soldier Lover in Trouble.

Otto Ruehler, a brave cuirassier in the kaiser's army, has recently served 13 days in jail because he loved his major's cook. Otto's courting was done in the major's kitchen, where, between kisses, he fed himself generously with the rich viands intended for the major's own dinner table. The major discovered him and a court-martial followed.

HAS PROUD RECORD.

Senator Allison of Iowa Has Been a Member of the "Upper House" for Thirty Years.

Senator Allison entered the senate in 1873, and there is now, says the Washington Post, no one member of that body who has served continuously as he has done. Stewart, of Nevada, was a member, and John H. Mitchell, of Oregon, took his seat at the same time. Stewart was out 12 years and Mitchell ten years. John P. Jones, of Nevada, took his seat at the same time, but closed 30 years of service last March. There were some interesting figures in the senate when Allison took his seat there for the first time. From the south there was quite an array of the so-called carpet bag senators. Among the well-known personages the new Iowa man met on the floor 30 years ago were Powell Clayton, now ambassador to Mexico, and Stephen W. Dorsey, Arkansas; John B. Gordon, Georgia; John A. Logan and Richard J. Oglesby, Illinois; Oliver P. Morton, Indiana; John J. Ingalls, Kansas; Hannibal Hamlin and Lot M. Morrill, Maine; George S. Boutwell, Charles Sumner and William D. Washburn, Massachusetts; Zach Chandler and Thomas W. Perry, Michigan; Alexander Ramsey and William Windom, Minnesota; Gilbert A. Pierce, Montana; Carl Schurz, Missouri; Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, New Jersey; Roscoe Conkling, New York; Matt W. Ransom, North Carolina; John Sherman and Allen G. Thurman, Ohio; Simon Cameron, Pennsylvania; William B. Brownlow, Tennessee; James W. Flanagan, Texas; George F. Edmunds and Justin S. Morrill, Vermont; Henry J. Davis, West Virginia; Matthew H. Carpenter, Wisconsin.

It is quite a distinction to be the sole survivor of an entire membership of the senate. While it is true that there are two men members now who were there 30 years ago, Senator Allison has seen them go and their successors take their seats and again witnessed their return. He is the one man who has been a member and witnessed a complete change in the senate, himself alone excepted.

CLASSIC MEMORIAL.

Unique Structure to Be Erected in Memory of Illinois Soldiers Who Fought at Vicksburg.

erva at Rome, which was one of the finest of the ancient world. It will be about 48 feet in diameter and 58 feet high, and will be lighted from the top only. It will be decorated with historic figures, one of which will represent the surrender of Vicksburg by Pemberton to Gen. Grant. On bronze panels will be the names of Illinois soldiers, from colonels down, who took part in the campaign, with the branch of the army to which they belonged.

Death Caused by a Pin.

Homer N. Hyde, of Kansas City, died in Colorado Springs from the effects of swallowing a pin a year ago. He suffered no pain from the pin until recently, when the symptoms were mistaken for those of appendicitis. In the operation that followed the pin was found lodged in the intestines, near the vermiform appendix. It was rusty, and the stomach was inflamed, and bore evidence of having been punctured in various places. The pin was removed. Death resulted from the condition of the stomach.

PORTO RICANS GLAD.

PLEASED WITH ACTION SEATING DEGETAU AS DELEGATE.

Rank and File of People Feel That They Now Have a Part in Shaping Legislation Needed for the Island.

Every member of the house of representatives in Washington who voted for the resolution to seat Hon. Frederico Degetau, resident commissioner of Porto Rico, as a territorial delegate would feel the consciousness of a good deed well done if he could mingle just now with the natives and Americans in the island and hear the favorable comments. In fact, there are no opinions adverse to the propriety or justice of the action, which is looked upon as thoroughly American in spirit.

Just at this time some such expression of interest by congress was needed to allay native fears and offset anti-administration tirades to the effect that the Washington politicians never give a thought to the needs of Porto Rico or encourage the island to move in the direction of territorial rights and ultimate statehood. Now there is rejoicing throughout the island and native hopes for a bright future have been revived. In brief, the political effect of seating Mr. Degetau and his successors has been immediate, beneficial and far-reaching.

Gov. Hunt, who voices the sentiment of all the administration leaders of Porto Rico, said: "I am very much gratified by the action of the house of representatives. The interests of the million souls within the island of Porto Rico can be much more directly presented to congress by a commissioner with power to introduce bills and speak than by one whose voice could only be heard in committees.

"The island is entitled to federal consideration. Its harbors need dredging. Its postal facilities need extension. Its agricultural experiment stations need special consideration. Its fortifications need repair and its educational requirements ought to have congressional aid if possible. Having no insular bureau charged with the special duty of looking after these and like things in Washington, it should be helpful to feel that they can be laid before congress by a representative elected by Porto Ricans themselves."

Hon. Frederic Degetau, who has held the office of resident commissioner in Washington from Porto Rico to the United States, belongs to the local republican party. He is paid $5,000 a year from insular funds, and is serving his second biennial term, which will expire on December 31 next. His successor will be elected by popular vote in the island next November, and, unless all present signs fail, will be a republican. He was born at Ponce, Porto Rico, and was graduated as a bachelor of science and arts at Barcelona, Spain, and as a bachelor of laws at Madrid. He was one of the four commissioners sent by Porto Rico to ask Spain for autonomy, and the district of Ponce elected him a deputy to the Spanish cortes of 1898. Upon American occupation Gen. Henry appointed him secretary of the interior of the first American cabinet formed in Porto Rico. Later he was a member of the insular board of charities, first vice president of the municipal council of San Juan and president of the board of education of the capital. He was first elected resident commissioner on November 8, 1900, by 58,515 votes against but 148 cast for his federal opponent, the federals having generally refused to vote. In November, 1902, Mr. Degetau was reelected by more than 40,000 majority, carrying five of the seven election districts of the island. He was admitted to practice in the supreme court of the United States on April 30, 1901, and is an able lawyer.

The local republican party is, of course, highly elated by the seating of Mr. Degetau. Dr. Jose Brioso and Mayor Robert R. Todd, of San Juan, who recently returned to Porto Rico after conferring with President Roosevelt, Senators Hanna and Foraker and others concerning the admission of six delegates of the party to the republican national convention, declares confidence that the delegates will be admitted. If they are they will all vote for Roosevelt's nomination.

Live on Small Incomes.

The statistics committee of the province of Voronezh, Russia, a fairly representative district, shows that the average farmer's family consists of eight persons; that their gross annual revenue is $105 in money and $107 in farm products. They spend for taxes and rent $48.90; for clothing $3.48; for tea and sugar, $1.96; for furniture, $1.64; for salt, $1.20; for kerosene, 88 cents; for soap, 39 cents; for "articles of personal comfort," four cents.

OUR YOUNGEST ADMIRAL.

Unique Distinction Held by Chief of Naval Bureau of Construction and Repair.

In view of the fact that the United States proposes to spend millions of dollars annually on new ships for her navy, Chief Constructor Washington L. Capps becomes an important personage. He is a graduate of the naval academy of the class of 1884, after which he served for several years as aide to Rear Admirals Luce and Jouett of the North Atlantic fleet. Later he was sent to the University of Glasgow Scotland, where he took a course in naval architecture. In 1889 he was assigned to temporary duty in the bureau of construction and repair at Washington thence for a short period to the Cramp shipyards, in this city; to New York, and in 1892 was ordered to duty in the bureau where he is now rendering efficient service.

Mr. Capps is less than 40 years old and is the youngest naval officer who has attained the rank of rear admiral, which he will hold for his four years' term as head of the construction department of the navy. His work in the navy has been regarded as brilliant and won him the flattering assignment of superintending constructor of the 16,000-ton battleship Connecticut, which is being rapidly completed at the Brooklyn navy yard.

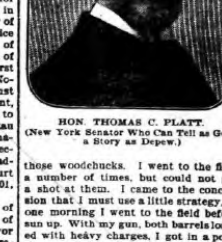
In addition to the various important technical boards upon which Mr. Capps Griscom and Rear Admiral (then naval constructor) Bowles in 1893 in the organization of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers in 1893, and was its first secretary, being succeeded in the office of secretary by Naval Constructor Bowles, and relieving that officer upon the latter's promotion to the grade of chief constructor and chief of the bureau of construction and repair.

PLATT'S WOODCHUCK.

New York Senator, When an Ambitious Boy, Killed Fourteen of Them with One Charge.

Some one asked Senator Platt to repeat Fay Templeton's word puzzle, "How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck would chuck wood. A woodchuck would chuck all the wood he could chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood." The senator did so, and then he ventured the opinion that he knew more about woodchucks than Fay Templeton or anyone in New York.

"When I was a boy," said the senator to a New York Press reporter, "my uncle had a fine field of clover, and he discovered that woodchucks were making sad havoc with it. On the field was a log and near that log the destruction was the greatest. My uncle told me I must kill



HON. THOMAS C. PLATT.
(New York Senator Who Can Tell as Good a Story as Depew.)

those woodchucks. I went to the field a number of times, but could not get a shot at them. I came to the conclusion that I must use a little strategy, so one morning I went to the field before sun up. With my gun, both barrels loaded with heavy charges, I got in a position where I could make a range of the log lengthwise. I waited to get good light the woodchucks gathered for their morning frolic. They mounted the log, sat up and looked around to see that there was nothing to disturb them. When I thought the log was nearly covered with them I pulled both barrels at once. The charge nearly knocked me over. When I recovered I went to the log and picked up 14 dead woodchucks, and that wasn't any great log for woodchucks, either."

Removal of the Stomach.

The operation of removing the stomach has now been successfully performed over 20 times. The stomach really plays only a small part in the complex act of digestion, its principal use being that of a reservoir. Hence it is that without this organ meals have to be taken inconveniently often and unusually small.

ALONE WITH NATURE

NORTHERN MAN'S IMPRESSIONS OF FLORIDA EVERGLADES.

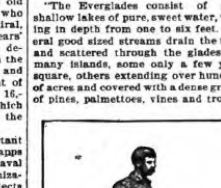
Striking Characteristics of This Great Stretch of Land and Water—Inhabited by a Few Seminole Indians.

"Mile after mile of wavy green grass through which can be seen the glint of clear water, stretching east, west, north and south until bounded by the horizon; here and there in the wide expanse a bunch of trees or foliage rising island-like out of the emerald sea, waterways of varying widths and depths penetrating in every direction; a silence unbroken save by the hum of insects, the rush of some wild animal through the grass or the stealthy approach of an Indian in his canoe—thus are the Florida Everglades, through some parts of which a white man has never passed."

In such graphic words, says the New York Tribune, Nelson Morris, a Plainfield (N. J.) man, who spent two weeks this winter in this "wilderness of America," visiting a friend owning a truck farm just within the Everglades, described this tract of land and water covering the greater part of the peninsula.

"These thousands of acres have lain dormant from time immemorial, and for the most part are given over to wild animals and wild men," he continued. "There are few settlements on the edges, but much of the tract has been deemed impenetrable, owing to the character of the morass and the impassable holes and sinks that break the surface, and is as much unknown to civilization as the heart of Africa. Settlers along the eastern edge know absolutely nothing about what lies ten miles inland, and will not until the time comes when these useless acres will be needed by American farmers, and the task of draining the marshland will be begun in earnest.

"The Everglades consist of great shallow lakes of pure, sweet water, varying in depth from one to six feet. Several good sized streams drain the tract, and scattered through the glades are many islands, some only a few yards square, others extending over hundreds of acres and covered with a dense growth of pines, palmettoes, vines and tropical



ALONE IN THE EVERGLADES.
(Game Is Plentiful, But It Is a Lonely Sort of Sport.)

trees. From the bottom of the lakes grow tall grasses that present a beautiful appearance when viewed from a distance.

"The word swamp as generally understood has no application to the Everglades, for they abound in pure water which is constantly moving in one direction or another, depending upon the topography of the country. The air is wholesome, pure, and free from disease germs, and government statistics show that fevers and epidemic diseases are almost unknown. There are not even mosquitoes in the Everglades, for no stagnant pools exist in which the larvae can thrive.

"The grass is the greatest impediment to progress through the Everglades, three kinds of it being encountered. There is the matted, half floating grass, which is found where the water is shallow. The canoeist has some trouble in pushing through it at times, but ordinarily it is not noticed. Another kind is the round grass, which is abundant on the eastern edge, and, lastly, there is the saw grass, which is the terror of all who attempt to penetrate these tracts.

"The few Seminole Indians who people the Everglades avoid intercourse with the white man as much as possible. They have shown their wisdom by refusing to act as guides for parties of tourists anxious to penetrate the glades, for should they do so their secret trails would become known, and the quiet lives they live in these fastnesses would be liable to interruption. If a white man gets lost in the glades an Indian may consent to guide him out, but never in. They have trails through the glades which they follow as unerringly as a New Yorker walks from the Battery to Central park.

"The only kind of a craft that can be used with any success in the Everglades is an Indian canoe. These are hollowed out of cypress logs and weigh 200 or 300 pounds. They are narrow for their length, sharp on the waterline forward, but above they flare out suddenly into a blunt bow. They are also narrow at the stern, where they finish in an overhang, upon which is built a platform or slight elevation, where the canoeist stands and poles the craft along. Paddles are unknown in the Everglades, the natives being sent through the water by means of long poles."

HUMORS HIS PEOPLE.

President Marroquin of Colombia Does Not Want War Although He Is Talking Trouble.

That the Colombian government is humoring the warlike sentiment of the people by making pretense of an impending struggle is not a mere matter of rumor. The Bogota newspapers have published a long appeal from President Marroquin to the public for liberal contributions toward the preparation of the army for the coming war. It was reported in January that the Colombian government had bought an American steamer or two, and was negotiating for others at New Orleans and San Francisco—presumably intending to use them for purposes of transport. The action of the United States at the present time must be limited to guarding the railroad and preventing the landing of troops near either terminus of the line. Colombia's moving of soldiers and supplies to portions of her own territory, whether islands or mainland, in the vicinity of Panama would meet with no interference from our government. Thus, some weeks ago the Colombians landed a considerable number of troops on the island known as Old Providence without opposition from our navy. The people of that island have since petitioned the republic of Panama to annex them, but their request has been denied, on the ground that Panama has no means for protecting them in an emergency. Several hundred Colombian troops, early in January, also were landed on St. Andrews' Island, which, although well to the northward and lying off the coast of Nicaragua, like Providence island, happens to belong to Colombia. This island, also, seeks annexation to Panama.

(Chief Executive of the United States of Colombia.)

HEAVY FIGHTING SHIPS.

Admiral Dewey Scores Victory Over Secretary Moody Before Congressional Committee.

Admiral Dewey's suggestions in favor of heavy fighting ships for the navy prevailed with the house committee on naval affairs over the recommendation of the general board, submitted by Secretary Moody. The naval appropriation bill was completed by the committee after a hearing granted Admiral Dewey. It carries an aggregate appropriation of $85,000,000. The ships authorized are one battleship, two armored cruisers, three scout cruisers and two squadron colliers. The appropriation of $500,000 made last year for two submarine boats was reappropriated, the boats to be purchased in the discretion of the secretary of the navy. This building programme gives a total of 44,000 tons of heavy fighting ships, as compared with 62,000 last year. The heavy construction provided will cost $25,750,000, while the lighter construction will bring the cost of the building programme up to $28,000,000. Provision was made for an armor plate factory to cost $4,000,000, which the secretary of the navy is authorized to construct in case he cannot secure armor from private bidders at a reasonable price.

THE NEW WOMAN

Suffrage in Australia

A LADY who lives and votes and has her being in Australia, where her sex has full suffrage, lately visited America and gave some addresses. In a speech in Boston she said, "We have found it is better to fence the precipice at the top than to wait at the bottom with an ambulance." So far as working real reforms, municipal and otherwise, the woman who cannot vote can now only wait at the bottom of the precipice with an ambulance, no matter how capable and public spirited she is. All the world lets her take care of the sick and poor. But if she had a vote she could do much to prevent sickness, crime and poverty. Meantime here are some of the things the ballot has done for the feminine sex in Australia: It has established a new department of government, the children's council, which sees that in all court cases children get justice and kindness and a fair chance; it has abolished child labor altogether; in the factories the sanitary conditions have been greatly improved, and all the employees get a Saturday half holiday; in the postoffice department, where women clerks received $300 a year before they had a vote, they now get $550; before women voted women teachers in the public schools got less pay than men for the same work, while now the salaries are the same to both for the like grade of work. Since women have had the ballot the men of Australia have discovered that the world is for woman, too, and that women are somebody as well as themselves. Meantime, while in monarchical Australia women have all their rights as human beings, in the so called free republic of the United States women still wait with an ambulance at the bottom of the precipice everywhere except in four states.

When the creative power has made a chunk of putty into the shape of a man or woman and breathed the breath of life into it, what are you going to do about it? What can it ever be but a chunk of putty still?

Be good, sweet man, and let who will be clever.

It is a feather in the cap of American women that the first portrait the dowager empress of China ever permitted an artist to print of her is the work of an American girl, Miss Kate Carl. Miss Carl lived for a time in Tai An's palace at Peking, and Tai An, dressed in her robes of state, gave sittings to the young white woman. The portrait will be on exhibition at the St. Louis fair.

About that "beauty luncheon" in Chicago over which so many newspaper people have sharpened their wits—it is a fine idea, really. We ought to have such luncheons oftener. Everything that tends to make woman care less for mere clothes for the body and more for the perfection and ideal beauty of the body itself ought to be fostered and encouraged.

It rests almost wholly with a woman herself whether she shall get too old for money earning occupations. If she controls her temper and her silly nerves and takes care of her body and, above all, never slumps down and quits, she can continue to work as long as she needs to. Just simply let her not give up or heed the foolish suggestions that she is "too old" to do this or that. A woman can keep young by intelligence and will power.

Be careful what you write in letters. Speak what you please, but what is written is written. It stands for or against you in black and white.

Can you sharpen a lead pencil or a penknife properly? If you can't, then learn. Woman will never be man's equal till she can sharpen a lead pencil and a penknife.

Grit and perseverance conquer every time.

Why is it that wealthy women always are so philanthropically and patronizingly anxious to have poor girls learn to be cooks and dressmakers and laundresses?

Some women writers and speakers appear to think housework is perfectly glorious—for other women to do.

A statistician has found out that this country contains nearly three times as many widows as widowers. Is this because the widows cannot get husbands or because they don't want them?

If a fire breaks out around where you are, don't faint, have hysterics, jump out of a fourth story window or otherwise make an idiot of yourself. Just keep your head on and try to be of some use.

The silly season has already begun. That perhaps is the reason for an English woman's writing in a silly little magazine an alleged explanation of why women like "masterful men." Women do not like "masterful men" in the domestic sphere, not even in England. A woman admires a man who can master fate, circumstance, misfortune or a unruly horse, but when it comes to trying his masterfulness on her—not much! A woman is not a slave or a horse or a circumstance.

ETIQUETTE FOR A WIDOW.

What She May and What She Should Not Do.

The period of mourning for a widow is much shortened nowadays, especially in this country and in England. In France, the land of ceremony, the old fashioned rule is still strictly in force, and the widow is not supposed to go into society within a year and nine months or two years after the death of her husband.

The first step toward re-entering society is made by returning calls received. She has of course previously sent cards of thanks for kind inquiries and sympathy. The sending of the cards is usually done a fortnight or three weeks after the death, and the calls are returned two months afterward. After three months a widow commences to go out a little—in the most quiet way, of course. She accepts invitations to afternoon at homes, and after another month she may go to quiet dinners at the houses of intimate friends. These dinners are not formal, and only relatives and friends are present, not strangers. She may also after four months go to matinees and concerts.

A widow is not supposed to act as hostess until after four months at least and then only to invite intimate friends to dine with her quietly. Afternoon teas next follow, but it is not etiquette to give these under six months. At homes and evening receptions should not be given until after the lapse of a year, and a still longer time should precede elaborate evening affairs.

A widow, it goes without saying, should not accept an invitation to a dance until a period of at least a year has elapsed.

The remarriage of a widow should not take place before twelve months. By breaking this canon of good taste she provokes serious comment. A year and a half or two years is a much more decent interval.

A year is the standard time for heavy mourning. The mourning becomes lighter as the social duties are gradually resumed.

Woman's Record in Colorado.

Some time ago Mr. Shafroth of Colorado, who had been elected to congress, voluntarily resigned his seat when he found there had been fraudulent balloting for him. That was honest and admirable of him. But next thing some desperate antisuffragist, grasping at a straw, started out of his own head the story that it was the women of Colorado who had done the illegal voting. Well, here is the exact fact of the case. Note it: Women have been voting in Colorado for ten years. They vote, too, quite generally. In those ten years just one woman has been convicted of illegal voting. Now what has anybody to say?

PARIS FASHIONS.

Checked Taffetas Vie With Soft Materials—Louis XVI. Styles.

The pointed Marie Antoinette bands are now so elongated that the corsage itself is arranged into a deep point in the front. The Louis XVI. tendency is clearly visible in modes as well as in fabric, and the tints of pale blue, pink and yellow are the same as in this day.

Waistcoats of flowered material are to be seen on many of the more elaborate tailor mades.

The new coats are trimmed with flat silk braids and beautiful enamel buckles and buttons.

A great deal of black chantilly lace is being used over foundations of white, and it is held in at the waist with a deep pointed belt of satin.

AFTERNOON GOWN.

Black and white dresses are often relieved with a wide belt of pale blue and touches of the same color on the yoke.

Very fine soft cloths, voiles and woolens, which drape and fall well, adapt themselves to the full skirted styles which are now prevalent. The new soft taffetas, however, are gaining a foothold with Parisiennes. They come in tiny checks in lavender and white or pink and white, such as were worn forty or fifty years ago.

The long shouldered effect has come to stay, and nearly every garment of fashion suggests to us the 1830 period.

The picture shows a blue cloth dress trimmed with red embroidery and having undersleeves of red and blue mull.

SKIRTS WITHOUT TRAINS.

Tailor Mades For Street Wear—Short Coats the Vogue.

Silk tailor mades will be about the smartest thing this summer. They will appear principally in navy blue, black and gun metal gray. The jackets will hang loosely and be made up with flat folds simulating tucks. The skirts will just clear the ground and will be quite full, with a trimming of folds simulating tucks, as on the waist. With such a costume fancy buttons either of cut steel or of handsome enamel are used.

BLACK SILK COAT

and the waist and hat are prettiest of cream white or some other delicate color.

Coat and skirt costumes for street wear are much smarter if they clear the ground than if made with trains. This applies to costumes of silk or fine cloth as well as those of the rougher weaves. Afternoon dresses will soon be the only ones with trains, and so short waists and morning dresses are cut with their skirts clearing the ground.

We have at least reached the era of common sense. Pongee dyed in heliotrope, gun metal and brown will be very smart for little coat and skirt costumes worn over lace waists.

The short bolero or blouse will predominate, and this must be cut so as to hang loosely over a wide belt.

The picture shows a black silk coat made with ruffings both on the coat proper and on the undersleeves. The vest is of jetted cream lace.

MORE LOVE STORIES.

Married in Haste, Now Trying to Win Ma's Blessing.

Parental Forgiveness Is Sometimes Hard to Get After an Elopement—Told Mamma by Telephone—Long-Distance Courtship.

The parental blessing is an object much sought by certain victims of Cupid who have been beguiled into acting without maternal and paternal consent.

There are now crossing the Atlantic two persons who are sailing to France to obtain this last requisite to domestic happiness. They are Miss Clarissa McComb, of Larchmont, and Ferdinand Despecher, the New York and Paris banker.

Their marriage was a runaway match. It looks now as if more would be heard of it in a short time. The mother of the bridegroom threatened to disinherit him if he married against her wishes, and her wish was not that he should marry an American. She tried to prevent this particular wedding and so did the father.

The efforts of the parents were unsuccessful, and for that reason the bride and bridegroom are on their way to France to see if the parental forgiveness cannot be secured.

Despecher came to this country about six months ago with a delegation of French bankers who wanted to study the American financial methods. They returned some time ago. He had met Miss McComb at a summer party and told his friends that he wanted to stay here some time to finish up a few deals. One of the things he finished was his courtship.

He is a tall, handsome young man of fine education, and he won the consent of Miss McComb early in November. A short time later his mother and her father heard of the affair and became angry at their children for proposing to make such an alliance. Mrs. Despecher wrote threateningly to her son, and Mr. McComb took the first boat that left Paris, where he had been on business.

Two young people of Brooklyn have been hunting for the same article of parental forgiveness, with prospects of having it extended to them. Sterling Tomes, aged 18 years, and Miss Laura Williams, aged 17, a school girl, ran away to be married without taking the trouble to find out what their parents thought about the matter.

Miss Williams left home ostensibly to go to dancing school. That was the last time that Mrs. Williams saw Miss Laura Williams. The next morning the mother was called to the telephone and was told the startling news that it was her daughter at the other end of the wire, but that she was no longer Miss Laura Williams. It was Mrs. Sterling Tomes.

The two had slipped away to New Jersey, where they had been married.

In Fairfield, Ia., another boy and girl couple ran away for a wedding that they feared they could not have at home. Percy Lile, the son of a wealthy farmer near Libertyville, and Miss Ella Clemsby were the young people.

The son told his father that he intended to seek his fortune farther west, and the father generously provided him with $300 to use until he had started the said fortune on its way.

With this money the boy, who is only 18, carried out his matrimonial plans.

A romance that had its beginning in Philadelphia two years ago recently ended in Honolulu with the marriage of Dr. Ralph Gardiner Curtis and Miss Jane Mae Blair, both of whom are well known in that city Miss Blair is the daughter of Henry W. Blair, a prominent business man of Syracuse.

Much against the will of her parents Miss Blair deserted society in Syracuse and New York and went on the stage. It was while a show girl in "Miss Bob White," playing at the Chestnut street theater, Philadelphia, that she met Dr. Curtis. He pressed his suit and the inevitable result followed. A lovers' quarrel ensued and Dr. Curtis went to the Hawaiian islands, where he soon built up a lucrative practice. Miss Blair spent the last summer at Saratoga and Asbury Park, where she was a recognized belle, with many suitors for her hand.

Early in November, after a long silence, she received a letter from Dr. Curtis. It said:

"Let's forget our little quarrel. I love you more than ever. Won't you come and be my wife?"

A few letters passed between them, and then Miss Blair left New York alone and sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

Novelties in Parasols—Trimmings of Gold and Silver Braid.

Pastel shades are pretty trimmed with gold or silver galloon.

Many of the pretty new house frocks are trimmed with plaited muslin or chiffon and loops or buttons of gold braid.

Scarfs of embroidered chiffon will be used with thin summer gowns to protect the shoulders.

There is nothing very new in parasols. The return of the hat with a crown is probably responsible for the longer handles. Shaded parasols promise to be in vogue again. Checked taffeta parasols, blue and white, brown and white, black and white and red and white are ultra smart for morning wear. They are trimmed with borders composed of a narrow band of satin about a third of an inch wide.

WIDOW'S GOWN.

The handles are of finely polished wood carved quaintly to resemble flowers.

Black and white parasols are going to be a good deal used this summer, as always, and also coaching parasols of solid brown.

Our old friend the shirt waist has not deserted us this year. Whatever modistes may say, this dainty little piece of tucking and stitching will remain with us just as long as we continue to wear coat and skirt costumes. Of course the shirt waist has its place. A well dressed woman wears an entire gown for the theater or a reception, but for comfort and smartness on the street in summer or winter nothing can compare with the shirt waist worn with a neatly fitting tailor made. The new shirt waists are long on the shoulder and a trifle fuller in the lower part of the sleeves. Some of them, indeed, have a tight fitting under seam piece, into which is fulled the upper half from the elbow. Clusters of tucks are much used and also the flat box plaits carefully stitched.

The illustration shows a widow's gown of cashmere trimmed with crape.

FASHION NEWS.

Colors Now Being Worn in Paris. Quaint Trimmings For Dresses.

Hats of rose straw are among the spring novelties. These are trimmed with straw roses and loops of straw.

Blue is much worn from the darkest to the lightest shades. Pale green will become more and more popular as warmer days approach. Mauves and purples relieved with cream white are the fashion in crepe de chines and foulards. The darker grays in soft silks, relieved with cut steel buckles and buttons, promise to be even more the fashion than the lighter shades.

Some of the new light cloth gowns show old fashioned black velvet trimmings, and others have equally old fashioned decorations of kilted taffeta outlined with gold or silver thread and set into a floral design.

Gold and silver braid and buttons are to be seen on many costumes this season, both on dressy ones and on serges and cheviot. Chief among those seen recently was a pongee made with many tucks and a suspicion of oriental embroidery. The wide girdle was clasped with a wide gilt buckle, and the beautifully worked gold buttons appeared on the waist and sleeves.

The picture shows a crepe de chine waist trimmed with fagoting and heavy medallion lace.

WHAT IS WORN.

Blue and Brown Pailletted Evening Gowns—Odds and Ends of Dress.

Both brown and dark blue are being used for evening wear. The brown net is thickly sewed with shaded copper sequins, while the blue is similarly decorated with moonlight blue paillettes.

Tinted laces of all shades are prime favorites for evening gowns.

Cunning little cravats of satin folded around the neck and finishing in fringed ends are popular this spring.

Pelerine capes will be much worn. These are of plaited taffeta trimmed with taffeta of a lighter shade and chiffon ruffings.

Three-quarter coats of delicately tinted pongee and of white cloth are trimmed with fringe and handsome embroideries in self colorings.

The much shirred unlined dress of black china silk is among the useful and dainty summer toilets always worn by smart women.

Black petticoats of soft satin are dainty if thoroughly ruffled and edged with narrow black lace. They will also—and this is a consideration for the woman who has a meager purse—outlast at least three taffeta skirts.

The illustration shows a three-quarter coat of black cloth trimmed with panne, white cloth and gilt buttons.

UP TO DATE TRIMMINGS.

Cross Folds, Silk Braids, Narrow Frills and Shirrings All Popular.

Crossway folds are among the prominent features of dress. These are simulated tucks and are used on coats and skirts where the real tuck would be too clumsy.

Fine braids in all sorts of silky loosely woven patterns will be another feature of smart gowns and coats. Wheels of tubular braid are used varying in size from a quarter to a silver dollar. They are usually distributed at regular intervals around the hem of a skirt or the edge of a flounce and are repeated in corresponding style on the bolero or bodice.

Narrow frills must be taken into account also in enumerating the different trimmings. They add an ornate appearance to the simplest of gowns.

Bands of shirrings now attain the proportions of three or four inches in width, and in many cases they are edged on either side with wide irregular applications of lace.

The new coats as well as the gowns display rich undersleeves of lace and mull. The newest undersleeve is one composed of many tiny ruffings.

The new spring silk frocks are of taffeta and a soft, luminous weave of French silk. They require to be plaited, ganged or trimmed in some way to give them chic folds.

Fine black cloths always form a smart costume, and in the illustration you will see an example of this. Plain tucking figures largely on coat and skirt. The latter, by the way, is a very new model.

THE TRAINED NURSE

The Necessary Qualifications

THE profession of trained nurse is one about which girls and even women have plenty of illusions. The picturesque side of it appeals to them, and they see possibilities of romances and "interesting situations" not likely to occur in ordinary life.

"We have three kinds of applicants," said the principal of a large training school. "The young and pretty applicant wants to be a nurse because it appeals to her from the picturesque side, and she sees the possibilities of romance in it. Two months of good hard work usually cure her of that. Second, there is the woman who decides to take up nursing after the best years of her life have been spent in other unsuccessful pursuits and who thinks that by this means she can find an easy way to supplement her defective income. Third, the woman who feels really drawn to it, who is a ministering angel in a sickroom and who, like a Sister of Charity, wants to make it her life work. The last named is the only one who makes a good and useful nurse."

The life of a nurse is, for the three years of training at least, as prosaic as any other profession and certainly a great deal more restricted. First, there are two months of probation, during which she is not allowed to wear a cap and uniform, and she is carefully watched to see if she has the proper qualities to be a nurse. After these two months of probation she receives a cap and uniform, and she is detailed to do assistant ward work, which means that she is at the beck and call of the experienced nurse from morning till night. This continues for a whole year, at the end of which time she gets her first month's service in the operating room.

If the doctors find her services valuable in the operating room she is kept there for a couple of months at the beginning of her second year or maybe longer. It takes a strong constitution so stand the sights and, above all, the continuous and heavy smell of ether, which is warranted to take away what little appetite one has.

The second year is devoted to ward work, with the assistance of a first year nurse to do the running about and the drudgery.

The third year she is made head of a ward, and the last six months she devotes to private patients in the hospital.

Then there are extra courses which she will want to take at other hospitals. She will go for a few months to the large Maternity hospital to learn the thorough care of mothers and infants. Then will follow, if she wants to be thorough, a course in the hospital for contagious diseases—diphtheria, scarlet fever, etc.—so that by the time she has finished she is completely equipped for any emergency.

During all this time she has been getting her board and laundry free, plus the sum of $6 a month for the first year, $8 for the second and $12 for the third. Some hospitals give less, but this is the maximum. When she graduates she is given $100.

Private cases afterward bring her in $25 a week, plus her board and lodging, and from $30 to $35 for contagious cases.

Her hours are from 7 to 7, night or day. She must attend class three nights a week, from 7:30 to 9:30. She is free from 7 until 10 every other night save those evenings devoted to class, and she may leave until 12 and one entire afternoon every week.

Anything in the nature of an unprofessional attitude toward the doctors is severely condemned, and she is strictly watched. She is not supposed to know them outside in a society way at all.

The one girl who is not patient, cheery and, above all, sensible stands no show of success whatever. Both doctors and patients will distrust her and refuse to have her around at critical moments. The first thing a nurse must practice is self forgetfulness. She must not mind any slights or sounds during the discharge of her duty. She must preserve the most absolute secrecy as to what she sees and hears, particularly during the delirium of her patients, and she must forget that she has a nerve in her body.

From these things it will be seen that a nurse's life is not exactly one where sentimentality has a chance to flourish, but it is a well paid, reliable and noble way for a woman to earn her living.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, April 21, 1904.

After all has been said and written about him, the one great achievement of Parker has been his ability to keep silence since his name was first mentioned for the Democratic party nomination.

The New York State Democrats are at odds over the length of the platform to be adopted today. Size shouldn't cut much figure. What the people expect to see is the usual bunch of "We view with alarm," "we point with pride" and "we arraign with indignation" and half a dozen other standbys.

It is estimated that $1,000,000,000 annually are spent on advertising in the United States. A good second is the insurance business with almost $1,000,000,000. Though the United States stands foremost in the world as regards advertising, both in quantity and quality, there is still much to be learned from other countries, and some things that we will probably avoid. Very many marriages take place in Germany as the result of advertising, but it is not likely that this branch of the industry will find widespread favor here. In Vienna any one who makes misrepresentations in an advertisement is liable to fall under the ban of the law. No such safeguard is afforded to the American public.—Retailer and Advertiser.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Tenderfoot," at the New York Theatre, is the greatest comic musical hit of the latter part of the current season. Richard Carle, as the Vermont professor, conducting a party of girl tourists through the Southwest, has greatly added to the wide reputation as a humorous entertainer he made while connected with the New York Casino, where he played important comedy roles in the musical reviews which made this house so popular in "the old days." In his present vehicle he is surrounded by a remarkably able company of over 100 people, the largest part unusually pretty and talented girls, all of whom are required to do more effective work than merely pose about the stage. "The Tenderfoot" is a real novelty in story, locale of scenes and characterization and contains a wealth of popular music and specialties which would make even a less meritorious piece a big go. This attraction will remain but a short time longer at the New York, previous contracts making another extension of its run impossible.

In keeping with Mr. Proctor's policy of making an occasional revival of a Shakespearian play, "The Taming of the Shrew" will be offered at the Fifth Avenue Theatre this week. The revival will be scrupulously staged, special settings for each scene now being on the paint frames, and every detail will be looked after with careful attention. The cast will comprise Louis Linkhorn, Gerald Griffin, Verner Clarges, William Beach (especially engaged as "Petruchio") Hugh Ford, Albert Roberts, H. Dudley Hawley, Loretta Healy, etc. In the vaudeville section Hale and Frances, hoop rollers and club jugglers, will present a novel specialty. One of the features of the act is Mr. Hale's specialty on the running globe, in which he turns a complete somersault carrying the globe with him. Smith and Bowman, black face comedians, will offer a unique specialty, while Josephine Aiseley will sing rag time songs.

The eighth annual military and athletic tournament, given by the Military Athletic League, will begin at Madison Square Garden on Monday evening, May 2 and close on Saturday evening, May 7. Soldier show week is an event of importance in New York, and the performances given, the grand reviews each night, and the military programme and exhibitions by the young men from the military academies and schools, at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, are only to be seen when the League takes possession of the Garden, and the United States soldiers do their best to win applause and show what they can do. The athletic contests, for the League prizes, begin the evening programme at 7:15 sharp, and the grand reviews of National Guard, U. S. soldiers, marines and men from the navy begin at 8 o'clock each night. Then follows the military programme, and there is no exhibition equal to it, in detail and interest.

For the third time in its career "The Secret of Polichinelle," James K. Hackett's production of Pierre Wolff's famous comedy has outlived the theatre in which it was housed and has been forced to move to another house. Although the shifting of a play from one theatre to another has been accepted in the theatrical profession for many years as an omen of ill luck, "The Secret of Polichinelle" has proved the exception, for its run at the Garden Theatre was quite as successful as it was at its original home and the advance sale for it at the Princess Theatre, where it will be seen this week, is already as large as for any week in its career.

"The Girl From Kay's," at the Herald Square, delivers the goods, and all New York knows that it does. This is why it draws crowded houses and also why it has made the extraordinary record of seven months of capacity audiences at one of the largest theatres in New York. Its fun is inexhaustible, and its comedians are of the sort that never let a laugh get away from them. It is a musical comedy that appeals as strongly to fun lovers as a four-ring circus does to the devotees of the saw-dust circle. "The Girl From Kay's" taps more genuine fun in one evening than any entertainment New York theatre-goers ever knew.

William Collier has scored a tremendous success in Richard Harding Davis' farce, "The Dictator," which opened at the Criterion last Monday night. It may be said a double triumph was achieved, because Mr. Collier scored not only personally, but the play itself scored signally, and was declared to be one of the most amusing productions ever offered to a New York audience. Crowded houses during the week enjoyed the performances heartily, and enough is known about the public minds' attitude towards it at present, to assure both the star and the play a long and prosperous engagement at the Criterion Theatre.

With the engagement of William H. Crane in "David Harum" at the Academy of Music in New York there has been a return of vast audiences to that commodious playhouse. Not since the early days of "The Old Homestead" has the Academy known a success equalling that which is now being enjoyed by the dramatization of Westcott's novel. Of course it was expected that there would be a very great demand to see Mr. Crane in the revival of this play for there is no denying that it is one of the cleanest comedies of its kind the stage has ever had. Inasmuch as "David Harum" treats of country types and presents rural pictures it must be classed with the real dramas, but for all this it is as unlike the majority of them as the moon is unlike green cheese.

The extensive preparations and frequent battles in the war between Japan and Russia, is giving an excellent opportunity for moving pictures. The Eden Musee has a representative in the field and he has already secured a large number of pictures. Each incoming steamer from the Far East brings a number of pictures and these are on exhibition at the Musee. They show the massing of troops of both countries, drill work, parting scenes and manoeuvers of war vessels including ships in action. An excellent idea of what a modern war is can be gained by seeing these pictures. They were not posed for but are pictures of actual events. Many other interesting pictures have been placed on exhibition, including comic scenes and events in foreign countries. The Buster Brown series is still attracting much attention. The antics of Buster and Tige will make any one laugh. Powell and Magician continues a special attraction.

Unquestionably the biggest bit of the season in New York is Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul," at the Broadway Theatre. The spacious auditorium of the Broadway has been filled to its capacity nightly ever since the piece was produced in New York, and the fame of the attraction has spread over Manhattan Island to such an extent that the record for big business made by "The Prince of Pilsen" last spring and summer at this theatre bids fair to be eclipsed by the present offering. It is not hard to understand the reason for the success of "The Yankee Consul." Whatever elements go to make the musical comedy, or comic opera, desirable, are to be found in this production, and all of the best. It seems an extraordinary thing that in a comic opera the leading funmaker should never once play the clown. Screamingly funny and ridiculous as he is throughout the performance, he does not resort to horseplay. In his comedy, he is ably supported by Eva Davenport. Their heart to heart talks are wonderfully droll. Matinees are given at the Broadway on Wednesday and Saturday. The best seats at the Wednesday afternoon performances are $1.50.

Percival A. McVoy, of East Front street, spent Sunday with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Phillips, of Clinton avenue, has gone to Brooklyn, where she will live in the future.

W. A. Baker, of Somerset street, was taken seriously ill on Saturday with appendicitis.

The Misses Brown, of Long Branch, are the guests of Mrs. Lillian Willis, of Harmony street.

Mrs. VanDayne, of the borough, has been the guest of Somerville relatives.

CORDIAL GREETING FOR NEW MINISTER

Rev. George Mooney Receives Warm Social Welcome From Members of His Flock.

OTHER PASTORS THERE

FIVE ADDRESSES BY CLERICS AND PROMINENT LAYMEN.

Cordial Expressions Over Mr. Mooney's Advent—Response by the New Pastor—Music and Refreshments.

Social welcome was cordially extended to the Rev. George Mooney, the new pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, Thursday by his flock. Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Epworth League a reception of unusually pleasant nature was held.

It was largely attended by the members of the Monroe church, and the pastors of the other two Methodist churches, Rev. Dr. Snodgrass, of the First, and Rev. Dr. Earp, of Grace, were also present, with a number of their parishioners, to make the welcome one from all the Methodists of the city. Rev. Dr. Bryan, a former pastor of the First church, and Rev. Dr. Whitney, another retired cleric, were present also.

Five addresses of welcome were delivered, the speakers being Walter McGee, who spoke for Monroe; Dr. Earp, who spoke for Grace; Dr. Snodgrass, for First church, and Drs. Bryan and Whitney. In different tenor they all expressed the warm pleasure of Methodists over the coming of Mr. Mooney to this city, and promised him hearty and cordial support in his efforts to better the spiritual condition of his charge. Mr. Mooney responded in happy phrase.

Songs by a quartette composed of J. W. Daub, David Jones, Louis Tallamy and John Osborn were features of an enjoyable musical programme. Mrs. David Jones was accompanist and Miss May Brower played a number of piano solos.

After the speechmaking, the ladies took charge of the affair, and a social period ensued. Those who had not met Mr. Mooney took the opportunity to shake him by the hand, and the new pastor was kept busy exchanging cordial greetings. He produced a highly pleasant impression on all those who met him.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by a committee of young ladies, at the head of which was Miss Mansfield Smith. The committee of ladies in charge was composed of Mrs. I. P. Larew, Mrs. Nicholas Brouard, Mrs. Frederick Wenzel.

The church was lavishly decorated with potted plants, palms and ferns being used with attractive effect. The decorations were placed by a committee consisting of Mrs. Mansfield Smith, chairman; Miss Olla Kline and Miss Edith Manning.

PRAISE FOR SWACKHAMER

HERALD DESCRIBES HIM AS MIXTURE OF SCHOOLMASTER AND LAWYER.

Under the captain "Democratic Woodman Looking for Flawless Gubernatorial Timber," the New York Sunday Herald of this week makes mention of several leaders in the party likeliest of receiving the nomination. The names of George Pfeiffer, Jr., of Camden; Thomas M. Ferrell, of Gloucester County; F. S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton; Charles C. Black, of Jersey City; R. V. Lindabury, of Newark, and S. S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, are included. Of Swackhamer, the account says:

"Swackhamer, the tall sycamore of Somerset,' has a somewhat lengthy but pleasing alliterative sound. But it one should know Samuel S. Swackhamer one would never forget him. He is tall, urbanely reserved, with a good clear eye, a convincing voice and just enough mixture of schoolmaster and lawyer to be a logical thinker without being didactic. Some of his political experience Swackhamer gained as a member of the Borough Council of North Plainfield, when that community, from 1898 to 1901, had more politics to the square inch than any other borough in the State except West Cape May.

"In the Legislature, as one of the minority Democrats in the House of Assembly, Swackhamer has gained the respect and admiration of his colleagues. He has a winning personality and 'carries his points' in spite of the fact that he will not make compromises when he must sacrifice any matter of principle. It would not be a great matter of difficulty to convert a 'tall sycamore' into an oak, and Swackhamer may be the timber desired."

Miss Clara Long, of Park avenue, has been visiting her cousin at Somerville.

CLINTON AVENUE DEFEATS WEST END

Good Article of Ball in Which Work at the Bat Happens to Decide the Contest.

SUPERIOR FIELDING

FOUR TO THREE THE FINAL SCORE OF THE GAME.

Whitley Serves Some Puzzling Twists—Dodd and Mantin Make Some Nice Hits—The Detailed Scores.

Good and timely stickwork did the trick for the Clinton Avenue baseball combination in its opening game with the West End Field Club Saturday afternoon. The score was close enough to satisfy the losers as far as the losing bunch can be satisfied, 4 to 3 being the final tally, and the contest was pretty enough to keep everybody interested.

Whitley, Clinton Avenue's new pitcher, handed out a long string of unsolvable twists. He passed fourteen helpless victims up to his catcher, and Herman was all there with the goods. He steered a mitt that acted like the twin-brother of Johnny-on-the-spot, although one ball did get by him.

West End, however, managed to plug the ball safely six times, Barnes landing on it twice. Jacot, the West End serpentine artist, got what was coming to him a little more so, the Clinton Avenues landing nine lusty belts. Dodd and Martin each delivered two cracks to the leather.

For a first performance, both sides did remarkably good work in the field. The going was a trifle slower than it will be later on, when the experts get limbered up, but there was only a total of five errors between them, two for West End and three for Clinton Avenue.

Fowler Not in Race?

Congressman Fowler, who has been almost continuously absent from his seat in Washington for months, will be surprised to learn on his return that many newspapers in the Sixth District are asserting that he will be renominated without opposition at Trenton on May 10 next. Of course, the newspapers are mistaken. They might have known that they would have been able to find Mr. Fowler before this if a candidate was to be nominated by his party in the near future, and the services of a Republican "whip" wouldn't have been necessary to bring him out of hiding.—Newark News.

Helped Lay Atlantic Cable.

August Kreger, of Rahway, visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duvier, of West Fifth street, on Sunday. Mr. Kreger is one of the few survivors of the skilled force that laid the first successful Atlantic cable, from the famous cable ship Farraday. He is full of interesting information and reminiscence of that epoch-making trip.

Octoroons Show.

A big turn out is expected for the vaudeville show by the "Octoroons" Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. It will be held in T. A. B. Hall for the benefit of the West End Field Club baseball nine.

Alfred Clement, of Central avenue, was the guest of Charles Engiebart, of Roselle, Saturday.

William Hulbert, of Somerville, visited friends here Saturday.

Miss Nell Messenger, of North avenue, is visiting in New York.

George Hummer, of Stone street, is recovering from a slight illness.

Leonce Texier, of North Plainfield, visited friends in New York Saturday.

MORBUS SABBATICUS AN EVIL OF THE DAY

A Peculiar Condition Which is an Excuse for the Non-Observance of the Sabbath.

SUBJECT OF A SERMON

REV. DR. SCHENCK ARRAIGNS THOSE WHO BREAK COMMANDMENT.

Present Tendency to Turn a Holy Day Into a Holiday—The People Seek Pleasure But Not God.

Man's need to keep the Sabbath day and the meaning of the observance were explained Sunday by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, in a sermon on "Morbus Sabbaticus" or the Sunday sickness. This sickness, the pastor said, affects people only at church time on Sunday, the victim being able to stay at home and read the Sunday papers and feeling well enough to call on friends or engage in other social affairs, but lacking the strength to go to public worship. The only cure for the disease is the religion of Jesus Christ and a faithful adherence to the word of God.

With the passage of the winter, said Dr. Schenck, there comes in with the warm season a danger of relaxation from Christian ideals. Pleasant summer weather tempts one to neglect his duties of church attendance. There is a tendency to make the Sabbath a holiday instead of a holy day, a day of selfish pleasure-seeking instead of one of rest and Christian meditation. People on vacations are apt to forget their duty of

Dr. Schenck made references, in passing, to Sunday golf and Sunday baseball. He spoke of the fact that a baseball park for Sunday baseball was a possibility for Middlesex county, and that numbers of men in this city and vicinity were hired to play Sunday ball. He exposed the uselessness and wrong of the practise.

The Sabbath day is not a human institution. It is divine, and belongs to God. Government and the institutions of man could not well exist without the day of rest. There is physical need for the Sabbath. Man cannot do his physical or intellectual work without it. In France at one time an attempt was made to establish a day of rest every tenth day, but the falling off in physical and intellectual efficiency that followed taught the French people the wisdom of the Creator in setting apart one day in seven and brought them to return to observance of the Sabbath. Religiously and intellectually, the Sabbath is a necessity.

The action of corporations which force their employes to work seven days in the week was condemned by the speaker. The motorman and conductor, said Dr. Schenck, is practically forced to work on Sunday. His compensation is such that he must do it for the extra money to meet the expenses of life. It he insists upon having his Sunday for rest he is in danger of losing his position.

Off for Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeL. Hyde sailed for Europe on April 9, to be absent about six weeks. During their absence Mrs. Hyde's mother, Mrs. Fred Knowland, is in charge of the home.

William Sandford and family, of East Front street, will sail June 1 for the Land of the Midnight Sun.

Max Kitzler's Funeral.

Max Kitzler, of Elizabeth, who is well known here, was buried Sunday a victim of typhoid fever. A number of Plainfielders attended the funeral, which was unusually large. Kitzler was drum major of the Third Regiment in which most of the Spanish-American war volunteers from here served.

Ninety Years Old.

Mrs. Louisa Davis, of Clinton avenue, celebrated her ninetieth birthday Saturday. In spite of her advanced years she was in the best of health and spirits and able to receive the congratulations of a large number of friends.

Nuisance Abated.

There were no complaints as to loafing about the North avenue railroad station Sunday night. Three policemen were on the spot but had no work to do.

Miss Marion Porter, of New York, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Porter, of West Third street. When the new Siegel store, on the site of the old Macy store, is opened on Fourteenth street, New York, she will be one of the sales force.

—A telephone line is soon to be extended from Bound Brook to Martinsville by the Somerset County Telephone Company, affording a great convenience for the residents in those places.

PATROLMAN QUAAS A VICTIM OF DUTY

Member of Police Force Dies as Result of General Breakdown of System.

HOST OF FRIENDS HERE

DEAD MAN BUT THIRTY-SIX YEARS OF AGE.

Leaves a Wife and Daughter—Member of Police Force Nearly Two Years—Funeral Thursday Morning at 9:30.

Patrolman Moses F. Quaas, one of the most popular officers in Plainfield's police department, died suddenly at 10:30 Monday night at his home, 311 Plainfield avenue. Death resulted from a general breaking down of the system due largely to exposure during a particularly hard winter. The immediate cause of death was a complication of liver and stomach troubles. He had been in active service until last Tuesday night.

Officer Quaas was one of the most efficient members of the force. He performed the numerous and varied duties that always fall to a policeman with a conscientiousness that won him many friends. He was always courteous and affable. The deepest regret at his loss was expressed this morning by Chief Kiely and his brother officers. Chief Kiely said: "Officer Quaas was a model officer, respectful to his superiors, faithful and intelligent in his work. He never brought trouble upon the department and he never fell short of his duty."

"Moss," as he was known to his friends, was thirty-six years old. He was a native of this city and had lived here practically all his life. His service on the police department began two years ago next June. During his service his "beats" have included all parts of the city. Before taking up the police work, he was engaged in the installment business for Gaitley & Company, of Newark, and the American Wringer Company, his duties taking him to all parts of the State, but more especially along the coast. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters.

A widow and daughter survive Officer Quaas as well as two brothers, Joseph and Edward.

Police headquarters has been draped in black out of respect to the memory of the dead officer. The funeral will take place from the late home this morning at 9 o'clock and from St. Mary' R. C. church at 9:30, where solemn requiem mass will be offered for the repose of his soul. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery. A delegation of his brother police officers will attend the services.

THROWN FROM TROLLEY CAR

COLORED PASSENGER SAYS HE REFUSED TO PAY FARE TWICE.

James Carter, colored, of Liberty street, this city, was thrown bodily from a trolley car on the Newark and Elizabeth line at 8:45 last Friday, by the conductor, he says, in consequence of his refusal to pay his fare twice over.

Carter had already paid the customary ten cents for his five-mile ride and received the transfer slip which was to start him on his journey from Elizabeth to Plainfield, when the conductor demanded another five cents. The Plainfielder, says he, produced his transfer in proof of his statement that the fare had been paid, but that he was met with a storm of abusive profanity coupled with a threat to "throw you off the car." On repeating his refusal, he declares that he was thrown from the platform of the rapidly moving car, which at the time is carried no other passengers. In falling, Carter's right ankle was severely sprained and but for the assistance of a friend, who lives in Elizabeth, he would have been nearly helpless. Smith witnessed the outrage from the street and overhead the language of the conductor and motorman. Carter, whose ankle gave him excruciating pain, was assisted aboard the next car for Elizabeth by Smith, who was on his way home, and on arriving at that place made complaint at the offices of the trolley company. The only satisfaction vouchsafed him there, he says, was an offer to honor his transfer, whose time limit had then expired by reason of his enforced delay. This was refused.

Arriving at Plainfield, Carter proceeded to his home in a hack, summoned by a Daily Press reporter who knew him, and to whom he related his experience, adding a statement of his determination to secure legal satisfaction for his injuries.

—George Hummer will move into his new house the first of the month. He erected it himself.

AWARD CONTRACTS FOR NURSES' HOME

The Site is Selected and the Work is to Begin Immediately.

COLONIAL IN DESIGN

BRICK STRUCTURE TO HARMONIZE WITH HOSPITAL BUILDINGS.

The House to Cost $14,400—The List of Contractors — The Isolation Ward to Come Later.

Plans for the building of the new Nurses' Home in connection with Muhlenberg Hospital, have been adopted, bids having been received and accepted. It was decided at the meeting of the Board of Governors last night to go ahead at once with the work. The location of the new building will be on Park avenue, corner of Moffett avenue, this spot being considered the best suited for the purpose.

Contracts aggregating an expenditure of $14,400 were awarded to these: Mason work, S. F. Tallamy & Bro.; carpenter work, Charles M. Wilson; plumbing and heating, George J. Tobin; electrical work, A. B. Laing; gas fixtures, J. W. Gavett; painting, J. G. Hansen.

The Nurses' Home will be constructed of brick and will be of colonial style, harmonizing with the hospital building. It will be modern in every respect and contain all of the latest conveniences. There will be accommodations for about twenty-five nurses. Work on the structure will be started as soon as the contracts are signed. Action on the isolation ward has been temporarily delayed. It will probably be considered at the next regular meeting.

The resignation of Francis Wood as a member of the Board of Governors was received and accepted. The vacancy will be filled at the next meeting. Mr. Wood resigns because he is soon to make his home in New York.

HIGH FUNCTION ON SATURDAY

MANAGER DENMAN'S PROGRAMME FOR THE OPENING GAME.

Extensive preparations have been made for a regulation big league style of opening of the baseball season at Westfield Saturday. At 3 o'clock there will be an automobile parade led by Mayor-elect Randolph Perkins and leading to Recreation Park. At 3:30 there will be a short ceremony at the home plate.

Manager Denman declares that while in Porto Rico during the winter "Red" Walier came into possession of the left hind leg of a white rabbit killed in an old graveyard near midnight on a Friday, the thirteenth day of the month, by a bow-legged and cross-eyed darkey. After an ovation by the President of the Knockers' Club, there will be a selection by the rooters' band and the symbol of luck will be planted in the pitcher's box, two feet deep and pointed towards Rahway.

At precisely 4 o'clock, it is said, Congressman Charles N. Fowler will enter the arena and toss the ball to Jack Burke, who will immediately place it between his thumb and forefinger and grind it into the soft dirt a few times before passing it around the infield and to Pitcher Waller; then the critic proof umpire, Jimmie Culhane, will pipe "play ball" in high C and the rooters and usually staid individuals in attendance will give their eyes on the fight before them—Westfield against Seventh Regiment. There have been several betterments added to the grounds and if there is any kind of ball balm in the air the attendance will reach the standing room only degree.

As it has been a long drawn out wait since the last ball game hereabouts all roads will lead to Westfield next Saturday. There will be plenty of dainty feminine finery with pleasure hat topping and there isn't a public shining light in Union County but what has the date and place down in his noddle.

CAMP CHESTERFIELD.

Booklet Issued by Edgar Barr Smith, of This City.

An attractive booklet descriptive of Camp Chesterfield, Lake Spofford, N. H., a summer camp for boys in the hills of New Hampshire, has just been issued by Edgar Barr Smith, of Leal's School. The third season at the camp will open June 30 and will be one in which open plan will prevail. The booklet will present the boys with opportunities for athletics, sports and study. Mr. Smith has charge of the camp. There were eight Plainfield lads who availed themselves of its advantages last season and it is expected that an even larger number will go this year.

FATHER CLIFFORD AT ST. MARY'S

London Priest Temporarily Assisting Here Preaches to a Large Congregation.

HIS ABLE DISCOURSE

NATIVE OF THIS COUNTRY, BUT EDUCATED ABROAD.

Ordained in London, Where He Has Resided for Ten Years—Sermon on Parable of the Good Shepherd.

Father Clifford, the temporary successor of Father Delahanty in St. Mary's parish, made his first appearance in the pulpit Sunday morning. He was greeted by a large congregation, at the 10:30 mass, on whom he produced a strong and pleasing impression. Father Clifford will act as assistant to Father Egan for two months, when Father Delahanty is expected to return from his health-seeking trip to Europe.

Although announced as from Engelwood, where he was staying, Father Clifford really comes here from London. He is a native of this country, but was largely educated abroad, and was ordained in England. He has lived in London for the past ten years.

Father Clifford's initial sermon was a striking and interesting one on the Parable of the Good Shepherd. In substance he said:

As there had been two contrariously opposed views of the Messiah preached for nearly twelve centuries in Israel; the victorious Messiah, with His political ideals, and the despised and misunderstood Messiah, "slowly leading *judgment unto victory," so the his*toric Christ in His own person seemed to unite the same mysterious opposites. Catholicism, so the preacher insisted, which is identified both in intention and in sacramental life with the mystic Christ, who dwells invisibly with His church, appeared to obey the same mysterious law of contrariety.

There was the impression it created in the minds of its more intelligent observers, who viewed it from without; there was the faith and the enthusiasm it inspired in the hearts of those who viewed it from within. To know it from within, it is necessary first of all to live its life, to obey its austere precepts of conduct, to use its sacramental ordinances wisely and discreetly, to steep the understanding in its dogmas, to refresh the heart with all its various lessons of ritual, of discipline, and of Eucharistic life.

Catholicism, so understood, and so apprehended, was none other than the realization in history of that church that one true church, of which the marks were to be Unity, Holiness, Catholicity and Apostolicity. The preacher quoted largely from the thinkers of the past generation, upon whom Catholicism had laid a kind of spell of the imagination without yet winning the allegiance of their faith.

Father Clifford observed in closing, that the best way to assert the claims of that Catholicism in this world was not by controversy, not by angry debate, or by logical fence, not by persecution; but by endeavoring in all loyalty and sincerity of mind to realize it first as an ideal in its own life and so to commend it in its beauty to an observing world.

In doing this, the preacher contended, the Catholics of today would but obey that same mysterious instinct of zeal, which the early believers fulfilled when they compelled the thinkers of the pagan world, in the days of Marcus Aurelius to confess that those Christians did indeed love one another, that they were not as the common rock of men, that behind those rapt faces and those half-hidden lives there lay a secret which the clean of heart would understand. That secret was Christ. Christ, as possessed and made personal in one's own life, constituted Catholicism as a concrete force in the world.

PLEA FOR RUSSIA IN A LOCAL PULPIT

District Secretary of American Baptist Missionary Union Presents Strong Argument.

ASKS FOR FAIR PLAY

DR. C. L. RHOADES SPEAKS AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Japan's Enemy in Present Strife a Much Maligned Foe—What Russia is Doing for Civilization.

C. L. Rhoades, district secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union of New York, for over an hour Sunday, held the close attention of one of the largest congregations gathered for recent years for evening service in a local church.

His talk, the keynote of which was a plea for cool and fair judgment of Russia, dealt with a phase of Russian national growth and character which indicates that power as the chief agent, not only in civilizing, but in Christianizing the whole of Asia. Beginning with the exodus of Christians of the Greek church from Constantinople, when that city fell before the Turks, the speaker drew for his audience a vivid mental picture of successful missionary work among the barbarians of the North, which through the development of a common religious footing, fostered closer commercial and political relations between these people, and gradually evolved a national spirit among them. Stress was put upon the fact that all attempts by Russia to secure outlets upon the sea had been rigorously defeated by other European nations. This fact was shown to be the main reason for Russian conquest and expansion in Asia, where she had a free hand for many years and where her territorial growth has always been accompanied by widespread Christianization of the people who come under her sway.

International jealousy, the same motive which caused the fortification of Heligoland to keep her from the Baltic, was advanced as the cause of the more recent and successful diplomatic moves in Afghanistan, Persia and Turkey and also of the stand now taken by Japan, backed by England, Attention of the world is called to the growth and internal development which had followed each of these repulses, as well as the feeling of hatred which they engendered among Russians against the rest of Europe. The cruelty and tyranny of which writers are so prone to accuse Russia are held by Mr. Rhoades to be more than anything else, the result of European interference which is responsible for the undeveloped national conscience sanctioning such atrocities as the massacre of defenceless Chinese in Manchuria.

Great strides are to be expected of a nation, he declared, which transplants entire villages to remote sections of its territory and aids them in those lines of agricultural and commercial development to which they are particularly adapted, a nation which builds thousands of miles of railroads through practically uninhabited country at enormous expense, laying open at one stroke, half a continent to successful colonization, when that nation combines with her material strength, the pre-eminent position which is occupied by Russia in Asiatic diplomacy and which bids fair to link her and China together as the rulers of Asia.

Mr. Rhoades closed his discourse with an expression of the hope that the nation holding the unique position of connecting link between Europe and Asia, between the civilization of the West and that of the East, might work out her manifest destiny unassailed by either of these civilizations, both of which would be benefitted by her maturity.

In the course of his talk, Mr. Rhoades mentioned the substantial support given to foreign missions by the Mennonite church of Southern Russia, these people having contributed many thousands of dollars to the work done by Americans in India.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Elsie E. Neagle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Neagle, of Madison avenue, to Edward B. Rowland, of Bound Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Force, of East Front street, have been entertaining Mrs. Pewtress, of Warrenville.

Lester-carrier Charles E. Stephens and wife, of Duer street, have returned from a visit with their son at Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Bowers, of Wilmington, Del., have been the guests of Mrs. Bowers' father, J. V. Beekman, of West Eighth street.

—J. C. Pierson has removed from Grant avenue to the corner of Dunellen avenue and Mariner's place.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS AT HILLSIDE CLUB

Great Preparations Made for An Auspicious Opening on Saturday, April 30.

SOME NEW MEMBERS

GOLF COURSE AND TENNIS COURTS BEING PUT IN CONDITION.

Luncheon to be Served at the Clubhouse—Music During the Season—Additions Made to the House Among the Changes.

Announcement is made by Leighton Calkins, secretary of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, that the enlarged clubhouse, the golf links, and the tennis courts, will be open to members on Saturday, April 30. Owing to the backward season and the continued cold weather this month, it has been impossible to open the course for play before that date.

The work on the improvements to the clubhouse is about completed, the course is being carefully rolled, the tennis courts are receiving expert attention, and everything points to an auspicious opening. Luncheon will be served at the clubhouse on that day.

Members who have not been up to look at the property this spring will notice many changes. The large living-room in the clubhouse has been doubled in size; and there have been added a smoking and lounging room for men, an office and an extension to the kitchen. Later on, the men's locker room will be moved to the basement—where it is usually located, in golf clubhouses—and this will make room upstairs for several bed-rooms for the use of members. The horse-sheds have been increased in number, and a new automobile house has been put up, capable of sheltering five or six cars. A separate roadway leads to this shed and there will be no danger of horses being frightened by passing automobiles on the club driveway.

Members of the club are to be congratulated also on the extension of the trolley service. The survey has been ordered by the company, and H. O. Runyon has been authorized to secure the additional consents. It is expected that cars will be running to the club entrance gate by June 1.

The trustees held a meeting on Monday and elected the following new members: J. Otis Averill, Walter C. Teagle, Daniel C. Alpaugh, Harold Hall, C. E. S. Bellows, A. G. Hagedorn, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, William F. Gough, J. H. Mellick, Emelyn B. Hartridge, Mellick Tweedy, Mrs. C. E. S. Bellows, Miss Ward, Miss Seward, Lyman C. Hibbard.

There are now only a few vacancies on the club membership and if applications continue to come in as rapidly as they have since April 1 there will soon be a waiting list.

The house committee is arranging to furnish music at the clubhouse during the coming season; and, with the social as well as the golf and tennis activity that is being mapped out, members of the club will find that they have a very busy summer before them.

Personally Conducted Tour to California for Methodist Conference.

The New Jersey Central which is the initial road for the tour of the New Jersey Methodists to the General Methodist Conference at Los Angeles, California, has a most elaborate itinerary mapped out, including a visit to Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, Grand Canyon, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake, Pike's Peak, Niagara Falls, and other of the principal cities. The tour will be under the direct personal supervision of the Rev. C. L. Mead, of Hoboken, and for a tour of the continent at a moderate price this will be the most comprehensive ever attempted. The trip will be made by special train, in Pullman sleepers, and every convenience and comfort will be afforded the tourist.

The New Jersey Central has arranged a very elaborate illustrated itinerary, which can be obtained of the Rev. Dr. Mead, Hoboken, N. J., or of C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, New York, or from W. C. Walsh, Jr., D. P. A., Newark, N. J. 4 19 5 nod o 3

Passenger Traffic Delayed.

A delay to train 120, leaving Plainfield for New York at 1:18 yesterday afternoon, was caused by the breaking of a cylinder in the engine. The fireman of the engine narrowly escaped suffocation from flames forced into his face. The accident happened at Westfield, the engine carrying enough steam to go to Cranford where the passengers were transferred to another train.

Leonard S. Smith, of 113 Duer street, is unable to go to business on account of an attack of the measles.

LIQUOR LICENSES RENEWED

APPLICATIONS OF NORTH PLAINFIELDERS GRANTED BY COURT.

Five Licenses of Interest to Plainfielders were received at the session of the Somerset court yesterday.

Hotel license were granted to Henry Pedaflena, Smalleytown; wholesale to Adolph Bohren and N. J. Bottling and Bottling Co., North Plainfield, and hotel to Hugo Mack, Watchung, and Charles Jensen, North Plainfield. The hotel license of J. H. Graceley, in North Plainfield, was transferred to Jeremiah Burns.

AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Miller and Miss Margaret Anglin in Alexandre Dumas' "Camille," with a superb support, are making a great hit at the Hudson Theatre. The players who personated the unhappy lovers in Dumas' play succeeded in giving more than an ordinarily strong and interesting production, as Armand and Marguerite, and one that finds favor with more than ordinarily intelligent and discriminating audiences. Place aux dames and to Miss Anglin must be given the compliment that she is one of the fairest and most lovable Marguerites that the Metropolitan stage has seen. From her first entrance until the close of her life tragedy she moves a creature fair indeed to look upon, and on that wins all hearts. Mr. Miller, who has evidently devoted sincere and long study to the play, and his rele of Armand is played with sincerity and force.

Back ten years and more went the hands of the dramatic clock Monday night, when DeWolf Hopper revived "Wang" as the Lyric Theatre before a big audience, which gave him a boisterous welcome, and then, setting back to see the merry musical play, seemed to find the good old nonsense-concoction as bright and amusing as ever. It was an occasion to make the "old boys" cancel a decade from the debits of their life account and "sit up;" to recall to the younger men some jolly matinees of past school holidays; to convince the young fellows of today that dad's memory was all right when he used to tell them what a 'good show" "Wang" was. Times change, especially theatrical times, and the wonder of it is that "Wang" should not have seemed positively antiquated from the standpoint of current comic opera. But it didn't. DeWolf Hopper was just as irresistibly funny as ever as Wang, the impecunious Regent of Siam, and while all his well remembered pieces of "business" were there—such as the gymnastic descent from the elephant, for instance—there were plenty of new touches to bring the humor of the part up to date.

COMMON COUNCIL FIXES TAX BUDGET

For General Purposes it is Agreed That $47,500 be Raised.

ENFORCE MARTIN ACT

COLLECTOR SMITH ORDERED TO SELL DELINQUENTS' PROPERTY.

Cost of Small-Pox Case $1,253 —Another Drinking Fountain—An Extension of Sewer System.

The adoption of the tax ordinance fixing the amounts to be apportioned to the various city departments, was the principal business considered at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. The ordinance should have been introduced at the regular April meeting, but was delayed on account of the press of other business.

The tax ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised, provides that $47,500 be raised for general purposes, as against $46,974 last year. This includes $35,000 for street improvements, and out of that must be paid $6,000 for street sprinkling. Last year $24,000 was appropriated for streets, but deducting the street sprinkling, it made the appropriation $19,000. For street lights, $13,500 is appropriated, an increase of $600 over last year.

The principal on the sewer bond is the same as last year, $5,000, exclusive of obligations to be paid out of assessments and temporary obligations that may come due during the year.

The interest on obligations of the city is $6,640, an increase of $140 over last year. For the poor $5,700, a decrease of $300, is appropriated, while the public library and reading room gets $4,600, as against $4,000 last year. For the fire department $32,750, an increase of $750 over last year, is appropriated. The dog tax is fixed at $2.

These various amounts are exclusive of school, county and State tax. The latter cannot be determined until after the first of May, when the several figures are fixed.

The Board of Health asked the Council for $5,000 for the coming year, but out of this sum must come the expense of the one small-pox case, which was $1,353. The sum requested was appropriated by resolution offered by Mr. Daniel. In accordance with the usual custom, Mr. Daniel offered resolutions fixing $13,500 the sum to be appropriated for lights, $4,600 for the public library and reading room and $2 as the dog tax, and all were adopted and the president and clerk were instructed to certify to the resolutions adopted to the Board of Assessors.

Collector F. H. Smith presented to the Council the complete list of persons who have failed to pay their taxes during the past two years and by a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, he was authorized to go ahead and sell the various properties, under provisions of the Martin Act, for the taxes. The property is to be sold to the highest bidder.

Mr. Daniel also reported on the matter of Mrs. H. M. Myers and others who purchased the property at 134-138 East Ninth street for $1,650. This property was sold under the Martin Act, but the owners desired to redeem. This they did through their agent, F. W. Yates and the bid offered covered everything down to the closing of the title. Mr. Daniel offered a resolution providing that the proceeds from the sale be applied to paying the taxes, interests and costs and it was so ordered.

Mr. Gloax, as chairman of the streets and sewer committee, offered an ordinance providing for an extension to the sewage system through these streets: Leland avenue, from East Seventh street 1,500 feet south; Arlington avenue, from West Ninth street to Union street; Union street, 800 feet south; Denmark road, south of Berkley avenue; Hillside avenue, from Prospect to Evergreen avenues; Evergreen avenue, from Hillside avenue, 600 feet east. Accompanying this was a resolution fixing Monday night, May 2, as the time when a public hearing will be held on the subject. Other streets through which it is proposed to extend the sewer are South avenue, Leland to Belvidere avenues; Grant avenue, West Eighth street to Sherman avenue; Denmark road, Belvidere to Berkley avenues; Berkley avenue, from Denmark road to Ravine road; Webster place, from Putnam avenue to Berckman street.

Mr. Gloak also introduced a resolution appropriating a sum not to exceed $60 to establish a drinking fountain for horses on West Front street near Grant avenue, and both he and Mr. Lee spoke in favor of the improvement. In response to Mr. Daniel's intimation that the City Park should not be a graveyard for fountains, he assured the chairman of the finance committee that the fountain if erected would never reach the City Park. Mr. Daniel also cautioned the members about the necessity of keeping expenses down. Mr. Lee said that the water company would furnish the water for the fountain free of charge, provided it was a suitable contrivance. The resolution was adopted, all voting in favor except Mr. Bulinck.

R. H. Depew and other residents of Evergreen avenue, petitioned for three electric lights, claiming that there is only one light on the avenue. The matter was referred.

In accordance with a request of Assessor H. C. Runyon, an assessment of $675 for 1903 against shares of bank stock owned by C. K. Compton, of Deer street, was cancelled from the Fourth Ward list, owing to the fact that the assessment had been paid in the borough.

Mr. Gloak reported that there had been some delay in getting the municipal collection of garbage bill in the hands of Assemblyman Moffett and that matter would have to lay over until next winter. However, he said the streets and sewer committee would bear the subject in mind and make such progress as is possible. He thought that a further report would be ready a little later.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution that the Clerk be empowered to have five hundred copies of the rules of order published for the use of the Council, it being stated that that number could be printed as cheaply as a less number.

This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

NEW "NEAR SIDE" ORDER

CHIEF KIELY ISSUE DIRECTIONS TO LOCAL TROLLEY CARS.

To lessen the danger of accident at the busiest of the city's street-crossings, orders have been issued by Chief of Police Kiely that all trolley cars shall stop at the crossings.

Trolley cars on the Arlington avenue line will be obliged to stop at the West Fifth and West Seventh street crossings in going in either direction. Fourth street cars must come to a halt at Park avenue, and Front street cars going in either direction must make a full stop at Park avenue.

Another crossing which Chief Kiely regards as specially dangerous and at which he has requested a full stop is at Third street and Watchung avenue. Still another danger point as pointed out by the Chief is Richmond and Third streets.

The enforcement of the orders will be strict, the penalty for neglect of them being $20 at the least.

MAD CLEAR THROUGH

No More "Dates" for This Indignant Chicago Husband.

He Refused Hereafter to Wait for His Wife Among State Street Mashers—How the Joke Came Which Disgusted Him.

Williams is a Chicago man whose wife has just called him up on the 'phone and asked him to meet her and go shopping. His reply has been strenuous and to the point.

"Not in 1,210 years," it was. "I'll go shopping with you, all right, and carry your bundles and pay your bills, but when you ask me to meet you in front of one of the stores on States street I am no longer the dutiful husband to whom his wife's wish is a law. I am a stern helpmeet, and I put my foot down. If you are desirous of my company on your price-asking tour, it's for you to illumine my office with your presence. You meet me here and we'll go hence together."

Then he turned to me, hanging up the receiver.

"State street during the shopping hours, you know, is the abode of that human cousin of the polecat, the male dirt. I had read of this, but never thought of it when Mrs. Williams asked me the other day to make a tryst with her at one of the big dry goods arks along the east side of that esplanade. Would that I had not forgotten the fact!

"She was to meet me at 2:30. Knowing her, I got there way ahead of time —3:15, for, having made it 2:30, I knew she would be there promptly at 3:25. Before the store I took my stand and prepared to wait.

"For a few minutes it was not tedious. The passing crowds, the freaks of femininity I saw, and some who were not freaks, were interesting. I seldom ever get on State street at that time of day and I enjoyed the sights, thinking of how much money was being circulated by this never-ending wave of womanhood, and all that sort of stuff. But in a little while the situation began to grow tiresome.

"Just as I had figured out a nice lecture to give her on the importance of punctuality I saw one of those male flirts coming down the street. I was onto him in a minute. The self-satisfied air, the waxed mustache, and the leer at every woman who passed him made me want to walk out and trip him up. Soon I saw another, and then another, and probably a half dozen passed along there. One took his stand on the opposite sidewalk and leered across the street. It made me, as it would any self-respecting man, sick.

"And then, talk about your jolts! A couple of women came along at one of whom I had seen the most obnoxious of these male flirts wink as he had passed her on the sidewalk. The women were talking about him.

"'It's simply disgusting,' said one of them. 'This street is getting so that I hate to come down here alone. I've seen that man half a dozen times today, and there are others who make this their regular stamping grounds. There's one across the street, and look' (sinking her voice to a whisper, which I nevertheless overheard), 'there's another. He's been here for half an hour.'

"I looked to see whom they meant, when to my horror I discovered that they meant me!

"It was a shock. I can tell you, and I wonder I didn't shout out a denial. There I had been standing, more than half an hour, minding my own business, and wondering how I could rid the street of its obnoxious element, only to have two women class me with that element! The horror of the thing flashed through my mind. If these two thought I was there to flirt, how many more must have the same idea? I looked about me. There was the carriage man on the sidewalk. As he caught my gaze he sneered and turned away.

"I was suspected by everyone, that was plain! I was so angry that I could have licked the policeman and the sidewalk with one hand, and felt like doing it. But what could I do? If I strolled along that would be simply acting the part they were ascribing to me, for that's what all the flirts were doing. If I went inside the store I might miss my wife. So I planted my feet firmly, tried to look as though I never knew there was a woman in the world, and waited. And then I heard a voice.

"'Dearie,' it said, 'have you been waiting long?'

"It was my wife. I grabbed her by the arm and spoke harshly. So harshly that she looked at me in astonishment, but I had a purpose. I wanted everyone to know that she was my wife.

"'But I'll never meet her there again!'"

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Readers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

CONGREGATION'S RECEPTION

REV. DR. AND MRS. W. C. SNODGRASS AS GUESTS OF HONOR.

Many pleasant features marked the eighth annual reception given to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, by the members of the First M. E. church and congregation, last night, in Vincent chapel. The rooms were tastefully decorated with palms, potted plants and flowers. There was a very large attendance of members and friends and the good wishes extended to the pastor and his wife were hearty.

An excellent musical programme consisting of piano solos by Miss Alberta Waterbury, vocal solos by J. Edmund Skiff, organist of the Church of the Holy Cross and violin solos by Martin A. Korff. Several encores were given and each number was well rendered and received by hearty applause.

After the programme, Samuel Bingaman made the address of welcome to the pastor and his wife. His remarks were pleasing and very appropriate. Dr. Snodgrass responded in a happy vein. Other remarks followed by Rev. George Mooney, the new pastor of the Monroe Avenue church; Rev. Dr. L. Barry, of Grace M. E. church; Rev. Dr. Whitney and Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryant, each one extending best wishes to Pastor Snodgrass and his wife.

CHANGES AT MARCONNIER

MR. STOVER RESIGNS AS SUPERINTENDENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

To fill the vacancy at Marconnier chapel caused by the resignation of Stephen Stover as superintendent of the Sunday-school, the Marconnier committee of the Trinity Reformed church consistory was authorized to act in regard to a successor. Mr. Stover's resignation was due to the fact of his removal from Oak Tree. He has been superintendent since the withdrawal of H. W. Marshall several months ago and has met with much success in the work.

It was announced at the meeting of the church consistory last night that Rev. Mr. Watt would continue to preach at the chapel Sunday afternoons until May 1. His salary was ordered paid until that time. After May 1, evening meetings will probably be held and will be addressed by laymen from this city.

Other business transacted by the consistory last night was mainly routine.

MRS. BELOFF SEEKS TO RECOVER FROM RAILROAD FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH.

Suit for $35,000 against the Pennsylvania Railroad has been started by William Newcorn, Esq., of this city, for Mrs. Eva Beloff, of Stelton, whose husband, a farmer of that place, was killed on the road last October. The suit is brought in behalf of the widow and next of kin including eight children. It is a Supreme Court case and will be heard in the September term of the Middlesex Circuit Court.

KILLED HIS ONCEIT.

Confession of a Man Who Thought He Would Do Lots of Brave Things, But Didn't.

"Yes," admitted the big traveling man to a Chicago Inter Ocean reporter, "I was one of the victims in that Iowa train robbery. And I want to tell you, fellows, there's no other experience so well calculated to take the conceit out of a man. I frequently had expressed a desire to encounter some of these modern bandits. I'd show them what it was to go up against a good, game man, and I'd put at least two or three of them out of business.

"Well, three miles out from Duck Center they held us up. Before I suspected trouble there was a big fellow with a 16-inch gun coming down the aisle. When he thundered 'Hands up!' I came pretty near dislocating my shoulders. Two other men followed the chap with the gun and took up the 'collection.' I surrendered everything, even to my elegant self-acting revolver, and never entered a protest.

"Right behind me sat a little old maid with corkscrew curls. They took a pocketbook from her lap, but when they went to appropriate a jewel case she flew up like a hen defending her chickens. That watch, she said, was for her niece who was going to be married. She had raked and scraped to buy it, and no robbers were going to take it from her. With an unexpected movement she knocked the revolver against the roof of the car, and was clawing the robber like a wildcat. They forced her to her seat, and when the big fellow had recovered his gun he stood laughing.

"'Keep your watch, old girl,' he said, 'and here's a little trinket to put with it,' and he tossed her a handsome pin. If any of these men had your grit, we'd never got away with this job after you'd disarmed us.'

"And he was right about it."

HORSE KNEW ROUTE.

And Therefore the Old Dairyman's Substitute Was Able to Deliver Milk Without a Break.

"Horses are close observers and learn rapidly," remarked a downtown man to a Washington Post reporter, "and I had my attention strongly attracted to the fact recently. It came about in rather a pathetic way, too. For many years we have patronized one dairyman, and for equally many years the man has driven an old frame of a horse. While the animal was not fast, he was faithful. One day last week the poor old milkman was suddenly stricken ill while serving his customers and rendered helpless. The horse seemed to understand the awful situation, so he faithfully pulled his master home. Naturally we missed the milkman and did not understand his absence until a few days later when a strange dairyman stopped in front of the house. He inquired if the old man, our previous milkman—had been delivering milk at my place. I told him that he had, and inquired what the trouble was. Then he told the story, and how even at that time he was lying dangerously ill. 'And you see,' he went on to explain, 'I don't want the poor old fellow to lose his trade, and all I have to depend on is this old horse. He has been my main reliance. He knows the route, and every time he stops in front of a house I jump out. When he stopped here I thought you must be one of the old man's customers, too. That old horse isn't much too look at, but he's got a head full of sense, and so far I haven't struck a wrong house.'"

CHARLES K. STILLMAN WINS A HIGH HONOR

He Passes First in Competitive Examination for Membership on Bellevue's Staff.

SIXTY-FOUR IN CONTEST

A SENIOR AT COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

A Graduate of Brown University —A Son of Late Dr. Charles F. Stillman and Nephew of William M. Stillman.

Charles Kirtland Stillman, son of the late Dr. Charles F. Stillman, and brother of William M. Stillman, of this city, has just passed a brilliant examination for a position on the staff of physicians at Bellevue Hospital in New York.

Out of sixty-four physicans competing, he stood highest in the examination, with a grade of one hundred and so received the appointment number one, this entitles him to the choice of service on the staff for the next two years.

Dr. Stillman graduates from the College of Physicans and Surgeons in New York this spring after a four years' course.

He was graduated from Brown University and in both these institutions he made a fine record.

The many people in this city and vicinity who remember his father and grand-father, the late Dr. Charles H. Stillman, will be pleased to learn of his success.

SAYS REPUBLICANS ARE BAD

ASSEMBLYMAN SWACKHAMER ADDRESSES JEFFERSONIAN CLUB.

The customary celebration of the Jeffersonian Club, in commemoration of the birthday anniversary of Thomas Jefferson, was held Wednesday night at the clubhouse at Newark, and the feature of the event was an address by Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, on the life of Jefferson and the principles of Democracy which he expounded. He also took occasion to score the Republicans for their legislative record.

The speaker enlivened his speech with many anecdotes, and had his audience in a high good humor. He began by decrying the wholesale and irresponsible attacks made upon corporations because they were corporations, and declared that it was a mistaken policy and tended to alienate the sympathy of the conservative business element, which played so important a part in political campaigns. He was not in favor of attacking a corporation simply because it was a corporation, because, he averred, there were many honest organizations of this character, whose business was conducted on fair principles, and it was wrong to include them in the denunciation.

Mr. Swackhamer went on to make an onslaught upon certain corporate interests which, he said, had tried to sway the legislators at Trenton at the last session to their way of thinking. He declared that if the coming Democratic campaign was fought on the lines of making exposure of the present and past Republican State administration of public affairs the people's eye would be opened.

"I know what I am talking about," said the Assemblyman, "and I tell you that if the people of this State only knew a small part of the things that have happened down in Trenton this year they would rise and crush the party out of power."

J. J. GILLIES DEAD.

Former Plainfielder Succumbed at Age of Sixty-One Years—Was a Veteran of the Civil War.

John J. Gillies, oldest son of the late Theodore J. Gillies, of this city, died at his home in Brooklyn on Thursday. He was sixty-one years old and was engaged in business as a contractor. He was a veteran of the Civil War and a member of the 47th Regiment of New York.

Mr. Gillies leaves a widow, four children, six sisters and one brother. Two sisters reside here. They are Mrs. E. B. Ryder, of Central avenue, and Mrs. Nelson VanWinkle, of Dunellen street.

Portrait of Julia Ward Howe.

Among the notable pictures in the studio of John Elliott, 110 East Twenty-fourth street, New York, is a portrait of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, a relative of the artist and the mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue. Mr. Elliott is a painter from Boston, where he has an important decoration in the public library.

Mayor Home Again.

Mayor Smalley, of the borough, has returned home from a short hunting and fishing trip in North Carolina.

CHURCH EDIFICE TO BE ENLARGED

The Congregational Trustees are Directed to Secure Plans for Proposed Extension.

GROWING MEMBERSHIP

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY TO BE OBSERVED IN SEPTEMBER.

Clerk, Auditor and Trustees Are Chosen—Receipts $1,800 More Than the Year Previous —A Supper.

Much favorable discussion was given last night to a plan for enlarging the Congregational church, which on many occasions, has proved inadequate to the size of gatherings. Six years ago, there was talk of enlarging the building, and at that time a considerable sum of money was raised and is still in the bank ready for application to its original purpose. Resolutions were adopted last night empowering the trustees to secure the services of an architect to submit plans for an extension and give an estimate on the expense. The resultant report of the trustees will be received at an early meeting.

The attendance at the annual meeting of the church was large. Joseph E. Morse, Morris C. VanArsdale, F. A. Weeks and Alexander Millar were chosen trustees for two years, and E. L. Morgan, Charles Steiner and E. L. Suffern, for one year. D. Foster Updyke was elected church clerk, and Phillip S. Suffern, auditor.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the church will be celebrated next September, and an elaborate quarter - centennial programme will be arranged. A committee to make the preliminary arrangements was appointed: Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Joseph E. Morse and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux.

For the various benevolent societies, Rev. C. L. Goodrich reported an active condition. It was announced that the church membership was about 200. The treasurer's receipts were about $1,800 more than for last year.

Preceding the business meeting a supper was tendered the congregation from 6 o'clock until 7:30 by the women's association. About 135 gathered about the tables which were prettily decorated with roses and carnations. On the committee in charge were: Mrs. J. V. Beekman, chairman; Mrs. F. A. Weeks, Mrs. Messersmith, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Mrs. H. C. Nomer, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mrs. D. Foster Updyke, Mrs. Harold and Mrs. Millard. Brief addresses were made by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, M. D. Dwight, John M. Whiton, Alexander Millar and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Joseph Robinson and coffee by Mrs. Mackintosh. The waitresses were the Misses Mary Whiton, Rhoda Culbertson, Ethel Millar, Elsie Suffern, Marion Woodcock, Aimee Emmons, Hattie Messersmith, Margaret Weseman, Emily Winant, Ethel Mackintosh, Jessie Mackintosh and Nannie Lockhart.

Financially the church's condition was reported as remarkably prosperous. All bills were paid and there was not a cent of indebtedness for the year. There was a small balance in the treasury.

DOING BUSINESS ON SUNDAY

PROTEST AGAINST ALLOWING FOREIGNERS TO KEEP THEIR STORES OPEN.

Action against foreign storekeepers in the borough who violate the spirit of the Sabbath closing ordinance is becoming a matter that requires the attention of the North Plainfield authorities. It is believed that the class of tradesmen referred to are boldly using fake religious "convictions" to cloak Sunday trading.

As far a it goes, the claim that Saturday is their Sabbath is good enough for the law on its face, but the way the "Sabbath" is observed is believed to hold the shopkeepers open to prosecution as violators of the Sunday law. The law was not designed, as the foreign tradesmen seem to think, to enable shopkeepers to close on a comparatively dull day and do the bright business that results from the closing of all other stores on another day.

FRANCIS E. WHITESIDE ORDAINED A DEACON

A Plainfield Reporter Takes Orders in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HIS FIRST CHARGE

PASTOR OF THE WILLETT STREET CHURCH IN NEW YORK.

Out of a Score of Applicants, Mr. Whiteside is One of the Seven Made Deacons—Bishop Cyrus Foss Officiates.

Rev. F. E. Whiteside, a former newspaper man of this city, whose remarkable conversion while reporting one of the meetings in the revival campaigns here in 1901, so much has been written, was ordained a deacon by Bishop Cyrus Foss at the close of the New York East Conference of the Methodist church Tuesday night. The ordination took place in the Simpson M. E. church, Brooklyn, where the conference was held.

Rev. Mr. Whiteside was one of a class of seven admitted to the conference on trial, three of whom were made deacons. Nearly a score of applications were considered for admission, and the success of the young Plainfielder in passing, is worthy of more than passing note.

Mr. Whiteside and two others of the class were elected to deacons' orders by the conference in the morning. In the afternoon the three were introduced to the conference and the audience from the platform.

As in the Protestant Episcopal church, the diaconate is the first order in which a candidate for the M. E. ministry can serve. The deacons come up for elders' orders after two years of service. Deacons may act as pastors, but sacredotal limitations separate them from elders.

Rev. Mr. Whiteside was appointed as pastor of the Willett Street church, New York. The appointment, however, is purely nominal, his real position being that of assistant to Rev. Theodore Henderson in the work of the Evangelistic Commission. To place him formally in charge of the new evangelical work, Rev. Mr. Henderson's wife is well-known here from the part he took in the gospel campaign referred to above, was appointed "pastor of the East Side Parish," which covers the churches in the slum section of the metropolis. Mr. Henderson was pastor of the Simpson church.

Headquarters of the Evangelistic Commission will be at the Willett Street church, and there Rev. Mr. Whiteside will do the greater part of his work as Rev. Mr. Henderson's lieutenant.

NOW IT IS A LOCAL CONCERN

A PLAINFIELD BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION STARTS OUT ANEW.

The Central Building and Loan Association of Plainfield, is a new building and loan formed out of the Plainfield district of the New Jersey Home Buyers League. The league was doing a nice business here in Plainfield but the building and loan law of 1903 requires State organizations of this class to change their methods. Therefore the Plainfield district deemed it best for all concerned to withdraw from the State Association, and form a local association, embodying the most improved and up-to-date methods required. Their loans here are of the best and their money is well invested. Not only have the majority of the investors already transferred their shares, but quite a number of new members have come in at once. The board of managers ent of the Central Building and Loan are: F. deL. Hyde, J. A. Hubbard, W. N. Stillman, H. C. VanEmburgh, D. M. Runyon, Charles H. Dunham, Fred J. Viewig, J. D. Loiseaux, John E. Dunn, H. B. MacDonald and J. F. MacDonald.

Enlarging His Shop.

A permit to build a frame addition to his dwelling to be used as a paint and wall papering shop, has been granted Thomas Eganey, of 659 West Fourth street. The dimensions of the addition will be 16x16 feet, and fifteen feet in height.

Addition to Butcher Shop.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted Fred Endress, of West Front street, a permit to erect a one-story frame addition to his butcher shop at 208 Muhlenberg place. The dimen*sions of the addition will be 18x16x14* feet.

Frame Dwelling Permit.

Phillip Cottrell has received from Building Inspector Doane permission to erect a frame dwelling, 22x26x22 feet, on East Front street. It will be two stories in height.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 24: "Christian Education in Missionary Lands." Isaiah lx, 15-17.

The gospel of Christ changes completely the ideas and customs of every people who accept it.

The habits and institutions of life are largely the outgrowth from the religion held. What one thinks of God and man and the world and the way they are related will settle what he will do and how he will feel.

Jesus Christ is the first who taught that God is Father and men are brothers. Christ put it in words and in deeds. His life and death illustrated the idea and demonstrated it as fact. He was the first one to arrive at conscious experience of sonship to God. Having attained it, he promised power to attain it to all who truly sought it. A characteristic of those who really seek it is an impulse to teach others the way. This is revolutionary in its effect. It overturns the old way of regarding things and all the former manner of life. It created a new life in the individual and formed society on different lines. It affects all arts, sciences, philosophies and social customs.

From the first there have been some peculiarly gifted to impart instruction to others. Undoubtedly the gift of teaching will be needed until the kingdom of God come in all its fullness. This gift still continues in the church. Its value is coming to greater appreciation than ever before, and its usefulness is greatly increased.

In every land education in righteousness is receiving fresh emphasis. In lands particularly called "missionary" its recent extension is mostly of much attention. From kindergarten to theological training every appliance of Christian education and culture is diligently utilized in the work of bringing the people from darkness of heathen superstition and degradation of pagan worship to the knowledge of God through the Christ.

A series of photographs from the different lands where our missionaries are at work shows the condition of affairs better than volumes of print can do. Mexico, South America, Africa, India, China, Japan and all the other lands have the little children of natives and foreigners gathered into groups under the care of trained kin*dergarten instructors. Our best grad*uates of college and normal schools and of musical conservatories are scattered all over the world, teaching by the most improved methods the highest truths known to men in these *last years. Our best medical instruc*tion and skill are in this service. Hospitals and dispensaries are necessities of every mission. Besides and beyond all this we are giving training to natives in this art and science of teaching and healing, who shall be able to go out and do the work and also teach others to do it. Theological schools train preachers, and all other grades of schools co-operate to raise in each land a force which shall as soon as possible do the whole work on the field without assistance, or at least dependence, on outside help.

Then what swarms of scholars! Peking, Foochow, Shngapore, Madras, Lucknow, Rome, Pueblo and all the great centers between have gathered the best talent of the natives and are training the future rulers of many lands intellectually, morally and spiritually for the great tasks which await the hands of the coming men and women.

More than any one can foretell, the fate of the world in this century for weal or woe rests on the teaching now being given the bright boys and girls in the mission schools of the Christian church. The future of China, of India, of Africa, of all these other lands is in the balance. Our future is weighing in the same scales. God bless our schools!

Improved or Endured.

There are some things in life to be endured and other things to be changed for the better. It shows Christian sensibleness, and ought to stand that cannot be helped, but it indicates laziness and cowardice to put up with what can and should be mended. God did not put us here simply to endure our lot, but to improve it whenever possible. He tests our character and principles by His varying providences. He loves the heroic carriage under one set of conditions, but under others He delights in the disposition and capacity to triumph over difficulties and to transform adversity into prosperity.—Presbyterian.

Heavenly Secrets.

There is a beautiful figure of speech in a verse in the Twenty-fifth Psalm, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." The term rendered "secret" is in the original Hebrew tongue "a whisper." When a humble and teachable soul is near to God He often tells it a secret. He whispers in the Christian's ear some sacred word of promise or love no one else can hear, perhaps no one else could understand. —Rev. G. R. F. Hallock, D. D.

No Provision For a Relapse.

Why was he (the man cured of the palsy) to take up the bed? Because, as some one has beautifully said, there is to be no provision made for a relapse. Oh, how many of us have made that provision in the past! Yea, we will get up, but we will have the bed ready for a relapse. So far as you are able make it impossible by the absoluteness of your surrender and consecration ever to get back. Step clean out upon God. —G. Campbell Morgan, D. D.

A True Man.

Who is a true man? He who does the truth and never holds a principle on which he is not prepared in any hour to act and in any hour to risk the consequences of holding it.—Christian Instructor.

PROFANEST OF PARROTS.

Widow of Old Sailor Says it Would Seem Like Home Again to Have the Bird Around.

"TWOULD SEEM LIKE HOME."

"Tootsie," the profane parrot of Philadelphia, Pa., must go. He threatens to ruin the characters of two of his green and yellow brothers whose morals have hitherto been above suspicion.

"Tootsie" is to be sold. He belongs to Richard M. Mills, of Huntington street, who advertises his "only reason for selling is that the bird swears in his vocabulary."

"Tootsie" came into Mr. Mills' possession under a guarantee that he did not swear. Within 24 hours he had broken the guarantee and one of the commandments, besides shocking two other parrots belonging to the Mills family, neither of whom had ever said anything more wicked than "Polly wants a cracker."

"Tootsie's" evil ways are due to his early environment. Before he came to the Mills mansion he had lived in a cafe, whose habitues had found him to be an excellent substitute for a phonograph in the matter of reproducing profanity. His memory was unimpaired when he became a member of the Mills household.

"Tootsie" refused to be reformed. When the little Mills threw water on him for swearing he swore at them for doing it. On New Year's day not an oath passed his beak and it was thought he had turned over a new leaf, but the next morning he returned to his old ways with increasing vigor.

"Tootsie's" companions at first only listened to him in amazement, but a few days ago one of them marred a spotless record by exclaiming, "Darn it!" That settled "Tootsie's" fate, and the advertisement appeared.

To-day's visitors included a widow, who explained that her late husband had been a seafaring man who was given to using questionable language. "It would seem like home again to have the dear bird around," she said.

"Tootsie's" vocabulary contains such gems as, "Go to blazes and shut the door," "Come up and have a drink, every dashed one of you," and "Blast your eyes, you son of a sea cook." Other favorite expressions can be expressed only by dashes and asterisks.

WED IN DRUG STORE.

Proprietor Balks When Asked to Perform the Ceremony, But Finds Justice for the Lovers.

Cupid has captured a drug store in Waukegan, Ill., and proposes to use it in contracting marriages vows.

For years the corner drug store has been used to meet all kinds of wants, but no one every thought of a man going in among the big and little bottles of many colors to have the apothecary prescibe the words that bind two hearts in one.

John Fry, leading Marquez Brownell, sought Proprietor Hallstein in his Washington street pharmacy recently. Fry broached the subject, bluntly saying that as the apothecary accommodated people in selling stamps, money orders, etc., a public telephone and a directory, received lost articles, bound up bruised people, and rubbed pains with arnica, he did not know why he could not marry a man if he was asked to.

The good natured pillmaker assured the couple that the law did not empower him to perform a marriage ceremony, but the whole drug store was theirs, and if they would be seated for a moment he would send out for a justice. It required but a few moments to find Judge Murry and less time for that functionary to say the words that "bound" stronger than any bandage the druggist kept in stock.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 24.

Topic—What Christ can do for "darkest Africa."—Isa. xiv, 11-18.

The problem before Christian missions in Africa is a tremendously great one. This can be fully realised by a glance at some of the characteristics of the dark continent.

1. The size of the continent makes its evangelisation a great problem. "Africa is ninety times the size of Great Britain, over fifty times that of France or Germany, over five and a half times that of the United States, excluding Alaska, and over three times as large as all Europe." In these facts we find one proof of the great problem before us.

2. The greatness of the population adds to the difficulties. According to the most recent estimates the total population of Africa is over 160,000,000. When we remember the time and labor required to Christianize the small and less populated countries of the earth we have some faint idea of the seriousness of the task when from 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 of people are involved.

3. The character of the people, the moral, social and political conditions in "darkest Africa," form the most difficult feature of the problem of Africa's salvation. Extent of territory and size of population are after all *small factors if the people and condi*tions are favorable. Alas, alas, in Africa, as nowhere else, are they most unfavorable. Six different races are distinguishable—the negro, Fulah, Bantu, Hottentot, Semite and Hamite, the last two occupying the whole of northern Africa. Outside of Christianity, Mohammedanism and heathenism prevail. Slavery and polygamy abound among the native tribes. The moral sense of the people is of the very lowest order. The continent has been partitioned among the European nations—England, France, Germany, Portugal, Italy and Spain. Nor has this political supremacy been altogether for good. While it opens the doors of the country to the missionaries and affords them absolute protection, yet the introduction of rum and firearms has been the cause of incalculable harm. The Christian people of the world should demand that their governments protect those over whom they rule from danger and harm and cease placing within their reach that which causes their greatest destruction. The moral sense of a nation that can send a missionary and a barrel of rum with increasing vigor.

"Tootsie's" companions at first only listened to him in amazement, but a few days ago one of them marred a spotless record by exclaiming, "Darn it!" That settled "Tootsie's" fate, and the advertisement appeared.

To-day's visitors included a widow, who explained that her late husband had been a seafaring man who was given to using questionable language. "It would seem like home again to have the dear bird around," she said.

"Tootsie's" vocabulary contains such gems as, "Go to blazes and shut the door," "Come up and have a drink, every dashed one of you," and "Blast your eyes, you son of a sea cook." Other favorite expressions can be expressed only by dashes and asterisks.

The future of Africa is a truly dark one. Can Christ do anything for the dark continent? Most assuredly He can. He is the Light of the World and came to dispel its darkness. What He has done is proof of what He can do. Civilizations in the main as low as those of Africa have been uplifted by the gospel of Christ. Heathenism never prevailed under fouler conditions than it did in the Roman empire in the early Christian centuries, yet Christ conquered it. The native races of Europe, though stronger physically and mentally than the native Africans, were yet savage and heathen, in some cases offering human sacrifices to their gods. But the world knows what Christ did for these races. The middle ages were conspicuous for their moral and spiritual darkness, yet Christ raised them to a most glorious light. And Africa itself has felt the touch of the Divine Master and has responded to it. Over fifty missionary societies are at work on the dark continent, and in time, under the blessing of God, the gospel will reach every nation and tribe, and bring them out of the dark*ness of sin and superstition into* the glorious light of the Christ, the Light of the World.

Ohio Aggressiveness.

Rev. C. H. Hubbell, field secretary of the Ohio Christian Endeavor union, travels 17,000 miles a year in that state in the interest of the cause. Ohio has set for itself the inspiring task of securing 400 new societies before the state convention at Akron. Ohio's recipe for the tenth increase campaign is:

Our course will be
WON if each will start
ONE
NEW society.

A Trio of Items.

In place of the usual evangelistic services for the winter Rev. J. F. Berry, pastor of the Fort Street Congregational church, Detroit, has organized his Endeavor society into praying bands, which will hold cottage prayer meetings throughout the parish.

The Portland (Me.) Christian Endeavor union is considering the question of securing a public fountain as a memorial to Neal Dow and presenting it to the city of Portland. The state union heartily approves of this and promises co-operation in the work.

There are in America six Christian Endeavorers from the famous society in the Okayama orphanage of Japan, the institution established by that Japanese George Muller, Mr. Ishii. These six boys are pluckily earning their own support by rough work on the railroad and are trying to live up to the ideals of Christian Endeavor.

LITERARY.

In the April-June Forum H. Litchfield West's review of the quarter's events in "American Politics" estimates the career of the late Senator Hanna, and discusses the situation in both the parties in relation to the Presidential election. Mr. West reaches the conclusion that "there must be a shaking up of dead bones if the coming campaign is to possess anything of old-time interest and vigor."

The Popular Magazine for April, now on sale, presents as its piece de resistance, a new serial by Max Pemberton, whose previous work as a writer of adventure fiction has won *for him an enviable place in litera*ture. The story is entitled "Beatrice, of Venice," and has as a scene Venice at the time when Napoleon was seeking to add it to his growing empire. It is a field particularly adapted to Mr. Pemberton's power of handling situations strong in love and romantic adventure. The number also contains a clever novelette by William Wallace Cook, entitled "Wanted, A Highwayman," and fourteen other fiction features.

The Popular Science Monthly for April contains the following articles: "Recent Discoveries in Radiation and their Significance," by Professor R. A. Millikan; "Evolution of the Human Form," by Charles Morris; "The Arequipa Station of the Harvard Observatory," by Professor Solon I. Bailey; "The Royal Prussian Academy of Science and the Fine Arts, Berlin," by Edward F. Williams; "The Influence of Liebig on Development of Chemical Industries," by Dr. Carl Dalsberg; "The Conservation of Energy in those of Advancing Years," by Madison J. Taylor; "The Canoeist in Brazil," by Thomas C. Dawson; "The Air of the Luray Caverns," by Dr. Guy L. Hunner.

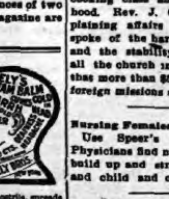
The essential unsoundness of practical Christian Science lies here; that a philosophy is proposed which assumes man made purposely for perfect happiness in this dispensation—an assumption at once gratuitous if observation base philosophy, and groundless if Holy Writ be the standard. It is not, as Dr. Wace said in a very different connection, that things ought not to be so explained, but that they cannot be. Mrs. Eddy's opposition to the spirit of the Bible is even more *fundamentally heretical than her con*tradictions of its letter; and the evidence of infidelity to professed standards, corroborating the evidence of historical, philosophical, and scientific weakness, points to the fact—or, if knowledge may never get higher than probability—to the extremely well-founded probability, that Christian Science is, at the best, a long, long way from the truth.—John W. Churchman, in the April Atlantic.

Ainslee's is setting a standard in the matter of decorated covers that other magazines will find it difficult to equal. The May number has one designed by Mucha, which, in beauty of composition, grace of drawing, and delicacy and harmony of coloring, is typical of the best work of the great decorator.

The leading story in the May number of Wayside Tales just out, is by Ashton Hillier, the famous English short story writer, whose stories of army life in India are second only to Kipling's. Other stories are by Frank H. Spearman, Eugene Kait, William Hamilton Osborne, Dr. Axel V. Grafstrom and Frank N. Straiton.

The April Bookman, is, in many ways, the most noteworthy number of that magazine ever published. It opens with the usual Chronicle and Comment on the passing literary and artistic show, with numerous portraits. Then follows an article from a new point of view, by Maurice Maeterlinck, on "Universal Suffrage." Then Edwin Lefevre's paper on "The Newspaper and Wall Street," in which the relations of the principal New York papers with the financial world are carefully and interestingly told; an article on "Tastes," by F. M. Colby; a seasonable paper on "Journalism in Japan," by Yone Noguchi, the young Japanese writer; Dr. Cooper's progress and review of the more notable recent books; a penetrating and clever review of George Bernard Shaw's work; a short biographical sketch of John Sharp Williams and Victor Smith's paper entitled, "Starting a Magazine," in which the amusing experiences of two novices in publishing a magazine are humorously narrated.

Nasal CATARRH



In all its stages there should be cleansing, soothing, healing. Ely's Cream Balm cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membrane. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

CHURCH'S EXPENSES FOR YEAR $35,891

Annual Meeting of Crescent Avenue Church and Its Chapels Shows Prosperity.

BENEVOLENCES $22,336

THE TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF THE CHURCH NOW REACHES 1,603.

Great Gains in All Departments —A Manse Wanted for Warren Chapel and An Organ for Hope Chapel.

A manse for the pastor of Warren chapel and an organ for Hope chapel were the two most important wants expressed at the annual meeting last night of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the chapels associated with it. For Warren chapel, F. H. Andrews read a report in which he favored the building of a manse or parsonage for the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, along with the proposed building of a new chapel.

All three elders of the Crescent Avenue church were elected to succeed themselves. They were John Leal, Andrew J. Gavett and Stephen Osborne. John Doull Miller and H. Otis Newman were re-elected deacons. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. S. Zelie.

The congregational expenses for the year included these items: Gifts towards building fund, Warren chapel, $4,535; home missions, including support of chapels, $9,442.43; foreign missions, $4,340; miscellaneous, $515.43; ministerial relief, $781.98; educational, $186.06; church erection, $18.098; aid to colleges, $475.43; freedmen, $301.38; deacons' fund, $1,044.55; publishing and Sabbath school work, $84.92; Bible Society, $35.54; synodical aid, $477; Plainfield charities, $874.63; temperance, $10; general assembly, $143.29.

The total benevolences of the church were $22,336.92 and the total congregational expenses, $35,891.52.

The total membership of the Crescent Avenue church April 1, 1904, was 942, as against 927 for the preceding year. During the year, there were fifteen persons accessions to the church on confession of faith, and forty by letter. The losses were twenty-four dismissed by letter and fifteen by death.

The membership of Bethel chapel April 1 was sixty-two; for the preceding year, sixty; three accessions by confession; two by letter; one death. For Hope chapel the membership figures were 559, as against 578 for the preceding year. Twenty-seven were received into Hope by confession and six by letter. At Warren chapel, the membership for the year ending last April 1 was 340, the figures for the preceding year being 334. Fourteen entered Mr. McKelvey's chapel on confession, and seven by letter.

There was a gain in membership of church and chapels for the year. The total membership for all four was 1,603 for the year just completed and 1,589 for the preceding year.

Of officers and teachers of Sunday-schools, Crescent Avenue had forty-six; Bethel, twelve; Hope, fifty-five, and Warren, fifty-three. There were 296 pupils in the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school; 357 at Bethel; 563 as Hope, and 363 at Warren. The total memberships were 394 for Crescent Avenue; 269 for Bethel; 618 for Hope, and 416 for Warren; with a grand total of 1,696. This represented a total gain of thirty-two.

Rev. F. D. Tildon, in making the report for Bethel chapel, laid particular stress upon the excellent work done by the training class, with seventeen members receiving weekly instruction. The growth of the primary department for Bethel chapel had been phenomenal.

Besides reporting the need for an organ, Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, referred to the good work accomplished by the evangelist, Lawrence Greenwood, whose exhirations had resulted in the addition of twenty members of the church. Mr. Howard said the chapel needed someone to conduct a mission band and a young women's sewing club.

Mr. Andrews, for Warren chapel, read reports for the sewing school, cooking class and Christian Brotherhood. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, in explaining affairs at Warren chapel, spoke of the harmony that prevailed and the stability that characterized all the church institutions. He said that more than $540 had been given to foreign missions during the year past.

Morgan, Charles Steiner and E. L. Suffern, for one year. D. Foster Updyke was elected church clerk, and Philip R. Suffern, auditor.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the church will be celebrated next September, and an elaborate quarter-centennial programme will be arranged. A committee to make the preliminary arrangements was appointed: Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Joseph E. Morse and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux.

For the various benevolent societies, Rev. C. L. Goodrich reported an active condition. It was announced that the church membership was about 200. The treasurer's receipts were about $1,800 more than for last year.

Preceding the business meeting a supper was tendered the congregation from 6 o'clock until 7:30 by the women's association. About 125 gathered about the tables which were prettily decorated with roses and carnations. On the committee in charge were: Mrs. J. V. Beekman, chairman; Mrs. F. A. Weeks, Mrs. Messersmith, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Mrs. H. C. Nomer, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Mrs. D. Foster Updyke, Mrs. Harold and Mrs. Millard. Brief addresses were made by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, M. E. Dwight, John M. Whiton, Alexander Millar and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Joseph Robinson and coffee by Mrs. Mackintosh. The waitresses were the Misses Mary Whiton, Rhoda Culbertson, Ethel Millar, Elsie Suffern, Marion Woodcock, Aimee Emmons, Hattie Messersmith, Margaret Weesman, Emily Winant, Ethel Mackintosh, Jessie Mackintosh and Nannie Lockhart.

Financially the church's condition was reported as remarkably prosperous. All bills were paid and there was not a cent of indebtedness for the year. There was a small balance in the treasury.

DOING BUSINESS ON SUNDAY

PROTEST AGAINST ALLOWING FOREIGNERS TO KEEP THEIR STORES OPEN.

Action against foreign storekeepers in the borough who violate the spirit of the Sabbath closing ordinance is becoming a matter that requires the attention of the North Plainfield authorities. It is believed that the class of tradesmen referred to are boldly using fake religious "convictions" to cloak Sunday trading.

As far a it goes, the claim that Saturday is their Sabbath is good enough for the law on its face, but the way the "Sabbath" is observed is believed to hold the shopkeepers open to prosecution as violators of the Sunday law. The law was not designed, as the foreign tradesmen seem to think, to enable shopkeepers to close on a comparatively dull day and do the brisk business that results from the closing of all other stores on another day.

FRANCIS E. WHITESIDE ORDAINED A DEACON

A Plainfield Reporter Takes Orders in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

HIS FIRST CHARGE

PASTOR OF THE WILLETT STREET CHURCH IN NEW YORK.

Out of a Score of Applicants, Mr. Whiteside is One of the Seven Made Deacons—Bishop Cyrus Foss Officiates.

Rev. F. E. Whiteside, a former newspaper man of this city, of whose remarkable conversion while reporting one of the meetings in the revival campaigns here in 1901, so much has been written, was ordained a deacon by Bishop Cyrus Foss at the close of the New York East Conference of the Methodist church Tuesday night. The ordination took place in the Simpson M. E. church, Brooklyn, where the conference was held.

Rev. Mr. Whiteside was one of a class of seven admitted to the conference on trial, three of whom were made deacons. Nearly a score of applications were considered for admission, and the success of the young Plainfielder in passing, is worthy of more than passing note.

Mr. Whiteside and two others of the class were elected to deacons' orders by the conference in the morning. In the afternoon the three were introduced to the conference and the audience from the platform.

As in the Protestant Episcopal church, the diaconate is the first order in which a candidate for the M. E. ministry can serve. The deacons come up for elders' orders after two years of service. Deacons may act as pastors, but sacredotal limitations separate them from elders.

Rev. Mr. Whiteside was appointed as pastor of the Willett Street church, New York. The appointment, however, is purely nominal, his real position being that of assistant to Rev. Theodore Henderson in the work of the Evangelistic Commission. To place him formally in charge of the new evangelical work, Rev. Mr. Henderson, who is well-known here from the part he took in the gospel campaign referred to above, was appointed "pastor of the East Side Parish," which covers the churches in the slum section of the metropolis. Mr. Henderson was pastor of the Simpson church.

Headquarters of the Evangelistic Commission will be at the Willett Street church, and there Rev. Mr. Whiteside will do the greater part of his work as Rev. Mr. Henderson's lieutenant.

NOW IT IS A LOCAL CONCERN

A PLAINFIELD BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION STARTS OUT ANEW.

The Central Building and Loan Association of Plainfield, is a new building and loan formed out of the Plainfield district of the New Jersey Home Buyers League. The league was doing a nice business here in Plainfield but the building and loan law of 1903 requires State organizations of this class to change their methods. Therefore the Plainfield district deemed it best for all concerned to withdraw from the State Association, and form a local association, embodying the most improved and up-to-date methods required. Their loans here are of the best and their money is well invested. Not only have the majority of the investors already transferred their shares, but quite a number of new members have come in at once. The board of management of the Central Building and Loan are: F. deL. Hyde, J. A. Hubbard, W. N. Stillman, H. C. VanEmburgh, D. M. Runyon, Charles H. Dunham, Fred J. Viewig, J. D. Loiseaux, John E. Dunn, H. B. MacDonald and J. F. MacDonald.

Enlarging His Shop.

A permit to build a frame addition to his dwelling to be used as a paint and wall papering shop, has been granted Thomas Eganey, of 659 West Fourth street. The dimensions of the addition will be 16x16 feet, and fifteen feet in height.

Addition to Butcher Shop.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted Fred Eadress, of West Front street, a permit to erect a one-story frame addition to his butcher shop at 208 Muhlenberg place. The dimensions of the addition will be 16x16x14 feet.

Frame Dwelling Permit.

Phillip Cottrell has received from Building Inspector Doane permission to erect a frame dwelling, 22x26x22 feet, on East Front street. It will be two stories in height.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 24: "Christian Education In Missionary Lands."—Matt. iv, 12-17.

The gospel of Christ changes completely the ideas and customs of every people who accept it.

The habits and institutions of life are largely the outgrowth from the religion held. What one thinks of God and man and the world and the way they are related will settle what he will do and how he will feel.

Jesus Christ is the first who taught that God is Father and men are brothers. He said it in words and in deeds. His life and death illustrated the idea and demonstrated it as fact. He was the first one to arrive at conscious experience of sonship to God. Having attained it, he promised power to attain it to all who truly sought it. A characteristic of those who really seek it is an impulse to teach others the way. This is a revolutionary in its effect. It overturns the old way of regarding things and all the former manner of life. It creates a new life in the individual and forms society on different lines. It affects all arts, sciences, philosophies and social customs.

Men in the Orient have been some peculiarly gifted to impart instruction to others. Undoubtedly the gift of teaching will be needed until the kingdom of God come in all its fullness. This gift all continues in the church. Its value is coming to greater appreciation than ever before, and its usefulness is greatly increased.

In every land education in righteousness is receiving fresh emphasis. In lands particularly called "missionary" the recent extension is mostly of much attention. From kindergarten to theological seminary every appliance of Christian education and culture is diligently utilized in the work of bringing the people from darkness of heart and degradation of life to pagan worship to the knowledge of God through Jesus Christ.

A series of photographs from the different lands where our missionaries are at work shows the condition of affairs better than volumes of print can do. Mexico, South America, Africa, India, China, Japan and all the other lands *have the little children of na*tives and foreigners gathered into groups under the care of trained kindergarten instructors. Our best graduates of college and normal schools and musical conservatories are scat*tered all over the world, teaching by* the most improved methods the highest truths known to men in these lines. The best medical instruction and skill are in this service. Hospitals and dispensaries are necessities of every mission. Besides and beyond all this we are giving training to natives in the art and science of teaching and healing, so that all be able to go out and do the work and also teach others to do it. Theological schools train preachers, and all other grades of schools co-operate to raise in each land the highest grade of life that is possible be able to carry on the work without assistance, or at least dependence, on outside help.

Then what swarms of scholars! Peking, Foochow, Shagapore, Madras, Lucknow, Bombay, Pusan and all the great centers between have gathered the best talent of the natives and are training the future rulers of many lands intellectually, morally and spiritually for the great tasks which await the hands of the coming men and women.

More than any one can foretell, the fate of the world in this century for weal or woe rests on the teaching now being given to the bright boys and girls in the mission schools of the Christian church. The future of China, of India, of Africa, of all these other lands, is in the balance. Our future is weighing in the same scales. God bless our schools!

Improved or Endured.

There are some things in life to be endured and other things to be changed for the better. It shows Christian submission and fortitude to stand what cannot be helped, but it indicates laziness and cowardice to put up with what can and should be mended. God did not put us here simply to endure a lot, but to improve it whenever possible. He tests our character and principles by His varying providences. He loves the heroic carriage under one set of conditions, but under others He delights in the disposition and capacity to triumph over difficulties and to transform adversity into prosperity.—Presbyterian.

Heavenly Secrets.

There is a beautiful figure of speech in a verse in the Twenty-fifth Psalm, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." The term rendered "secret" is in the original Hebrew tongue "a whisper." When a humble and teachable soul draws near to God He often tells it secret. He whispers in the Christian's ear some sweet word of promise or love no one else can hear, perhaps no one else could understand. —Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

No Provision For a Relapse.

Why was he (the man cured of the palsy) to take up the bed? Because, as some one has beautifully said, there is to be no provision made for a relapse. Oh, how many of us have made that provision in the past! Yea, we will get up, but we will have the bed ready for a relapse. So far as you are able make it impossible by the absoluteness of your surrender and consecration ever to get back. Step clear out upon God. —G. Campbell Morgan, D. D.

A True Man.

Who is a true man? He who does the truth and never holds a principle on which he is not prepared in any hour to act and in any hour to risk the consequences of holding it.—Christian Instructor.

PROFANEST OF PARROTS.

Widow of Old Sailor Says It Would Seem Like Home Again to Have the Bird Around.

"Tootsie," the profane parrot of Philadelphia, Pa., must go. He threatens to ruin the characters of two of his green and yellow brothers whose morals have hitherto been above suspicion.

"Tootsie" is to be sold. He belongs to Richard M. Mills, of Huntington street, who advertises his "only reason for selling is that the bird swears in his vocabulary."

"Tootsie" came into Mr. Mills' possession under a guarantee that he did not swear. Within 24 hours he had broken the guarantee and one of the commandments, besides shocking two other parrots belonging to the Mills family, neither of whom had ever said anything more wicked than "Polly wants a cracker."

"TWOULD SEEM LIKE HOME."

"Tootsie's" evil ways are due to his early environment. Before he came to the Mills mansion he had lived in a cafe whose habitues had found him to be an excellent substitute for a phonograph in the matter of reproducing profanity. His memory was unimpaired when he became a member of the Mills household.

"Tootsie" refused to be reformed. When the little Mills threw water on him for swearing he swore at them for doing it. On New Year's day not an oath passed his beak and it was thought he had turned over a new leaf, but the next morning he returned to his old ways with increasing vigor.

"Tootsie's" companions at first only listened to him in amazement, but a few days ago one of them marred a spotless record by exclaiming, "Dare it!" That settled "Tootsie's" fate, and the advertisement appeared.

To-day's visitors included a widow, who explained that her late husband had been a seafaring man who was given to using questionable language. "It would seem like home again to have the dear bird around," she said.

"Tootsie's" vocabulary contains such gems as, "Go to blazes and shut the door," "Come up and have a drink, every man jack of you," and "Blast your eyes, you son of a sea cook." Other favorite expressions can be expressed only by dashes and asterisks.

WED IN DRUG STORE.

Proprietor Balks When Asked to Perform the Ceremony, But Finds Justice for the Lovers.

Cupid has captured a drug store in Waukegan, Ill., and proposes to use it in contracting marriages vows.

For years the corner drug store has been used to meet all kinds of wants, but no one every heard of a man going in among the big and little bottles of many colors to have the apothecary prescribe the words that bind two hearts in one.

John Fry, leading Margaret Brownell, sought Proprietor Hallstein in his Washington street pharmacy recently. Fry broached the subject, bluntly saying that as the apothecary accommodated people in selling stamps, money orders, kept a public telephone and a directory, received lost articles, bound up bruised people, and rubbed palms with arnica, he did not know why he could not marry a man if he was asked to.

The good natured pillmaker assured the couple that the law did not empower him to perform a marriage ceremony, but the whole drug store was theirs, and if they would be seated for a moment he would send out for a justice. It required but a few moments to find Judge Murry and less time for that functionary to say the words that "bound" stronger than any bandage the druggist kept in stock.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 24.

Topic.—"What Christ can do for "darkest Africa."—Isa. xiv, 11-13.

The problem before Christian missions in Africa is a tremendously great one. This can be fully realized by a glance at some of the characteristics of the dark continent.

1. The size of the continent makes its evangelization a great problem. "Africa is ninety times the size of Great Britain, over fifty times that of France or Germany, over five and a half times that of the United States, excluding Alaska, and over three times as large as all Europe." In these facts we find one proof of the great problem before us.

2. The greatness of the population adds to the difficulties. According to the most recent estimates the total population of Africa is over 100,000,000. When we remember the time and labor required to Christianize the smaller and less populated countries of the earth we have some faint idea of the seriousness of the task when from 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 of people are involved.

3. The character of the people, the moral, social and political conditions in "darkest Africa," form the most difficult feature of the problem of Africa's salvation. Extent of territory and size of population are after all small factors if the people and conditions are favorable. But, alas, in Africa, as nowhere else, are they most unfavorable. Six different races are distinguishable—the Negro, Fulah, Hamite, Bottentot, Semite and Hamite, the last two occupying the whole of northern Africa. Outside of Christianity, Mohammedanism and heathenism prevail. Slavery and polygamy abound among the native tribes. The moral condition of the people is of the very lowest order. The continent has been partitioned among the European nations—England, France, Germany, Portugal, Italy and Spain. Nor has this political supremacy been altogether for good. While it opens the doors of the country to the missionaries and affords them absolute pro*tection, yet the introduction of rum* and firearms has been the cause of incalculable harm. The Christian people of the world should demand that the governments protect those over whom they rule from danger and harm and cease placing within their reach that which causes their greatest destruction. Not a month passes but that can send a missionary and a barrel of rum on the same vessel to a people like those of Africa needs to be toned up, and the people of such nations should demand that commercialism should not stand in the way of the moral and spiritual, physical and mental elevation of any people the world over. This done, and the cause of missions everywhere would receive such an impetus as it has scarcely ever received.

The picture of Africa is a truly dark one. Can Christ do anything for the dark continent? Most assuredly He can. He is the Light of the World and the Gospel is darkness dispelling light. It has done is a proof of what He can do. Civilizations in the main as low as those of Africa have been uplifted by the gospel of Christ. Heathenism never prevailed under fouler conditions than it did in the Roman empire or in the early Christian centuries, yet Christ conquered it. The native races of Europe, though stronger physically and mentally than the native Africans, were yet savage and heathen, in some cases offering human sacrifices to their gods. But the world knows what Christ did for these races. The middle ages were conspicuous for their moral and spiritual darkness, yet Christ shone in the Gospel's glorious light. And Africa itself has felt the touch of its Divine Master and has responded to it. Over fifty missionary societies are at work on the dark continent, and in time, under the blessing of God, the gospel will reach every people and tribe, and bring them out of the darkness of sin and superstition into the glorious light of the Christ, the Light of the World.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. ii, 1-12; lxxii, 8-15; Isa. xxxv, 1-7; lii, 7-10; Matt. v, 14-16; xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 1-11; viii, 26-40; Rom. x, 14, 15; Rev. xxii, 17.

Ohio Aggressiveness.

Rev. C. H. Hubbell, field secretary of the Ohio Christian Endeavor union, travels 17,000 miles a year in that state in the interest of the cause. Ohio has set for itself the inspiring task of securing 400 new societies before the state convention in Akron. Ohio's recipe for the tenth increase campaign is:

Our course will be
WON if each will start
ONE
NEW society.

A Trio of Items.

In place of the usual evangelistic services for the winter Rev. J. F. Berry, pastor of the Fort Street Congregational church, Detroit, has organized his Endeavor society into praying bands, which will hold cottage prayer meetings throughout the parish.

The Portland (Me.) Christian Endeavor union, is considering the question of securing a public fountain as a memorial to Neal Dow and presenting it to the city of Portland. The state union heartily approves of this and promises co-operation in the work.

There are in America six Christian Endeavorers from the famous society in the Okayama orphanage of Japan, the institution established by that Japanese George Muller, Mr. Ishii. These six boys are pluckily earning their own support by rough work on the railroad and are trying to live up to the ideals of Christian Endeavor.

LITERARY.

In the April-June Forum H. Litchfield West's review of the quarter's events in "American Politics" estimates the career of the late Senator Hanna, and discusses the situation in both the parties in relation to the Presidential election. Mr. West reaches the conclusion that "there must be a shaking up of dead bones if the coming campaign is to possess anything of old-time interest and vigor."

The Popular Magazine for April, now on sale, presents as its piece de resistance, a new serial by Max Pemberton, whose previous work as a writer of adventure fiction has won for him an enviable place in literature. The story is entitled "Beatrice, of Venice," and has as a scene Venice at the time when Napoleon was seeking to add it to his growing empire. It is a field particularly adapted to Mr. Pemberton's power of handling situations strong in love and romantic adventure. The number also contains a clever novelette by William Wallace Cook, entitled "Wanted, A Highwayman," and fourteen other fiction features.

The Popular Science Monthly for April contains the following articles: "Recent Discoveries in Radiation and their Significance," by Professor R. A. Millikan; "Evolution of the Human Form," by Charles Morris; "The Arequipa Station of the Harvard Observatory," by Professor Solon I. Bailey; "The Royal Prussian Academy of Sciences and the Plan Acts, Berlin," by Edward F. Williams; "The Influence of Liebig on Development of Chemical Industries," by Dr. Carl Duisberg; "The Conservation of Energy in those of Advancing Years," by Madison J. Taylor; "The Canoeist in Brazil," by Thomas C. Dawson; "The Air of the Luray Caverns," by Dr. Guy L. Hunner.

The essential unsoundness of practical Christian Science lies here; that a philosophy is proposed which assumes man made purposely for perfect happiness in this dispensation—an assumption at once gratuitous if observation base philosophy, and groundless if Holy Writ be the standard. It is not, as Dr. Wace said in a very different connection, that things ought not to be so explained, but that they cannot be. Mrs. Eddy's opposition to the spirit of the Bible is even more fundamentally heretical than her contradictions of its letter; and the evidence of infidelity to professed standards, corroborating the evidence of historical, philosophical, and scientific weakness, points to the fact—or, if knowledge may never get higher than probability—to the extremely well-founded probability, that Christian Science is, at the best, a long, long way from the truth.—John W. Churchman, in the April Atlantic.

Ainslee's is setting a standard in the matter of decorated covers that other magazines will find it difficult to equal. The May number has one designed by Mucha, which, in beauty of composition, grace of drawing, and delicacy and harmony of coloring, is typical of the best work of the great decorator.

The leading story in the May number of Wayside Tales just out, is by Ashton Hillier, the famous English short story writer, whose stories of army life in India are second only to Kipling's. Other stories are by Frank H. Spearman, Eugene Kais, William Emmes Moore, Dr. Axel V. Grafstrom and Frank N. Straiton.

The April Bookman, is, in many ways, the most noteworthy number of that magazine ever published. It opens with the usual Chronicle and Comment on the passing literary and artistic show, with numerous portraits. Then follows an article from a new point of view, by Maurice Maeterlinck, on "Universal Suffrage." Then Edwin Lefevre's paper on "The Newspaper and Wall Street," in which the relations of the principal New York papers with the financial world are candidly and interestingly told; an article on "Tastes," by E. M. Colby; a seasonable paper on "Journalism in Japan," by Yone Noguchi, the young Japanese writer; Dr. Cooper's grouping and review of the more notable recent books; a penetrating and clever review of George Bernard Shaw's work; a short biographical sketch of John Sharp Williams and Victor Smith's paper entitled, "Starting a Magazine," in which the amusing experiences of two novices in publishing a magazine are humorously narrated.

Annual Meeting of Crescent Avenue Church and Its Chapels Shows Prosperity.

BENEVOLENCES $22,336

THE TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF THE CHURCH NOW REACHES 1,603.

Great Gains In All Departments —A Manse Wanted for Warren Chapel and An Organ for Hope Chapel.

A manse for the pastor of Warren chapel and an organ for Hope chapel were the two most important wants expressed at the annual meeting last night of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the chapels associated with it. For Warren chapel, F. H. Andrews read a report in which he favored the building of a manse or parsonage for the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, along with the proposed building of a new chapel.

All three elders of the Crescent Avenue church were elected to succeed themselves. They were John Leal, Andrew J. Gavett and Stephen Cahoone. John Doull Miller and H. Otis Newman were re-elected deacons. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. S. Zelie.

The congregational expenses for the year included these items: Gifts towards building fund, Warren chapel, *$4,535; home missions, including sup*port of chapels, $9,442.43; foreign missions, $4,340; miscellaneous, $618.-49; ministerial relief, $761.98; educational, $186.06; church erection, $18,-038; aid to colleges, $475.43; freedmen, $301.38; deacons' fund, $1,044.55; publishing and Sabbath school work, $84.92; Bible Society, $35.54; synodical aid, $477; Plainfield charities, $874.63; temperance, $10; general assembly, $142.29.

The total benevolences of the church were $22,336.93 and the total congregational expenses, $35,891.52.

The total membership of the Crescent Avenue church April 1, 1904, was 943, against 927 for the preceding year. During the year, there were fourteen accessions to the church on confession of faith, and forty by letter. The losses were twenty-four dis*missed by letter and fifteen by death.*

The membership of Bethel chapel April 1 was sixty-two; for the preceding year, sixty; three accessions by confession; two by letter; one death. For Hope chapel the membership figures were 389, as against 378 for the preceding year. Twenty-seven were received into Hope by confession and six by letter. As Warren chapel, the membership for the year ending last April 1 was 340, the figures for the preceding year being 324. Fourteen entered Mr. McKelvey's chapel on confession, and seven by letter.

There was a gain in membership of church and chapels for the year. The total membership for all four was 1,-603 for the year just completed and 1,589 for the preceding year.

Of officers and teachers of Sunday-schools, Crescent Avenue had forty-six; Bethel, twelve; Hope, fifty-five, and Warren, fifty-three. There were 296 pupils at the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school; 257 at Bethel; 363 at Hope, and 363 at Warren. The total memberships were 394 for Crescent Avenue; 269 for Bethel; 618 for Hope, and 415 for Warren; with a grand total of 1,696. This represented a total gain of thirty-two.

Rev. F. D. Tildon, in making the report for Bethel chapel, laid particular stress upon the excellent work done by the training class, with seventeen members receiving weekly instruction. The growth of the primary department for Bethel chapel had been phenomenal.

Besides reporting the need for an organ, Rev. L. B. Howard, of Hope chapel, referred to the good work accomplished by the evangelist, Lawrence Greenwood, whose exhibitions had resulted in the addition of twenty members of the church. Mr. Howard said the chapel needed someone to conduct a junior band and a young women's sewing club.

Mr. Andrews, for Warren chapel, read reports for the sewing school, cooking class and Christian Brotherhood. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, in explaining affairs at Warren chapel, spoke of the harmony that prevailed and the stability that characterized all the church institutions. He said that more than $540 had been given to foreign missions during the year past.

LEAL'S BOYS WIN INTER-SCHOLASTICS

Athletic Contests at the Driving Park in Which Four Schools Are Represented.

THE RESULTS IN DETAIL

THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL TAKES SECOND PLACE.

Daniels, of the Leal's, Captures the Individual Championship—

The Complexion of the Several Teams.

Leal's School team won the inter-scholastic championship field meet at the Driving Park Friday afternoon, defeating the Plainfield High School, North Plainfield High School and Westfield High School, in the order named. Leal's made 34 points; P. H. S., 30 points; N. P. H. S., 5 points, and Westfield, 2 points. In the inter-scholastic individual championship contest Daniels, of Leal's, won his score being 18 points, 6 more than his nearest competitor, Howard Craig, of P. H. S.

There was an attendance of nearly 200 spectators. The programme began at 2:30 and lasted four hours. C. E. A. Heywood was referee, Lindsey Best, of the High School faculty, was scorer, and John Heicher was measurer and judge. Mr. Heicher and Mr. Heywood took the time and Kenneth Robbie acted as starter L. H. Backer was clerk of the counts.

The general committee on arrangements was made up of Mr. Heywood, chairman; Harry Thompson, Leslie Backer, Robert Abbott and Henry Ketcham. Mr. Best presented the trophies to the winners of each event.

The teams lined up as follows: Leal's, Abbott, Daniels, Wilcox; city High School, Thompson, Craig, Walters; North Plainfield, Hamilton, Steiner, Webster; Westfield, Dewey, Ketcham, Clark. Their records in the team work is noted above; as individuals they scored as follows:

Daniels, 18; Craig, 12; Thompson, 11; Abbott, 10; Walters, 7; Wilcox, 6; Steiner, 5; Ketcham, 1; Clark, 1; Dewey, 0; Hamilton, 0; Webster, 0.

The various events went as follows, the men finishing in the order given:

Shot put—Abbott, 35 ft., 9 in; Thompson, 31 ft., 4 in; Collier, 31 ft., 8 in; Hamilton, 29 ft., 8 in; Webster, Wilcox, Steiner, Mundy, Ketcham.

Running broad jump—Daniels, 17 ft; Walters, 16 ft., 8 in; Thompson, 16 ft., 3½ in; Glenney, Hamilton, Dewey, Clark, Mundy, Ketcham, Steiner, Webster, Wilcox, Craig, Collier.

100 yard dash—Daniels, 11 1-5 seconds; Wilcox, Craig, Clark, Dewey, Walters.

Hammer throw—Abbott, 75 ft., 8½ in; Craig, 59 ft., 11 in; Ketcham, Wilcox, Mundy, Collier.

Running high jump—Steiner, 4 ft., 6 in; Walters, 4 ft., 5 in; Clark, 4 ft., 4 in; Thompson, Ketcham, Mundy, Wilcox, Daniels.

Standing broad jump—Daniels, 9 ft; Thompson, 8 ft., 11 in; Walters, 8 ft, 8 in; Ketcham, Mundy, Webster, Steiner, Abbott, Collier, Clark, Craig.

Flynn, Somerville; delegate to State Society, Dr. J. H. Buchanan; censors, Dr. S. O. B. Taylor, Millstone, one year; Dr. W. H. Merrill, Somerville, two years, and Dr. C. R. P. Fisher, Bound Brook, three years.

TO ENLARGE SUNDAY-SCHOOL

STEPS TAKEN AT TRINITY REFORMED TO MAKE NEEDED ADDITION.

The officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school held a meeting Sunday afternoon and the needs of an enlarged Sunday-school room to accommodate the growing primary department of the school was presented by Superintendent F. E. Smith, and after a full and free discussion of the subject it was unanimously voted more room must be had, and the superintendent was authorized to explain the needs of the enlargement to the school at an early date and solicit financial aid from every member, by cleaning, and report the amount thus raised for the enlargement, early in June. The further consideration of the subject will then be presented to the consistory of the church for their action.

Plans for a two-story structure in the rear, will be figured out, using all the ground space owned by the church. This will give the needed room for the primary department of the Sunday-school on the first floor and a pastor's study and a retiring room for the choir on the second floor.

Fixing Alarm System.

Borough Electrician McCullough, under the direction of the Gamewell Alarm Company, is rapidly putting the alarm system across the brook in thorough shape. All the re-wiring on the east side of Somerset street has been done, and the men are now at work in the Park section. The whole job will be completed in a very short time, and when the men go into the new house everything in the system will be in keeping with their splendid quarters.

Mrs. G. H. Babcock, of West Eighth street, has returned from Alfred, N. Y., where she has been spending several days.

BENEFICIAL SOCIETY ELECTS

HENRY HEARTLE PRESIDENT OF NEW GERMAN ORGANIZATION.

Formation of the new German benefit association, announced last week, was completed Thursday night. Sixteen charter members are on the roster, and a dozen or more new members are expected in a short time.

The organization goes under a German title, which is interpreted as the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund. It will meet the third Tuesday in each month in the rooms above Schanz's place on Park avenue. The death benefit is $250. Children and wives of members are eligible to election.

The local association is one of a chain that spreads all over the country and represents a total membership of 40,000. Several of the men who have affiliated with the new Fund were members in other places, and worked for the organization here to gather the scattered memberships together. Eight propositions have already been filed for action at the next meeting, and more are looked for.

The following officers have been chosen: President, Henry Heartle; vice president, Max Mothes; corresponding secretary, John Migdat; financial secretary, Frank Haurand; treasurer, Edward Ducheane. Auditors, Gabriel Scivway, A. Stutzenburg, Charles Gaebelor.

PLANS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

EXERCISES TO TAKE PLACE IN REFORM HALL ON MAY 30.

The Memorial detail from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met Saturday night with members of the Woman's Relief Corps, for the purpose of furnishing plans for the observance of Decoration Day. It is stated that Reform Hall had been engaged for the exercises.

It is likely that the Independent Fife and Drum Corps will be engaged to furnish music. It has also been decided to hold a service the Sunday night before Decoration Day in Reform Hall. Among the speakers will be Rev. L. E. Livermore, of New Market, a member of the Post.

Gun Club in Plight.

The members of the Carteret Gun Club, near Westfield, have decided to continue business until July, when the new pigeon bill goes into effect. The club is composed mostly of New Yorkers, there being thirty-five millionaires among them. It is said that they are considering the advisability of locating clay pigeon traps on their grounds and thus continue the sport on their grounds.

Called to Marconaster.

A call has been extended to H. J. Martin to act as superintendent of the Sunday-school at Marconaster chapel. Sunday every teacher and scholar in the school signed a petition asking that Mr. Martin go to the chapel and assume leadership. Mr. Martin has the matter under consideration.

NEW JERSEY DEMOCRATS ELECT CONSERVATIVES

Delegation to Represent State at National Convention Friendly to Parker.

UNIT RULE ENFORCED

THE HEARST PEOPLE HOLD A RUMP CONVENTION.

The National Delegates Are James Smith, Jr., Robert Davis, Johnston Cornish and Howard Carrow.

Enthusiasm for Judge Alton B. Parker marked the sentiment of the delegates to the Democratic State convention at Trenton yesterday. The entire delegation to St. Louis, consisting of twenty-four men, with one possible exception is strongly for Parker, and is bound to vote as a unit at the will of a majority of the delegates. There were a few more than 100 Hearst men among the 1,158 delegates, and of these, seventy-eight held a rump convention in a hill hired a day in advance. They elected a contesting delegation to St. Louis.

Among the men in the rival convention were the seven Hearst delegates from this city, F. J. Shattle, the leader, and J. D. McAleer, his man Friday, from the Second ward; J. H. Harkins and Wilbur Pennington from the Third ward; and Bernard Brady, Clarence Walden and Ira G. Hulbert from the Fourth ward.

The anti-Hearst delegates from this city were Clarence E. Teal and A. J. Nolan, from the First ward, Nolan taking the place of Walter L. Hetfield. J. W. Yates, of this city, friendly to Parker, was elected to fill the vacancy from Clark township.

R. V. Lindabury, of Newark and formerly of this city, was temporary chairman of the convention The delegates-at-large elected were: Former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Essex; Robert Davis, of Hudson; Johnston Cornish, of Warren county, and Howard Carrow, of Camden.

The delegates to the National convention from the Fifth district are James C. Connolly, of Union county, and DeWitt C. Flanagan, of Morris county.

The Hearst rump convention drafted resolutions and elected delegates to the National convention.

SIXTEEN IN A DRAG HUNT

MERRY SPORT ENJOYED BY PLAINFIELD RIDERS ON SATURDAY.

A good run to hounds was held Saturday afternoon by sixteen followers of the sport. Conditions were favorable for the chase. The ground was dry and it was good going. The chase was unusually satisfactory over the same route cross country as on the preceding Saturday.

The start was at Rockview avenue and Rockview terrace, thence through farms and meadows to Dunellen and New Market and back along Seventh street to the finish at Grant avenue. The gallop home was particularly enjoyable. The hounds followed the scent well throughout the chase. The owners of the Cadmus, McMahon and Sorenson farms kindly allowed the party the privilege of their lands.

Those in the party were Dr. and Mrs. O'M. Knott, George P. Mellick, Daniel Runkle, Miss Holly, Miss Noe, of Westfield; Miss Cairns, Miss Tredwell, Miss Crulkshank, Mr. Peterson, Irving Clark, Mr. Bourne, of Orangford; Mr. Bellows, R. A. Shebbeare, Mr. Webster and Charles Ismay, of New York, and Percy Nelson.

The next drag hunt will take place Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The start will be at the Crescent Avenue church.

Horse Show Meeting.

There will be a meeting this week of those interested in the horse show which is planned for an early date in June. The prize lists will be made out and announced. Interest in the undertaking has been gratifying. Several people have promised to donate cups for prizes and many others have signified their intention of making entries.

P. S. C. Improvement.

Employes of the Public Service Corporation have been engaged for several days in stringing a new feed wire from this city to Dunellen and Bound Brook. When the work is completed the main line cars will run through to Bound Brook from Elizabeth.

DID NOT INSTRUCT

Convention at Harrisburg Refused to Name Parker.

JUDGE THOMPSON BY ACCLAMATION

Attempt Made to Amend Platform by Substituting For Unit Rule a Paragraph Instructing For Parker Failed.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 20.—The Democratic state convention held here refused to instruct the national delegates from Pennsylvania to vote for the nomination of Judge Alton B. Parker of New York for president. The delegates will go to St. Louis unin*structed and will be bound by* the unit rule.

An attempt was made at the meetings of the resolutions committee of the convention to amend the platform by substituting for the unit rule plank a paragraph instructing the delegates for Judge Parker. It failed, and the platform as adopted by the committee was unanimously adopted by the convention.

Justice Samuel Gustine Thompson of Philadelphia was nominated by acclamation for supreme court justice to succeed himself for the full term of twenty-one years. He is at present a member of the supreme court by appointment of Governor Pennypacker, and his commission expires next January.

After the nomination of Justice Thompson the following were unanimously elected delegates at large to the national convention: James M. Guffey, Pittsburg; J. K. P. Hall, Ridgeway; Robert E. Pattison, Philadelphia, and Robert E. Wright, Allentown.

James S. Rilling, Erie; E. M. Herbst, Reading; George McGowan, Philadelphia, and J. Davis Broadhead, South Bethlehem, were elected alternates at large.

Stanley W. Davenport and Robert W. Irwin were chosen as electors at large.

District delegates to the St. Louis convention and district electors were also elected.

The national delegates and electors chosen by the delegates from the Fifteenth and Twenty-second districts are contested. The contests were referred to a committee to be appointed by State Chairman Hall. Chairman Hall was re-elected by the state committee at its annual session.

Miss Gould at White House.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Miss Helen Gould and a party of New York friends, including the Misses Orton, Wilder, Montgomery and Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Miss Gould took luncheon with the president and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, the other luncheon guests being Chief Justice Moody and Messrs. Owen Wister and Stewart Edward White, the authors.

Bryan Talks of Convention.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 20.—W. J. Bryan has given to the press the following statement concerning the action of the New York Democratic state convention: "I do not think the instructions will give Judge Parker any additional strength, but the platform adopted by the convention ought to prevent his nomination unless the Democrats, when they assemble at St. Louis, decide to attempt a confidence game on the public."

Typhoid Rages at Millionocket.

MILLIONOCKET, Me., April 20.—An epidemic of typhoid fever prevails here, and up to date there have been about 200 cases. The health officials found it necessary to convert a hotel into a hospital. At present the epidemic, which originated from the water supply, shows indications of disappearing.

Uncle Sam Now Owns Canal.

MISS CHRISTOFFERSON IS AN APRIL BRIDE

Wm. Heeren, of New York, the Groom at Ceremony Taking Place in This City.

TOUR THROUGH WEST

JOHN ROSS, OF PHILADELPHIA, THE BEST MAN.

Miss May Christofferson, Sister of Bride, as Maid-of-Honor—Rev. Mr. Henry, of New York City, Officiates.

Miss Nellie Christofferson, daughter of Walter Christofferson, of East Sixth street, and William Heeren, of New York, were married Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the bride's home. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Henry, of the Eleventh Street Methodist church, of New York city.

Decorations of the house were largely floral in a color scheme of green and white, palms and rubber plants making an effective background for numbers of Easter lilies. About fifty witnessed the ceremony, including guests from New York, Philadelphia, Newark and this city.

The bride was gowned in white mohair trimmed with white silk and lace and wore lilies-of-the-valley in her hair. She was attended by her sister, Miss May Christofferson, maid of honor, gowned in pale blue Swiss with trimmings of the same color and white roses in her hair. The best man was John Ross, of Philadelphia. The bride received many beautiful presents including silver and cut glass.

Mr. and Mrs. Heeren took the 5:29 train for St. Louis. They will spend the summer months in the West, returning to New York in December. They will reside either in this city or New York.

O. F. C. WINS AT RAHWAY

MONTROSS FIGURES CONSPICUOUSLY IN WELL-EARNED VICTORY.

In a rattling finish, the Orange Field Club baseball nine whipped Rahway High School at Rahway Saturday afternoon. It was a good game despite football weather. Rahway was in the lead from the first inning until the ninth, when the Plainfield boys, with the score six to five against them, pounded the ball for three runs and a victory, eight to six. With two out and two men on base in the ninth, Hellyer made a safe hit and sent in the tying run. Conover then banged out a two-bagger and added two more runs. A close decision at the plate in this inning was made against Orange. Montross pitched a good game and received excellent support. The lineup:

Orange F. C.—Montross, p; Giddas and Hellyer, c; Blimm, 1b; Hamilton and McGinley, 2b; Hook, 3b; Conover, ss; Tobin, lf; McGinley and Giddas, cf; Squires and Hellyer, rf. Rahway High School—Fischer, p; Peacock (capt.), c; Trembley, 1b; VanSant, 2b; Bracher, 3b; Ritter, ss; Morse, lf; Ransom, cf; Buckley, rf.

Score by innings:

Orange F. C.... 0 0 1 1 2 0 1 0 3—8
Rahway H. S... 2 0 0 2 0 2 0 0 0—6

FAIR ESTATE IS SETTLED

MRS. HANNAH NELSON GETS $130,000 —OTHER HEIRS GET SOMETHING.

Superior Judge Cook at San Francisco on Saturday ordered the final distribution of the estate of the late Charles L. Fair, which was appraised at $5,040,000, to the two sisters of the deceased, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt. The sum of $125,000 is to be held out for the purpose of meeting various claims. Attorneys' fees and other claims amounting to over $300,000, already allowed, are also to be paid out of the estate.

After taking testimony to prove that no child had been born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, the judge decreed that they had died without issue.

During the proceedings Charles S. Neal testified that $130,000 had been paid to Mrs. Nelson, of New Market, the mother of Mrs. Fair. The master of the estate of Mrs. Caroline D. Fair came up on the petition of Mrs. Jenny Harvey for the distribution of her share, including Mrs. Fair's jewelry and other personal belongings. This partial distribution was ordered and the final distribution will be made later. The bulk of this estate eventually will go to the *sisters of Charle*s Fair, the Nelsons' claim being compromised.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Samuels, of Somerville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. Leichtentritt, of West Front street.

YOUTHFUL FRIENDSHIP ENDS IN MARRIAGE

Miss Elizabeth A. Runyon Becomes Wife of Isaac C. Dunn, of Stelton.

CEREMONY AT HOUSE

THE MARRIAGE TAKES PLACE IN ISAAC GILES HOME HERE.

Rev. W. T. Dorward Officiates, Being Assisted by Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Ave. Church —The Wedding Reception.

Culminating a friendship that began in childhood in a Piscataway hamlet, Miss Elizabeth Amelia Runyon and Isaac Campbell Dunn were married Thursday at the home of the bride's uncle, Isaac Giles, of Grove street. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson B. Runyon, of Stelton, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dunn, of the same place. For the past seven years the bride has been living with her uncle here. She is a sister of Mrs. Thomas Cuming.

Friends and relatives, mainly the latter, to the number of 100, attended the ceremony. Guests were present from New Brunswick, Metuchen, Rahway, Stelton, Brooklyn.

The bridal party formed in the library at 6 o'clock. The bride, gowned in ecru silk voile, trimmed with chiffon applique, was a charming picture. She carried a trailing bouquet of roses and sweet peas. She was attended by Miss Mary Giles, her cousin, who wore a pretty creation of French blue nun's veiling, trimmed with silk; she carried Easter lilies. There was no best man, but two ushers, Frank Potter, of Rahway, and Edward Potter, of Metuchen, cousins of the groom, were included in the bridal procession.

From the library the party proceeded to the parlor, Mrs. W. T. Dorward, of Stelton, playing Mendelssohn's march. Before a heavy bank of potted plants and ferns, and directly beneath a big bell of Easter lilies, the couple were united by Rev. W. T. Dorward, of the Stelton Baptist church, the pastor of the groom. Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, pastor of the bride, assisted. The bridal party marched down an aisle formed of white ribbons.

After the ceremony a collation was served in the dining room, which was decorated in red. The parlor was lavishly decorated with plants and flowers in green and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will enjoy a ten-days' Southern honeymoon trip. They will reside in Stelton.

Many handsome gifts were received from friends and relatives, including bric-a-brac, silver ware, cut glass, furniture, articles of verte and linene.

MONTCLAIR ACADEMY BEATEN

LEAL'S TEAM WON GAME, SCORE BEING 3 TO 2.

The Leal School baseball team played an exciting game with the Montclair Military Academy on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon. Although the wind was blowing in almost hurricane fashion across the field, a good game resulted and the home team won by a score of 3 to 2. Only six innings were played as the Montclair boys were anxious to catch the 5:45 train for home.

Robert Abbott pitched an excellent game for the home team. He had plenty of speed and good control and during the four innings he was in the box he had his opponents at his mercy, they failing to score. He retired because of a lame arm. A split finger interfered with Lovell's work and was he was hit freely.

This is the summary:

NELSON A. MILLER, PRESIDENT OF CONCERN

Boroughite Head of Adder Machine Company, Which Has Increased Its Capital.

PLANT IS AT DETROIT

THE DEVICE HAS AN UNIQUE TYPEWRITER ATTACHMENT.

A Description of the Machine—The Capitalization of the Enterprise is Now $750,000.

Branching out to manufacture another computing machine, the Adder Machine Company, of which Nelson A. Miller, of North Plainfield, is president, has increased its capital from $30,000 to $750,000.

Mr. Miller has just returned from a trip to Detroit, Mich., where the Adder Machine plant is located, to preside at a meeting of the managing directors.

The directors voted to centralize the manufacture of the concern's patents in Detroit. These patents now include a recently invented attachment for typewriters that is regarded as a remarkable device. It is known as the Lotterhead Typewriter—adding machine, and it tabulates and adds mechanically. It is said to be a wonderful contrivance and the one of its kind in existence.

The Lotterhead machine can be placed under any good typewriter and will give the total of a column of figures written by the typewriter, making it an unique and very useful machine. The typewriter will not be changed in any way, and may be used for all ordinary work as if the adding mechanism were not attached. The attaching process is very simple mechanically and anyone can make the connection.

The machine possesses two complete sets of numeral wheels, one for the items to be added and the other for the totals. Should an operator make an error in any part of a column of figures, the item can be erased from the sheet and thrown out of the adding machine without disturbing the total. There is nothing of this kind on the market today, although the typewriter people have been working for years to invent something of the kind. The attachment transforms a typewriter into a billing or listing adder.

GIRL SUES FOR DIVORCE

MRS. CORINTHIA E. BARTLE ALLEGES DESERTION AGAINST HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. Corinthia Elizabeth Bartle, of North Plainfield, has made arrangements to bring suit for absolute divorce against her husband, Edward Marshall Bartle. Mrs. Bartle is twenty years old.

In the Court of Chancery on Monday, Chancellor Magie ordered that John M. Scherb, Jr., the girl's father, be appointed to sue for the divorce as "her next friend." This action was necessary because the young wife is a minor in the eyes of the law.

Mrs. Bartle deposes that she and Bartle were married here on February 5, 1901. They lived for six months in Martinville, she asserts, and then he deserted her. She returned to her father's home for support, and Bartle, it is alleged, has continued his desertion ever since.

MISSION MEETING.

Presbyterian Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in Session at Newark.

The two days' biennial convention of the Presbyterian Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Philadelphia branch, held its first session in the Third Presbyterian church, Newark, last night. The Crescent Avenue and First Presbyterian churches, of this city, are members of the association and are represented at the convention. Today's sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Newark. Last night there was a reception to delegates from various parts of the United States and addresses of welcome with responses. The convention will close tomorrow night.

EXPRESS CRASHES INTO FLYER ON P. R. R.

Fireman Killed and Over a Score Injured in Wreck at Elizabeth.

FAULT OF ENGINEER

AUTOMATIC SIGNAL CHANGES TOO LATE TO AVOID TROUBLE?

Jacob Letts, of Long Branch, Dead—Some of the Injured Passengers—How the Accident Happened.

The Long Branch express on the Pennsylvania Railroad, which left Jersey City at 3:52 o'clock yesterday afternoon, ran into the Florida express, which had become detached from the locomotive, just south of the Elizabeth station at 4:30.

The fireman of the Long Branch train was killed and a score of passengers of the Long Branch train were more or less injured. The only one whose injuries were serious was the Rev. Mr. Kelly, of Asbury Park, who was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain. No one was injured on the Florida express, which went on its way soon after the accident.

The collision appears to have been the fault of Engineer Lawlor, of the Long Branch train, who failed to slow up when he got a green signal a quarter of a mile from where the Florida express was waiting for its engine to come back. Lawlor's explanation is that his brakes didn't work well and the color signal changed too late. Those who saw the accident say that Lawlor's train was going thirty miles an hour when it crashed into the train ahead.

The Florida express, consisting of eight Pullman sleepers and a baggage car, had just rounded the sharp curve at eighth of a mile south of the station, when, according to the explanation of the trainmen, the air pipes between the engine and the train broke. This set the brakes automatically, with the result that the coupling with the engine broke.

The Florida express was going fifty miles an hour at the time and the engine ran to South Elizabeth before it could be stopped. It was backing toward the train when the Long Branch express came along.

The stalled train had stopped just within a new block, which set a red signal at that point and a green signal at the signal tower at Mary street, a quarter of a mile away. The Long Branch train doesn't stop at Elizabeth and it went past the station without any noticeable slackening of speed. The engineer, it is thought, failed to head the green, or "slow up" signal, while the curve shut off his view of the stalled train. The red signal which means "stop," he saw but not in time to avoid the collision.

With a crash that could be heard by a crowd who were at the station, the Long Branch train sailed into the rear of Pullmans, telescoping the sleeper England, which was on the tail end. The engine ploughed half way through that car.

Fireman Jacob Letts, of the Long Branch train had seen the danger first and yelled to Engineer N. J. Lawlor to jump. Both of them leaped just before the engine struck the car. Letts landed on the picket fence separating the passenger tracks from the freight tracks and was buried under the train, his body being frightfully mangled. He was 39 years old and lived at Point Pleasant.

Lawlor jumped from the other window of the cab and rolled down an embankment, escaping with only a few slight scratches. He jumped up again and ran back to his engine to shut off the steam and prevent an explosion. There the rescuers found him.

There were no passengers in the Pullman. George Robinson, the porter, was standing in the aisle when the engine of the train ploughed into his car. He was knocked head over heels, and when he woke up the engine was hissing within a few feet of him. He went on with the train, however, after his car had been detached.

The collision shook up the passengers in the two forward coaches of the Long Branch train and broke a lot of windows. Mr. Kelly was sitting in the second coach from the engine and was thrown across the aisle and against a seat. Among the others injured were Henry O. Goldsmith, of the Wall Street Information Bureau,

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS GATHER TO CONGRATULATE AGED COUPLE.

Presents for the Couple—Sketch of Their Careers—Some of Those Who Were Present.

The completion of fifty years of happy married life was pleasantly observed Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Barkalew, at their home in Lincoln place. Surrounded by relatives, friends and neighbors, the occasion was one not soon to be forgotten. There were many unique features to mark the event as one of the important milestones in the journey of the bride and groom, who are held in high esteem by a host of friends.

The celebration recalled to the minds of a few, April 26, 1854, on which date the couple were married. There were just four persons present, Mrs. William H. Shotwell, a sister of Mrs. Barkalew; Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, a cousin, Miss Isabelle Barkalew, a sister and Richard Barkalew, a brother of Mr. Barkalew, who were guests at the wedding fifty years ago and one other person, Richard E. Corlell, who with the other four, were present at the home-bringing held in this city after the wedding.

Hearty congratulations were given, both young and old joining in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Barkalew many happy returns. The bride and groom though past the allotted time of three-score and ten, did not look their age and they participated in the festivities with as much enthusiasm as the youngest of the guests.

The home was attractive in appropriate decorations of golden colors, this arrangement being carried out in the parlor and dining room. In the parlor, where the bride and groom received with Mr. and Mrs. David M. Rosenthal, their neighbors, there was an effective decoration of potted plants, smilax and roses in a bow window, while the smilax and yellow chrysanthemums were arranged about the room. In the dining room there were also yellow chrysanthemums, extending from each corner to the chandelier in the centre, while the balustrade in the hall covered with smilax and white roses formed a pleasing combination. On receiving, the bride carried a bouquet of white roses, the gift of Dr. Norman H. Probasco.

At the appointed hour of 9 o'clock a number of taps were sounded on a small bell, repeated to be seventy-five years old. This bell was part of an old-fashioned grandfather clock and when made a five dollar gold piece was cast in it. The taps were the signal for the guests to gather in the parlor, where Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, offered a very tender and appropriate prayer.

This was followed with the reading of a short sketch by Mr. Barkalew, in which he expressed the appreciation of his wife and himself to those present. This sketch contained many tender sentiments and there were not a few moistened eyes while it was being read. An unusual feature in connection with the wedding, mentioned by Mr. Barkalew, was that in the small village where the couple was married, the neighbors were nearly all relatives and nearly all attended the wedding. At present there is only one person living in that town now that witnessed the ceremony. In conclusion the guests were thanked for their presence and kind remembrances.

The rest of the evening was spent in sociability, during which a bountiful repast was served. Before the guests departed each one appended his or her name in a book to be kept by the couple as a pleasant reminder of the occasion, together with the valuable tokens received from relatives and friends. These included a gift of fifty dollars in gold from the groom to the bride, one for each year. There were other gold coins, gold shimbles, dishes, spoons, forks, pitchers, clock and a thermometer among the handsome presents, together with pictures and other treasures.

Mr. and Mrs. Barkalew were married at the home of the bride in Seigletown, Warren county, April 26, 1854, the bride being Miss Emeline Staats. She was born at Bloomsbury, Hunterdon county, while Mr. Barkalew is a native of Dunellen. Rev. Mr. Hand, of the Presbyterian church, near Seigletown, performed the ceremony. After the wedding the couple came here and resided on Somerset street. Mr. Barkalew followed the business of a contractor most of his life and has always lived in this vicinity. He was a Freeholder in Somerset county for three years and upon retirement was presented with a handsome rocking chair by the Board. For years he has been president of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association and years ago was president of the American Mutual Insurance Company, of Plainfield. He was also a volunteer fireman and is now one of the most active members of the Exempt Firemen's Association, of this city, having served efficiently as its president. The couple are both actively interested in the First Baptist church and attend the services regularly.

They have two children, Mrs. F. W. Dunn and Milton C. Barkalew; four grandchildren, the Misses Daisy and Loraine Dunn, Wesley Dunn, children of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Dunn; Marguerite Barkalew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Barkalew; and one great-grandchild, Wesley Dunn, Jr. All but the last named were present and he was detained on account of the weather. Among the guests was Joseph McKeal, of Philadelphia, a cousin of Mr. Barkalew's father. Prior to a year ago the two had not seen each other for sixty years.

Those persons were present at the reception: Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Thorn, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wallace Coriell, Mr. and Mrs A. L. Force, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Probasco, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hodgdon, Rev. and Mrs. Wm. E. Honeyman, Mrs. Nelson VanWinkle, Miss Mary E. Holton, Mrs. Mary B. Gillies, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Mackillop, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Leader, Miss Addie Dietrich, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Laing, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Staats, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Rosenthal, Mrs. C. M. Drake, Miss May E. Dunham, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley D. Dunn, E. M. Ketil, Miss Josephine Kissam, Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Barkalew, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Clawson, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman J. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., Lorraine W. Dunn, Marguerite K. Barkalew, Miss Daisy Dunn, of this city; Miss Adelaide P. Baxter, of Trenton; Joseph McKeal, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Barkalew, of Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Barkalew received presents from cousins in San Diego, Cal., whom they have not seen in twenty-five years.

CHURCH SOCIETY'S ELECTION

ANNUAL MEETING OF FIRST PRESBYTERIAN LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

The annual election of officers of the First Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society was held yesterday afternoon in the home of Miss Sarah Boss, in East Fifth street. The meeting was well attended. This organization is planning to hold a lawn party early in the spring, but as yet no definite place has been determined upon, although it is safe to say that it will take place.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. S. D. Kelley; vice president, Mrs. Potsiere; treasurer, Mrs. Charles Robertson, and secretary, Mrs. Ralph Miner. At the conclusion of the business matters refreshments were served and a general social time enjoyed.

A Theatre Party.

Instead of a rehearsal at the Casino this evening all those who are to play speaking parts in the charity production of "The Taming of the Shrew," May 5 the 7, have gone to the Irving Place Theatre, New York, to witness the production of "Bannehmte Widerspenstige." This is a German version of the Shakespearean comedy. The party will be the guests of W. L. Saunders.

Fowler in Race.

It is now given out that Congressman Fowler will entertain his Elizabethport constituents at a grand soiree or something of that sort at his home tonight. The report that Mr. Fowler had retired from the race for a renomination and had taken up his permanent residence in Connecticut must have been one of those wooden nutmeg fakes.—Newark News.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS DELIGHT AUDIENCE

Production at Park Club in Which Members Display Decided Histronic Ability.

TWO FARCES GIVEN

GYPSY DANCE BRINGS STORM OF APPLAUSE.

"Too Many Cooks" and "My Turn Next" Keep Spectators in One Continuous Uproar of Laughter—Those in the Cast.

Not in vain was the new stage built at the Park Club. The members who appeared in the amateur theatricals and gypsy dance there, last night, demonstrated to how much delightful use it can be put. Two farces were rendered, and no better amateur theatrical performance has been seen here in many a year. And the dance was as great a success as the farces.

There was a large audience present, in spite of the rain. The advance sale of seats was heavy and the financial side of the enterprise was as satisfactory as the artistic side. The money realized very fittingly goes to pay for the recent improvements to the clubhouse, of which the stage was a large part.

"Too Many Cooks," a bright little skit on the servant problem, was the first number on the programme. It was short and had but two characters, but it furnished a wealth of amusement. Miss Helen Phillips and Miss Isabel Milne appeared in it.

"Mrs. Ingleby," (Miss Phillips) an old lady of the ante-bellum sort, loses her ancient family servant and goes in search of a cook at an employment bureau. She has been warned by her friends that modern cooks are very different from the old style, and she doesn't know quite what to expect. At the agency she meets Miss Maude Chesney, (Miss Milne) a stylish young woman, who is also searching for a cook. Each mistake the other for the looked-for domestic, and the mix-up in cross-questioning is very funny.

Both the young women in the cast were clever to a high degree, and carried out the situation in a way that compelled laughter and applause at every turn of the plot. The piece was well staged.

The gypsy dance which followed the "Cooks," was a gorgeous spectacle. Eighteen young men and women, in the picturesque, multicolored costumes of the wandering folk, danced a charming series of measures. Changing colored lights flashed on the dancers, and added to the beauty of the spectacle. Miss Edna Rothard, a young Newark girl, as queen of the band, danced a measure gracefully alone, and then Ralph E. Hallock, "attendant to the queen," joined her in a toreador dance.

Storms of applause rewarded the dancers, and insistent demands for an encore compelled a repetition of the dance in honor. The gypsies were:

Miss Sophie Barlow, Miss Adelaide Elsberg, Mrs. William M. McOstobeo, Miss Norma Northrop, Dewitt Brokaw, Charles Dupee, Lawrence Houghey, Harry L. McGee, Miss Elsie Brokaw, Miss Saidee Mae Howell, Miss Ethel Most, Miss Mary E. Valiant, Morris Dumont, George Dupee, William F. Hobbie, Jr., Lewis Williams, Miss Edna Rothard, Ralph E. Hallock. Mrs. N. A. Miller acted as accompanist for the dance.

"My Turn Next," the principal theatrical offering, was presented last. It kept the audience laughing continually and every one in the cast was warmly applauded. They all deserved it. This was the cast:

Taraxicum Twisters, a village apothecary, W. M. McGee; Tim Bolus, his professional assistant, C. E. Murray; Tom Trap, a commercial traveler, Clarence Case; Farmer Wheatear, S. F. Weaver; Lydia, Twitters' wife, Mrs. S. F. Weaver; Cicely, her sister, Mrs. E. T. Wilcox; Peggy, Twitters' servant, Miss Mabel VanDeventer.

"Mrs. Twitters" (Mrs. Weaver) had been the wife of one "Brown of Bayonne." "Brown" was always in debt and frequently "jumped" towns and changed his name to escape creditors. "Tapp," "Wheatear" and "Peggy" each recognize Mrs. Twitters under a different name. Each tells the fidgity old apothecary that the late husband "disappeared mysteriously," and "Twitters" is certain his wife is a female Bluebeard and "its his turn next." Everything she does confirms him in the suspicion, and the situations resulting for the misunderstand-

PAINTERS' STRIKE IS NOW AT AN END

Journeymen Accept Bosses' Proposition to Increase the Wages Five Cents a Day.

STRIKE LEADER KICKS

MEN NOW TO RECEIVE THIRTY-FIVE CENTS AN HOUR.

Newark Plan Agreed Upon—Dispute Over One Clause in Bosses Letter of Agreement—Woolston Talks.

The painters' strike, begun a few weeks ago, was ended last night by a vote of the members of the local union of painters, paper-hangers and decorators. The proposition made by the bosses to pay thirty-five cents an hour has been accepted and it is expected that today or tomorrow many of the journeymen will be back at their old jobs. This proposition is known as the Orange and Newark plan. It means an increase of five cents a day. The men were receiving $2.75 a day. A provision that the bosses be allowed to hire any men they please is still disputed. Harry Moulton, president of the Journeymen's Union, when he discovered at the meeting that a majority of the members voted to accept the proposition of the bosses, he resigned. It was reported this morning that he and Clarence Mundy would continue to run the co-operative shop on West Second street.

L. B. Woolston, of the firm of Woolston & Buckle, in speaking of the affair today, said: "They told the public that the bosses were overcharging for work, while their pies to the bosses was that they were not charging enough. This only caused injury to themselves and their own cause."

THE OLD FIRE TRUCK MOVED

ZEPHYR HOOK AND LADDER TRANSFERRED TO THE BOROUGH HOUSE.

The old Zephyr truck was moved to its new quarters in the borough fire house yesterday afternoon, from the West Fourth street house, where it has been stored since the big Hayes machine supplanted it.

No driver has been assigned to it yet, but Lieutenant Campbell will probably fill that position. There is some trepidation about taking the filler among the men, but the knack of guiding the heavy rear wheels will not be likely to escape some one of the men long.

TO TEST ALL THE BOXES

BOROUGH FIRE ALARM SYSTEM WILL HAVE A THOROUGH TRY-OUT.

There will be a bell-ringing bee in the borough today if the weather is nice. Unless the rain continues, every fire alarm box in the municipality will be tested.

Working together, Electrician John McCullough and the representative of the Gamewell Company, have put the system about half-way toward perfect shape, and they want to find out just where they are at before proceeding further.

J. M. Carney's Funeral.

The funeral services of John M. Carney will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock from the late residence, 303 Central avenue, and at 9:30 from St. Mary's church, where a solemn requiem mass will be said for the repose of the soul. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Girls' Gymnastic Exhibition.

The pupils of the primary department of the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School, conducted by Miss E. B. Hartridge, gave an calesthenic and gymnastic exhibition at the Casino, yesterday afternoon, for the parents and friends of the school.

Trolley Claim Settled.

The Public Service Corporation has settled the claim for damages preferred by Patrick Muldoon, whose rig was smashed by a Front street car recently. F. J. Blatz, Esq., represented Mr. Muldoon.

—It would be hard to say too much in praise of the butter trio that makes Neuman Bros.' store the mecca for wise housewives—Rockdale Print, at 29 cents; Rockdale Creamery at 28 cents, and Fancy Elgin at 26 cents.

Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS GATHER AT A FEAST

Banquet of Boys' Department Takes Place in Association's Gymnasium.

W. D. MURRAY SPEAKS

FRANCIS K. ANDERSON ACTS AS THE TOASTMASTER.

More Than One Hundred and Thirty Present—President of Boys' Department and Others Make Addresses.

The boys' department of the local branch of the Y. M. C. A. held a banquet last evening, in the association gymnasium, and was a successful affair. It was in charge of the social committee of the Women's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. J. W. Gavett is the chairman.

The gymnasium was draped with the National flags and the colors of the Y. M. C. A. Francis K. Anderson acted as toastmaster for the occasion, and William D. Murray, chairman of the International committee on boys' work, made a short address. George M. Hittenhouse, Jr., read the report on the religious work; Harold Robins, the report on outing work, and William D. Taylor read the report of the rooms' committee.

Howard Freeman, president of the boys' department, also made a short address. The boys were entertained by H. B. Caser, reader, and Leonard Gavett, who did some magic work. Short speeches were also delivered by Stephen Caboone, president of the local association; Orra Rogers, chairman of the boys' committee, L. H. Bigrow, Jr., and Dr. N. E. Probasco.

The banquet was attended by more than 130 and the evening was enjoyably spent.

BOWLING CONTEST CLOSES

MAURICE SUTPHEN WINS SILVER MEDAL AT Y. M. C. A.

Maurice Sutphen is the winner of the silver medal offered in the Y. M. C. A. bowling tournament. The contest closed last night.

George Whitley was in second place as the finish. He received a bronze medal. The other contestants finished as follows:

Harvey Linbarger, William Mandy, C. B. Koons, Louis Mennenbach, Arthur Spicer, Alfred Egan, Albert Schomp, William Jefferies, Frank Neal, Lewis Hummer, Arthur Aalholm, J. Manning, H. Strong.

It is probable that those who took part in the tournament will hold a socialble to mark the close of their contest.

WAKELEE, GOVERNOR.

Young President of the State Senate Sworn In as Acting Executive.

Edmund W. Wakelee, president of the Senate, was sworn in as Acting Governor yesterday, the oath of office being administered at the State House by Judge Bennet Van Sickel, senior jurist of the Supreme Court. He will serve during Governor Murphy's absence in Europe.

Governor Wakelee is probably the youngest man to occupy the gubernatorial chair of this State. He is only thirty-five years old.

Taken Ill on Street.

A. V. Lopger, of 201 Watchung avenue, was taken ill on the street at Westfield yesterday morning, while engaged in his pursuit as an agent for the Prudential Insurance Company. Superintendent Ball was summoned from this city and he brought Mr. Lunger to his home. Dr. Jenkins was called and with proper treatment made the patient comfortable. It was a case of acute indigestion and Mr. Lunger is much better today.

Troops Ordered to Yosemite Park.

Lieutenant Samuel B. Pearson, of the Ninth U. S. Cavalry stationed during the winter at Monterey, California, will go for the summer to Yosemite Park, where the troops have been ordered. His wife, who is the daughter of Mrs. Sarah Vermeule, of Watchung avenue, will accompany him.

The May number of Lippincott's Magazine has an article entitled "Some Roman Contrasts" by Maude Howe, a sister of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue.

DOOLEY AT THE BAT.

Ape Wins Ball Game for the Jersey City Invincibles.

Only Two Years Old, But a Wonder on the Diamond—Thirty Feet, However, Is His Effective Limitation as a Twirler.

Some day you will read in the baseball reports about the wonderful pitching of the invincibles' southpaw twirler, Mister Dooley, of Jersey City. That is why the history of this future great player is published by the New York World.

Mister Dooley is a large gray ape, two years old. A sea captain brought him up from Brazil recently and presented him to John J. Fischer, who lives at Sanford place and Montrose avenue. Within 24 hours the ape had shown as much intelligence and, withal, was so diplomatic and democratic that the dignified title of Mister Dooley was conferred on him.

To the boys of the neighborhood Mister Dooley at once became a guide, philosopher and friend.

The ape was perched on a tree-box one day, watching for stray cats, so that he might properly discipline them by pulling their tails, when the battery of the Invincible B. B. C. began a little warming up work in Sanford place.

The swift flight of the ball to and fro, its sharp thud as it landed in the catcher's glove, so interested Mister Dooley that he forgot all about the cats.

A wild pitch flew past Harry Fischer and rolled near the tree-box. In an instant Dooley was down on it like a star fielder. He picked up the ball, patted it, sniffed it, nibbled at it with his big strong teeth. Good to eat? No. Then it must be a toy. Very well. Dooley drew back his left arm as he had seen the pitcher do, and hurried the ball with all his might at Harry Fischer.

The ball flew straight as a bullet. Dooley fell down on all fours because of the impetus of his throw, but when he saw Harry catch it with a sharp thud of the glove the ape pranced and chatted with glee.

After practicing with Mister Dooley for a week the Invincibles played with him in their next match with the

DOOLEY PITCHES A BALL.

Young Orioles. When the ape entered the box to pitch the Orioles laughed so loud and loud that they nearly broke up the game. Would they let him stand within 30 feet of the plate? Sure, they would in a minute—and say, if they didn't bat that monk out of the lot, well, they'd eat him alive!

The Orioles' best batsman, Tommy Keeler, came up first. He selected a thick club, of marvelous resiliency and a well known record as a lucky stick and tapped home-plate.

Mister Dooley was not rattled by the scornful wink Tommy shot at him. Without any flourishes or preliminary dancing he drew back his lean left arm and let go a high ball. Tommy whanged at it with a grin.

"Sure-a-cok one!" yelled Umpire McGann.

Which, alas! was too true, for the high and easy looking ball had taken a tremendous drop just before it reached plate and fell into the catcher's glove. Again Tommy faced Mister Dooley, but this time without wink or grin. Sad to relate, he fanned empty air again. His face became a tragic mask as he made his third effort. The poor boy struck out, and so did the two Young Orioles who followed him.

Nevertheless, when Mister Dooley came to bat on his side the Young Orioles began to laugh again. For his bat was nothing but the butt end of a broomstick whittled down to fit his size.

The pitcher let loose an outshoot. Mister Dooley, left-handed, swung far out and smashed at it. The impact knocked him down, but the ball flew toward first base. Dooley galloped down the line, but the baseman had picked up the ball and was ready to touch him out. Before he could thaw out Dooley had leaped over his head and established himself on first base. And there he perched uttering the apish satisfaction call of "Unh! Unh! Unh!" until he saw a chance to steal second. A three-bagger by the captain of the Invincibles brought Dooley home.

Why go into the sad details of the overthrow of the Young Orioles? The final score was 34 to nothing, chiefly due to Mister Dooley's accurate, heady play.

Baldness is ten times as common among men as among women. It has also been noted that a man's hair turns gray five years sooner than a woman's.

FROM DEATH TO LIFE.

Freezing Boy Rescued from Ice Float by Brave Workers.

Youth Floated Helplessly for Over Three Hours After Skiff Was Overturned—Pulled to Safety by Means of a Long Rope.

Albert Smith, 19 years old, after floating on a cake of ice in the Missouri river at St. Charles, Mo., for more than 2½ hours, was rescued by workmen on the Wabash bridge in a daring and spectacular manner, while a large crowd watched the thrilling scene.

The shouts of the youth and the signals from the commercial bridge above attracted the attention of more than men on the railroad bridge, while his ice float was many yards away, and immediately the men lowered long ropes at points where it seemed likely that he would pass close enough to grab a life line.

Whether he would pass near enough to be saved was a question which whetted the keenest anxiety on the part of all spectators.

Slowly the cake of ice came under the bridge. He reached out for one of the dangling ropes and grasped it tightly, and thrust his arm through the noose.

At the first tug to lift him up he slipped from the cake of ice into the frigid water.

He was raised above the water, but fell back. A second plunge would have ended his life, but the bridge workmen were determined, and on the third effort the lad was freed from the flowing ice and then drawn slowly through the air to the bridge, while a great shout from all observers rent the air.

Then arose the question as to his having life in him. A party of men carried him to the station. He was revived, dry clothing provided and nourishment given him. He then told his story, saying that he lived with James Caten, at the city water works, and worked for a farmer in St. Louis county.

"Early this morning I started to work and tried to cross the river in a skiff," he said. "When I was about 100 yards from the spot where I intended to land, a great cake of ice struck the skiff and overturned it. I kept myself above the water and finally managed to climb on top of the cake which had proved my undoing.

"I was almost frozen, and the ice on my clothes, which appeared soon after my plunge, cut me. I did not seem to be afraid much, though, for I had hopes of being pulled out of the river at the Highway bridge. I was almost certain of being rescued.

"As I approached it I grew a little anxious, and finally when I went floating under it, and saw no one, I gave up all hopes. I had then been on the ice for two hours, and was so weak I could hardly stand."

"When I came in sight of the Wabash bridge, and saw them making preparations to take me off my strange craft, I was so thankful I almost grew warm. I prayed with all my power that I might be saved, but thought I was gone until I found a rope hanging almost in front of me.

"When I had grabbed it and had gotten in the noose, I felt as safe as I do now. The long journey through the air, from the river to the bridge I remember little of, and am not sorry."

Smith was first seen by Superintendent Broughton, who was on the Highway bridge. Broughton signaled to Superintendent McPherson on the Wabash bridge that there was a man in the water. McPhearson called his men off the work and ropes were brought and lowered. Eighteen lines were lowered when Smith reached the bridge, and others were called ready for use.

From That Swallow Birds.

"Do you know that out in one of the states of the middle west one of my books was taken out of the schools because it contained a statement that a frog which I watched caught and swallowed a sparrow?" asks a writer in an exchange. The probability of this was debated for an hour or more, and it was then decided that no frog could croke down a sparrow and the book was withdrawn. They did not happen to know that frogs sometimes grow to a length of 16 inches. There is a man in the upper part of Connecticut who has a number of frogs as long as that," he said, spreading his hands to indicate the length. "He often feeds them with mice and sparrows, and I have a photograph showing one of these frogs just about to take a bird in his mouth.

HOG GOES ON SPREE.

When Fermented Apple Mash Gave Out Beast Look of Horror.

That Is How the Bibulous Parker Led Way to Moonshine Still—Master Swore Off, but Pete Is Beyond Redemption.

From McKeever, N. Y., a correspondent writes to the New York World that "Bibulous Bill's" bibulous hog, Pete, which disappeared two weeks ago, has been found under circumstances that may result in an investigation. The authorities at the Corners are talking about it, but they don't know where to begin.

Bill got his nickname "Bibulous" some years ago, when he and the cup that cheers were inseparable companions. He rather glories in it now that he has sworn off. For more than a twelvemonth he has touched nothing stronger than water. In the good old days, when he was in "tippling trim," Bill declares, "that he could outbibble anything in the country." It was two years ago last fall that Bill annexed Pete. The porker was a mite of a pig then, and became very companionable. He learned to follow Bill about like a dog, and even went squirrel hunting with him, and rooted for acorns while his master was "laying for grays."

A year ago last fall Bill got a job in a cider mill down at the Corners, and reported for work along with Pete. The former figured that the latter would be fat on apple mashings. He did. In time some of the mashings fermented and Pete got drunk. Bill lectured him, but it did no good, and at the end of the week Pete was a confirmed sot. One night while the pair were stumbling home much the worse for wear Bill saw a ghost, and the next morning swore off.

Pete hadn't seen anything uncanny, so he kept up his spree until the mill closed down for the season. By this time he was a fit subject for a whisky cure. His nerves gave out, and he searched the woods, farm buildings and even cellars for more stimulants. Bill thought of his own experiences and chuckled. He knew Pete would come out all right in the end and was delighted to have his pal sober once more.

Things went along nicely until a fortnight ago, when Bill awoke one morning to find that Pete had taken his departure in the night. He thought it odd that his pet should desert warmth and a good breakfast in such cold weather, and figured that he would soon return. But at supper time he had not showed up, and Bill looked for tracks. The snow was crusted and he couldn't find any to speak of.

He would probably still be waiting had not Joe Walsh, who lives three miles back in the woods, come across strange tracks in a fresh fall of snow early in the week. The footprints looked like those of a pig, but they progressed in most erratic lines. Out of curiosity he followed them and eventually came to an old abandoned barn about a mile and a half from Bill's shack. The roof of the barn had tumbled in, but a beaten path made by the animal he was following led underneath the ruins to an old cellar. Walsh had frequently been by the barn, but had never noticed the cellar. He stuck his head down the hole and looked. As soon as his eyes accustomed themselves to the semidarkness he made out the well-known form of Pete lying in some straw in one corner. He had lost considerable flesh since the farmer saw him last week, and was at Bill's, and looked decidedly rakish.

Close beside him were three vats. Pete looked up, recognized the friend of his master and gave a welcoming, but hiccoughy grunt. Walsh descended and licked the hog's way of greeting. This brought more hiccoughs and an unsuccessful effort on the part of Pete to stand up.

"Drunk again," snorted Walsh, looking about for the spirits.

He found them in the vats, which contained whisky diluted with rainwater that had leaked from overhead. It certainly was whisky, and Walsh instantly came to the conclusion that he had stumbled on an illicit still operated in that section several years ago by two men who are now serving time at Dannemora. Pete was in no condition to drive home, so Walsh notified Bill, and he went after the hog with his mare and a wood sled. Then the proper authorities were informed. They are taking investigation, but as the men supposed to own the still are in jail they don't know just what to do. Pete is chained up.

WARLIKE DAMARAS

Something About the African Natives Now Fighting Germany.

Differ in Many Respects from Other Tribesmen of South Africa—Are Devoid of Human Sympathy —Their War Dances.

Within the boundaries of what is known as German Southwest Africa, there is being waged at the present time a conflict with the natives which have revolted against German rule. The immense territory over which Germany exercises a protectorate consists of what was formerly known as Damara and Great Nama lands. It is estimated that these two territories contain a native population of 200,000 and there are about 2,000 Europeans in the country, mostly Germans. Probably a large number of these latter are traders, and it is said that the present uprising is due to their extortion in dealing with the natives, who supply hides, horns, ostrich feathers, cattle and guano, and receive trinkets and sometimes nothing in return.

The Damara men are of moderate height, and generally well made, of a rich dark brown, like the Kaffirs, and their hair is generally straightened out and matted into strands, three or more inches long, with fat and red clay. Their dress, if such it can be called, consists of great quantities of thin leather thongs coiled round the hips, and a small piece of skin between the legs with the ends brought up and tucked fore and aft into the cord. Beads, iron rings, strips of tin or brass etc., are used for ornaments, and in the hair over the center of the forehead a cockle shell is worn.

The costume of the women is most singular. Strings of beads, either of glass or iron, or from the ostrich eggshell, are hung round their necks and hips, the latter being encircled by a broad loose belt, with pieces of shell or white beads worked on it. Anklets are formed of iron strung upon leather, and in some cases these heavy circlets extend away down over the instep. Iron in various forms, either as rings for the arms and wrists or beads to decorate the body are freely used. But the most curious portion of their attire is the headdress, which consists of a stout leather skullcap with three rows of the same material affixed to it, one on each side and one behind, nicely rounded, hollowed and stiffened and finally polished with grease and red clay. Bands of coarse shells are generally laid round the cap, and the soft leather attached to the front is generally roued up, ro that crossing the forehead it falls down on either shoulder Behind is a broad tail or fall, two or three feet long and six or eight inches wide, composed of short tubes of tin strung upon leather thongs, and the stretched side by side upon the binding piece, the ends of which are cut into a fringe. The children wear only a girdle with a fringe in front, the length varying according to the fancy and the amount of akin in the parent's hands.

It is said the Damaras are about the most heartless people under the sun. It is a well known fact that in other African tribes the aged and helpless are left to perish, but the Damaras go a step beyond this and torture and rob the sick or helpless, even though they be members of the same family. A missionary tells of a native blind girl whom he took into his house to protect from the members of her own family. The brother followed her and when not watched took the food away from her, and when forbidden the house, he succeeded in enticing his sister from the house and leading her a distance in the veldt abandoned her in her helpless condition to be devoured by hyenas.

The war dances among the Damaras take on something of the character of those of the American Indians. They begin by four natives stooping with their heads in contact, vying with each other in producing a gutteral sound which is something between a bark and a hissing groan. By degrees the group grows and the monotonous sound gathers volume, and the women join the performers, standing in a semi-circle. They sing a monotonous chant, and clapping their hands, encourage the men in their dance. Presently the leader snatches a brand from the fire and sticks it in the ground. Then comes the return of a victorious party of warriors, brandishing their broad spears ornamented with flowing oxtails, and the wild circles of women welcoming them in triumph. The glare of the fire reflects from the red helmet-like headgear and glittering ornaments of the women, and the flash of the spears and the waving oxtails of the wild warriors contributes to make an awe-inspiring sight, while the gutteral emissions of sound are something frishtful to hear

SPOONER'S FAT FEE.

How Wisconsin Senator Made Three Quarters of a Million.

He Liked Baseball and That Is Why He Is a Very Rich Man Now—A Good Story Even if Overdrawn.

Senator John C. Spooner, of Wisconsin, is devoted to baseball, but there are few men who have turned a single ball game to account to the tune of $750,000. But that's what he did once, according to the Chicago Journal. As he tells it, he was sitting on a fence, in the little New England town where he spends his summers, watching a game, when fortune came to him in the disguise of a shabby man with a hard-luck story. Ordinarily the senator would not have had time to listen to the hard-luck plea but as he could watch the game and listen simultaneously, he told the man to fire away.

The stranger said he was passing through town and wanted to interest the senator in his capacity of lawyer, in the case of his sister, who was living in abject poverty in Boston with several children dependent on her and no means for support. He went on to explain that his sister had married a barkeeper of that city, and that her husband had been very successful and had finally become interested in a number of hotels and that he was a millionaire. With his change of fortunes he had taken to dissipation, and finally had abandoned his family and was living with another woman who claimed to be his wife.

Senator Spooner listened, but confesses he was not much impressed with the story. The stranger said neither he nor his sister had any money to pay a lawyer, but that they were anxious to have Senator Spooner look after the case, and urged that he take it on a contingent fee, which would be half of what he could get for the abandoned wife. The senator remarked that he would see about it, and took the address of the woman in Boston, who was said to be deserted, and thought little more about it.

It chanced, however, that Senator Spooner was in Boston a short time after this, and, discovering that there was to be a good ball game in the afternoon, decided to stay over until the day following. This resulted in his having the early part of the afternoon on his hands, and, remembering the address of the hard luck story, he decided to satisfy his curiosity by a visit to the woman. He found her, in the greatest poverty as described, and saw evidences to confirm the allegations of the stranger.

On his way home he stopped in Chicago and enlisted the services of a lawyer friend there to look up the husband, whom he now heard had recently died. In his interview with the wife she assured him that all she wanted was a home, remembering the kindness

CHEESE FOR HEALTH

John D. Rockefeller Surprises the Medical World.

After Consulting Scores of Doctors, the Famous Oil Magnate Finds Relief by Resorting to Simple Food.

"Take my advice. Eat cheese, eat slowly and have outdoor exercise, and you will enjoy good health."—John D Rockefeller.

Here's a health maxim that upsets all the theories of the wisest medical experts of the world, but it comes from a man whose fight for health is one of the absorbingly interesting stories of this age "Cheese," says a prominent stomach specialist to a Philadelphia Press reporter, "is one of the most dangerous and indigestible things a man with an impaired stomach can eat"—but

John D. Rockefeller spent fabulous fortunes on medical treatment and advice with no result, and then cured himself.

"Cheese," says the expert, "is a fortress which the active juices of the stomach cannot carry by assault. They must lay siege to it and sometimes hours are necessary to capture it," but John D. Rockefeller, whom doctors could not cure, says: "I had been afraid that cheese had a tendency to produce indigestion and for that reason never touched it. Now I find that its effects are directly contrary, and I eat a great deal of it and find it agrees with me."

The doctors had their chance when the oil magnate offered $1,000,000 for a new stomach. None of them could have produced it for 300 times that sum which represents the estimate of the entire Rockefeller fortune.

Then with the same vigor and persistence that marked his dealings with material prosperity, Mr. Rockefeller started in to cure himself. He began on good old-fashioned principles that will stand forever. He Ate slowly.

Kept regular hours.
Took outdoor exercise. This last he took in the form of golf, and in an incredibly short time he was gaining in health, his blood coursed more rapidly, his food digested properly, his step elastic and his enjoyment of life was restored. Now he has added to his health maxims:

Eat cheese.

The effect on him may be gathered from his response to the usual salutation extended when about to board his private car last week for Florida.

"Thank you," he said, "I was never better in my life."

John D. Rockefeller has for some years bent his extraordinary intellect to solving the problem of health. He found himself at the height of his material success a sick and consequently an unhappy man.

The great physicians of this country and Europe were called in to aid him. He traveled, he dieted, he rested, but all to no purpose. It seemed particularly horrible that this man whose money could have almost cornered the food product of a continent should have to practically starve to death because his stomach would not work.

He endowed a great institution with over $1,000,000 for the study of preventative medicine and the diffusion of knowledge of sound hygiene.

But Mr. Rockefeller did not wait for these original researches in his own case. He started in to cure himself. He bought a whole golf club, with its house and links, for his own use, and he played regularly. He recovered so far that he again took up his business burdens, which are greater than those of a king. And now he has taken up cheese to maintain his new-found health. He says he did not invent cheese as a diet for invalids. He says he read it in a treatise by a scientist, but he wishes he had read it many years ago.

In age Mr. Rockefeller is not an old man yet. He is only 65, which for some men is the prime of life. But he has lived hard. He has known worries and cares that the poor man never dreams of. He has seen his great fabric of wealth shrinking piles trembling on the brink of ruin. He stood like a rock through all that, only to find when that battle was won that his body could not keep up with his mind.

But while the world moralized and talked the inevitable penalty of stupendous success, John D. Rockefeller went back to the first principles of living and gradually restored his shattered health by following these rules which he offers as a free gift to all who wish to make use of them:

Eat slowly.
Keep regular hours.
Take outdoor exercise.
Eat cheese.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Elaborate Skirts With Hip Yokes and Many Rows of Shirring.

There is a great change in skirts, which are now being made as full as possible and with a decidedly heavy effect over the hips.

Hip yokes and numerous bands of shirring have a tendency to shorten the figure, while they give a fussy effect to the skirt. Full gathered flounces are put on with headings and are bordered with velvet or braid. Three, six and even seven inches are favorite widths for flounces. Flat bias bands simulating tucks are quite the smartest form of trimming, and these are put on at wide intervals, with wide entre deux of lace in between. The new torpedo toques require a chic mode of dressing the hair in front, and the latter is divided into two sections, with a high pompadour effect which is very smart.

The new skirts are quite difficult to raise gracefully, for besides being full they are very long all around.

Thin all white tulle made will be one of the prettiest features of the summer styles. It is trimmed simply with white silk braid and in some cases tiny gold buttons.

Red French sailor hats are simply and prettily trimmed with wreaths of thickly massed deep red poppies.

A new skirt trimming is a reversed flounce shirred both top and bottom into a pocket-like effect.

The picture shows a pale blue mull summer gown trimmed with yellow lace. The hat is trimmed with pale blue bows and a lace veil.

WARM WEATHER SUITS.

Gray Silks and Mohairs of All Shades to Be Worn This Summer.

Mohairs will be very smart this summer. They come in blue, black and brown, not to speak of the delicate shades, such as cafe au lait and silver gray. The smartest have some figuring to imitate silk or cloth suitings. These mohairs are made up after the fashion of silk tailor mades, with little tucks and fancy motifs of every sort. The skirts are made very full and the jackets either blouse back and front, or else they merely reach the top of a wide belt.

Veiling suits will be more worn than ever this season, and they are made round length—that is to say, without trains to the skirt. The little coats follow the Eton or blouse fashion, and they are often trimmed with touches of Persian embroidery in pale shades.

Tailor made suits of black silk vie with iron gray, which comes brocaded in black or in white dots. These gray silks have a changeable effect from gun metal to the light silver gray. The darker gray silk suits are trimmed with much white embroidery. This gives a very rich effect. The long shoulder prevails in the majority of spring coats, and in many cases the sleeve is cut in one piece with the rest of the coat.

A lovely toilet was carried out in white silk gauze dotted with black. Bands of Louis XV. silk ribbon outlined with faget stitching in black silk constituted the sole embellishment of the skirt, while narrow ruches of the silk gauze formed the trimming of the corsage.

White silk gauze in ecru straw has trimmed with a black chantilly lace veil. This would be very soft for use with a fancy silk taffeta parasol.

DRESS NOVELTIES.

Hopsackings and Mohairs Are Popular—Pongee Dyed in Many Shades.

Hopsacking and mohairs are among the favorite materials for tailor mades. The favorite shades are champagne, gray and heliotrope. The latter has come to be quite a fashionable tint for tailor mades. The hopsackings are ideal fabrics for summer gowns, as they possess a loose mesh and are very pliable. When mounted over a glace silk lining they are very dressy.

Dull shades of china blue, old rose and dull green will also be utilized both in cotton and in linen for tailor made suits. This will be a season for gayly colored tailor mades. The black severe models of the past seem to have slipped out of fashion.

A smart suit seen recently was of mouse colored cloth, trimmed with white and gold fancy braid having a tiny edge of black. This had a fancy vest of white cloth embroidered in French knots.

The new blouses are more carefully fitted at the back and sides, and they pouch very slightly in front, especially if the wide belt is worn with them. The long effect in front is still marked.

Large appliques of chiffon and braid are very smart on veiling and fancy cloth gowns. They are connected with vines and leaves done by hand in artistically shaded silks.

The cut shows a three-quarter black silk coat, the shirred sleeves giving a novel effect, as do also the narrow velvet straps.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A Wreath of Small Flowers—High Pointed Marie Antoinette Girdles.

Wreaths of tiny roses are still much worn. They appear on many of the smart new hats, and they are also used to form dainty hair ornaments.

Sleeves are more fussy than ever, and the undersleeve composed of many ruffles or many shirrings is a smart fashion feature.

Collarless gowns are still used for evening, restaurant and semidress wear. This is a style which has to be carried out effectively in order not to give a half finished effect.

The high pointed Marie Antoinette girdle is ultra smart both for gowns and for separate blouses. It is often enriched with embroidery.

Frequently in order to gain the long shouldered effect a line of trimming is brought down from the collar over the shoulder to a little distance on the sleeve top. The fullness of the sleeves then starts from the end of this strap-like trimming.

Entire crowns of flowers are the sole trimming of certain picture, lace and chiffon hats.

The edges of irregular brims are decorated with tiny rosebuds laid in rows. This is pretty to soften a rather stiff toque.

The picture shows a black crepe de chine dress trimmed with very wide tucks and tiny corded shirrings.

ART BOOKBINDING

A Good Trade for Women

An art bazaar in the rooms of a woman's club in London some time ago I observed a number of the most beautiful books I have ever seen. The covers were so artistic and at the same time so strong and flexible that they claimed the involuntary admiration of an American. For one thing when you opened one of these books it stayed open. The covers did not fly back shut, as most of our books do till the backs are cracked and broken.

The beautiful books had been turned out by the Women's Art Bookbinding guild, a prosperous association. It had been started to aid working women who wanted to learn the trade of bookbinding. Among the men of the craft there was a sex prejudice so great against would be women bookbinders that little hope existed for them in that direction. So the women formed an organization of their own. Among the promoters of the guild were women artists, ladies of wealth and club women, all inspired strongly by that corps spirit which in our day is developing in the feminine sex. Provision for thoroughly learning the trade was made, apprentices of the right kind were selected, and the founders of the society prepared to take orders for work and also to turn out earnest, skilled bookbinders who felt besides an artistic interest in doing their tasks in the best way. Today there is not an art bookbinding establishment in England with a reputation above that of the women's guild.

In the United States women have not at all canvassed the possibilities of the bookbinding trade. In a few of the larger cities girls are employed to do mechanical work in ordinary bookbinderies, but their tasks require only a little manual skill and no artistic knowledge. Their work is a little above mere unskilled labor, but that is all. In the designing of art book covers a few women are earning good pay, but the field is overcrowded for the average worker, and very few women have attained the skill, imagination and courage to branch out in original and striking schemes. Most of them are imitators of those who went before them, excellent imitators, to be sure, but yet not original artists.

In Boston, in New York and in one or two other large American cities a few ladies have created a demand for their art bookbinding. One young Boston lady's work is notable.

Meantime in California a woman has established in her own home an art bookbindery whose fame has spread throughout the land. The lady is Mrs. Idah Meacham Strobridge, whose bungalow bindery is built among the bewitching foothills of the Sierra Madre mountains, along the road between Pasadena and Los Angeles.

Mrs. Strobridge's experiences have been remarkable, suited to the making of a genius. Her early married life was spent on a ranch in Nevada, in a grazing and mining district. The picturesque outdoor life fascinated her. Having a mind of intense activity, she was *interested in all she saw and be*came a part of it. She rode, she prospected for mines, she shot wild animals, including colts from the herds of wild horses that devoured the pasturage of the cattle. She tanned the skins of the colts and other creatures and made rugs of them. She took the skins of red and white beeves killed on the ranch and tanned them too. In her bungalow near Los Angeles is a set of furniture upholstered in these red and white skins. She also became a skilled photographer. All this time, Mrs. Strobridge looked well to the ways of her household and took the best care of her husband and children. She used to read much too. In order to keep her magazines she bound them and thus began her first experiments in the work that was to be her trade after awhile.

For some years time passed happily on the ranch; then came change. Husband and children died one after another and were buried in Nevada. There was no more happy, free ranch life for Mrs. Strobridge. She gathered up her cherished curios and other belongings and journeyed to Los Angeles. Her father and mother joined her in the new home she has made. There she binds books and also does much writing for papers and magazines.

She procured text books and studied with painstaking care the art of bookbinding. What the books did not tell her, and it was considerable, she tried and practiced on till she learned it by experience. She has conquered every obstacle and now has a flourishing business.

MARY EDITH DAY.

GRANDMOTHERS.

Better Be Dead Than Old and Dependent Among the Poor.

"Among the poorer classes of tenement dwellers it is almost impossible to find a grandmother in the home. She is not wanted in the majority of tenement homes. Once a woman has passed her ability to earn money she is cast out of the home. Pitiful indeed are the tales these grandmothers tell."

A lady, Mrs. Alexander Ewing, read a report on the subject of aged poor women before the charities organiza*tion of an eastern city*, and it contained the above words. Old women, feeble in mind and body, come to Mrs. Ewing day after day with stories that would touch any heart capable of a kindly feeling for age and weakness. One poor old woman came to the lady weeping and said her son and her son's wife were both trying to drive her from their home, the only home she knew. The daughter-in-law, in the hope of forcing the old woman out, made her sleep in a bed with three little girls.

And all under the heavens that old woman knew was to go and tell somebody about it and weep. She had no intelligence, no brains to speak of, no bodily strength left. All she ever had known in her best days was to do housework in a greasy, slatternly way and tend babies in the like untidy, inefficient manner. Now, just because she was old she expected her children to take care of her when they were struggling to get bread for their own families.

They do these things better among the Eskimos of the far north, where food is scarce. So soon as a grandmother or grandfather is too old to be a productive member of the community the aged one calmly permits himself or herself to be killed for the general good. The aged people look calmly forward to this as the inevitable and at the same time quite proper thing.

Civilization thinks it is kinder, but it is not. What to do with women who don't know any way to earn a living and think they are too old to learn is one of the most serious problems confronting charity workers. The world seems overflowing with old women whom nobody wants to have around because they are no good. There is not room enough for them either in public pauper houses or in the privately sustained homes for old women. It is an unpleasant truth that everybody wants to be rid of the tiresome, uncomely, aged females. Sympathy with a woman merely because she is old and inefficient? Not in our age of the world. Sympathy is with the strong, the capable and conquering.

Nothing now can be done for the superfluous, ugly old grandmothers whose children want to get rid of them. No miracle can be wrought on the minds of the selfish children. The only thing is to let them, too, grow old and meet the fate of their mother before them, as they will so sure as the sun ticks off the years on the dial of time. But among the young women, those not yet too old to help themselves—there is where a remedy can be applied. Not to get out of the order of helplessness and pauperism after one has got into it, but to keep out of it in the first place—there is where the remedy lies. Undoubtedly these useless pauper women in their younger days looked ahead to "being taken care of" by their children and children—that is, if they looked ahead at all, which is doubtful. Probably they just drifted along as a million young working women are doing today into marriage, slovenly, scanty housekeeping and great families of children. These old women had in their youth no grit, no foresight, no aspiration to do some worthy work in the best manner and so earn a living themselves.

My dear girls, nobody cares a brass pin for a woman's tears and whining, even when she is young. That is not the way to gain help. Help yourself, and all the world will join in and be on your side. Not a working girl in this land is so poor that she cannot save a little money. If she can do nothing else, she can get together a hundred or two dollars to pay for her admission into an old woman's home when she is a grandmother and her children turn her outdoors. And if a girl saves that much money let her never be foolish enough to part with it to any human being.

I know a woman who when she was past sixty started all of herself a new business enterprise, and now she is getting $4,000 a year from it. We are never too old to begin all over again, never.

MARCIA W. CAMPBELL.

STYLES FOR SUMMER.

Waist Effects Like Our Grandmothers Used to Wear.

Really "the sun do move," for here we see dresses with two rows of reversed plaiting made of the dress material down the side skirt after having encircled the neck and crossed the breast. A lovely lilac veiling gown which I saw yesterday was made so. The waist was full and pouched in front, and the sleeves were in bishop shape with lace bands, while the skirt was laid in tiny plaits around the hips. But the particular thing noticeable was that these reversed plaitings were put down the front of the breadth. Such a thing has not been seen for two generations at least. And it looked delightfully old timey, and consolation about it being that reversed plaiting is easy to make.

Another old-new style was shown in a gown of light brown taffeta silk, with four shirred puffs around the bottom, with a row of chiffon ruching between them all. And heading the upper one the shirring puffs were of silk and the ruching of chiffon. The waist was particularly pretty, being somewhat in the shape of a bolero at the front, with shirrings and ruching all around the V shaped neck over the inner waist. Three fancy, rough gold buttons held the front of the bolero, and beneath the caps formed by that extended sleeves made of two deep falls of lace. This, too, looked as if it might have stepped out of some old daguerreotype.

WAISTS FOR YOUNG LADIES.

A pretty dress for a young person was of dark blue and white foulard, with white insets down the breadths. This same gown was also developed in cotton foulard.

The skirt was cut with fan shaped insets reaching to the belt, and these were held in by pretty black silk frogs and loops. The waist was of white tulle silk, plainly made, with stitched plaits at the neck. There was a short bolero of silk, with two wide white cloth tabs stitched down and held by two large buttons. The sleeves to the bolero reached scarcely below the elbow, but those to the waist had ruffles one over the other to the middle of the hand.

Hats for the summer are nearly all decorated with lace around the edges in the form of a frill like a flowing veil, and the effect is light and softening to the oldest face, while still becoming to the young ones. For these the lace should be fine, though not necessarily real. There are so many beautiful laces now made by machin*ery and yet having all the designs that* made the old point so valuable that almost every woman can have lace trimmings to her gowns and millinery who could only dream of it a few short years ago. Particularly the fine Berge and the chantilly laces in black and white are beautiful, and the machine made is of thread as valuable as was wont to be put in the handmade laces of old, so it is really a godsend to have the cheaper qualities.

For young girls dark waists seem to be favored for the moment at least, and we see some really charming things in that line, quite novel and fetching. There is a short basque below the belt, much like that of our grandmother's time. A few rows of very narrow soutache finish the neck and bottom of the basquine and form the deep cuffs. Around the neck, forming the yoke, is a row of gold metallic braid in fancy openwork, and this is also put on the cuffs. This closes in the back with many small gilt buttons. The whole design is pretty and youthful.

Well, I have kept on. My record becomes dearer and dearer to me every year. I hope that, if die at 70, it will be a 67 years' record; if I die at 80, it will be a 77 years' record."

A Yawn Leads to Death.

While indulging in a prolonged yawn, Herbert McGiver, of Brandon, N. Y., threw up his arms. One of his hands struck and knocked down a loaded shotgun which was hanging on the wall. The fall caused the discharge of the gun, and the contents entered McGiver's neck, killing him instantly.

HER TITLE IS CLEAR.

An Achievement Unique in Sunday School History.

Miss Maggie Albany, 21 Years Old, Has Not Missed a Single Session of Her Class for Almost 1,500 Sundays.

As a merited acknowledgment of having attended Sunday-school without a single interruption for 28 years, the Ebenezer Methodist church, of Philadelphia, presented recently to Miss Maggie Albany a gold watch in commemoration of the achievement, which, undoubtedly, has never been equaled in the history of Sunday schools. Since she was three years old Miss Albany has attended regularly. She has not missed a session for almost 1,500 successive Sundays. Is there anyone else, anywhere else, of whom this can be said? Is not Miss Albany justly called the champion Sunday-school scholar of the world?

In making her unique and difficult record Miss Albany has been called upon to perform many a heroic and strange feat. The following are three cases in point:

She had been nursing, in Phoenixville, a friend who was ill. When Sunday morning came she took the train for Manayuzk, the station nearest to her church. Sixteen miles from town, however, the train came to a halt before a wreck, and it was announced that it would be evening before the tracks would be cleared and traffic resumed.

Miss Albany looked at her watch. It was nine o'clock in the morning. The ground was frozen hard, and now and then a flurry of snow fell. She set out to Manayunk, and five hours later she reached Sunday school. Her shoulders were white with snow, her thin shoes were wet and cut. She limped a little, and she was ravenously hungry. Without mishap she got through the session, but for the next five days she was so stiff and sore that she had to walk with a cane.

A painful but not serious illness kept Miss Albany in bed a month some five years ago. Each Sunday afternoon this month her mother dressed her; she was helped downstairs; her father lifted her into his carriage, and wrapped her well in blankets. She was then driven to Ebenezer church and attended the sessions.

During the session she reclined in a comfortable rocking chair, and at its end she went straight home to bed.

MISS MAGGIE ALBANY.
(The Champion Sunday School Scholar of the World.)

These Sunday outings varied the monotony of her illness delightfully, and helped her, she claims, to get well.

During the last 15 years, rather than miss a single Sunday-school session, she has refused over 50 delightful tours and invitations—to the Thousand Islands, to Florida, to the mountains during the summer months, to the seashore, to the country for long vacations, etc.

And to-day this unconquerable Sunday school scholar, when she looks forward into the future, sees no rest from her sacrifices and from her feats of heroism and endurance, for she is determined, at any cost, to maintain and increase her record. Under no circumstances would she move away from Philadelphia; neither would she absent herself from the city over Sunday, nor accept an office or situation that would keep her away from her Sunday school once. To build up her Sunday-school record is her life work, and in this work no sacrifice, no hardship, no peril daunts her.

Miss Albany lives in Roxborough, a pleasant suburban section of Philadelphia. She is the daughter of Rev. Charles Albany, a Methodist minister. She speaks modestly and cheerfully of her Sunday-school career. The other day she said:

"I was a baby of three years when I entered the infant class of Ebenezer Sunday school. I can't, in fact, remember the beginning of my Sunday-school life. I have to take the word of others for it. Up to the age of 13 my attendance was regular simply because I liked Sunday school. Then, in the tenth year, the church presented me with a Bible, and our minister, on the day he handed me this gift, said that he thought, since I had already made a ten years' record, I should keep on, and should see how great and wonderful a record would be possible for me to make.

"Well, I have kept on. My record becomes dearer and dearer to me every year. I hope that, if die at 70, it will be a 67 years' record; if I die at 80, it will be a 77 years' record."

FIRST HORSE SHOW TO BE HELD IN JUNE

Many Prominent Men Are Interested in the Proposed Exhibition.

SUCCESS IS ASSURED

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, JUNE 17 AND 18, AGREED UPON.

Promoters of the Affair Meet at the Casino and Plan Strong Attractions—L. E. Waring Chairman of Committee.

A horse show for Plainfield is assured. At a meeting of those interested in the affair held last night at the Casino, Friday and Saturday, June 17 and 18, were decided upon as the dates and it will be held at the Plainfield Driving Park. On the first day a leading event will be a pony race and a hurdle race will be the chief attraction for the second day. There will also be several classes. Matters are so shaping themselves that the show will be one of the best held in the State, sufficient patronage being promised to make it a decided success. Lewis E. Waring has been chosen chairman of the general committee, Dr. M. O'M. Knott secretary and J. Herbert Case treasurer. They will have supervision of the arrangements for the show.

Among the prominent persons who have already identified themselves with the show and are on the temporary committee are Charles W. McClellan, H. H. Rewland, H. G. Runkle, Seigfried Avenue, R. R. Sharp, of Cranford.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Wednesday matinees at Wallack's Theatre, New York, are designed for the special accommodation of suburban patrons who find it inconvenient to patronize the evening performances of "The County Chairman." An additional advantageous feature of these mid-week afternoon representations of George Ade's immensely attracting comedy is the fact that the prices are very materially reduced from the schedule in operation as night. It has been running along without the slightest break in its large prosperity since November, and it is a fact significant of its high quality as an entertainment that its first New York audience was the smallest in its entire record at Wallack's.

"The Other Girl," which holds the record for success of all of Augustus Thomas' plays ever presented in the city, is now moving along triumphantly at the New Empire Theatre, New York city, towards the 150th performance. It is drawing capacity audiences and it will probably reach the end of its season at this house with this record of big business still the same. The fun is entirely New Yorky, of a sort which the theatregoers of the Metropolis readily appreciate and thoroughly understand. The acting of the piece is of a very high standard as Charles Frohman has put *into it a remarkable cast which in*cludes the great comedy sextette, Lionel Barrymore, Joseph Wheelock, Jr., Richard Bennett, Frank Worthing, and Elsie and Drina De Wolfe.

Already the public is congratulating itself upon the fact that it is to have the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth this season. The date has been positively set for Wednesday, May 4, and a great crowd as well as a great circus day are anticipated. Newark will be the only city in this vicinity where this greatest of all shows will exhibit this year, and naturally there is a great deal of local interest in the event. Inquiries at the ticket offices of the various transportation lines elicit the information that special cheap rate tickets to the show will be on sale circus day, and that large numbers of people in this local ity will take advantage of the opportunity to see the big exhibition. They will go expecting to see a great performance as well as a splendid exposition of zoological and other displays, and, judging from the unanimous verdict of the newspapers in New York city and elsewhere, they will not be disappointed. The comments of the New York press the day after the annual opening at Madison Square Garden were laudatory in the extreme. The Sun declared: "It is the best show that ever struck this town." The Tribune called it "a living, breathing, acting, fairy book." The Press said that "adjectives fail and limp in describing the show." The Evening Telegram described it as "the most skillfully selected exhibition in all departments that circus history has ever recorded." And these are only a few of the applauding comments.

Messrs. Bellew, O'Neill and Warner and Misses George, Illington and Otis receive special recognition in "The Two Orphans" at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York. In the old boat house scene in the last act these players are at their best, the thrilling knife duel between Warner as "Jacques" and Mr. O'Neill as "Pierre," moving their auditors as dramatic situations rarely affect an audience. In addition this revival of "The Two Orphans" brings back the "palmy days" of the stage, of which the father delights to tell the son—the days when the inherent merit of the play and the art of the player was more relied on than the physical side of a production to commend it to public attention.

Conceasal of opinion is always right. The theatre-going public set the stamp of approval on Hamlin & Mitchell's extravaganza, "The Wizard of Oz," at its opening in New York over a year ago. This was amply proven during the return engagement at the Majestic Theatre, where packed houses have been noted at every performance. The last week of the engagement begins Monday, and closes Saturday, April 30. Following the "Wizard" at this playhouse that has never had anything but brand new productions, comes "The Man From China," an elaborate musical comedy, with Charles A. Bigiow, the comedian, as the star, and a company of eighty persons of unusual merit. Miss Vera Michelena, who was a pronounced in "Princess Chic," is the prima donna of the company.

"The Virginian" is in its sixteenth week at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, and has maintained its popularity remarkably in view of the many changes of late in metropolitan theatres and the large number of new bills offered. This unusually clever and amusing drama long ago went on record as one of the very few pronounced successes of the season. As the time for closing the theatres approaches it is well to remind those who have not yet seen "The Virginian" that to miss this dramatization of Owen Wister's novel is to forego one of the most satisfying and pleasing of recent dramas. The merits of the stage version of this popular story are emphasized by the fact that there are hundreds of persons who have visited the Manhattan Theatre repeatedly to enjoy it.

Meritorious is the word that best describes the bill that will be offered at Keith's during the present week. *As an all around vaudeville entertain*ment it could not be improved upon, and still better it is of the highest class in every particular. There is not an act on the entire programme that is not worthy of premier position on any bill, and as a result all who enjoy good variety cannot afford to miss this treat.

BAPTISTS REDUCE THEIR CHURCH DEBT

The Congregation Subscribes $6,100 at the Sunday Morning Service.

PASTOR MAKES APPEAL

MEMBERS' QUICK RESPONSE TO MEET THE OBLIGATION.

The Total Debt of $12,000 Incurred in Making Necessary Improvements to Edifice—United Action of Church.

Gratifying progress was made Sunday morning at the First Baptist church toward liquidating the indebtedness of $12,000. A portion of this debt was incurred last summer, and the balance was carried for several years. It represents the cost of building an addition on the rear of the edifice and many improvements made last season. Yesterday morning $6,100 was subscribed by various members and it is believed that the remainder will be secured within a short time.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, preached an eloquent sermon in which he referred to the action taken by the officials deciding to make an effort to pay off the debt. In response to his earnest appeal liberal amounts were subscribed. The sum received yesterday represents only a limited number of that entire membership and it is fully expected that the balance of indebtedness will be easily raised by the other members.

It is the plan of Dr. Chambliss, as well as other officials of the church, to have every member contribute something toward the debt, no matter how little.

MRS. J. P. LAIRE'S FUNERAL

REV. DR. CORNELIUS SCHENCK CONDUCTS SERVICES AT LATE HOME.

The funeral services of Mrs. J. P. Laire, held Monday a.m. from the late home, 159 Crescent avenue, were largely attended by relatives and friends, many being from Trinity Reformed church, where Mrs. Laire was a member. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck conducted the services, speaking on "The Ministry of Suffering." He spoke in a sympathetic manner of the long and patient suffering of Mrs. Laire and told how she was able to bear it through the comforts of Christ. He also referred to her Christlike character and disposition, and how through her affliction she taught many the way to Christian living.

There was a large display of beautiful flowers. During the services "The Homeland" was sung by E. E. Runyon. The remains were taken this morning to Annandale, Hunterdon County, the former home of Mrs. Laire, for interment.

Dispute Over Insurance.

The case of John C. Anderson, administrator of the estate of James A. Anderson, deceased, against the Supreme Council, Catholic Benevolent Legion, has been settled by the granting of an injunction forbidding the Legion to pay J. P. Owens, Esq., attorney for the late Mr. Rosana Anderson the amount of insurance due Anderson's heirs from the Legion. William Newcorn, Esq., represented the complainant estate.

Decoration Day Programme.

The usual programme for Decoration Day was decided upon. There will be the parade in the morning and the decoration of graves, and the exercises in Reform Hall in the afternoon. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will be in the parade and an orchestra has been engaged for the afternoon.

$10,000 Suit.

Through Lawyer William G. De Mezz, of this city, Frank Seacrch, of Newark, has brought suit for $10,000 against the Public Service Corporation. He was involved in a trolley accident in the State metropolis recently and claims to have sustained serious injury.

CLUB MEMBERS' GIFTS

ARRANGEMENT OF THE EVENTS FOR DECORATION DAY.

Fourth of July Schedule—Names of Donors of Trophies—Conditions of Play on the Course—Labor Day Attractions.

The Cranford Golf Club, one of the most active and successful organizations of the kind in the State, has an attractive programme of events for the coming season, in addition to the team matches to be played in the East Jersey Golf Association tournament. The greens committee has arranged the contests and offers prizes or cups for each contest and class. All of the prizes have been donated by members of the club, except the championship cups, which will be presented by the club.

On May 7, 14, 21 and 28 there will be an eighteen hole handicap for players in the three classes, prizes offered by Silas P. Wood, Henry P. Wood and George E. Wood, and on the same dates there will be a women's putting handicap, the prize being "Love's" loving cup, and the play will consist of both clock golf and putting.

The events for Decoration Day include medal play between three-men teams chosen from the three classes, and a women's clock putting handicap, 24 holes. A. R. Denman has been chosen captain for May.

On June 4, 11, 18 and 25 there will be an 18 hole handicap for all three classes, prizes being offered by Thomas A. Sperry, William M. Sperry and Joseph A. Sperry, and on June 4, 11 and 18 there will be a women's 24 hole putting handicap, match play, for a prize offered by Fred Schilling, Jr. H. S. Barbour has offered a prize for a kicker's handicap competition on June 25 and on the same day there *will be a women's nine hole handi*cap, prize offered by W. S. Barrows. F. P. Davis is the captain for June.

The contests for July include an 18 hole handicap for all three classes, prizes offered by M. M. Cooper, John S. Denman and S. J. Cox. The play will take place on June 2, 9, 16 and 23, and on July 4 there will be a thirty-six hole medal play handicap, for a vase presented by M. O. Doering, also driving, approaching and putting contest from first and second tees, a women's putting handicap, 24 holes, for the prize presented by Mrs. M. O. Doering and a kicker's handicap will be the event for July 30. J. C. Edgecombe will be captain for July

The August competitions include play for the President's cup, presented by Harvey N. Fiske, on August 6, 13, 20 and 27. On the same dates there will be a women's putting handicap. A. R. Denman will be captain for August. In September there will be the championship contests for all three classes and a women's championship putting handicap, the play to be on September 3, 10, 17 and 24. The contests for Labor Day will be arranged in August and announced soon afterward. F. P. Davis will be captain for September. The October events will be arranged in September. October being the end of the fiscal year for the club it is proposed to make it a jubilee month and valuable prizes will be offered in a number of events.

Arrangements will be made from month to month for match games with other clubs, and the club team will be drawn from Class A membership. The two tennis courts will be put in perfect order for play on May 1 and the greens committee, working in conjunction with those of the club members who enjoy tennis, will arrange for contests or tournament.

Pianiatelder in Cast.

At Carnegie Lyceum, New York, tomorrow night, E. Maxwell Honeyman, of Grove street, will take part in an amateur production of the "Mikado." He will sing Nanki Poo. The presentation is under the direction of the Young Men's Association, of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Harlem, New York, where Mr. Honeyman sings in the choir.

Miss Tracy Engaged.

Society folk will be interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Tracy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, of West Eighth street, and Dr. Mitta. The latter is a nephew of Miss Kenyon, of West Seventh street.

Will Entertain at Bound Brook.

The Euterpean Glee Club, assisted by Miss Aimee Emmons, will give a concert to the Presbyterian church, Bound Brook, Wednesday night.

Miss May Mulford, of East Fifth street, is greatly improved from a long severe illness.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS IN GOLDSMITH PLAY

Senior Class Members Score a Success in "She Stoops to Conquer," Production.

DELIGHTED AUDIENCE

BIG CROWD ATTENDS PERFORMANCE AT THE CASSINO.

Members of Caste Give Evidence of Careful Training—No Stiffness Apparent at Any Time in the Acting.

Oliver Goldsmith's immortal comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," received a careful rendering Saturday night from the High School Seniors who occupied the boards at the Casino. There was a crowd present that tested the full capacity of the hall. Every seat was filled with a sympathetic audience who was not sparing of applause.

The delightful comedy could not fail to amuse however unskillfully acted. But there was no lack of skill in the work of the High-School boys and girls. They had been thoroughly trained in their parts by Principal L. W. Travell and Miss S. Lena Bass, of the High School. They were at home in the parts and their playing was free of much of the stiffness that so quickly betrays an amateurish production. The parts were well cast and every member read his lines with understanding.

F. K. Anderson as "Tony Lumpkin," carried off high honors. He showed a good deal of dramatic in*stinct and his appreciation of the com*edy worth of the part was high. He kept his audience laughing all the time he was on the stage. Miss H. Mae Batchelor was clever as Kate Hardcastle. Her "stooping" was so gracefully done that she conquered her hearers as well as her lover. Miss Wilhelmina Patton did acceptable work as Mrs. Hardcastle. Miss Jessie Burt, Miss Dorothy Fleming and Miss Mildred Spicer had the difficult task of taking men's parts, but each ac*quitted herself admirably. There was* in fact no single member of the cast who did not reflect credit upon himself and his instructors. The production was managed by Lucius T. Koons. The full cast was as follows:

Sir Charles Marlow, Jessie Burt; Young Marlow, Dorothy Fleming; Hastings, Mildred Spicer; Hardcastle, VanWyck Brooks; Tony Lumpkin, Francis K. Anderson; Stingo (innkeeper), Jose L. Tweedy; Diggory, servant, Lucius T. Koons; Roger, servant, George L. Babcock; Jeremy, servant, Charles Elliot; Moses, servant, Harold Fenno; Dick (Muggins, Chareis Neagle; Jack Slang, George L. Babcock; Tom Twist, Harold Fenno; Ted, Lucius T. Koons; Little Aminadab, Monroe Long; Mrs. Hardcastle, Wilhelmina Patton; Kate Hardcastle, H. May Batchelor; Constance Neville, Frances VanDeventer; Maid, Laura Bent; Betty Stingo, Evelyn Berg.

Mrs. Charles E. Brooks assisted in coaching the pupils in their parts. It is expected that the proceeds will be about $150. After donations are made to the Athletic Association and to the high school paper, The Oracle, the balance will be used in purchasing a class memorial for the school.

LOST THE PRIZE.

Miss Emma Line Won the Coin, But Dropped it in the Street.

Miss Emma Line, a High School student, is grieving over the loss of a five-dollar gold piece that she won in a competition at the school recently. The coin was dropped on the street Wednesday or Thursday.

Miss Line prizes the gold piece so highly that its loss has affected her health. She marked the coin, so that substitution of another in its place by her family is impossible.

Games Cancelled.

As a result of the poor showing made by the Seventh Regiment team against Westfield on Saturday, Manager George Johnston of the Alls Club, has cancelled the two games for Decoration Day with that team. A stronger attraction will be presented.

Miss Winnie Kane, of West Third street, has returned from a visit with friends in Elizabeth.

Mrs. Miles, wife of Rev. E. S. Miles, of Phoenicia, N. Y., is visiting relatives in this city and the borough.

Mrs. William Slape, of New York, has returned to her home, after a short visit with her mother in Westervelt avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, of "The Gables," are spending some time in New York at the Buckingham. Their son, Barrett Shepard, has returned from a western trip ill with rheumatic fever.

WESTFIELD ROUTS SEVENTH REGIMENT

In Opening Contest Union County Champions Surprise the Fans by Great Work.

SEVEN INNINGS ONLY

SCORE OF FIFTEEN TO THREE SHOWS ONE-SIDED PERFORMANCE.

Red Waller Strikes Out Nine Men—Westfield Makes Thirteen Hits and But One Error—The Individual Scores.

Poor, but industrious, the Seventh Regiment baseball team went to work at the Westfield nine Saturday afternoon to win runs and plaudits. They were willing, and even anxious, to score up tally marks for a rainy inning, but Denman's corps of hit-killers and hitsmiths got in the way with painful and unceasing regularity, and the obstinacy of the victor was not for theirs. After seven hopeless sessions the military men reversed arms and marched sadly away after the corpse of their bright young ambition, with three vain runs to decorate the grave. About the same time the Westfield corporation was declaring a dividend on fifteen fine fat marks.

That was the lop-sided way in which Denman's trestles opened their season. If they don't have to work any harder to win through the rest of the season, they'll need Dr. Thingshob's Thin Pills for Fas People before the snow-bird peeps again. It is to be presumed the Seventh Regiment men tried to play ball, but all they succeeded in doing was to let Westfield play with them. It was a poor exhibition all the way through, and half the spectators went away in the fifth inning.

The weather may have had something to do with that, and perhaps there is some excuse there for the New Yorkers. The thermometer was down to forty-seven and a chilly wind bated into the proceedings with fiendish persistency. Of a verity, it was no baseball day, and not even a crack game would have made it so. With the milliasmas playing like teething infants it was a sad, sad mistake on the calendar of the diamond.

Manager Denman, who is an artist in such things, worked off the dramatic preliminaries of the seasonal opening with much eclat and other things. The grounds were in splendid shape, with a new wire fence around bleachers to hold in crowds for a special decorative feature. Mayor-elect Randolph Perkins did the button-pressing honors. When he gracefully tossed a new ball into the diamond the crowd cheered, and cried for more.

They got it. Westfield fell on that nice white ball and did things to it with strong and lusty energy. They hit it when the sticks were theirs, and threw it back to the mines when it tried to gambol in the garden. And the regimental command looked helplessly on, as effective as the filigree work on their dress uniforms.

The Seventh played yellowly in the field and couldn't handle their ash wands. Once in a while they landed on Waller, but the hits were never in hailing distance of each other. Dasseway, at third base, and R. Voorhees, at first, were the worst offenders. All the team except left fielder, Cadmus, were slower than they should have been. Cadmus was fast and snappy and did good work with the stick.

Voorhees only lasted three innings for the Regiment. His arm was so sore, it was said, that he shouldn't have gone in at all. Claude Edwards, a former Plainfielder, took his place and did pretty good work—considering.

Westfield showed up in the same old shape. They were all rubber-tired automobile delivery wagons and handed out the goods with regularity and despatch. Waller, with a brand-new hair cut and a rejuvenated set of muscles, had his men well in hand. Nine of them fell asleep at the switch under his hypnotic stare, and the rest had a hard job getting away from the plate.

Nearly 1000 enthusiastic cranks saw the game. That is, they were enthusiastic when it started. They are not to be blamed for a slump in feelings later on. Many Plainfielders were in the crowd, most of them sizing up Westfield with an eye to the Alle series. They are not talking of a walkover.

who was burt in the chest by being hurled under a seat, and B. T. Benson, an employe of the United States Treasury Department. George Wurts, ex-Secretary of State of New Jersey, was among the passengers on the train, but he escaped injury.

The other injured persons received either bruises or slight cuts. They were attended by physicians at the station and took the next train to Long Branch.

After the crash, the telescoped Pullman sleeper caught fire, as did the engine. The fire department was called out and quickly put out the flames. All the ambulances of the city were turned out on the report that a frightful loss of life had occurred, and the wildest rumors were spread regarding the accident.

The wreck blocked the tracks for two hours and all trains had to use the freight tracks.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS DELIGHT AUDIENCE

ing are exorciastingly funny.

All the parts were so cleverly interpreted that it would be hard to single any one member of the cast for praise. Mr. McGee is the nervous old apothecary. Mr. Murray, as "Tim Bolus" and Miss VanDeventer, as the pert and jealous "Peggy" were particularly funny because their parts were so broadly humorous. The lighter comedy of the others were quite as delightful in its way.

The farce was staged carefully; the scenery was of the most finished character.

After the entertainment the floor was cleared for dancing and the younger people had an hour's additional enjoyment. The entire affair was under the direction of the entertainment committee, which is made up of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Healy, Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCutchen and C. E. Murray.

Kept Sad News From Her.

There was a pathetic incident in connection with the sudden death of William Brown, the motorman for the Public Service Corporation, which occurred yesterday morning at Elizabeth. It had always been Mrs. Brown's custom to meet her husband at the Watchung avenue trolley stand every morning upon his first trip to this city and hand him his lunch. Prior to her trip yesterday morning she visited Blimm's grocery store on East Third street and there was informed that her husband had been injured, but how seriously she did not learn. Being anxious about Mr. Brown and noticing that it was time for his car, she ran to Watchung avenue, reaching there just as the car came into the station. She noticed that her husband was not in charge and a few hasty unanswered questions told her too plainly that something serious had happened. She turned homeward completely prostrated. Subsequently she learned that her husband had been killed.

HAPPILY WEDDED FORTY-SEVEN YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Day, Sr., Observe the Event at Their New Market Home.

RECEIVE RICH PRESENTS

GROOM IS PROMINENT IN NEWSPAPER AND ADVERTISING WORK.

The Couple Born at Yarmouth, England, Have Traveled Extensively—Residents of New Market Since 1880—Have Seven Children.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Day, Sr., of New Market, celebrated the forty-seventh anniversary of their marriage at their home on Saturday, the event being marked by many pleasing features. In the evening the couple were the recipients of congratulations from relatives and friends who called to join in the happy event. They were also remembered in the presentation of many gifts of use and value.

Mr. and Mrs. Day were both born at Yarmouth, England. Mr. Day is seventy-two years old and Mrs. Day is seventy-five. In 1854 Mr. Day started the Yarmouth Independent, which is still being published and is one of the most influential newspapers in that part of the country. The couple came to this country in 1857 and resided in Chicago until just after the big fire in that city. They then moved to Stratford, Canada, remaining there until 1878. Seven years later they moved to New Market, where they have lived ever since.

Soon after returning from Canada, Mr. Day was engaged as a reporter on New York papers, but in 1888 he took up the advertising business and has since continued to publish the Advertiser's Guide. The couple, though well advanced in years, enjoy excellent health. They have the highest esteem of a large circle of acquaintance all of whom wish them many years of happiness and success.

Mr. and Mrs. Day have four sons, George, James, Charles and Stanley Day, Jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Frank VanNuise and Miss Irene Day, all of New Market, and Mrs. Dr. Abrens, of Stratford, Canada.

YOUNG PEOPLE REORGANIZE

NEW CONSTITUTION WITHOUT A PLEDGE IS ADOPTED BY BAPTISTS.

The young people of the First Baptist church, having decided to with draw from the Christian Endeavor Society, met last night for re-organization. A committee composed of J. H. Crane, Harry Woodland and Harry Joseph presented a new constitution which was adopted with a few changes. The pledge is omitted, and altogether the organization will be conducted along broader plans. The division of membership will be between the regulars and the honorary list, the latter being intended for the pastor and officers of the church.

Owing to the lateness of the hour it was impossible to elect officers last night. This will probably be done at the next meeting on Friday night, April 29. The new society starts off with a membership of thirty.

The organization will be known as the Young People's Society of the First Baptist church. A nominating committee was appointed for election of officers next Friday night. The committee consists of J. Henry Crane, chairman; F. K. Armstrong and Volma Oakley.

CRUSHED TO DEATH BETWEEN CAR FENDERS

Motorman William Brown Killed in Elizabeth Early This Morning.

BY A RUNAWAY CAR

GREEN MOTORMAN LOST CONTROL OF CONVEYANCE ON A HILL.

Brown Mangled While Adjusting Fender to Begin His Day's Work—Death Almost Instantaneous—Lived in This City.

Against the fender of his own car, William Brown, of East Third street, a motorman on the Elizabeth-Plainfield trolley line, was crushed to death at 6:30 Tuesday morning. The fatality occurred in front of the P. R. R. car barn on North Broad street, Elizabeth.

Brown left this city at 4:50 o'clock to take out his car from the Elizabeth barn. At 6:30 he made ready to run his conveyance to the main track. On the spur leading from the barn he halted the car to adjust his fender. He had the right of way, and allowed the front of the car to jut slightly on the straight track.

While he was settling the fender in its place a Third street car approached down the hill above the spur. It should have stopped until the spur but the motorman, a green one, it is said, lost control of his car and it shot down the incline with increasing speed.

Brown, unconscious of its approach, was bending over his fender. Before the warning cries of the other motorman could rouse him to the danger, the fender of the rushing car struck him with full force. He was crushed between the two fenders and terribly mangled.

He was breathing faintly when taken from between the cars, but died almost immediately after. His body was carried to A. F. Thorn's cigar store and later to the morgue. Dr. Grier, the Elizabeth county physician, will view the remains today and issue a permit for the removal of the body to this city.

Brown was one of the senior men in the company's service. He entered its employ shortly after the line was started. He was a familiar figure to most of the patrons of the line, particularly in this city, and his good-nature and courtesy won him many friends. The company officials regarded him as one of its best men.

Brown was middle-aged and married, but had no children. His wife survives him. His home on East Third street was near the beef house.

During the Spanish-American war he was a member of the Eighth New Jersey Volunteers.

CONTEST INSURANCE.

The Barbers' Union Has Flatly Refused to Pay the Claim of $60 to Mr. Anthony's Widow.

Dispute over the death claim of her husband's life has been started between the widow of Clarence Anthony and the Barbers' Union. The union has flatly refused to pay the claim, and Mrs. Anthony has placed the matter in the hands of a lawyer.

Anthony had been a journeyman barber and then went into business for himself. Later he returned to work as a journeyman, being in the employ of Lafayette Rossmethal, of Somerset street, at the time of his death. According to the rules of the union a boss in becoming a journeyman must surrender a card furnished him by the union. When Mrs. Anthony applied for the $60 which is the supposed due on her husband's life, the union denied its liability. It was claimed that Anthony had not turned in his card, as required, and thereby forfeited the right to the insurance.

Mrs. Anthony denies the right of the union's position and insists on receiving the money. She has instructed Counsellor F. J. Blatz to bring suit if the organization fails to meet her claim.

The Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall-Smith, will give a concert in the First M. E. church on Thursday night, May 12.

—The contract case of the First National Bank against E. S. Schenck, and also the case of Isaac Field against David J. Griscombe is scheduled to come up Friday in Justice R. P. VanMinden's court.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Bright sailed last week, taking their auto with them for a long trip across the continent. Mrs. Bright was Miss Daisy Shepard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, of "The Gables."

A number of Plainfield's society people are going abroad this summer. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick will sail on May 12, and on May 21 Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, the Misses Tweedy and Mrs. Evarts Tracy will sail for a pleasure trip in foreign lands.

WOMAN FINDS FATHER AND WEALTH AWAITING

Mrs. Nicholas VanWinkle, of Warrenville, Hears of Her Parents After Many Years.

ESTATE IN MICHIGAN

HAS NEVER KNOWN WHO HER PARENTS WERE.

Romance in the Life of a Farmer's Wife—Estate Said to be Worth $200,000—Purchase of a Farm.

Through the accidental finding of some old papers revealing her identity, Mrs. Nicholas VanWinkle, of Warrenville, has just learned for the first time in thirty years of the whereabouts of her father, and that she is an heir to considerable wealth. When a young girl living in Brooklyn, her place of birth, her mother died and she was adopted by a family by the name of Campbell. Her name was Winifred Havens, but she took the name of Mamie Campbell.

Later the young woman married Nicholas VanWinkle and resided in North Plainfield. When Mr. and Mrs. Campbell died they left their adopted daughter $10,000. Mr. Havens searched constantly for his daughter, but was unsuccessful. He had practically given up all hope of ever finding her, when through the work of settling up the estate of Mrs. Havens, a Michigan lawyer accidentally discovered the missing daughter. It was most essential that she should be located as the estate could not be adjusted until her name was signed to the legal papers.

In searching through some papers and in connection with previous transactions with the estate, the whereabouts of the daughter was learned. She has now been married about sixteen years, and through the estate she will at present receive about $10,000 and will probably share in an estate valued, it is said, at $200,000.

Mr. and Mrs. VanWinkle have just purchased the valuable Dan. Cory farm of 150 acres at Warrenville, where they are very comfortably located. The wealth that has just come to Mrs. VanWinkle is welcome and the fact that she has found her father and at the same time is the means of allowing the estate to be settled, is a source of great satisfaction to her.

THAT SCHOOL RECIPROCITY

PLAN ENGAGE ATTENTION OF NORTH PLAINFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION.

To straighten out some slight misunderstanding that has arisen over the provisions of the reciprocity agreement between the Plainfield and North Plainfield school departments the borough board, at its monthly meeting Monday again declared its position in the matter. The board agreed that the understanding covers pupils of all grades.

It was said at the meeting last night that the Plainfield authorities seem to think the reciprocal arrangement is to benefit the school. The borough board regards it as a benefit to the pupil and not to the school.

Three recommendations for next year's school work by Supt. Wightman were adopted. The seniors of the High School are to be offered an opportunity to review their arithmetic and geography. These subjects are no touched after the grammar grades, and the pupils are apt to lease the school very rusty in them. This review is not to be obligatory, but the pupils will be strongly urged to take it. It will not interfere with the regular courses and will bring on no extra expense.

Miss Bilsberger, the German teacher, will begin instruction in public speaking and a class in pattern-cutting and dressmaking is to be organized.

Dr. J. H. Buchanan was elected school physician, to succeed Dr. Albert Pittis. The coal supply for next year was ordered.

Suit on Contract.

Suit on contract has been instituted in Justice Mosher's court by Charles Force against James Totten. It will be heard on Friday. F. J. Blatz, Esq., is counsel for the plaintiff.

Suits for Damages.

John P. Owens, Esq., has instituted suits against the Public Service Corporation for Martin McDermott, of Cranford, and Timothy Glynn, of New Orange, both being injured on the trolley in their respective towns within the last three months. The amount of damages asked for in each case is $5,000.

FORMER PLAINFIELDERS ARE KILLED BY GAS

Mr. and Mrs. Francois Meignier Are Asphyxiated in Their Home in New York.

GLOVEMAKER BY TRADE

UNTIL RECENTLY MAN EMPLOYED AT PERRIN FRERES & CIE., HERE.

Meignier Served in French Army and Came to This Country Four Years Ago—Leave a Daughter, Eight Years Old.

Francois Meignier, a glove cutter, and his wife, who formerly lived here, were found asphyxiated by gas yesterday morning in their room at 152 West Twenty-fifth street, New York. Their death was accidental.

Meignier had lived in this country about four years. Previous to that he had served for seven years in the French army, in the Sixtieth Regiment of infantry, which was stationed at Grenoble.

On coming to this country he obtained employment as a cutter of kid gloves in the Perrin Fereres & Co. factory in this city. His wife worked in a factory at 152 West Twenty-third street, New York.

The pair retired shortly after 9 o'clock, on Sunday night. About midnight several other inmates of the house smelled gas, but failed to discover where it came from. It was not until 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning that the two were found. Gas was burning in a jet near the bed and more gas escaping through an unattached tube intended for a heater.

The pair left an eight-year old daughter, who is being educated at Union Hill, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Meigner travelled with a circus in Cuba sometime ago. He was a clown and she a snake charmer. Her maiden name was Mary Lynaugh and she lived at Johnstown, N. Y. Meigner was forty-two and his wife ten years younger.

Firemen at Home.

The borough firemen have completed their moving from the old house to the new one. The men slept in the house for the first time Monday night.

The bell has been put in shape for time-rings. The batteries have all been installed, and a general test was made. Hereafter 7 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening will be rung regularly.

His Monument at Newark.

In the Cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre, Newark, Silverius Koelhoffer, of that city, has just had a handsome monument erected by L. L. Manning & Son, stonecutters, of West Front street. The monument is of plain hammered Barre, Vt., granite of the obelisk style. The stone is twenty-five feet high and five feet square at the base.

Building Permits.

A building permit was granted this morning to Charles R. Clifton and John H. Campbell for the erection of a two-story frame house in Madison avenue. A permit was also granted to Mrs. M. G. Galbraith for the erection of three two-story frame dwellings on Spooner avenue.

ANNUAL REPORTS SHOW PROSPERITY

Trinity Reformed Congregation Now Numbers Five Hundred and Seventy-Five.

A BIG SUNDAY-SCHOOL

GOOD WORK OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Reports from the Several Societies are Read—New Members in Church and Sunday-school

The annual report meeting of Trinity Reformed church was held in the lecture room Thursday, the reports received for the year ending March 31, indicating a generally active and prosperious condition in all branches of the church work. In his official report, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the church, announced that there were 365 families in the church. By confession of faith, eighteen members were received into the church fellowship, and by letter twenty-four. The total number in communion is 575. Fourteen infants were baptized and nine adults, a total of twenty-three. There were nine deaths during the year and eight dismissals.

Elder Robert Clark, Jr., read the annual report of the church and gave a carefully prepared comparison of receipts and expenditures for the past year, with the year preceding, and by the comparisons the church was shown to be in a healthy condition, financially.

Reports from the Sunday-school showed an enrollment of 564, with fifty in Marcounier and 150 in the home department. Contributions during the year were $1,494.46 for benevolent objects and $7,102.75 for congregational purposes. The increase in the growth of the Sunday-school was notable.

Of the total for benevolent objects, the church offerings contributed amounted to $463.07; the Ladies' Christian Work Society contributed $109.10; the Sunday-school $347.38; the Y. P. S. C. E., $61.11; the Junior Endeavorers, $59.20; the Young Women's Mission Band, $201.84; the King's Daughters, $76. Reports from the several societies were read by Mrs. Cornelius Schenck for the Ladies' Christian Work Society; F. E. Smith, Miss M. Berkaw, Mrs. J. M. Tiet and Mrs. L. R. Schofield, for the Sunday-school department; Miss Mabel Wilson for the Y. P. S. C. E., Mrs. Tier for the Jr. C. E. Society; Miss Lillian A. Force for the Young Women's Mission Band; and Miss Wilson for the King's Daughters. Robert Clark reported for Marcounier chapel Sunday-school.

The average attendance at the Trinity Reformed Sunday-school was 309 and for Marcounier thirty-five out of an enrollment of sixty.

The work of the Sunday-school Missionary Society was summarized. In response to an appeal from the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, a special collection, amounting to $12.53 was taken for the Children's Home at Amoy, China. Christmas boxes were sent to two newly established Sunday-schools named the Lone Tree and Cloud Chief in Oklahoma, the value of the boxes being $43.85. During the year two of the classes made special efforts aside from the regular monthly contributions for missions in taking up the Twentieth Century Forward Movement plan. Class No. 2 raised $6.04 and Class No. 14, $5 in this way. Other classes were influenced to adopt the plan by this example.

The Junior Department of the Sunday-school has to its credit for extra work, the gift of $6.50 to the Children's Home at Amoy and $5 for the King's Daughters' Baby camp.

The amount contributed during the year by the various classes of the Sunday-school was $191.68. The value of the Christmas boxes was $43.85 and the total amount raised $235.53.

The average regular monthly collection for the year was $11.47, which surpasses any in the records of the society. Though the amount received from regular collections exceeded the amount received from the same source the previous year by but $6.74, the total was given for missionary purposes established a new record. The largest amount raised before in a single year was in 1899 and 1900 when two special funds were created for the Indian and Arabian Missions and the pupils were supplied with contribution boxes to take home and fill. That year the coast was $497.33, $8.31 less than was collected the past year when there were no special funds.

In the report for Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters by the president, Mrs. Anna E. Leggett, a membership was announced of thirteen active and two honorary members. Gifts were made for the support of a trained nurse, for the Riby Camp on the mountain, for the Children's Home, for a missionary's box, and for other foreign and domestic mission purposes. The receipts for the year were $79.89, the expenditures $75.56, and the balance remaining $1.10.

The Young Women's Mission Band had an average attendance of forty-six active and ten honorary members. To foreign missions, $108.80 was contributed, and to domestic, $201.84.

DEAD AT EIGHTY-SEVEN

SISTER OF THE LATE DR. ABRAHAM COLES PASSES AWAY.

Mrs. Susan Coles Stout finished her earthly pilgrimage April 20. She died at the good old age of eighty seven. She was the last of the well known family of Coles, who for many generations past, have made their home in Scotch Plains and its vicinity.

Her older sisters, Betsey and Maria, died many years ago. The former was the wife of Elias Frost and the latter married Richard M. Crane. Her brothers, all men of distinction and usefulness in old Essex County in the last century, were William, James and Doctor Abraham Coles.

Mrs. Stout was born August 16, 1817, and had lived all her four score years and more on the same property patented in 1688 to her Cole ancestry.

She has outlived all her early relatives and immediate neighbors, leaving five or six nephews and nieces and an only son, Charles D. Stout, who occupies the old homestead.

Mrs. Stout was always a friend in need to every worthy person. In church connections for over three score years, together with her late husband, Deacon Jared S. Stout, Christian charity patience and devotion characterized both of them.

FAIRBANKS A CANDIDATE.

Indiana Senator Said to Be Willing to Accept the Nomination for Vice President.

The close political friends of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, say that he has changed his mind in regard to the nomination for vice president on the republican ticket, and that he will accept the nomination if it is tendered to him.

The senator's position is such that he cannot come out with an open declaration of his candidacy, but among his friends it is considered that he is as much in the race as though he had come out in a formal and public announcement.

The members of the Indiana delegation in congress take it for granted that Fairbanks will be nominated for vice president, and are formulating plans to fill his place in the senate.

Senator Fairbanks is non-committal when approached on the subject. For publication, so far as the public goes, he is still in the same attitude of indecision and he probably realizes that it would not be dignified for him to declare his candidacy or urge his friends to work for his nomination, but the tip has gone out along the line among his followers that he will take the nomination.

Two candidates for the prospective vacancy in the senate are already in the field. They are Representative Hemingway, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, and ex-Gov. Durbin. Hemingway has the support of the members in congress, but Durbin is strong in the state. The attitude of Senator Beveridge will be an important factor in determining the selection. The junior senator has built up a strong political machine since coming to Washington, and is generally considered to be as big a man at the white house as his colleague.

STATE'S GIFT TO CITY.

Monument Erected on the Spot Where Washington Stood at Evacuation of Boston.

The monument was erected by the state of Massachusetts at an expense of $40,000 for the purpose of marking the exact spot where George Washington, the commander of the American army, stood on March 17, 1776, as he watched the British troops evacuate Boston.

The monument was dedicated two years ago with great pomp, and the next anniversary will be equally as important and imposing.

Secretary of the Navy William H. Moody and Gen. A. R. Chaffee of the army will attend the exercises on March 17 on the occasion of turning over the monument to the care of the city, and Mayor Collins will make a responsive address to that of the governor.

There will be a parade of land and naval forces of the United States on that occasion, and all Boston companies of the state militia will also participate. Secretary Moody will send one or more warships to Boston for the occasion, and everything that is possible will be done by the national government to commemorate the event.

What the Law Decides.

A man who gets drunk only on legal holidays cannot be considered an habitual drunkard. This is the decision of Judge Harper, of Stark county, Ohio. A wife brought suit for separation from her husband, adducing that he was a confirmed toper. He proved that he became thoroughly fuddled only on holidays, and the judge decided against the wife.

Telephones Made Germ Proof.

It is the general belief that disease is spread by the telephone, by the breath condensing on the mouthpiece of the instrument. To prevent this, a German inventor puts a pad of paper, with a hole in the center, in the mouthpiece and the upper disk of paper is torn off after every conversation.

G. A. R. ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT

ARRANGEMENTS FOR REUNION AT ASBURY PARK IN JUNE.

Officers of the Department of New Jersey, Grand Army of the Republic, are preparing for the thirty-seventh annual encampment to be held in Asbury Park Thursday and Friday, June 16 and 17.

Headquarters will be established at the West End Hotel and the council of administration will meet there at 7:30 o'clock on Wednesday evening, June 15, to audit the accounts of the assistant quartermaster general and transact other business.

Headquarters for the Women's Relief Corps will be the reception hall at the West End. The Ladies of the G. A. R. will assemble at Whittier Hall in Educational hall square.

The business session of the encampment begins Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at Educational Hall. Past Department Commanders E. C. Stahl, Frank O. Cole and John Lawrence compose the committee on resolutions. The members of the committee on credentials will be: Walter S. Tully, of Post 3; E. P. Southwick, of Post 23; David D. Keef, of Post 1; William W. Mendell, of Post 25 and L. H. Bridgem, assistant adjutant general.

An interesting programme of entertainment has been arranged. A campfire, under the auspices of C. K. Hall Post, will be held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Asbury avenue casino, Pryor's Band furnishing music for the occasion.

LITERARY.

Ainslee's for May opens with a novelette by William Farquhar Payson, called "Debonnaire." The scene is laid in Canada and New York, in old colonial days. Debonnaire is the nom de guerre of the hero, who is a typical French officer of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, whose character is well described by the name. It is full of drama of the best sort, that holds the interest, and action that carries the reader along without effort. Maurice Maeterlinck, who is best known as the author of the great play, "Mona Vanna," but who is becoming almost equally well known as an essayist, has a charming and timely essay on "Field Flowers." A story well delightful French flavor is Mary E. Mullett's "The Report from Maxim's," in which a new view is given of the famous Parisian restaurant.

Don't marry this girl—Who nags; who is lazy; who is a flirt; who can not control her temper; who dislikes children and animals; who is not neat and tidy in her dress; who is deceitful and is not true to her friends; who fusses, fumes, and fidgets about everything; whose highest aspiration has never soared above self; who is amiable to suitors and "horrid" to her family; whose chief interests in life are press and amusements; who lacks thrift, and has no idea of the value of money; who can not bear to hear anyone but herself praised or admired; who thinks more of making a fine appearance than a fine character; who is course, imperious, and domineering in manner and conversation; who never thinks that her mother needs an outing, amusement, or a change; who attracts attention in public places by "loud" dress, and loud talk and laughter; who is indicreet and says she does not care if people do talk scandal about her, so long as she is conscious that she is all right; who does not think it worth while to read for self-improvement, or current information, but spends her time reading trashy novels.—April "Success."

Whoever is contemplating erecting an office building should read the article in the Architectural Record Magazine for April, by Geo. Hill, a New York city civil engineer. It contains more precise, necessary and conclusive information about the best methods of erecting skyscrapers than any statement we have heretofore seen.

There is a striking article in the May Leslie's Monthly on the men who do the real work in Congress. Ex-Senators and Representatives who do most of the work of governing this nation, although their names seldom appear in the papers; another interesting sketch is called "Americans as Quitters," which takes up three remarkable men who have gone from this country to Canada and quitted one job after another as fast as they have accomplished wonders in each place.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mont., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helena, Mont.

After using Ely's Cream Balm six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh.—Joseph Stewart, Grand Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cts. or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York.

INTERIOR PLANS OF NURSES' HOME

Description of the Structure to be Erected in Connection With Muhlenberg Hospital.

TWENTY-SEVEN ROOMS

BIG DORMITORY FOR THE USE OF THE NIGHT STAFF.

A Lecture Room on First Floor—Four Bath Rooms—Two Parlors, Also a Wide Hallway.

Inside and out, the proposed Nurses' Home to be erected on the hospital grounds at Randolph road and Park avenue, will be one of the handsomest structures of its kind in the State. Evarts Tracy, the architect, has given the designing of the building a good deal of careful attention and the result will add noticeably to the beauty of the hospital group and the architecture of the city.

In general design the building will be colonial.

Big white pillars will rise before the front of the Home, and two spacious verandas will add to the air of comfort and roominess. A pretty balcony will line the rear view. The building will be two stories high.

Twenty-seven sleeping rooms in all, besides a large dormitory, are arranged for. There will be a big lecture room, two parlors and a supper room, and four bathrooms.

On the first floor will be the lecture room, 13x25; the two parlors, one 13x19 and the other 8x13; four double rooms and four single rooms, and the supper room. The single rooms will measure 8x13 and the double rooms 13x10. The supper room will be 8x13. Two of the bathrooms will be on this floor.

Upstairs there will be the dormitory, 13x25; two bathrooms, four double and nine single rooms. A wide hall will run the entire length of each floor, in colonial style.

The dormitory is for the use of the night staff. It is situated so as to receive little or no noise from the other parts of the building, affording the necessary quiet for the resting nurses. The double rooms are arranged for the possibilities of future growth.

An increase in the nurses' staff is expected as soon as the new home is completed. At present there are thirteen nurses on the force; two more at least will be added, and if the present rate of increase in work at the hospital continues more additions will be necessary as time goes on.

The present force is made up of three nurses in the head class; four in the senior class; four in the intermediate and two juniors. Miss Wildey is the head of the staff.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Plainfield High School Obtains Two in the New York University.

In recognition of the high grade of work done by the Plainfield High School, two prize scholarships, one for $400 and one for $100, have recently been put at the disposal of the principal of the school by Chancellor H. M. MacCracken, of New York University. The scholarships are to be awarded to students of high standing who may wish to enter New York University.

The first scholarship pays the tuition for four years in the College of Arts and Sciences and the second pays the tuition for one year in the College of Applied Science. An honor scholarship similar to the above was awarded last year to Norman C. Hill, class of 1903, High School.

Davis Signs With Alis.

"Lefty" Davis, a pitcher for the Scotch Plains baseball team during the past two seasons, has been signed by Manger Johnston, of the Alis Club, for the coming season. He will take the place of McLane, of last year's Peekskill team, who with Murray, of the same team, was scheduled as the battery. Davis did fine work for the Plains team and proved one of the strongest twirlers against Alis, a well as Westfield, last year.

MEMENTO OF OLD SOUTH?

Souvenir Sent From Boston Prized by Plainfielder.

William Feiring, of Park avenue, has received an interesting memento of the New England tour that Walter L. Hetfield and Phillip Jahn have just completed. It is a heavy plank, believed by him to have come from the stairway leading up into the belfry of Old South Church, Boston, where Paul Revere's warning lights hung.

Mr. Feiring is a collector of historical relics, and the Boston board is greatly prized by him.

There is scarcely any doubt of the genuiness of the relic, he says, because the donors sent a certificate of authenticity with it.

BIG BEARS IN ALASKA.

There Are So Many of Them That Stock Raisers Make Complaints to Legislators.

Senator Foster, of Washington state, has received a Macedonian cry for help from the ravages of big bears in Alaska. If President Roosevelt ever again wants a glorious hunt for bruin, Mr. Foster is willing to pilot him to the grounds where great game is plentiful. The Alaskan variety of bear is said to weigh from 1,500 to 1,800 pounds.

A recent letter in Mr. Foster's mail from Seattle tells the story. "We shipped 300 head of cattle and 2,100 breeding ewes to Kodiak, Alaska, last spring," writes a firm of packers from that city. "The bears have been getting into the bunch and have killed 503 to date. During the mix-up about 12 bears were slain. About 30 days ago two bears got into the sheep and, after killing 21 sheep and tearing the coat off one man, the bears were killed.

ADDISON G. FOSTER.
(Washington Senator Interested in Fighting Alaska Bears.)

The United States marshal on hearing of this had all our men arrested for killing the bears. Five of our men were compelled to stand trial at considerable expense to us.

"The bears are very numerous on the island," concluded this letter, "and since they have tasted sheep the sheep are badly scared and are continually piling up. Unless something is done with the bears they will put us out of business."

Senator Foster is puzzled as to just how he can help his constituents in their plight. They assert that "a bounty of at least five dollars a head should be placed on the bears for a year or two in order to clean them out."

WILL MAKE BACON.

Croker, Former New York Boss, Proposes to Drive American Pig Out of Ireland.

Richard Croker has begun his residence in Ireland by throwing himself into the industrial revival that is preceding there. His first scheme is the creation of a bacon factory in Tipperary. He is not going to run it exclusively as his own, but he is finding the money to set the machinery in motion. He has thanked Congress for $5,000 to set up a building, which will be supplied with the latest machinery and appliances for bacon curing purposes. He has financed a delegation which is now exploring Denmark for the purpose of ascertaining the latest methods employed in that country in creameries and bacon curing.

It is Mr. Croker's intention to work the factory on the cooperative principle. He has made a thorough investigation into the possibilities of the proposed business and he has satisfied himself that the native product will drive American bacon out of Ireland. He is so far convinced of what he can do that he has been able to command for the scheme the support of one or two leading English and Scotch provision merchants. A meeting to discuss the subject will beh eld in London in a week or two, and it is understood that everything is in shipshape order to enable him to put the scheme on a practical working basis at once. The people of Tipperary are delighted with the prospect of having a real live factory in their midst which will help to stop the flow of emigration.

SCHOOL CHILDREN OBSERVE ARBOR DAY

Exercises Held in All Departments in the City and Borough.

NATURE STUDY LECTURE

C. B. SCOTT ADDRESSES THE STILLMAN SCHOOL PUPILS.

An Interesting Programme of the Borough Primary Tots—No Trees Planted by the Little Ones.

In recognition of Arbor Day, an address by Charles B. Scott was delivered before the pupils of the High School on Friday. Mr. Scott is a specialist in nature studies, and for seven years has had supervision of the nature science department in the Minneapolis schools. He is now engaged in lecturing before the teachers of schools in this city, East Orange and elsewhere. His talk this morning was an inspiration to the study of trees and birds, and was most cordially received by his auditors.

Exercises appropriate to the day were held in the other city schools, but in no instance was there any tree planting. This was unnecessary as the various school yards are well provided with shade. At the Bryant School there was a programme of recitations by Rufus Tildon, Richard Montgomery, readings by Anna Johnston, a story by Effie Beckman, recitations by the fourth and sixth grades, singing by the second grade and songs by the school.

At the Irving School a very informal programme of class recitations and songs was given and similar exercises were held at the Lincoln and Washington Schools.

Pretty exercises were held in all departments of the borough schools this afternoon to mark the observance of Arbor Day. Mothers and friends of pupils attended in large numbers.

Especially interesting exercises were presented by the primary department. The following took part:

Loretta Feller, Raymond Kliner, Roy Love, Edward Dilley, Mulford Darling, Ernestine Waldron, Mattie DeCamp, Mattie Smith, Chauncey Stewart, Ella Porter, Donte Reupert, Elmer French, Bernice McClintock, Rose Andrews, Raymond Hoagland, Edna Green, Hilda Story, Marion Doughby, Louis VanZandt, Marcus Schmeyer, Charles BeckLan.

The High School exercises were held at noon, the others at 2:30 o'clock.

MRS. J. P. LAIRE IS DEAD

RELIEVED FROM YEARS OF SUFFERING EARLY THIS MORNING.

Following years of suffering from a complication of diseases, which was borne with Christlike patience and fortitude, Mrs. J. P. Laire, of 139 Crescent avenue, passed to her reward at 6:30 Friday morning. While Mrs. Laire had been a sufferer for several years, it was only during the past four weeks that her condition was such as to cause alarm. During that time she failed rapidly and the end was only a question of a short time.

Mrs. Laire possessed a fine Christian character and she was thoroughly devoted to the work of her Heavenly Master. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church. In the home she was a kind and loving wife and mother and those who came in her presence were always impressed with her exemplary Christian life.

Mrs. Laire was Miss Anna Oreveling, of Annandale. She is survived by a husband, J. P. Laire, of the H. E. Gayle Hardware Company, and one daughter, Miss Cora Laire.

FLORODORA BALL.

The Masquerade Affair Given in the Olympia Attended by Two Hundred Persons.

Marking the celebration of its second anniversary, the Florodors Club held a masquerade dance in Olympia Hall last night. It was largely attended and scored a complete success. The ball was prettily decorated.

Nearly 200 guests were present, most of them in fancy costume. Some of the make-ups were handsome to a high degree. The guests enjoyed refreshments at midnight.

The committee in charge was made up of the charter members of the organization: William Poole, Spencer Clickner, Ernest Jones Edward Sutton, Frank Terry. Half-tone photographs of the committee embellished the front of the programme.

Engagement Announced.

The announcement has just been made of the engagement of Miss Eleanor VanDeventer, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. VanDeventer, of North Plainfield, to Herbert G. Wittingham, of Baltimore, nephew of the late Bishop Wittingham, of Maryland.

ATTRACTIVE WEDDING AT SCOTCH PLAINS

Miss Emily A. Schreiner Becomes the Wife of Frank B. Perry, of North Plainfield.

COUPLE TO LIVE HERE

CLIFFORD COMPTON, OF PLAINFIELD, THE BEST MAN.

The Bride Attended by Her Two Cousins, Miss Albertina Klemser and Miss Christina Balzer—Rev. Mr. Mulford Officiates.

Miss Emily A. Schreiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schreiner, of Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains, and Frank B. Perry, of 48 Harrison street, North Plainfield, were married April 20, at the home of the bride by Rev. Mr. Mulford, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church.

The ceremony was performed beneath a floral horseshoe in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends of the couple. At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor, while the Lohengrin wedding march was being played by Mrs. Hoffman, of Westfield. The bride was accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. There were two bridesmaids, Miss Albertina Klemser, of Scotch Plains, and Miss Christina Balzer, of New York, both cousins of the bride. The groom was attended by Clifford Compton, of this city, as best man.

The bride was gowned in white organdie, trimmed with old point lace, the bridal veil being fastened in the coiffure with a spray of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was large white roses. The bridesmaids wore attractive gowns of white Batiste, trimmed with lace and they carried pink carnations.

The house was decorated in the bride's favorite colors, white and green in the dining room and pink and white in the parlor. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Perry received the congratulations of the guests, after which supper was served.

After the reception the couple departed on a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside on Mc Kinley avenue, this city, where the groom has furnished a home. Many handsome presents, including cut glass, silverware and bric-a-brac.

The bride was for several years employed as a saleswoman at Hill & Sharp's store, while the groom is an employe of the Walser Scotch Printing Machine Works.

A COLD WATER WEDDING

MARRIAGE OF TWO MEMBERS TO TAKE PLACE AT PUBLIC SESSION.

Temperance and matrimony will go hand in hand at the meeting room of Hewell Division, Sons of Temperance, May 3. The ceremony, uniting Pierre Moore and Miss Ida Bowers, both of North avenue, will be performed there on that date in the presence of the Division members and a large gathering of friends. Both Mr. Moore and Miss Bowers are active and leading workers in the Division. Their romance began through their association in the battle against liquor, and when it became time to choose a place for their wedding they agreed that the only fitting and appropriate one was the meeting room of Hewell Division.

All the Grand Division officers have been invited to attend and most of them are expected to be present. The ceremony will be performed by a local clergyman. A supper and entertainment will follow the wedding.

Bishop's Visitation.

GREAT GROWTH OF SOMERSET COUNCIL

Over Sixty New Members Come in During the Year Just Closed.

MEMBERS AIMING HIGH

TRYING TO MAKE SOMERSET THE PREMIER COUNCIL.

Observed Attainment of 200 Mark With a Smoker Last Night—New Members Are Still Coming in Fast.

During the past year Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., has grown by more than three score members. To celebrate the great advance in strength the members of the organization held a smoker last night in their rooms in the Babcock building.

There was plenty of cigars, pipes and smoking tobacco and sociability, and the members enjoyed themselves to its full. That they might have no interruption to the exchange of congratulation on its growth and to the plans for futher advancement, there was no programme of entertainment. Pretty nearly all the members had something to say about the greatness of the order and the advancement of Somerset Council, and the whole affair ended up in inspiration to greater work in upbuilding the organization in general and Somerset in particular.

A year ago the membership was 135. It was decided to boost it to the 200 mark, and all the members set to work. Their hustling speedily told on the roll book. The membership mounted steadily until, two weeks ago, the aimed for mark was reached.

And the end is not yet, say the workers. Two more candidates, making a total of 202, were initiated before the smoker last night, and two more are to go through next meeting night. The members are determined to keep the hustling up to make Somerset the largest council in the city. Franklin Council, the oldest of the three here, is now the largest, but the lead is not more than forty or fifty members, and Franklin is confident of going a half-hundred beyond that before very many months.

NO SYMBOLS ON U. S. FLAG

JERSEY G. A. R. NOTIFIED TO REMOVE NAMES FROM STARS AND STRIPES.

Grand Army posts may no longer place on the American flag their names, post numbers or other symbols of any kind. This is the substance of section 15 of general orders No. 8 from departments headquarters, a copy of which has just been received by Winfield Scott Post. No. 73, of this city.

The notification is based on a law passed by the recent legislature, concerning which Attorney General Robert H. McCarter has written the following letter..

"L. H. Bridgem, assistant adjutant general, Department of New Jersey G. A. R.

"Dear Sir—I have examined chapter 16 of the laws of 1904, being a supplement to the crime act, which makes the mutilation or use of the flag for advertising or other purposes a misdemeanor. My opinion is that this law does prohibit the placing the names, post numbers and other symbols of any kind upon the national flag by Grand Army posts.

Very truly yours,

"Robert H. McCarter,

"Attorney General."

This news has caused a great deal of surprise and considerable expense will be caused by making the changes necessitated by the law.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

May 1: "Answered Prayers."—Acts iv, 23-31—Peter's Cases.

When you pray, listen and hear what they pray for, and you will then know what manner of folks they are. Consider carefully what you most pray for in your heart, and you may be wiser as to the kind of person you are.

Hark to the praying of the early Christians, to the real Christians now, and you will discover how to obtain the best treasures.

The times were perilous for the disciples of Jesus in Jerusalem. Peter and John had seen a lame beggar on the temple steps as they were going up to afternoon worship. In the name and by the power of Jesus they had cured him. This made a great stir, the more so because the beggar showed no earnest and sincere in his attachment to the new faith. This drew the anger of the temple rulers, who imprisoned the two apostles and then with threats of punishment prohibited their preaching. Then telling the story of their experiences to the assembled congregation of Christians all joined in an outburst of song and prayer. This prayer gives insight into their inmost life. After giving praise to God as Lord over all they petitioned in their sufferings and those of Jesus the fulfilment of prophecy as given in the Second Psalm. They call on God to take notice of the threats of the rulers. They do not pray for deliverance from suffering nor for peace with the people, but they ask for boldness in speaking God's word and that signs and wonders may be done by Jesus' name.

The answer came. They prayed. The place was shaken. But that sign was not of utmost importance, though wonderful. What was of great moment to them and to us was the fact that they did speak the word with boldness. Such a man as Peter, who could promise his Lord to stand by him even unto death and then, when a servant girl spoke to him, be so afraid as to deny all acquaintance with the Master, such a man needed to pray just this prayer for boldness. Stability was the very quality he seemed most to lack. It was a virtue most essential to the establishment of the church. The wonderful doings and teachings of Jesus were of great importance and needed to be declared. But all these would have been comparatively valueless if death on the cross had closed the work. When resurrection on the third day was an assured fact its importance eclipsed all other signs and wonders. It gave a new birth of power to the life of Jesus and to all human life. It was a new birth of hope—the regeneration of the world. To accomplish the purposes of God for mankind this fact of resurrection of Jesus and promise of eternal life for every man who would accept him as the Lord must be proclaimed to all men. To declare the fact would be to accuse their rulers of the foulest judicial murder ever committed. It would endanger the lives of whoever should dare utter such a charge. All the power of the constituted government might be expected to be used to crush the preachers. On this slender thread hung the destinies of mankind, the hope of all ages. Could such men as these be made bold? One had betrayed and another denied Him in life!

The prayer was answered. Boldness was given, and the greatest sign of God was granted. They used all their means for the good of all.

When We Return to God.

You have seen the heavens gray with dull and leaden colored clouds, you have seen the earth chilly and comfortless under its drifts of unmelting snow, but let the sun shine and then how rapidly does the sky resume its radiant blue and the fields laugh with green grass and vernal flower! So will it be with even a wilderness and a waste of life when we return to God and suffer Him to send His bright beams of light upon our heart. I do not mean that the pain or misery under which we are suffering will necessarily be removed—but there will be peace—but peace will come, and strength will come, and resignation will come, and hope will come, and we shall feel able to bear anything which God shall send, and, though the sky over us we still shall seek Him, and even if the blackest cloud of anguish seems to shroud His face from us even on that cloud shall the rainbow shine.—F. W. Farrar.

"Just as I Am."

"Just as I am," I dare not wait,
I dare not longer risk my soul
Outside the Heavenly Shepherd's gate,
Lest I should miss the blessed goal,
Or, turning, seek the fold too late.

"Just as I am," I cannot feel
As fain I would my nature's woe
Nor melt to-day with love and zeal
Nor grieve to see my Saviour bleed
And know He suffered for my weal.

"Just as I am." Thou knowest best
My doubts, my fears, my dreadful sin.
I only know I am opprest.
By fear and pain and strife within,
I know my need, Thou knowest the rest

"Just as I am." Though so unmeet
For love like Thine, I will made Thy own,
I fall before Thy mercy seat.
O Christ, I hasten to Thy throne!
My all in all itself seeks in Thee.

"Just as I am." My heart, so dumb,
I fear would never warmer be
Nor it be more inclined to come.
It is not love constrains me thus
It is Thy voice that calls me home.

"Just as I am." Thy latest call
I hear and heed with bitter tears.
So late to come and bring Thee all.
My years, my days, my hours and years,
So late at mercy's shrine to fall.

"Just as I am." And I rejoice
That mercy's gate stood open long
For one so full of sin. Before
My heart has learned the great new song,
At last Thy love has fixed my choice.

"Just as I am." And if for me
One little hour remaineth still Thy truest servant I would be
And prove the love that owns Thy will;
But this or years, all, all are Thine.

CROSS FOR A NEGRO.

Confederates to Honor a Veteran Who Was a Slave.

Served All Through the War Between the States and Became Chief Over 75 Colored Cooks in Southern Army.

Visitors to the Tennessee camp at the confederate reunion in the past few years will remember at the Memphis, Tenn., uniformed company's headquarters an old negro in gray uniform who stood faithful and jealous guard over everything pertaining to the men of that company. He wore the uniform, cap and badge of company A, confederate veterans. Visitors who go to the next reunion, which is to be held in Nashville in the summer, will see him again as affable, as efficient, as respectful, as young as ever, gray uniform, cap, badge and all, but this time he will wear in addition to these the confederate cross of honor which the women of the south have had made for all confederates who saw actual service in the stirring days of 1861-65.

This is the first time in the history of the southern camps that this honor has been accorded a negro, and the fact that there are a hundred or so white men ready to indorse his application is proof sufficient of his worthiness.

The gray-haired negro is Preston Roberts of Collierville, Tenn., sometimes camp servant and cook in the command of the confederate cavalry leader, Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, and at present when on military duty, regiment servant for the First Tennessee regiment, confederate veterans. When the crosses of honor were first bestowed on the veterans of Memphis "Uncle Pete" felt somewhat slighted and forlorn, for he served through four years going out with his young masters when the first call for soldiers to defend the south was made. He pondered the matter over, and when eighteen additional crosses were awarded by the Daughters of the Confederacy the night of Lee's birthday anniversary, on Jan. 19, he asked permission to apply for one of them. Permission was not only readily given by the women, but the men present who knew "Uncle Pete"—and there are few who do not know him—immediately volunteered to furnish the indorsement which is necessary before any veteran is qualified to receive one. The application has been forwarded and when the next mention of the crosses is made the rebel negro will stand in line with the men by whose side he served and receive his bronze medal.

"Uncle Pete" is a typical ante-bellum darky. He was born sixty odd years ago near Collierville, about twenty miles from Memphis, and was body servant to his master, S. H. Roberts.

When the call for soldiers came in 1861 "Uncle Pete" enlisted with his young master, F. T. Scott, in Capt. Ed Van Dorn's command. He followed the fortunes of this command until the gallant Van Dorn was killed at the battle of Spring Hill about two years later. Then he followed his master into Gen. Forrest's command. Here he was not a regularly enlisted soldier, but, to use his own expression, was "one of the most importantest men in the army," having under his control seventy-five negro cooks, with money and authority to buy whatever was needed for his mess, and also authority to "raise" the rations anyway, whether they could be bought or not.

The Uses of Palm Trees.

The various kinds of palm trees on the island of Ceylon are in themselves of great interest, and when their different uses are explained a person can well appreciate how essential they are to the natives in the low country Singalese districts. From the sap of the cocoanut palm the spirit he drinks is distilled; the kernel of the nut is a necessary article in his daily curry; the "milk" is the beverage offered to every visitor to his domain; his only lamp is fed from the oil; his nets for fishing are manufactured from its fibre, as is also the rope which keeps his goat or cow from going astray; while the rafters of his house, the thatch of the roof and the window blinds are made from its leaf and wood. There is, perhaps, no product in the world that is put to so many and such profitable uses as the cocoanut palm. Even before it is grown, its leaf ribs are tied together to make brooms for sweeping and cages for birds.

Use Brush Instead of Pen.

The Japanese have no pens and no ink, but they make a very good shift with a paint brush.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning May 1.

Topic.—Answered prayers.—Acts iv, 23-31.

The habit of prayer has been as worldwide as the human race. Men everywhere have prayed to something, have felt that there was some power outside of themselves able to harm or to help them, and to these powers they have directed their supplications and prayers. And prayer has been universal because men everywhere have believed in answered prayers. Who would pray without faith in the ability to receive the thing prayed for? The doubting soul may pour out its petition in fear and trembling and yet with hope and in that hope a spark of faith perhaps at least the size of a grain of mustard seed. But, alas, many have cried to those who were not able to hear or to answer. They have prayed, but no answers have been received. But with the child of God it is different. Our God is a prayer hearing and a prayer answering God.

We may firmly believe that God answers prayer for several reasons. 1. God has commanded us to pray, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." "Ask," "seek," "knock"—these are the commands. But how absurd these commands if there are no answered prayers! 2. God promises to answer prayer, and all His promises are "yea and amen in Christ Jesus." He not only commands us to ask, seek, knock, but promises that we shall receive, find and have it opened unto us. If we believe God we must believe in answered prayers. 3. Godly men have testified to answered prayers. The psalmist says, "I cried unto the Lord, and He heard me out of His holy hill," and again, "I love the Lord because He hath heard my voice and my supplications." A crowd of witnesses could be called to testify in favor of answered prayers. All could not have been deceived, and therefore their testimony must be true. 4. Examples of answered prayers are abundant. In the topical reference the apostles prayed, and the answer immediately came. The Bible contains many examples of answered prayers, and there is no child of God who cannot prove that God can and does answer prayer by the unanswerable argument that He has done so.

The conditions of answers to prayers depend upon several things. 1. The character of the supplicant. "The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth." "If we regard iniquity in our hearts the Lord will not hear us." 2. The character of the supplication. 1. Prayers are not answered. Prayers that prevail must be offered in faith, in persistency, in submission to the will of God and in the name of Jesus Christ. 3. The will of God. God controls all things, and His supervision is over all. Manifestly He cannot grant a petition to one person that would interfere with the general welfare of mankind or with His larger care over all His children. All answers are conditioned upon His will, and in all our praying we should have the spirit that characterized the prayer of the Master when He added to His petition, "Nevertheless Thy will, not Mine, be done."

Doings of Twenty-three Years.

Professor Amos R. Wells made some statistical comments on Christian Endeavor's twenty-third birthday that are of more than passing interest. A few of the figures follow:

In twenty-three years Christian Endeavor has grown from one society to 44,300 in the United States alone. There is a membership in the United States of 2,661,800. Since November, 1902, there have been organized 3,186 new societies. The Junior work now numbers 13,912 societies; the intermediate work 1,644 societies. There are 17 societies in Alaska. The most northern society in the world is at Point Barrow, Alaska. In 67 countries; not a few of them are in Methodist churches. Mexico has a strong national union and 111 societies. There are 236 societies in Jamaica and 28 in Hawaii.

Unique Christian Endeavor Badge.

The unique Christian Endeavor design that is presented herewith is taken from a badge that is far away from home. It was used at a convention in New South Wales. The design is in blue on a white background. This may possibly be one of the countries which on this present

Dr. Clark will touch on in his present around the world tour.

In Baltimore's Fire.

The Christian Endeavor records of the past three years and many Christian Endeavor memorials were destroyed by the great Baltimore fire. The armory, the meeting place for the 1905 International convention, escaped destruction as if by a miracle.

Briefs.

Great Britain now has 8,736 Christian Endeavor societies.

The twelve Presbyterian Endeavorers of Falls Church, Va., contributed $80 toward the forward movement for a field secretary in that state.

The Clarence E. Eberman Memorial Fund" for the spreading of Christian Endeavor in foreign lands now amounts to $1,169.78.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS PRODUCE COMEDIES

North Plainfield Juniors Present "Freezing a Mother-in-Law" and "That Rascal Pat."

WIN MUCH APPLAUSE

BOTH PLAYLETS ARE CLEVERLY ACTED BY THE PUPILS.

Scenery Effective—Stories of the Two Productions—The Casts—The Committee in Charge of the Affair.

There was no lack of histrionic honors for ten members of the junior class of the North Plainfield High School last night. In the amateur production of two comedy playlets they scored a success, before a large audience.

"Freezing a Mother-in-law" and "That Rascal Pat" were the two comedies presented. They were acted in a way that caught the audience from the first lines, and won hearty laughter and applause at every point of progress.

Both plays were well staged. The scenery was effectually arranged, and the general character of the productions was exceptionally good for amateur work.

"Freezing a Mother-in-law" deals with the tribulations of the young lover and husband who tries to rid himself of the unwelcome interest taken in his life by his wife's ma. The way in which he seeks to accomplish the extinction of the sharp-tongued, sharper eared old lady furnishes the vehicle for a lot of funny situations that the borough pupils handled cleverly. The cast, all the members of which did well and deserved the applause given them, was composed as follows:

Mr. Watmuff, attached to the past—Carl Steiner; Ferdinand Swift, his nephew, attached to the fortune hunting —Marshal Ward; Walter Litherland, attached to Emily—Otto Mueck; Mrs. Watmuff, attached to the memory of her parents—Agnes Reilly; Emily, her daughter—Gertrude Townley.

"That Rascal Pat" treats of the troubles and mix-ups occasioned by the blunderings of a good-natured Irish servant, and of the way in which the situations are comically raved after he has done all in his power for unconscious mischief-making to stir everybody to the last stage of desperation.

The cast took the different parts exceedingly well, and won as much handclapping and laughter as that of the other play. The parts were taken as follows:

Pat MacNoggerty, a handy servant—Clarence Hand; Major Puffjacket, on half pay—Frank Webster; Charles Livingstone, poor, but ambitious—Laurie Milne; Laura, niece of Puffjacket and in love with Charles—Sadie Fountain; Nancy, her maid, in love with Pat—Mary Rohley.

MUSICALE AT HOLY CROSS

FEAST OF MUSIC IS ENJOYED BY A LARGE AUDIENCE.

There was a large turn-out for the musicale given Thursday in Holy Cross church parish house. A delightful programme was presented by Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Mrs. Fernando Ward, alto; Miss Florence Emerson, violinist; Ralph S. Lane, baritone; J. Edmund Skiff, tenor, and Mr. Hayan, monologuist. The Holy Cross choir sang and Miss May V. Whitney was accompanist. The musicale was under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff.

All the performers were roundly applauded. Miss Miller, Mrs. Ward and Miss Emerson, in their solos, shared high popularity and the male soloists and quartette did equally good work. Miss Emerson's work was particularly enchanting. Mr. Hayan's monologues provoked more than one outburst of mirth and earned for him liberal applause. This was the programme:

Oberon—"Where Are You Going to My Pretty Maid?" Caldicott; monologue, selected, Mr. Hayan; "Red Rose Tree," Neidlinger, Mr. Lane; quartette — "Beware," Williams, Messrs. Skiff, Hall, Gilbert Gallop; violin—"Aria," Bach, "Berceuse," Melville, Miss Emerson; "O Thou, Whose Beauty Shines," Beethoven, Miss Miller; "Cradle Song," Smart, choir; "Bine Eyes of Spring," Hiss, Mrs. Ward; song cycle—"Fair Jessie," Von Fielitz, Mr. Skiff; "Once," Hervey, Miss Miller; "Elaine," Bartlett, "The Sweetest Flower," Hawley, Mr. Lane; quartette—"Gipsy Life," Schuman, Messrs. Skiff, Hall, Gilbert, Gallop; "Peace," Hawley, "The Birds Go North Again," Willeby, Mrs. Ward; monologue, selected, Mr. Hayan; "Charlie Is My Darling," Old Scotch, arranged by Lambeth.

ANNUAL MEETING OF FRESH AIR HOME

George E. Hall is Elected General Manager, Succeeding L. H. Biglow, Jr.

REPORTS ARE GIVEN

CHILDREN ENTERTAIN WITH SONGS AND RECITATIONS.

Miss Curry, Matron, Tells of Good Work—Report of Secretary Indicates Flourishing Condition—Home Will Open in July.

Miss Sara Curry, accompanied by a number of little tots from the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, New York, presented a strong object lesson at the annual meeting of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home held in Trinity Reformed church, Thursday, of what is being done in the metropolis for these children. Some of these children were at the fresh air home last season and the improvement in their condition was marked.

L. H. Biglow, Jr., as general manager for the home, presided at the meeting which was given up to the reading of reports, election of officers and singing and recitations by the New York children. There was a large number of young people present, representing the various societies in the local churches and the worthy enterprise received a substantial boom for the coming season.

During the early part of the meeting the children entertained by singing hymns and giving recitations and their ability was the occasion for favorable comment and much applause.

In addition to remark by Mr. Biglow, Miss Curry spoke briefly of her work, enlisting the unanimous sympathy and support. She related many touching incidents. The Home opened July 1, last year and it is proposed to fix that date for this year's opening, at which time Miss Curry will come to Plainfield with her family at children and mothers.

Miss Florence G. Hawkins, the secretary last year, presented a most carefully prepared report of interesting character covering every department of the work. It showed that the home opened on July 5, 1903 and that during the season from that date to September 14, there were entertained 1,128 children and 351 mothers. There were served 45,095 regular meals and 219 meals to visitors. There was a balance on hand at last report of $850 and these years the receipts (Churches, Sunday-schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, Epworth Leagues and other organizations, $222.88; Hotel Netherwood, $353.55; individuals, $910.93; children's lawn party, $63; collections at Sunday afternoon meetings, $125.78; check returned to Miss Curry, $250; interest on check, $7.45, total, $2,181.68. The disbursements were $1,797.59, leaving a balance of $384.09.

Special mention was made of the assistance rendered by Mrs. F. T. Morrison, chairman of the house committee; George E. Hall, Mrs. D. J. Bolon, for a load of sand, the trolley company for free trolley rides, W. W. Warnock for ice cream, Park Avenue Baptist church for excursion, Drs Albert Love and N. W. Currie, who made 114 visits to the home and examined 787 cases, George A. Chapman, who raised over $600 for the home; J. Wesley Johnson for silverware; Mrs. M. D. Runyon for assistance and Miss Sara Curry, matron, for her great devotion to the work.

These officers were chosen for the coming year: General manager, George E. Hall; secretary, Miss Ella A. Benedict; treasurer and chairman of the house committee, Mrs. D. M. Runyon; chairman finance committee, George A. Chapman; chairman of the entertainment committee, Phillip Buffen; chairman of the devotional committee, Miss Florence G. Hawkins.

Following the meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served by the young people interested in the work. During the social hour all became better acquainted with Miss Curry and the band of children brought by her from New York.

Building Improvement.

The Darling house located on Woodland avenue, at one time talked of as an orphanage and home for colored girls, is to be torn down and in its place will be built a more pretentious residence by the new owner of the property.

COLLECTOR BROWN RECEIVES INSTRUCTION

Must Advertise for Sale Property on Which Taxes Are Delinquent Six Months.

HEAVY PENALTY FIXED

MANDATORY DIRECTIONS FOR COLLECTION OF POLL TAX.

Conference of the State Board at Somerville—Assessor Cooley, of North Plainfield, Acts as Temporary Chairman.

Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, returned from the State Board of Taxation conference in Somerville yesterday with instructions to enforce rigorously two stringent regulations governing the collection of taxes. One of the radical changes will cut down the extension of time on delinquent taxes by more than half and the other ruling will make trouble for those who have ignored bills for poll and personal taxes.

Under the old law, delinquent taxpayers have had from one to two years in which to meet the bills. The new law arbitrarily demands that the property be advertised for sale six months after it becomes delinquent. The collector was told that there is no way to soften the provision, and delinquent properties on his books must be advertised on July 1.

Mandatory instructions were issued regarding the collector of personal and poll taxes. There has been a good deal of trouble in collecting smaller personal taxes, and the poll tax has been very largely disregarded by citizens. The collector was told that unpaid taxes of both kinds must be collected as rigorously as any other sort.

To further the enforcement of the tax law, the collectors have been empowered to appoint deputies, who may act as constables to compel the payment of delinquent taxes. A certified copy of the tax bill serves the deputy as a warrant.

The State Board impressed the collectors at Somerville with the fact that there is to be no laxity whatever in enforcing every regulation of the tax law. The officers face a heavy penalty if they fail to enforce the law.

Assessor J. H. Cooley, of the borough, in company with the other assessors at the conference, was instructed in accordance with the recent ruling, declaring the tax exemption unconstitutional. Only poll taxes are exempt in the case of firemen and soldiers, instead of $500, as formerly.

The meeting at which these instructions were issued was held yesterday afternoon at the Somerset County court house. The Board convened for the one purpose of instructing assessors and collectors on the regulations mentioned above.

Assessors and collectors from all over the county were present. Dr. J. H. Cooley was honored with the temporary chairmanship.

GAMES OF MINOR TEAMS

LEAL'S SCHOOL AND P. H. S. AMONG THE WINNERS.

In a game marked by many brilliant plays, Leal's School defeated the Newark Academy team on Crescent Oval, Saturday morning, by a score of 10 runs to 9. Lovell, of the home team, did great work, striking out sixteen Newark men. All critical stages he pitched like a veteran. The home team did better stick work, making eleven hits to their opponents eight. The score by innings:

Leals	1	4	0	0	1	4	0	0	x	—10
Academy	2	1	0	0	2	0	4	0	0	—9

Batteries—Lovell and J. Haughey; Waltz and Grant. Umpire—Roseberry.

One of the best games of the season was played Saturday afternoon on Crescent Oval between teams from the Plainfield and South Orange High Schools. The home team won by the score of 4 runs to 3. From start to finish the contest was exciting, the result being doubtful until the last man was put out. The battery work of Smith and Davis, of the local school, was a feature, only four hits being made off Smith. Murchie, of the visiting team, also pitched a great game, holding his opponents down to five hits. The score by innings:

Plainfield	1	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	x	—4
South Orange	0	0	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	—3

Batteries—Smith and Davis; Murchie and Kelborne. Umpire—Best.

MISS M. E. F. RANDOLPH BURIED

THREE MINISTERS OFFICIATE AT THE SERVICES AT LATE HOME.

The funeral services of Miss Mary E. F. Randolph were held Friday afternoon from her late home in Myrtle avenue. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The services were in charge of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus, and Rev. L. G. Leggett, of the East Third Street chapel. Dr. Chambliss read the Scripture selections, while the other divines spoke briefly of the life of Miss Randolph. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes.

The interment was in Hillside Cemetery, and those were the pallbearers: L. L. Manning, Samuel Manning, William Manning, Daniel Manning, Howard Randolph and N. H. Saxton.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. THIRD

NEWARK CAPTURES FIRST PLACE IN GYMNASTIC MEET.

The gymnastic meet of the Northern New Jersey section of the Y. M. C. A., which was held in Montclair, on Saturday night, was attended by a large number of members of the local branch. The local boys, though finishing third, made a fine showing.

The results were as follows:

First, Newark, 438 5-10 points; second, Montclair, 419 9-10 points; third, Plainfield, 406 points; fourth, Jersey City, 391 3-10 points; fifth, Passaic, 385 points; sixth, Hudson City, 346 points; seventh, Orange, 331 8-10 points.

The first individual prize was won by H. Kitchem, of Newark, 158 4-10 points, and the second by H. Sobonet, of Newark.

The individual points made by the local boys were F. N. Marcley, 137 7-10; E. W. Pointer, 135 and W. T. Bentliff, 133 8-10.

MRS. JOHN STEWART AND MRS. WM. RYNO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARIES.

Mrs. John Stewart and Mrs. William Ryno, who reside on West Fifth street, on Friday enjoyed the unique distinction of celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of their birthdays. The two women married brothers and during the past two years they have lived together. Mrs. Stewart was born and always lived in Plainfield, while her sister-in-law is a native of Rahway and has been a resident here for two years.

In honor of the event, the relatives arranged a surprise party, and a large number of persons gathered to extend best wishes for many happy returns of the day. Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Ryno also received many useful presents and thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

Miss Susie Goff, of West Front street, spent Sunday with friends in Elizabeth.

Katie Powers Got Gerst Stakes.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 27.—Miserable racing conditions prevailed at Cumberland park, notwithstanding which the attendance was surprisingly large. The William Gerst selling stakes at one mile was the feature, which Katie Powers captured from Fore and Aft, last year's Cumberland Derby winner, after a sharp struggle. Jordan was third after having delayed the start by his vicious behavior at the post. He was equal favorite with Christie A. in the betting.

Lasker Played Draw With Marco.

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., April 27.—There was a large attendance in the ballroom of the Hotel Rider when play was called for the second round in the international chess masters' tournament. Strange to say, Lasker, the champion, could only draw with Marco. Hodges downed Tschigorin, and Marshall brilliantly defeated the American champion, Pillsbury.

Ring Hard Hit at Jamaica.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The races at Jamaica were run over a muddy track, and the betting contingent was all at sea, as only two favorites won, the second by him by Mr. Daniel. He and Southampton, backed down from 30 to 1 to 12 to 1, won the last race, and the ring was hard hit on the colt's victory. The Elmhurst stakes for two-year-olds went to the favorite, Niblick.

Lady Atheling Won by a Nose.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—Owing to the heavy rain of last night the track at Oakland was sloppy. Four favorites won. The finish in the fifth race was the most exciting, Lady Atheling lasting long enough to win by a nose from Sol Lichtenstein, a 10 to 1 chance. Howard Vance beat Cloud Light a head in the two-year-old event.

Our Little Won the Feature.

ST. LOUIS, April 27.—The fair grounds track was again in very bad condition. The feature of the racing card went to Our Little, who got off in front and won by two lengths. Malster, equal favorite with Harmakis, finishing second.

Pounded Patient's Head.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 27.—Dengenes Van Hoft, an aged inmate of the Brookfarm colony of the state asylum here, is dead as a result of an awful pounding given him by George Montague, another inmate. Montague said that Van Hoft talked so much at night that he could not sleep. When the old man would not stop at his command Montague says he rose from his bed and pounded Van Hoft's head on the floor until it ended him. Montague's mental state is being investigated.

Louisville Carpenters Will Strike.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 27.—All the union carpenters in Louisville, numbering about 600, and four nonunion carpenters threaten to go on strike for a "closed shop" and an eight hour day, with pay for nine hours' work. The cabinetmakers, job printers and bricklayers have been on strike several weeks. The butchers and structural ironworkers who went out about a month ago have been defeated, their places having been filled by men from out of town.

Oldest German Student Dead.

BERLIN, April 27.—Christian Busch, the oldest student in Germany, who passed examination for the degree in chemistry at the University of Giessen since 1871, is dead at the age of fifty-one. Death was the result of an injury to the brain received in a student duel. Busch, who was a property owner, did not attempt to finish his course, but divided his time between the beer houses and the laboratory, where he assisted the professors.

Dewey Favors General Navy Board.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Admiral Dewey placed himself on record in favor of the general board plan of Secretary Moody before the house committee on naval affairs. The present naval board, the admiral said, was too large. Its sessions were like "town meetings." The proposed board, he said, would have jurisdiction of measures and plans for fleet formation in time of war and peace.

Spanish Premier Shot At.

MADRID, April 27.—Premier Maura, who has arrived here, was shot at, but was not wounded, while on his way from the Balearic islands. When between Alicante and Encina a bullet whizzed through the roof of his car. The incident created great alarm, but no one was injured.

PATROLMAN QUAAS BURIED

SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS CEELEBRATED IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

Masses of beautiful flowers, including numerous magnificent set pieces, attested the esteem in which Patrolman Moses F. Quass was held, at his funeral Thursday from the late home at 9 o'clock and from St. Mary's R. C. church at 9:30. The services were attended by a delegation from Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F. Six of his brother officers represented the police department and all other members of the force not on active duty were present. The six men were Roundsman Flynn and Patrolmen Myers, Vanderweg, Kelly, Hamilton and Saffron. The bearers were Joseph Sullivan, Charles Flynn, Arthur McGinley, Frank Quass, a cousin of the dead man, James Deady and Peter Flynn. Chief Kiely and Sergeant Frederickson and Chairman Randolph, of the police board, were present.

Solemn requiem mass was celebrated with Rev. Father Clifford, celebrant; Rev. Father Egan, deacon, and Rev. Father Frederick, sub-deacon. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. J. B. MEDHURST BACK

WOMAN WHO DESERTED HER HUSBAND NOW RETURNS.

Mrs. James B. Medhurst, whose alleged sensational elopment with Alfred Stocker two months ago, caused a stir in this section, returned home to the Central Hotel, Scotch Plains, Saturday night. Stocker was Medhurst's hotel clerk. Stocker proved to be a married man with a wife and family in Jersey City.

Mrs. Medhurst was deserted, it is said, in New York, a few days after the alleged elopement by Stocker. As soon as she realized that she was without home or friends she began to make efforts towards a reconciliation. Her efforts were finally successful and the woman returned home Saturday night.

MRS. S. C. STOUT BURIED

FUNERAL OF SISTER OF THE LATE ABRAHAM COLES.

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Susan Coles-Stout were held Saturday afternoon from her late home at Lyds Park. The services, which were private, were in charge of Rev. G. M. Shott, pastor of the Baptist church. During the services a quartette from the First Presbyterian church, of Plainfield, sang several of the hymns composed by her brother, the late Dr. Abraham Coles. The floral expression of tender love and sympathy were many and handsome, completely enveloping the casket. Interment was made in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery.

—Owing to the death of Mrs. John H. French, the medal contest planned by the W. C. T. U. for tomorrow night, has been indefinitely postponed.

HOT WORDED DEBATE

Congressmen Dalzell and Cockran Use Bitter Words.

PARTISAN FEELING RAN HIGH

New York Representative Denied the Accusation of Being Consecutive-ly a Greenbacker, Sound Money and a Free Silver Man.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The "heavy weights" had another bout in the house, with Messrs. Dalzell and Cockran as the combatants. The speeches were a renewal of last Saturday's debate, but were more personal in their character. As on Saturday, the orators were greeted with vociferous applause by their respective colleagues, and the bitterness of party feeling ran high. Mr. Dalzell had Mr. Cockran on the rack for nearly two hours, during which time he dealt largely with that gentleman's political history, which, he said, showed him to have been consecutively a Greenbacker, a sound money man and a free silver man. He reverted to his statement of last Saturday that he had been informed that Mr. Cockran had accepted money to support the campaign of McKinley and read extracts from several newspapers to show that that was the general impression at the time. A man, he said, who would not have replied to Mr. Cockran as he did on Saturday would have received money and a coward.

Mr. Cockran, thoroughly indignant at times, denied the accusation of Mr. Dalzell, whom he arraigned for making statements which could not be substantiated. If what Mr. Dalzell had said was true, he declared, he was unworthy of membership. In emphatic and positive language Mr. Cockran denied that he had received money from the Palmer and Buckner campaign committee or that he had ever received money for supporting McKinley in 1896. If Mr. Dalzell, he said, believed the charges against him it was nothing but a confession of the Republican party's corruption and proof that the presidential election had been purchased.

The climax came when he offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a select committee of five members of the house to investigate the charge which had been made against him by Mr. Dalzell. He and other Democrats, including Mr. Williams, the minority leader, demanded consideration, but the speaker declined to pass on a point of order against the resolution until he had examined precedents.

Countess Cassini's War Fair.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—At the fair given by the Countess Cassini in aid of the Red Cross fund in the war now in progress between Japan and Russia, held at Belmont, the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Barber, the inclement weather which prevailed during the afternoon sadly interfered with the success of the enterprise and threatened for a time to stop it altogether. However, the countess made the best of a bad situation, and some hundreds came to her aid. Among the younger members of the diplomatic corps, attended and generously supported the charitable movement of the Russian ambassador's daughter.

Cleveland Will Lecture.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 27.—Former President Grover Cleveland has announced that he would deliver a "Henry Stafford Little lecture" on public affairs on May 2, his subject being "Circumstances of the Chicago Riots of 1894." The riots occurred in his second administration. The lectureship was founded by Mr. Little, Princeton, '44, who died last Sunday, and Mr. Cleveland, his personal friend, was appointed holder. Mr. Cleveland has been unable to deliver lectures for the past two years.

Hero Got a Holiday and a Wife.

CHICAGO, April 27.—In recognition of his heroic conduct at the time of the explosion on the battleship Missouri Chief Engineer Stoddard of that vessel was given a furlough of several months. He came to this city to visit his brother, Gustave Studdard, and at once fell in love with Miss Catherine Hurley, the sister of his brother's wife. He procured a marriage license and was married today. Engineer Studdard and his wife will sail shortly for a visit to his former home in Ireland.

"Mother" Jones Broke Quarantine.

PRICE, Utah, April 27.—"Mother" Jones, who has been in enforced quarantine after visiting a miner afflicted with smallpox, again broke out of quarantine and, accompanied by fifteen or twenty Italian women and children, drove into town. With two sympathizers, striking Mexicans from Helper, she walked through the town to the implement shed, where 120 men arrested Sunday are being detained. Before reaching the shed she was arrested and placed in jail.

Explosion in Gelatin Plant.

HANNIBAL, Mo., April 27.—An explosion in the gelatin house of the Producers' Powder company's plant at Lamotte, twenty-two miles south of here, killed two men and demolished the building. The shock of the explosion was felt for several miles, and the windows in houses at a great distance were shattered.

Erie Discharged a Spotter.

GALION, O., April 27.—A strike of 350 employees of the Erie railroad at this place, began last Saturday, has been settled by the discharge of an objectionable employee, who the men said was a spotter.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; northeast winds.

HIGH PRAISE FOR ARTIST

NEW YORK TIMES' CRITICISM OF GEORGE WHARTON EDWARDS EXHIBIT.

Widespread attention has been directed to the water color exhibit of George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, at Clausen's galleries, in Fifth avenue, New York, the Metropolitan press criticism being particularly flattering to the gifted Plainfielder. The New York Times, for instance, says:

"Mr. George Wharton Edwards, relieved of the drudgery as art director of Collier's Weekly, bids him to one of the little fishing villages of Maine instead of to Holland, where he usually disports himself in summer, and proceeded to do up Manana in water colors with a thoroughness that leaves nothing to be desired. Desde manana hasta la manana—from morn to morn he seems to have loafed and invited his soul; but loafed to some purpose, for two dozen large views of this remote fishing hamlet, lying between gray rocks and the far from barren sea testify to his intervals of work. They are in the Clausen Gallery, 381 Fifth avenue, and will be visible for the rest of this month.

"Manana from the eastward in the morning. Manana from the westward in the mist. Manana of an afternoon from the grassy lane that leads to the church; the village at dawn and sunset, the mouth of the little port where the reefs are like the teeth of Gingngagap, foaming and alert to destroy, but lacking just in one spot where the two-masted 'pinkies' slip during a southwester through a smother of spray into the land-locked harbor. Here is a view of the hamlet from the hill, with mauve shadows on the opposite headland and a sheen of gold on the little bay wherever no shadows, no reflection of the headland fall. In one view the poppy garden on the right balances with its vivid colors the fish-house, with its stranded boat-shaped fisherate and piles of lobster pots; in another a mass of Indian cress forms the floral accompaniment to similar surroundings, with the tall spindle on the outer reef as the strong accent of the view.

"The most attractive picture of all is 'Red House—Drifting Fog,' a plunging view near the village, taking in outlying islands, with a red dwelling the notable bit of color in the scheme. Hardly less pleasing is 'Quill Head, Looking South'—the fishing boats dotting the ocean beyond a headland and the seabirds rise in swarms. Solitary bits are 'Noonday, Stony Lonesome,' and 'On Nosben's Ledge,' a marine full of the crash of big Atlantic billows. A study in lilacs, mauves, buffs, reds, pale blues, and greens is the morning view of the ridge near Manana, and similar delicate tones are registered in 'White Head, in a Shower.' Sometimes Mr. Edwards brings his buildings a trifle too much forward, as in 'Mine's Fortune' and the view of the fish-house with poppy garden.

"Mr. Edwards is an artist in words as well as colors; his is a decorative talent of a remarkable sort, as clever in pen-and-ink illustrations and book plates as in pictures from Holland and the coast of New England. His marines in oils are often seen at the annual exhibitions. Whatever he attempts, he does well. This little special exhibit of water colors should not be overlooked."

PARK GOLF CLUB OPENS

NO COMPETITIONS, BUT SOME INFORMAL PLAY ON THE COURSE.

An enthusiastic crowd of golfers attended the opening of the Park Golf Club course on Saturday, and although there were no competitions, the general play afforded plenty of exercise and amusement for all. The golf committee hopes to have the season schedule of events ready inside of a week or ten days, and the active play will then be started. The course is in fine condition, it being possible yesterday to use the regular greens. The house committee is also planning a number of social events in which the women will participate and altogether the season looks promising.

Joins the Circus.

Donald Beebe, of East Seventh street, left for Philadelphia Saturday night to join Sells' Bros. Circus. He will act as drummer in the band and do a clown act in the ring. He has been one of the best drummers in the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, and took the part of leading amateur clown in the recent I. O. T. circus.

Another Amateur Circus.

A. A. Ducherin, of New York city, who last year, ran a country circus for the I. O. T. Club, was in town Saturday as the guest of V. W. Nash, Jr. The object of Mr. Ducherin's visit was to arrange for another circus, to be held this spring, but on account of local conditions this was deemed inadvisable.

MARSH WINS SUIT ESTABLISHING PRECEDENT

Recovers the High Percentage for Attorney's Collection Fee in Contest on Note.

ON NEGOTIABLE PAPER

WILLIAM J. THOMPSON, OF GLOUCESTER, A DEFENDANT.

Two Notes for $5,000 Each, With Ten Per Cent. For Collection—In the U. S. Court.

Taking advantage of the new negotiable instruments act, two Pennsylvania banks inserted in its notes a printed clause requiring the makers to pay all costs of collection, including ten per cent. attorneys fees if the notes are not paid when due. Craig A. Marsh representing these banks brought suit on two $5,000 notes of this character against the William J. Thompson, of Gloucester, of race track fame, and a partner of his in the artificial ice business.

There were other defenses, but the main question at issue was whether the banks could get judgment for $1,000, being 10 per cent. for attorney's fees in addition to the $10,000 principal. It is believed to be the first suit of the kind to be brought in this State. At the trial before Judge Kirkpatrick, in the U. S. Circuit Court, Mr. Thompson's lawyers, after hearing plaintiff's evidence, conceded that he could not successfully contest the case and judgments were entered for $10,000 with interest, plus $1,000 attorney's fees and cost of court. Mr. Thompson says that he expects to be able to recover damages against the company that sold him the ice plant which he says is not as it was represented.

The new point of law is one of great importance to banks and merchants who use negotiable paper. In other States, the authorities are about equally divided, some holding that the stipulation for attorney's fees, if reasonable in amount, is valid, and the others holding that all such stipulations are null and void.

MRS. J. H. FRENCH DEAD

SHE WAS SECRETARY OF W. C. T. U. FIFTEEN YEARS.

Mrs. Mary Emma French, widow of John H. French, whose death occurred some months ago, died on Monday at 4 o'clock at her home in West Seventh street, following an illness of two weeks with grip and nervous prostration. She was born here and was the youngest daughter of the late Manning Vermenie, who lived for many years on West Front street, and who was one of the city's prominent business men.

Mrs. French was an active member of the First Baptist church and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. For fifteen years she was the recording secretary of the temperance organization and took a lead in all its work. She is survived by one son, Edward V. French and two daughters, Miss Mary French, of this city, and Mrs. D. R. Dudley, of Baltimore; also one sister, Mrs. Charles Keep, of Brookline, Mass., and a brother, Charles Vermeule, of Ocean Grove.

CO. K DEFEATED CO. I

CLOSELY CONTESTED SHOOT ON THE RANGE AT NEWARK.

A team of ten men selected from Company K, Second Regiment, made a fine record for themselves in Newark Saturday night, by defeating the Orack team of Company I, First Regiment, in a ten-man shoot.

The score was as follows: Company I, offhand, 404; Company I, prone, 437; total, 841. Company K, offhand, 408; Company K, prone, 438; total, 846.

SPITE HOUSES.

Three One-Story Dwellings Being Built in Residential Section of the City.

Three shacks being erected on East Front street and Farragut road, opposite the residence of L. V. F. Randolph and the late John Taylor Johnson estate, are considered an outrage by the neighbors. There is evidence that it is a build-up on the part of those back of the scheme. Property values will be greatly decreased by the acts to which the people back of the scheme have resorted to make money.

$125 Watch Stolen.

Peter Zimmerman, of New Brunswick, a former resident here, was robbed of a $125 gold watch in Newark Saturday night.

Frank Mangeot has returned from a visit to relatives in New York.

MERCHANTS COMBINE IN A MUTUAL CONCERN

Fifty Local Merchants Agree to Use the Gold Trading Stamp in the Future.

INDEPENDENT COMPANY

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE ELIZABETH MERCHANTS AT MEETING.

Next Tuesday the Merchants Are to Select One to Become Member of Board of Directors—The Idea of the Movement.

The merchants of this city who planned to organize a stamp company here have decided to join the Elizabeth organization and thus save the expense of incorporation and that of maintaining a store. George D. Brown, of Scranton, Pa., who is interesting merchants in these concerns, has been in the city for several days and after a consultation with the members of the Elizabeth company decided to make the proposition to the local merchants that they unite with the concern at the county seat. By doing this they will have a branch store here and will be able to issue their own stamps and give their own premiums.

In Elizabeth, Mr. Brown claims that over ninety per cent. of the merchants have joined the company and that it is a decided success. It is said that the advantages of the independent concern are that it is possible to give better presents at a trifle decrease in expense and that it costs less to issue the stamps. These things appealed strongly to the local merchants who favor the organization.

Recently, a petition was circulated among the merchants favoring a discontinuance of the use of stamps, but little encouragement was found. Many of the business men claimed that so long as their customers demand the stamps they would be compelled to continue to give them. Since then nothing has been done.

Fifty local merchants have identified themselves with the Merchants' Union Stamp Company, of Elizabeth, and within ten days will open a branch store in the Y. M. C. A. building. John W. Brady, who now conducts the store, will have charge of the branch. Those who have decided to use the gold stamp, represent a large majority of those who have been using various colored stamps, while some have never used them before.

Tuesday night, May 10, the merchants will meet in the rooms of the Grocers' Protective Association and select one of their number to represent them on the Board of Directors of the company.

ILLUSTRATED TALK ON CUBA

LECTURE AT THE Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT PROVED TO BE INSTRUCTIVE.

In the presence of one of the largest assemblages ever present at an Y. M. C. A. entertainment, J. Winslow Duganne, lectured with the aid of 100 illustrated lantern slides on the Island of Cuba.

Some pretty scenes were put on, notable among them being the harbor of Havana, in which the electric lighting effects were good.

Mr. Duganne spoke at length about the natives, as to their mode of dressing and living, which on several occasions, called forth the strongest sympathy, from his listeners, for the sufferers and the many cruelties they had undergone.

Mention of the recent war between Spain and United States, was made many times by the lecturer, and many views as to the progress made by the natives, since peace has been declared, were showed.

Band of Mercy Day.

Band of Mercy Day was observed by the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion in the W. C. T. U. rooms yesterday afternoon, there being an interesting discussion of birds and animals. Miss May E. Howlett, superintendent, also gave a chalk talk that held the attention of the young folks and proved very instructive. There was a rehearsal of a number of songs to be used at the closing exercises of the Legion in a few weeks.

Judgment for Alex. Thorn.

Judgment for the plaintiff was given by Justice Mattison in the contract case of Alex. Thorn against James Conroy yesterday afternoon. F. J. Blatz, Esq., appeared for the plaintiff.

HOPE Y.M.A. PLANS SOCIABLE

ENTERTAINMENT TO BE HELD TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 17.

No action of final character was taken by the Hope Chapel Y. M. A. on the new bowling alley question at its meeting last night. It was expected that the organization would do something definite with regard to installing new alleys, but the matter was placed in the hands of a committee for further consideration. This committee, consisting of Benjamin Evans, George McComb, William Dilts, B. C. Firstbrook and Thomas Chamberlain, will get figures on the cost of an enlarged alley structure. To accommodate alleys of the desired kind, the extension that houses the present alley will have to be considerably enlarged.

It was voted to hold a sociable for members on Tuesday evening, May 17. A programme of entertainment will be rendered that evening. The committee in charge of the affair is J. Fred Wharton, John Cose and B. C. Firstbrook.

The present by-laws are to be revised. George E. Firstbrook, James Peney and John Cose were named as a committee to prepare the revisions.

Two applications for membership were received.

MISS L. M. CONROY BURIED

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FROM YOUNG WOMAN'S HOME YESTERDAY.

Sorrowing friends gathered in large numbers yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral of Miss Lillian May Conroy. The service was held at her late home on Linden avenue, at 2:30 o'clock.

Mourners filled the house, and the floral tributes were extraordinarily large in number. The casket was hidden in beautiful flowers, and bouquets and designs were everywhere in the room of mourning. There were particularly handsome pieces from the Grace M. E. church trustees, the King's Daughters, of Grace church, and the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, to which Miss Conroy belonged. It required a special wagon to carry the flowers.

Rev. Dr. Earp, of Grace M. E. church, to which the dead girl belonged, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. G. L. Gardner, a former pastor of Grace. Both paid touching tribute to Miss Conroy's character and purity of soul. There was singing by members of the Grace M. E. church choir.

The body was placed in the vault at Hillside. It will be buried as soon as a plot can be prepared. The bearers were John Steiner, N. D. Drake, Benjamin Schuck, C. F. Stone, Raymond Brokaw, Clifford Brokaw.

AGED WOMAN PASSES AWAY

MRS. CATHERINE M. HOAGLAND DIES AT HOME OF DAUGHTER IN PLAINS.

Mrs. Catherine M. Hoagland, widow of the late Cornelius S. Hoagland, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Maguire, in Scotch Plains in her eighty-first year. She had been ill for several months. She moved from Newark to Scotch Plains about six years ago, where she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. William Maguire and a son, Peter Hoagland, of Scotch Plains, and another son, John Hoagland, of Newark, who is engaged in the feed business on West street, New York.

The funeral services will be held from the late home Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock and the interment will be at Millstone, Saturday morning.

Accident Far From Home.

Wallace Brown, formerly of this city, but now of Brooklyn, was in town yesterday with a new automobile which gave him some trouble. He was riding along Prospect place with Allen B. Laing, who, suddenly the machine broke down. After considerable time was spent in trying to fix the broken parts, the auto was finally towed to Mr. Laing's home and an expert repairer was called.

In Justice Mosher's Court.

In Justice Mosher's court yesterday judgment was entered for the plaintiff in the cases of Charles H. Hand against Charles Noble and against R. H. Smith. F. J. Blatz, Esq., appeared for the plaintiff in both cases.

FAREWELL RECEPTION FOR REV. MR. LEGGETT

Congregation of East Third Street Chapel Pleasantly Mark His Departure.

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

LARGE BOUQUETS ARE PRESENTED THE MINISTER'S WIFE.

An Autograph Album for the Retiring Evangelist—The Programme of the Evening's Entertainment.

The conclusion of Rev. Lester Girard Leggett's four months' evangelical service at the East Third Street chapel, was pleasantly observed last night with a farewell reception to Mr. and Mrs. Leggett, at the chapel. There were over two hundred persons there to enjoy a vocal and instrumental programme.

A feature of the occasion was the presentation of an autograph album to Mr. Leggett. This was appropriately engrossed and signed by Superintendent L. W. Randolph and other officers of the chapel. In receiving the gift, Mr. Leggett thanked one and all and said he would always hold it in pleasant remembrance. Mrs. Leggett was presented with two handsome bouquets.

The programme consisted of piano solos by Clifford Braider, cornet solos by Whitney Frazee, soprano solos by Miss Etta Raybert and Elmer Cutting, violin solos by Frank Malin and violin duets by the Misses Burnet, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Johnston, and selections by the chapel instrumental quartette, George Staats, John Vriebrock, Roy Adams and Fred Borrup, mandolin, violin and piano. Those presenting the programme were generous in their response to the many encores given and at the conclusion cake and ice cream were served by a committee from the chapel.

CHARGED WITH MISCONDUCT

F. A. PHEBUS HELD IN $500 BAIL TO AWAIT GRAND JURY'S ACTION.

Francis A. Phebus, of East Front street, a well known character about town, was arrested by Detective Mc-Carthy yesterday, under a warrant sworn out against him by his wife, Mrs. Anna Phebus, of Newark. The couple have not lived together for more than a decade. The wife charges her husband with misconduct with another woman.

According to Phebus he had heard nothing of his wife since early in the nineties until the warrant was served on him yesterday morning, and believes her dead. The woman came to Chief Kiely this morning, with a message from the county prosecutor. She made a formal complaint against her husband in Justice Huff's court and the man was taken into custody.

Mrs. Elsie Callen, whom Phebus says is his housekeeper, is the woman named by the wife in her charge against the man.

Phebus said yesterday afternoon that the charge was part of a "miserable game to drag the last drop of blood in his body out on the floor." He said his wife deserted him in 1885, that he took her back, but she decamped a short time after with money that was to have been deposited in a Morristown bank. After that Phebus said he heard nothing of her, and a lawyer had sent him word that she was dead.

Phebus came here form Bernardsville in 1894. He practiced there as a veterinary, and claims to have started the Bernardsville Hunt Club. He became known widely in this vicinity as a dog specialist, and sold veterinary preparations. Astride a Western pony, he rode up and down the city every day for years, and became a familiar figure. Two years ago he was injured by a shock from a fallen trolley wire, and secured big damages from the company.

In court yesterday afternoon, before Justice Huff, he described himself as forty-eight. He is white-haired, feeble and bent and looks more like a man of sixty. He moved around with the assistance of a cane. His wife is a handsome, young looking woman.

Phebus was held in $500 for the grand jury. W. S. Angleman is his lawyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner have removed from the Kensington to the Hotel Rossell.

SPEAK-EASY CRUSADE STARTED IN BOROUGH

An Italian is Held in Bail to Appear Before the Grand Jury.

FINED BY RECORDER

WAIVES HEARING ON WARRANT OF COUNTY AUTHORITIES.

Vigorous Campaign to be Made Against Illegal Sale of Liquor—Responsible for Sunday Shop Opening.

Carman Vanazza, the Italian arrested by the borough authorities for the alleged illegal sale of liquor, must answer to the charge before the Somerset County Grand Jury. He was taken into custody by County Detective Totten on a State warrant last night, immediately after the recorder had disposed of the borough charge against him.

Vanazza was arraigned under the specific charge of furnishing liquor to a minor. The borough ordinance forbids both the giving and selling to minors. Counsellor F. J. Blatz, who appeared for Vanazza, pleaded not guilt to the charge that Vanazza gave the boy, Tony Kuposi, some wine. He denied that the liquor was sold.

Recorder Doud fined the prisoner $30. Contrary to expectation he made no comment on the case. It was expected that he would have something to say with regard to the alleged practice of selling liquor on Sunday by foreign storekeepers, but the sentence was imposed with no reference whatever to the supposed condition surrounding the arrest.

Immediately after the fine had been paid Detective Totten stepped forward and served his warrant on Vanazza. The latter was taken at once before Justice Mattison. He pleaded no guilty, but waived examination. He was held in $500 bail for appearance before the grand jury in Somerville. Bail was furnished.

This action marks the first step in an active campaign against the speak-easy evil in the borough. It will be followed by other arrests as fast as sufficient evidence is collected. It is held by the authorities that the sale of liquor furnishes the chief incentive for the evasion of the Sunday closing law by the foreign storekeepers and if that traffic is killed the Sunday opening evil will be killed.

Vanazza will be brought up before the court in September. Every effort will be made to convict him, for the moral effect on the other men in the illicit trade.

CONSENTS FOR TROLLEY SPUR

C. J. FISK TO REPORT MATTER TO BOARD OF GOVERNORS.

Charles J. Fisk, president of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, visited Randolph road this morning in company with B. A. Mumford, of the baseball committee of the Alis Club, for the purpose of ascertaining exactly what kind of a spur from the Arlington avenue trolley line is desired. Personally, it is not believed that Mr. Fisk has any objections to the laying of the tracks, but he will have to consult with other members of the Board. Besides, the consent of the Common Council is necessary.

Mr. Mumford states that the Public Service Corporation has agreed to lay the tracks to Crescent Oval if the consents are secured and is ready to start the work at short notice. It is not believed that the tracks can be laid in time for the opening game on Saturday.

Cooper-Bromfield Marriage.

Miss Ella Bromfield, of 633 West Third street, and Louis Cooper, a coachman, residing on East Sixth street, were quietly married last night by Rev. F. D. Tilden, pastor of Bethel chapel, at his home, 626 Richmond street. The couple was unattended.

Children's Home Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Children's Home Association will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The meeting will take place at the Y. M. C. A. parlors. Officers will be elected.

Mrs. Bergheim's Party.

Mrs. Carl Bergheim, of West Fourth street, entertained a number of friends at a raffle klatsch yesterday afternoon. Fifteen women were in attendence.

MILKMEN'S LIGENSE ARE MADE IMPERATIVE

City Board of Health Demands That Dealers Comply With Ordinance Respecting Sales.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE

AUTHORITIES DETERMINED TO STOP USE OF SOFT COAL.

After the Plumbers—Bonds Must be Filed—Sanitary Condition is Said to be Good—The Reports.

Owing to the numerous complaints received by the Board of Health regarding the smoke from the chimneys of the Public Service Corporation electric light plant on West Second street, a committee was appointed at the May meeting yesterday, to investigate the matter and to take such action as is necessary to have the use of soft coal abandoned and the nuisance abated.

The Board adopted a resolution providing that every person selling milk in the city without a permit from the Board, be notified that steps will be taken to stop such sale until the requirement is fulfilled. It also decided that no plans or fees will be accepted from any plumber who has not filed a renewal of his bond with the Board, nor will his work be inspected. This action is due to the fact that all milk permits and plumbers' bonds have expired. At yesterday's meeting forty milk permits were issued. Mrs. Noah Terry's application to collect garbage was granted.

The various reports presented showed the sanitary condition of the city to be good, very few cases of contagious diseases being found here. During the month of April there were reported twelve marriages, nineteen births, two still-births, thirty-six deaths, a total of eighty. Of the marriages, eleven were whites and one colored. Thirteen of the births were white, six colored; nine were female and ten male. Of the thirty-six deaths, twenty-seven were white and nine colored; fifteen male and twenty-one female.

Over fifty dairies were visited during the month by Health Officer Thurlow and Health Inspector Addis made 196 inspections.

A HOME DEPARTMENT SOCIAL

BRANCH OF TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY-SCHOOL HAS ENJOYABLE TIME.

Full measure of enjoyment was derived by the members of the Home Department of Trinity church Sunday-school at the second of their afternoon sociables yesterday. The affair passed off delightfully. Sixty-five members were present.

The church lecture room, where the sociable was held, was prettily decorated in orange. Crepe paper and potted plants were used to secure a most attractive decorative effect.

There was a pleasant programme of music. It included piano solos by Mrs. Ernest Millard, songs by William Jeffery and Miss Bertha Willis, recitation by Miss VanCamp. An amusingly exciting potato race by four of the Department members climaxed the entertainment.

An hour of informal sociability followed the entertainment, during which light refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of the committee of visitors that serve in the Department, at the head of which is Mrs. G. W. Sauns.

A statement regarding the work and progress of the Department during the twelve months just completed was distributed among those present. It presented a number of interesting figures.

In April, 1903, the Department numbered 124 in membership. Forty-five were added during the year, bringing the total membership up to 161 in April of this year. During the year only eighteen members withdrew; of this number four joined the main school, seven moved from the city, one died and six left for reasons not named. $149.90 was contributed by members. During the year the department studied a total of 4,796 lessons. Twenty members studied every lesson.

Sixteen visitors are serving in the department. They made 640 visits during the year, which is exclusive of the unnumbered calls made by the field-worker, Mrs. VanName, who is continually working to draw in new members. Mrs. G. W. Sauns is at the head of the Department.

JOHN H. COSE AWARDED $85

BILL FOR ROOFING CAUSED A HOT FIGHT IN JUSTICE SMALLEY'S COURT.

, For two hours and a half two lawyers contested a contract case bitterly in Justice Smalley's court yesterday afternoon. S. S. Swackhamer and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., were the opposing counsel. The case was that of John H. Cose, trading under the name of J. W. Cose & Son, against A. J. Winans, over a bill for roofing. Mr. Winans claimed that a flat rate of $55 had been set for the job, and Mr. Cose claimed that the work was to be done by the foot. He said $73 08 was due.

Twelve jurymen heard the case. Both lawyers went at it hammer and tongs, Mr. Hetfield for Cose and Mr. Swackhamer for Winans. Witnesses were racked on cross-examination, and the lawyers engaged in several warm tilts. The proceedings were the hottest a contract case has called out in a local court in a number of years.

After an hour and a half of examination and argument, the case was submitted to the jurors. After an hour's deliberation they decided against the defendant, giving a verdict in full for Mr. Cose, with costs, bringing the total to about $85.

JUDGE KIRKPATRICK IS DEAD

MILLIONAIRE JURIST SUCCUMBS TO BRIGHT'S DISEASE AT NEWARK.

Andrew Kirkpatrick, judge of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, died suddenly at his home in Newark yesterday afternoon from Bright's disease. Although in poor health he was active to the last. His last official duties were performed on the bench at Trenton on Monday. Without doubt Judge Kirkpatrick was one of the best known members of the legal profession in New Jersey.

Judge Kirkpatrick was born October 8, 1844, in Washington, the family being of old Scotch stock. Preparing for college at Rutgers College Grammar School, where he was a classmate of the late Vice President Hobart, he entered Union College and was graduated in 1863. He was admitted to the bar as attorney in 1866 and as counsellor-at-law in 1869. The next year he received the degree of Master of Arts, Princeton University, and in 1903 he received that of Doctor of Laws from his alma mater.

Despite the fact that he was a busy man he found time to identify himself with a number of State organizations and corporations. His fortune is rated at several millions. A second wife and six children survives him.

LIBRARY DIRECTORS' MEETING

WALTER L. C. GLENNY PRESENTS A COPY OF AN OLD NEWSPAPER.

Matters chiefly of a routine nature were considered at the May meeting of the directors of the Public Library, held last night. The recommendation of the library committee, that book plates be provided, was adopted, and a suitable sum was set aside for necessary improvements and repairs to the building and grounds. The committee now preparing a serial list, reported that the work is well under way. Through the vice president, Walter L. C. Glenny presented the library with a copy of the New York Morning Chronicle of March 9, 1805, and the librarian was requested to acknowledge the same.

J. Herbert Case, as treasurer, presented his report, and bills were ordered paid from the general library fund, the Babcock income account and from the Babcock fund. The matter of vacations for the library staff was on motion made the same as last year. After the presentation of the librarian's report, the meeting adjourned.

Rosso Stole Coal.

Paul Rosso, an Italian, arrested some time ago for stealing coal by Patrolman Hamilton, was brought before Judge Runyon yesterday. The man insisted on his innocence when arrested and his hearing was delayed to enable the police to thoroughly investigate the matter. He was found guilty and was fined $3.

Mrs. Glass's Gift.

The profusion of beautiful flowers that decorated the Casino last Thursday evening on the occasion of the sixteenth anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club, were the generous gift of Mrs. Stephen A. Glass, of Watchung avenue.

SHAKESPEARIAN COMEDY BY TALENTED AMATEURS

Local Society Folk to Produce The Taming of the Shrew at the Casino Tomorrow Night.

STORY OF THE PLAY

HANDSOME SCENERY TO BE A FEATURE OF PERFORMANCE.

Second Production Saturday Night—Those Who Are in the Cast—The Sale of Tickets Very Large.

Much interest is felt in the coming charity production of "The Taming of the Shrew" which is to be given at the Casino tomorrow and Saturday evenings. Every effort has been made to follow the true interpretation of the comedy while costumes and stage settings will be as elaborate as the conditions at the Casino will admit. The dress rehearsal will be held tonight and it will be public; a small admission fee to be collected at the door.

Some excellent opportunities are offered by this play. The plot deals with the two daughters of Baptista Minola (William R. Cock) a rich citizen of Padua. The elder, Katharina, (Mrs. W. L. Saunders) is a shrew in temper while her sister, Bianca, (Miss Nanon West) is just the opposite. There are suitors aplenty for the younger daughter, among them the aged Gremio, (William T. Pelletier) the gallant Hortensio, (George S. Ring) and the wealthy but adventurous Lucentio, (Harry M. Curtis) but none for the shrewish Kate. The suitors are in dispair over Baptista's command that Bianca shall not wed until a husband is found for Katarina, when Petruchio, a young Italian of Verona, appears and offers to end their troubles by accepting that role. Disguised as a tutor, Lucentio secretly makes love to Bianca while his serving man, Tranio, (Clifford W. Mudge) impersonates the master.

To tame his bride, Petruchio suddenly develops such a choleric temperament that her's is mild beside it. Assisted by his serving man, Grumio, (Laurens H. VanBoren) Petruchio applies cause for much mirth and laughter. In these scenes appear the composer, (Mrs. F. W. Iredell) the tailor, (Allen B. Laing) and Petruchio's servants (James Dodd, Herbert S. Rogers, Harry L. McGee and William R. Rushmore.)

Meanwhile the bogus Lucentio is looked on with favor by Baptista and with the help of another servant, Biondello, (Charles E. Faber) produces a bogus father in the person of an elderly pedant, (Charles S. Mercs) who readily agrees to the match. Bianca and the real Lucentio have slipped away and are wedded when the real father of the bridegroom, Vincentio, (Charles H. Lyman) appears. Complications are inevitable but ultimately all is untangled. Petruchio and Lucentio have the sisters for their wives while Hortensio consoles himself with a charming widow (Mrs. Clifford W. McGee.) Petruchio's tactics have been successful and in the closing scene Katharine proves herself the most dutiful wife of all.

While the sale of seats for both performances has been very large, the remaining tickets are now on sale at Armstrong's drug store.

UNION COUNTY BAR MEETS.

Judge Atwater Reads Paper on First State Constitution.

After the court opening yesterday the Union County Bar Association held a regular meeting. A number of Plainfield lawyers were present, including W. R. Codington, S. S. Swackhamer, Charles A. Reed, William Newcorn, Craig A. Marsh and Francis J. Blatz.

Judge Atwater read a highly interesting paper upon the first constitution of the State. Several new members from Elizabeth were proposed. No propositions were received from this city.

Appointed Permanent Receiver.

W. A. Coddington, Esq., of the firm of Reed & Coddington, yesterday made a motion in the Court of Chancery that Armstrong Mulford, temporary receiver in the matter of the Ideal Cash Register Company, of Bound Brook, be made permanent receiver. The appointment was made in accordance with the motion.

Mrs. W. Wallace Coriell, of West Front street, is the guest of relatives in Trenton.

HE EARNED HIS FARE.

How a Little Ragamuffin Managed to Have a Good Time with Little Exertion.

"I had an amusing experience on the smoking car through Ohio last week," said the traveling man who had just come from the west to a Philadelphia Telegraph reporter.

"A little ragamuffin with a shoeblacking kit tried to get a free ride by hiding beneath two seats that were turned back to back. His clothes were in a deplorable state, and it was easy to understand that he did not have the price of a railroad ticket. All of us in the car watched him hide, and we waited for further developments the conductor came walking through.

"But the old boy spied three inches of leg sticking out into the aisle, and it didn't take him long to pull the lad out of his retreat.

"'I haven't got any money,' whined the youngster, wiping away a tear that had already left its patch on his begrimed cheek.

"I HAVEN'T GOT ANY MONEY."

"'Then you'll get off at the next station,' answered the irate official, who had evidently dealt with many similar cases in the past.

"'I'm sorry for the chap, and didn't want to see him put off the car, so I went up to him and told him to shine my shoes, after which I handed him a quarter. In a short time he was shining the shoes of other men in the car until he had made 75 cents more than the price of his fair.

"'We saw to it that he straightened out matters with the conductor and forgot all about the incident, until half an hour later, when the man next to me pocked my arm and pointed over to the corner of the car. The little shoeblack was sitting back as big as a lord, his feet stretched across the opposite seat. He was slowly puffing away at a cigarette, blowing the smoke lazily toward the roof the car with a look of supreme satisfaction on his face."

RACE WITH A RABBIT.

Lieutenant Governor of Virginia Wins a Contest Unique in the History of Sports.

Joseph E. Willard, the dignified lieutenant governor of Virginia, has proved himself the fleetest footed man in the Old Dominion, having beaten a rabbit in a race in which neither was handicapped.

Col. Willard is young and active. He is fond of hunting. Furthermore, he is tender-hearted, disliking extremely to hurt anything.

The rabbit was discovered in an open field one morning by the lieutenant governor, and might have been killed without difficulty, but Col. Willard declined to take any such advantage. He laid his gun down and said:

"If that rabbit can beat me running he can go wherever he chooses."

Then he stirred the rabbit up, and there was a race across the field. Col. Willard gained steadily and, just before the fence was reached, succeeded in catching the rabbit by the hind leg.

Food of Natives in India.

The woman who goes as a missionary to India must expect to put up with strange fare. Miss Mattie Burgess, a missionary just returned from that country, says: "During the last year of our stay in India we had beef only once, mutton twice and fish about eight times. Chickens are so common we got tired of them. In fact, chicken is about the only kind of meat to be had. The natives are vegetarians and seldom eat meat of any kind. A butcher came to our city once a week and brought goat meat, the only kind to be had. The natives eat either rice or bread made from wheat or a grain peculiar to the country. To the Occidental either have been ill. It is a two-penny-ha'penny country. The rich people live well and have dainties, but the poor live on rice and vegetables. Neither butter nor lard is used."

EDITOR TO BE HONORED.

Edward W. Hoch, of Marion, the Probable Republican Nominee for Governor of Kansas.

E. W. Hoch, editor and proprietor of the Marion Record, began life poor. What he is he owes to his own exertions. He was born in Danville, Ky., in 1849, and acquired a fair education in the public schools and at Center college, mainly through his individual efforts. He served a three years' apprenticeship in a Danville printing office before coming to Kansas. Eighteen dollars a week was a slow way to make a fortune and young Hoch could see little more than a living in the trade. The prospect was not good, especially in Kentucky, and the young man willingly fell in with an enterprise of founding a town and getting rich by land speculation in Kansas. His brother, Capt. W. F. Hoch, who had served in the civil war on the federal side, inspired the project. Kansas was becoming the "soldier state," and Capt. Hoch saw in it great possibilities for young men. So in 1872 14 young men left Danville and, coming to Kansas, formed the town of Pawnee Rock, in Barton county. It was a good boom, but three weeks of it was enough for the subject of this sketch, and before the grass was well started that spring he and his brother and two others moved into Marion county, where they took claims. E. W. Hoch preempted a quarter three miles from Florence. In 1874 he began work as a printer for the Marion Record, and soon afterward bought the paper. In 1876 he was married to Miss Louise Dickerson, of Marion. His family now consists of four children. He was "boomed" for governor in 1894, but did not prove strong enough to secure the nomination.

DR. MANUEL AMADOR.

Advices from Isthmus Indicate That He Will Be the First President of Panama.

The first president of the new republic of Panama will undoubtedly be Dr. Manuel Amador G. The final letter of his name is his mother's initial. He uses it in that way to distinguish him from other persons of the same name. Dr. Amador is an old man, being nearly 77 years of age. Although he is very devoted to his profession, he has taken an active part in politics since he was a young man. He has led one revolution, and has acted as governor of the province of Panama. His principal characteristics are coolness in danger, and brevity—of speech. Upon his recent return from the States, a great ovation was given him, and letters were presented to him from the army. It was a good chance for a man with speech-making proclivities to do some soaring, but the doctor only said: "Thank you, my friends, I would not change the lancet for the sword." During the old canal days he invested a fortune in building houses for rent. When the crash came he not only lost all he had, but more beside. He merely said: "I will pay you all," and he did. He bears a very honorable name, the only objection that is offered against him as a suitable man for president, is the same that was used against Estrada Palma in Cuba—that of old age.

Wedded in Her First Shoes.

Charles A. Smith, a widower, and Mary Ann Smith, both of Gloucester, Va., came to Baltimore on the steamer Charlotte, of the York River line, to get married. As soon as they came ashore they made for the courthouse, procured a license and were married. Then they returned to the steamer and remained there till it started back. The bride and bridegroom received a good deal of attention among the other passengers. The bride said she had never worn a pair of shoes on that day. Then she had learned to, for the first time to go under foot.

BOY DESERVES CHANCE.

Secretary of the Treasury Thinks the American Lad Is Not Getting Fair Treatment.

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, who Gov. Cummins, of Iowa, said was the best stump speaker in the United States, sounded a strong minor to President Roosevelt's race suicide theory the other day. "Boys" was the subject of an address at a meeting for women under the auspices of the Washington Y. M. C. A., in which he said:

"There is no place for the boy."

Mr. Shaw also said, among other things:

"I think that most of us that have been boys and those of us that have watched the boy will have found and recognized that he is, all things considered, the most valuable thing on this earth. The boy is worth more than any other creature that treads the earth, yet, more than any other being in the world, I think there is less place for him.

"Now, don't misunderstand me he is less welcome anywhere than others there are less kind words for him than for anybody else. I am not saying that the lad measures up to the standard of the girl's life. I will grant you that we are raising a much better type of young women than we are young men. But we are, none the less, interested in the young man, none the less interested in the boy. From morning till night it is 'Stop it,' and 'Don't do this and don't that,' and 'Don't come in her with your muddy feet.'

"There is no place for him, and it is time to find a place for the boy, and this is the only reason I am here. He never sees much of his father—the father is gone in the morning and the boy is in bed when his father comes home.

"All he sees is other boys and some most excellent and competent women teachers, but you cannot rear a man without bringing the boy in contact with men, just as true as the world. That is what the family is for.

"That children should be brought into the world and just left to the mother to rear is the darkest error. He must come in contact with both his father and his mother."

CHIEF OF CONFEDERATES.

Gen. Stephen D. Lee Now Is Commander of the United Veterans of Southern States.

Gen. Stephen D. Lee, of Starkville, Miss., has succeeded the late Gen. John B. Gordon as commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans. He was ranking officer of the organization when Gen. Gordon passed away, being at that time commander of the department of the Confederate Army of the Tennessee. Gen. Lee holds the position of president of the Mississippi agricultural and mechanical college at Starkville, and is a native of South Carolina. He is not related to the Virginia Lees. He is a graduate of West Point, and entered the confederate service as a captain, being in the party that first fired on Fort Sumter. At the close of the war he was the youngest man in the confederate service holding the rank of lieutenant general and is one of the three living men who held that rank—the other two being Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, of Kentucky, and Gen. Alexander P. Stewart, of Tennessee.

Hanged by Bear on Street.

There are early risers in Hollidaysburg, Pa. Edward R. Dobbins, assistant postmaster, was on his way to the post office at five o'clock in the morning, when he saw before him in the street what, in the dark, he thought to be a man. The stranger approached him, and proved to be a bear. The animal placed its paws on his shoulders and threw him to the ground. Dobbins scrambled to his feet, and had another tussle with the bear, and this time Dobbins downed his opponent. Then the man's revolver was brought into play and the brute fled.

GOOD EDITORS ARE RARE.

None But Thorough Newspaper Men Appreciate Their Value—John Swinton and Charles Dana.

A story is told of the late John Swinton, for many years managing editor of the New York Sun, who, when told by the late Charles A. Dana that he was willing to pay $125 a week for a first-class editorial writer, replied that a first-class man could not be obtained for that. Dana said: "That is what I pay you, and don't you consider yourself a first-class man?" "No," rejoined Swinton, "if I were a first-class man I should be paying you $125 a week."

The story illustrates, says the Portland Oregonian, that a man like Swinton, who was a philanthropist, could of course never be the owner of a newspaper like the Sun, which Mr. Dana framed as a mere money-making machine. As a mere publicist John Swinton was intellectually a peer of Dana; that is, he was as able a writer, he was as well-informed a man, and he was an educated printer. Give him the same comparatively sordid ambition as that of Mr. Dana and John Swinton could have made a money-making newspaper, but John Swinton was like Franklin; he was a man of humanitarian views and opinions, and cared little about creating a money-making machine, but a great deal more about making the world a little warmer in some of its cold spots for his having lived in it.

THE POPE'S WATCH.

Pontiff Wears a Much-Battered Nickel Timepiece Attached to an Ancient Leather Bootlace.

The favorite gossip of Roman drawing-rooms centers around the pope's simplicity and sweetness of character. During a recent interview, says the London Mirror, the pope took out his watch and looked at it. It was an old, much-rubbed, much-battered nickel watch, attached to his waistcoat by an ancient leather bootlace. One of the noblemen present, who noticed this humble timepiece, could not restrain his horror at the thought that the head of the church should have so poor a watch. He instantly took out his own watch—a valuable lever, with a monogram in jewels on the back—and begged the pope, as a great favor, to exchange watches with him, that he might carry away a personal souvenir of the visit. But the pope refused the offer with great vehemence. "My nephew gave me this," he said, caressing the old nickel turnip, "when I was a boy. I fastened it on with this very bootlace, and vowed that I would wear it so long as it would go at all. A vow," added his holiness, returning the nickel to his pocket, "which I always believe to have been the cause of the admirable time that my chronometer keeps to this day and never gets out of order."

HOANGHO A CROOKED RIVER.

It Is 2,600 Miles Long, Draining 750,000 Square Miles—Makes Many Sharp Turns.

The most crooked river in the world is the Chinese river Hoangho, or Yellow river. It is crooked both in habits and shape, and is more uncertain than cannot be found, for it is subject to sudden changes of depth, volume and channel, says the Montreal Family Herald. Before the great floods of 1851-53 its outlet was 300 miles south of its present mouth.

The Hoangho, in its course of 2,600 miles, drains nearly 750,000 square miles of land. Its crookedness can be gathered from the following facts: Flowing from the Kuen Luen mountains, it runs northwest, then northeast, then changes to east after an Hanchow, whence it flows due north to Dunchu. Here it takes a complete curve eastward for some 200 miles, then abruptly goes direct south. For some 300 miles it flows on to Tungchow, then changes to an easterly direction to Hoaking. Avoiding its former bed, it finally flows to the northeast and enters the sea at the gulf of Pechili.

Other very crooked rivers are the Brahmapoutra, the Niger, the Volga, the Mississippi and the Jordan, but these are far behind the Hoangho for irregularity of course.

American Precious Stones.

The United States can supply all the wants of its people for coal, iron, copper, petroleum and all the useful minerals; gold and silver also are found in generous quantities; but of precious stones, the diamond, the ruby, the emerald, the topaz, etc., it has practically none, except what it has bought abroad, says the National Geographic Magazine. In 1902 we paid $25,000,000 to foreign countries for precious stones that we imported, while during that year the precious stones of the value of only $338,000 were found within our borders. These were principally sapphires from Montana, turquoises from New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and California, and tourmalines and chrysoprases from California.

Gasoline Boats.

Foreign automobile manufacturers are now interesting themselves in fast gasoline boat building—a scheme which the London Times report characterized as matured—of a boat propelled through the water so fast and of a shape "so cleverly devised that instead of cutting through the waves it will rise over it, thus reducing water friction to an absolute minimum." It is believed that it will obtain a rate of 50 miles an hour, but the astonishing pace of 35 miles an hour may be regarded as a certainty.

Wireless Telegraphy.

Atlantic liners to the number of 50 have wireless telegraph apparatus to communicate with 48 land stations. Sixty British and 24 Italian war vessels are so equipped.

CYRUS P. WALBRIDGE.

Missouri's Candidate for Vice President on the Republican Ticket Is a Citizen of St. Louis.

Cyrus P. Walbridge, who, by the action of the state committee, has become Missouri's candidate for the vice presidency—the first aspirant for that high office to enter the race—was born in Madrid, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., July 20, 1849. His father, Orlow Judson Walbridge, was a Methodist minister, who went west in 1854 and rose the circuit in southern Wisconsin and Minnesota, preaching the Gospel to the early settlers of those states. C. P. Walbridge attended the public school and Carleton college, Northfield, Minn., graduating from the law department of Michigan state university. He was admitted to the bar at Minneapolis, and in 1876 came to St. Louis, where he was admitted to the bar and practiced successfully for five years.

In 1879 he became attorney for Jacob S. Merrell, the wholesale druggist. When

Mr. Merrell's health became impaired he took charge of the business, and has since been actively engaged in the drug trade, being still president of the Merrell Drug company. From 1881 to 1883 Mr. Walbridge represented the Tenth ward in the city council; from 1889 to 1893 he was president of the city council, and in the spring of 1893 was elected mayor, serving four years. In 1879 he was married to Miss Lizzie Merrell, daughter of Jacob S. Merrell. Mr. Walbridge is a Royal Arch Mason, and a member of the Knights of Pythias. He belongs to the St. Louis Mercantile and other clubs, and is president of the Business Men's league. In religion he is a Congregationalist, being trustee of the First Congregational church.

HAS UNLIMITED POWER.

Admiral Alexieff, Russia's Commander in Far East, Can Declare War, If Necessary.

Admiral Alexieff, whom the czar by a ukase issued in August last appointed viceroy of Russia's possessions in the far east, has greater powers than ever were held by a Russian outside the czar himself. Besides being supreme in the military and civil administration in the east, he has the power to carry on diplomatic negotiations with neighboring governments on matters affecting the territory included in the viceroyalty, his decisions being subject only to the approval of a council at St. Petersburg, presided over by the czar.

The viceroy, besides being an admiral in the Russian navy, is a general in the army, and aide-de-camp on the staff of the czar. He commanded the warship on which the present czar, while still czarowitz, made his trip to India, China and to Japan, where an attempt was made by a fanatic native to assassinate Nicholas. The latter is, therefore, thoroughly acquainted with the admiral, whom he has long regarded as a trusted personal friend.

Admiral Alexieff was in command of the Russian force in the march of the allies to relieve the Peking legation in 1900, and by his admirers is regarded as having secured for the allies all the honors they gained in the campaign. For his services in the Boxer campaign he received from the czar a gold and diamond studded sword, inscribed: "For victories at the seat of war in Pechili, 1900."

The viceroy, who is 60 years of age, visited New York and a number of other American ports about 20 years ago when in command of the Russian cruiser Africa. He is acquainted with the United States, having on several occasions chosen the American route when going home on leave of absence and returning to his post in the far orient.

Machine Makes Cardine Ties.

A machine for making the ties used for sardines has been invented by a Norwegian. Hitherto a skilled workman could make about 650 tins per hour; a new machine will produce from 1,000 to 20,000 a day.

THE IDOL OF JAPAN.

Gen. Viscount Katsura Is Hailed as the George Washington of the Inland Empire.

Gen. Viscount Katsura, who has often been spoken of as "the Washington of Japan," is considered the bravest and greatest of all the fighting men of the Flowery Kingdom. Two years ago he became prime minister. He began his fighting career in 1867, during the civil war which resulted in the overthrow of the old order of things in the land of the rising sun and the adoption of western civilization. Though only a lieutenant then, he became known for extraordinary courage. He was always in the thickest of the fight, always the first to volunteer to lead a forlorn hope.

After the war his government sent Katsura to Germany to study military matters. On his return he took a leading part in reorganizing the Japanese
